There has been a shift in marketing strategy too. The airline has begun focusing on the smaller number of lucrative full-fare paying business travellers rather than the discount-seeking economy class passengers, at the cost of forgoing higher passenger load factors. Today, except for New York and Tokyo, practically every major international centre is serviced by non-stop Air-India flights, often lasting 14 hours. Besides meeting the needs of business travellers who form the cream of an airline's clientele, Air-India has rescheduled its timetables with night-time departures and sunrise arrivals, introducing Snoozer and Whizzer flights. Recently it linked travel agents with its online reservation system.

Air-India expects that the target profit for this year—Rs 23 crore—may be exceeded, and some even hope it will touch a Rs 100-crore profitability by the turn of the century. But there is a long way to fly. As an aviation expert cautions: "Changing colours and cushions is fine, but what will really matter finally is improvement in operational efficiency and strict punctuality. Unless that happens, these cosmetic changes will be meaningless." But the mood in Air-India's boardroom is upbeat and the management hopes that armed with its catchy new slogan 'the pace of the West and the grace of the East', it can recapture its past glory as one of the leading airlines in the world.

—SALIL TRIPATHI

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

VIMAL

A woman expresses herself in many languages. Vimal is one of the

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

VIMAL
A RELIANCE PRODUCT
Sarees

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Tenuous Return

WHEN a great Indian bustard courts, it does so with flamboyant style. A cock bustard trots up to an elevated spot, then tail raised above his back, he puffs out his special neck pouch and gives out a deep-throated "boom". The sound carries across the scrubby plains he inhabits. Interested hens then move closer and peck around nonchalantly.

Once endemic to the continent, the bustard is, however, among the most endangered birds in the country. But thanks to a determined conservation programme launched in the '80s in five states across the country, the majestic bird is making a slow come-back. In Rajasthan, which today supports the largest number of bustards, the population has increased from 200 in the '70s to around 500 now. In Andhra Pradesh, Karnataka, Madhya Pradesh and Maharashtra, the population averages about 50 each.

ASAD R. RAHMANI

Courting bustard: growing numbers

Yet the recovery is tenuous. Although eight sanctuaries have been established for the bustard, many of these are already under pressure. In western Rajasthan, the construction of the Indira Gandhi Canal is fragmenting the bustard's habitat. Elsewhere, overgrazing by cattle has seen the sparse grasslands that it thrives on, disappear. As Dr Asad Rahmani of the Bombay Natural History Society says: "The bustard's future is still not very bright."

Menacing Parasite

A highly polluted lake and unchecked deforestation are not the only reasons for Nainital's decline as a hill station. The magnificent oak trees that drape its rugged mountain slopes now face a different kind of threat.

It comes in the form of a pernicious parasitic plant called Loranthceae that latches onto the trunks of the giant oaks and sucks their vitality. Locally called bana, the plant last year took a toll of 400 oak trees. This year too it is maintaining its deadly progress. Says environmental activist Anup Sah: "Bana infection has now reached epidemic proportions and threatens the entire oak forests of Nainital district."

There is, however, no consensus on how best to tackle the menace. Earlier the local municipality used to carry out a bana uprooting programme every year.

ANUP SAH

BHAWAN SINGH

Oak tree infected by bana; and (right) Nainital: vanishing trees

But forest officials argued that the oak tree can support the parasitic plant without too much harm to itself. That put an end to the programme and saw a resurgence of the problem. It was exacerbated by people cutting oak branches as firewood. The cut branches, with their exposed saps, became ideal sprouting grounds for the sticky bana seeds dispersed by birds.

So widespread is the Loranthceae menace that it has even found its way into local idiom. Hill folk now say: "Bana lag gaya" (bana has afflicted it) to describe anything on the decline. Sah fears that unless remedial action is taken, the oak forests of Nainital may soon disappear.

Wildlife Blues

THE '80s have produced a wealth of documents recording the country's ecological devastation. The best example is the series on the State of India's Environment. Last month saw a valuable addition: a critical appraisal of the management of the country's 400-odd national parks and sanctuaries.

Despite being funded by the Environment Ministry, the report, produced by the Indian Institute of Public Administration, doesn't gloss over reality. Among the disturbing facts it exposes is the extent to which these wildlife preserves have been invaded by humans. Half the parks and two-thirds of the sanctuaries surveyed had large populations of people living inside them. And in 10 sanctuaries, the density of the human population per acre was higher than the national average!

SHYAM TEKWANI

Cattle in reserved forest: encroaching

As bad was the threat from domestic animals. A majority of the parks reported widespread grazing by cattle and goats. And even in the Keibul Lamjao Park, the last home of the seriously endangered brow-antlered deer, more cattle were reported per hectare than the wild beast itself. There were other nuggets too: barely a fifth of these reserves have corridors linking it with another park, and there is the rising threat of pollution of water sources inside these sanctuaries from industrial effluents.

If the Environment Ministry could fund such a study, there is no reason why it cannot get down to correcting the mess.

—RAJ CHENGAPPA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Living with a velvet touch

Luxurious living that's as smooth as velvet.
Rooms lined with velvet. Lined with the luxury of Velvet Touch, the unique wall finish that glows with the lustre and delicate sheen of the perfect pearl. In 23 elegant shades plus 6 soft whites with just a hint of colour to give you the perfect finishing touch that your lifestyle demands. The Velvet Touch!

ICI Dulux

Velvet Touch

For those who have everything, something more.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

When Reliance wanted...

...to set up one of the largest petrochemical plants in the country...

... with a mega-investment of Rs. 1900 crores...

... using the most advanced technology, from world leaders like Dupont, B.F. Goodrich, Stork Boilers and Shell ...

... they required the most sophisticated microprocessor based distributed process control system in the world...

... that could integrate operations, control, communication and information processing...

... to manufacture some of the most hazardous and complex chemicals in the world...

...on Taylo

TAYLOR · WORLDCLASS TECHNOLOGY FO

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

When one of India's largest petro-chemical plants required process controls, they banked on the resources of only one company...Taylor.

For only one reason... advanced technology. Technology that stems out of its association with Combustion Engineering, USA—one of the world leaders in process control.

Only Taylor uses its 25 years of experience to effectively adapt this technology to Indian conditions.

And only Taylor offers a comprehensive range of 4,500 products in Pneumatic, Analog, Electronic and Digital Micro-processor based systems.

Hence, whatever your process control need, Taylor India can help design it, equip it, build it, operate it, service it and maintain it at peak efficiency.

Perhaps that's why Taylor's clients include Indian Oil, IPCL, Orissa Synthetics, SPIC, Bayer, Cadilla Laboratories and of course, Reliance. Infact, when it comes to process control, the Indian industry banks on only one name...Taylor.

...only Taylor Technology could meet the challenge.

PRECISION CONTROL

TAYLOR INDIA

WE MAKE INDUSTRY HAPPEN

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

DEV ANAND

The Ageless Wonder

Four decades of a celluloid career, and the star continues to captivate

DEV Anand is a busy man. The phone keeps ringing. Dev, true to habit, answers each personally. There are producers waiting to cast him in new films, script-writers who want to sell him their dream projects, and mothers and agents of teenage sensations who hope Dev will do for them what he has for so many others—transform caterpillars into butterflies.

Last fortnight trade papers continued to report that Dev's Lashkar was outperforming Bachchan block-busters like Toofaan and Jadugar; audio cassettes of his latest film, Awwal Number, were selling briskly; and he had already announced a new film, Sau Crore, with a new pair: Raman and Fatima. "She looks great in shorts," says the Grand Young Man of Indian cinema, as he pores over her transparencies, surrounded by posters of New York and London, of topless dreamy-eyed beauties and David Hamilton's soft-focus nudes.

At 66, Dev Anand is an ageless wonder. At an age when others retire into genteel tranquillity, Dev's mind is bursting with ideas. Even while Navketan, the film company he started with his brothers Chetan and Vijay Anand, celebrates 40 years this fortnight, Dev is completely immersed in Sau Crore—a political thriller about an Indian Wimbledon star. He was at Wimbledon to shoot the crowd scenes and hopes to be there next year as well. Besides Raman and Fatima, the film features Naseeruddin Shah and Anupam Kher. And Dev Anand.

Says Zeenat Aman: "He is a man with a tremendous, fatal charm." That charm has worked for 44 years. Generations of heroines—Suraiya, Nutan, Waheeda Rehman, Hema Malini, Mumtaz, Zeenat Aman, Tina Munim, Ektaa—have succumbed to his dashing looks.

He is still clad in his trademark jeans and full-sleeved shirts with a denim jacket flung carelessly across his shoulders: you half-expect him to step out onto the streets looking for some real action. If you remind him that he is now a grandfather—he has a son, Suneil and daughter, Devina—he'll take you to his bedroom in his penthouse showing a hologram of a disrobing woman. He has that elan, that ersatz appeal which simply refuses to pale into grey eminence.

Remaining young has its price: a bit of bending and stretching in the morning; a strict diet; the ability to hold only one drink in a sozzled screen party; and a great love for the outdoors. Says he: "I have to get out—vast expanses fill

NAMAS BHOJANI

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

te

, Nutan, lini, Mum-n, Ektaa—
ing looks.
mark jeans
a denim his shoulo step out some real

AMAS BHOJANI

t he is now Suneil and you to his showing a an. He has which simeminence.
price: a bit
the morn-y to hold reen party:
loors. Says xpanses fill

A ROOFING SYSTEM PLUS A LOT OF EXTRAS.

Everest offers you more than roofing sheets and accessories.

Like free consultancy from experts at our Customer Service Cell. On design and installation. Assistance in selection of the right roofing sheets and accessories from the widest range. And custom-made accessories to suit your specific requirements.

Add to these the assurance of quality that's been proven over 50 years. Quality that has been perfected through a 'no-compromise' policy beginning with the R & D Centre, which has access to the latest international technology from our parent company, Eternit Group of Belgium. A specially developed fibre orientation technology that ensures unmatched strength and durability. And testing standards higher than ISI.

Plus prompt delivery from the largest nation-wide network of depots and stockists.

It's this extra confidence which keeps adding discerning clients like J.L. Nehru Port Trust (Nhava Sheva), Godrej, Bajaj Auto, L & T, Kinetic Honda and many others to our never ending list.

EVEREST

FIBRE CEMENT PRODUCTS

50 YEARS WITHOUT COMPROMISE.

EVEREST BUILDING PRODUCTS LIMITED. HEAD OFFICE: Ashok Bhawan, 93, Nehru Place, New Delhi 110 019. Tel: 643 2568, 643 5416. Telex: 031-65318, 031-71002, FAX: 011-646 4006.
ZONAL OFFICES: NORTH – JABALPUR – Tel: 25216/7, Telex: 765-211. SOUTH – COIMBATORE – Tel: 862816/7/8, Telex: 855-215. EAST – CALCUTTA – Tel: 45 2002, 45 3454. Telex: 021-8093.
WEST – BOMBAY – Tel: 493 6784, 493 8234, Telex: 011-73766, FAX: 022-494 9718.

Enterprise/D/EBPL/325

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Acqua Minerale Bisleri uses the same silver system used by NASA to purify water aboard space shuttles.

NASA scientists selected a silver system to purify drinking water aboard space shuttles after testing 23 different methods. Acqua Minerale Bisleri (AMB) also found silver to be the most effective water-purifying agent. Silver sterilised water inhibits the growth of bacteria through the oligodynamic effect. It is further treated with special anti-microbial processes and packed in disposable bottles. AMB is 100% pure drinking water. It is safer than boiled and filtered water which can get contaminated. In fact AMB is so safe that you can confidently give it not only to everyone at home but also to the sick and the convalescent and even to infants. Carry it with you while travelling too. On earth. Or in space.

RADEUS/PE/AMB/3-88

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

a new life in me."

Seven years ago, he was shooting Swami Dada at a studio and on an adjacent set, the late Raj Kapoor was acting in Chor Mandli (a film that never got released). On spotting Dev, Raj walked up to him and said: "Dev, weren't those good old days wonderful when we were young, when everyone was punctual and there was so much respect all around?" Dev grew mildly agitated, kept shuffling his feet and told Raj: "I don't know what you're talking about. Your time may have changed. Mine hasn't." Script-writer Suraj Sanim, who wrote many of Dev's hits including Chhupa Rustom, Heera Panna, Des Pardes and will be working in Sau Crore, succinctly observes: "For Dev Anand there is no past. He lives now and for tomorrow. He purposely forgets yesterday."

His enthusiasm is infectious. Says Zeenat: "For him, each film is an adventure and he shares his enthusiasm with every worker on the sets." She should know. When she blew cigarette smoke rings at a party over a decade ago in the hope of catching Dev's roving eye, she could scarcely believe that with just one film and a song—dam maro dam in Hare Rama, Hare Krishna—he'd change the concept of Indian heroines.

In a film world that reinforces the ethos that poorab is all pure and divine and paschim the vulgar and decadent, Dev has managed to hold his own without compromising his westernised appeal. You can't imagine Dev in a sherwani spouting Urdu poetry like a Dilip Kumar, nor clad in a dhoti and resembling a village simpleton singing folksy songs like a Raj Kapoor.

As critic Iqbal Masud points out: "He is the least Indian of the three (the other two being Dilip Kumar and Raj Kapoor). And his obsession with youth has prevented him from playing a wider range of roles. You have to graduate from college and enter the wide world at some point in your life."

Yet, the masses have loved him and, of late, tolerated him. Says Amit Khanna, who has been associated with Navketan since 1970: "He will be adored as a star but not as an actor."

Fatima, Dev, Raman in Sau Crore

A refreshingly non-conformist Dev has managed to hold his own without compromising his westernised appeal.

Aamir, Ektaa in Awwal Number

DEV is proud of that past but uncomfortable when reminded of it. He has introduced many to the industry, but is unwilling to wallow in past glory. Perhaps he does not wish to be reminded of his age, or he doesn't want to be termed a "thespian". But his contribution to the industry is munificent. It was he who discovered Zeenat, Tina, and gave Shabana her first commercial break. It required guts.

He's been gutsy in his themes as well: he has played villains and anti-heroes without worrying about his image (Jewel Thief, Baazi, Swami Dada, Gambler and Guide). And he has even avoided falling in love with his heroine, as in Des Pardes—though commercially that would have been more exciting—because the situation did not demand it. Asks Dev: "Can anyone else take such a gamble?"

It was not just his heroines that he ran around with. He flirted with politics too for a brief while. He attacked the Emergency in an interview to the BBC and later launched the National Party, which disappeared like a fleeting frame. His idealism has much to do with the poor. He philosophises: "The man sleeping on the street isn't asking for much. He doesn't want to be disturbed; he is not revolting. Our politicians have failed even him."

But Dev hasn't: for over 40 years he has unfailingly entertained him. He has very high hopes for Awwal Number, a film about a terrorist threat to a cricket match with Aamir Khan, Aditya Pancholi and Ektaa. "He is great—he makes you feel really good, like a star, even though it was my first film," says Ektaa. Whether he is at his Pali Hill penthouse, Juhu beach-house or Santa Cruz office, Dev is constantly on the move: looking for faces that spark stories, young girls that become the mascots to launch new movies. Says he: "I look for cinema everywhere."

It has never bothered him when he is ridiculed for running around trees with girls young enough to be his granddaughters. Questions are invariably asked about whether he's had a facelift (he hasn't). Or the reason why he continues to wear full-sleeved shirts (friends say he is conscious of his arms). Or if he has any elixir of youth (he hasn't).

For Dev the only elixir is work. His day starts with meeting hopefuls or script-writers. Then dubbing, mixing or editing, often skipping lunch. All this while conjuring up visions of scenes that will entrall generations. "I can't believe 40 years have passed. I can't recline on a chair and grow old with grace among books. I have to be on the move." Nothing, not even the tick-tock of time can restrain him.

—SALIL TRIPATHI

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Statement of the Chairman, Mr. N. A. Palkhivala

(53rd Annual General Meeting at the Birla Matushri Sabhagar, 19, Sir Vithaldas Thackersey Marg, Bombay-400 020, on Thursday, September 28, 1989)

"After four decades of strangulating controls, total decontrol has been the most propitious development this year but .... unless cement selling is delicensed, penetration into the rural markets is bound to remain dishearteningly difficult."

I have to begin on a sad note. Sumant Moolgaokar is no more. He was one of the main builders of your Company, and served the cement industry with rare distinction for 58 years. The fall-out from his dedicated labours was "innovative quantum jumps in India's technological progression", as one of your Directors put it.

As an architect of a new undertaking, Sumant was in the world class of the most dynamic entrepreneurs. He combined a creative mind with a high-octane passion for perfection. To him perfection was a goal, never quite reached but always sought after. He had an eye for the scarcest resource of all – talent; and he could bring out the best in his team. No one worked under him: every one worked with him. Emperors rule, but leaders motivate. He could motivate the workforce to the pitch where they became emotionally involved in the company they served.

Integrity and self-effacement came as naturally to him as deviousness and ostentation come to some others. Business ethics was not to him an oxymoron – like a hot ice-cube or a tiny giant.

Sumant Moolgaokar loved nature – "the silence that is in the starry sky, the sleep that is among the lonely hills." He loved birds and trees and the wind upon the heath, and "saw the brightness of the skirts of God". He felt a mystic kinship with the animate and the inanimate world – in that sense he was in tune with the infinite. Ecology and environment were to him paramount considerations which were non-negotiable. His was, par excellence, a life with a theme, a life dedicated to the great thinker's ideal –

"To see as far as one may;
To feel the great forces that lie behind every detail;
To hammer out as solid and compact a piece of work as one can;
And to leave it unadvertised."

We shall endeavour to ensure that your Company will always maintain the high standards that Sumant established. To impove upon them is beyond hope.

Depression in cement industry

After four decades of strangulating controls, total decontrol has been the most propitious development this year for the cement industry. I heartily welcome the long-delayed decision on decontrol for this vital industry which can now organize itself to achieve higher standards in the free market.

However, the year under review has been a year of depression for cement. For the second time in its 53-year history, your Company will not be paying any dividend. A recent study, undertaken by the Cement Manufacturers' Association (CMA), of 42 companies - accounting for 80 per cent of the total capacity – revealed that the post-tax return on net worth fell sharply from 36 per cent in 1983 to zero in 1987. In 1988 it was a negative 12 per cent! The Reserve Bank of India Bulletin of April 1989 gives some startling figures for 1987-88. While the ratio of after-tax profits to net worth was 5.6 per cent for the total industry of India, it was a negative figure for the cement industry. Likewise, the return of post-tax earnings (less preference dividends) on ordinary share capital was 21.2 per cent for the total industry, but was a negative figure for the cement industry.

The reasons for the bad times the industry is going through at present, are not far to seek.

As much as 75 per cent of the input costs of the cement industry is governed by administered prices totally beyond the control of the manufacturers. Decontrol has unfortunately coincided with steep increases in coal prices, electricity charges, and railway freight. With the industry's output estimated at 49 million tonnes during 1989-90, all the plants taken together will incur an additional expenditure, according to a CMA study, of Rs. 52 crore by way of increase in excise duty, and Rs. 290 crore on account of the hike in freight.

The increase in administered prices and costs has not been compensated by any increase in the retail price of cement. On the contrary, the retail price has fallen over 50 per cent in real terms since the introduction of partial decontrol seven years ago.

The cost increases have come at a time when the industry faces a situation of excess production and cut-throat competition. On a rough reckoning, the supply of cement outstrips demand by four million tonnes.

Widespread industrial sickness is a danger to be guarded against, though the shutting down of some old and unviable units would contribute to a healthy adjustment.

Remedial measures

If we have "an intelligent heart and a kind brain" – the Russian poet's birthday wish to a little girl – we would have no difficulty in adopting remedial measures which are so obvious that they almost cry aloud for adoption:

First*, the imperative for the cement industry is to scout for new markets in semi-urban and rural areas where the demand for cement has remained largely untapped. Cement should be placed outside the purview of the Essential Commodities Act which makes it obligatory for dealers to go through the arduous process of obtaining licences at considerable cost in time and money. Unless cement selling is delicensed, penetration into the rural markets is bound to remain dishearteningly difficult.

Secondly, active measures need to be taken to promote the use of cement for housing. It is a sad commentary on our plans and public policies that, on the one hand, we have a glut of cement and consequent sickness in the industry, while on the other hand we view with equanimity the homelessness of tens of millions of our people as a regular feature of the bleak national landscape. Recently, the Chairman of the National Housing Bank put the existing housing shortage at 29 million units, and estimated that an additional 36 million housing units will be required to be constructed by the year 2000. In other words, 65 million housing units will have to be constructed over the next twelve years if the shortage is to be met in full.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Thirdly, the Central and State Governments should implement a priority programme of constructing concrete roads and using cement for the lining of canals for irrigation purposes. International financial agencies have shown an active interest in plans for concretizing our roads. While the initial cost of concrete roads may be a little higher, (a) the savings in maintenance costs and the longer life of the roads, and (b) the savings in operation costs of plying the ever-increasing number of vehicles, would far outweigh the extra initial outlay. While we mentally accept that roads are the road to national growth, we are content to have the most woefully inadequate system of roads of any comparable country in the world. Only about 1.3 per cent of our surfaced road length is laid out in cement concrete, while – as the Planning Commission's Report recently pointed out – almost one-third of the length of our national highways has only a single-lane road pavement.

I have no doubt that the depression in the cement industry will not last long. "Even this shall pass away." The governments will be obliged by compelling circumstances to adopt the three remedial measures. The foresight of those who, like your Company, are expanding their capacity, will be fully justified by events.

Exports

While cement was a deficit commodity earlier, it has now the potential to become an earner of precious foreign exchange. The market in our neighbouring countries – Pakistan, Sri Lanka, Bangla Desh and Nepal – is large; and Indian cement, which is of world quality, is readily acceptable in those countries.

But our cost of production is so high that it is impossible for Indian cement to face international competition. Since 75 per cent of the input costs is governed by administered prices as stated above, there is not much room for reducing the cost of production. The gap between the price of Indian cement and that in the world market is such that Indian producers, to compete successfully, would have to suffer a significant loss of Rs. 400 per tonne. This is hardly the time when the cement industry can bear such a loss. The reliefs offered by the Government on the export front – duty drawback, import replenishment, and ten per cent cash compensation support – are wholly insufficient to neutralize the price differential.

A few of our cement units are strategically located for exports and your Company's reputation attracts numerous international inquiries. But the extent of the loss involved in exports at international prices is a powerful commercial deterrent. Nevertheless, your Company has already ventured into the export market in a modest way.

Modernization and expansion

As I said five years ago, modernization is one of those words which have a resonance wider than their original meaning. To your Company modernization does not mean merely replacement of equipment; it covers upgradation of product and process technologies in their manifold varieties, as also energy conservation.

The completion of the modernization of the plant at Madukkarai, and the optimization schemes at Jamul, Chanda, and Gagal – dealt with in the Directors' Report – augur well for the unfolding future of your Company.

The Government has just cleared our project to increase the present installed capacity of 5.6 lakh tonnes of the plant at Gagal in Himachal Pradesh, by an additional one million tonnes per annum. The project, estimated to cost Rs. 130 crore, will meet the growing demand for cement in the Northern region, specially for the large hydel projects in Himachal Pradesh and in Jammu & Kashmir.

Leader in the field

In the competitive situation today, we are fully geared to stay ahead of the others. In production, our accent is on quality; in distribution, on availability of the product at a fair price.

We strive to live up to the motto – "It is good to be big; it is better to be good; it is best to be both". We shall maintain our premier position in the field; and the good quality of our product is witnessed by the better price it commands in the free market.

Your Company is fortunate in having – under the outstanding leadership of Dr. Subrata Ganguly – a dedicated and loyal family of employees at the works, the offices, and other establishments, who have carried out their tasks devotedly through the difficult times. I should like to express, on your behalf and on behalf of the management, our sense of appreciation and gratitude for their performance in a trying year.

THE ASSOCIATED CEMENT COMPANIES LIMITED

Bombay, September 21, 1989

ROGER ACC 163/89 A

ACC

times change, our values don't

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Why the best builders always rely on this seal of assurance

It's obvious.
Because when it comes to choosing cast iron products, there can be no compromise on quality.

Every RIF product goes through stringent quality control. That's why RIF cast iron products are always more dependable. Leak proof, sturdier and able to withstand exacting weather conditions. It ensures hygienic sanitation.

So next time you recommend or buy a cast iron product, be sure it's RIF. Look for the RIF logo embossed on it, to ensure it is genuine.

- CAST IRON PIPES
- PIPE FITTINGS
- MANHOLE COVERS
- FLUSHING CISTERNS

RIF®

RAJ IRON FOUNDRY
Sultan Ganj Agra, 282004
Phones; 76360, 61315

Casting iron into excellence.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

MEDICAL CONFERENCES

Tough Stance

Government policy draws flak

IS India using discrimination to fight discrimination? That's the question being asked after the Ministry of External Affairs (MEA) imposed severe and, according to one organiser, "humiliating" conditions on delegates from Israel, Taiwan and South Africa expected in New Delhi for three international medical conferences this month. Besides the Ninth International Congress of Neurological Surgery which concluded on October 13, Delhi is expecting hundreds of world renowned medical specialists for the 18th International Epilepsy Congress (October 17 to 22) and the 14th World Congress of Neurology (October 22 to 27). But if MEA persists in its policy of singling out delegates from some countries for discriminatory treatment, the prospects of India hosting other such conferences look pretty bleak.

When the Union Ministry of Health and Family Welfare recently sought MEA clearance for the three congresses, MEA said yes to delegates from all countries except Israel, Taiwan and South Africa. From that moment on, the organisers of the three events have found it difficult to convince MEA that restrictions on delegates from some countries would not be consistent with the open-door commitment they made to the world federations of neurology and neurological surgery.

A few months ago, Dr A.K. Banerjee, organising secretary of the Congress of Neurological Surgery was informed that the participation of delegates from Israel and Taiwan would be subject to certain conditions. Dr M.C. Maheshwari, organising secretary of the Epilepsy Congress, too received similar intimation. The conditions set by MEA were:

- Israeli and Taiwanese specialists will participate in their individual capacity and not as representatives of their countries.
- Israeli and Taiwanese flags, nameplates and emblems would not be displayed nor would their national anthems be played.
- The names of Israeli and Taiwanese delegates would be listed in their individual capacities in alphabetical order.
- The invitation to Israeli and Taiwanese participants would be issued by a non-government organising committee.
- There should be no office-bearers representing these governments.

The organisers were also categorically told that no political figure would associate himself with the congress, even for the inauguration, if Israeli participants were present. Moreover, the organisers were asked in writing whether publicity about Israel's participation could be avoided, whether India would be debarred from participating in similar conferences if the Israelis were kept out, whether any other countries would object to an Israeli exclusion and how India could expect to benefit from Israeli participation.

In the case of South Africa, MEA adopted an even harder line. P.L. Santoshi, joint secretary in MEA, wrote to Dr J.S. Chopra, secretary-general of the World Congress of Neurology, that MEA would allow only those delegates from South Africa who could supply "proof of being anti-apartheid activists". MEA said that while South Africans of Asian origin would be allowed to attend, others would have to get their anti-apartheid testimonial counter-signed by the African National Congress. The Neurological Association of South Africa was also asked to supply lists of their members prepared on racial lines.

MEA's stand drew instant condemnation from world medical associations and embarrassed the Indian organisers. Professor Richard Masland, president of the World Federation of Neurology, accused the Indian organisers of reneging on their commitment of an "open-door policy with respect to persons attending the Congress". Dr Kevin D. Rosman, chairman of the Neurological Association of South Africa, was more scathing. "We are a multi-racial organisation and see our role in the furtherance of medical care and not politics," he said. On India's request for lists of members divided in racial groups, he stated: "We would consider any attempt to do so as being racist."

An MEA spokesman said the Israelis and Taiwanese could attend as long as their presence did not imply Indian recognition of their countries. But the MEA stand drew flak from doctors at home. A senior professor in the All India Institute of Medical Sciences said that "India's policy of discrimination at the scientific level is unfortunate". It could lead to similar discrimination against Indian doctors attending international conferences abroad, he added. Leading doctors from France, Switzerland and Yugoslavia were also denied visas because of MEA's delay in advising its missions in these countries to issue visas for the conference delegates. "This is atrocious," fumed one of the organisers, but the damage has already been done.

—KANWAR SANDHU

Dr Clark addressing the conference

Restrictions on delegates from Israel, Taiwan and South Africa for three medical conferences in Delhi could lead to similar discrimination against India in the future.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

WE ARE FIT

Because we constantly update ourselves with the latest technology.

We continue to add on new features, to ensure the ultimate in EPABX technology.

WE ARE QUICK

In installation. And service.

So prompt. With overnight installation and on-the-dot maintenance service.

WE ARE MANY

So you can choose from our wide range of EPABX systems.

UE 115, UE 28, UE 52. From 4 P&T lines & 24 internal lines to 15 P&T lines & 96 internal lines. UE 512. From 2-5 P&T lines & 12 internal lines.

Usha Compu-Tel EPABX System. Most sophisticated. Highly versatile. Reasonably priced solid state microprocessor- based system. Meeting present day requirements for efficient communication.

USHA ELECTRONICS
Thapar Chambers,
2nd floor, Opposite
Kalindi Colony, Ring Road,
New Delhi 110 065
Ph: 6847766/67/68
Telex: 031-75172 USHA IN
Fax: 6847769

No wonder, we keep over 300 customers smiling.

Authorised Sales Agents

Creative Business Techniques, 155, Ramdaspeth, NAGPUR-440 010 Tel.-25327. Weigh Systems, 106-D, Kitchlu Nagar, LUDHIANA. Tel.-33714. R.K. Enterprises, 19th floor, Flat-6, Chatterjee International Centre, 33A, J.N. Road, CALCUTTA-700 071. Tel.-292132. Unique Communication Systems, 2nd floor, Laxmi Bhavan, B/h, Giriraj Society, Shahpur Mill Compound, AHMEDABAD-380 001. Tel.-22229. Usha Electronics, C-267, Nirala Nagar, LUCKNOW-226020. Tel.-72108. Magnum Systems, A/6, Prestige Chambers, opp. Sai Service Station, J.M. Road, Deccan Gymkhana, PUNE-411 004. Tel.-54205. Modern Business Equipments & Services Pvt. Ltd. S.C.O. 92, Sector 35-C, CHANDIGARH-160 036. Tel.-31285.

Offers invited from reputed organisations for distributorship.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Do people smell you even before they see you?

Nobody likes being near a person who smells. Yet so many of us don't even know when we suffer from Body Odour.

A lot of people believe that perspiration causes Body Odour. However, perspiration, by itself, is odourless. It only starts smelling when it is decomposed by the bacteria that are always present on and in the underlayers of the skin.

Regular soaps can only wash off surface dirt and bacteria. But very soon after a bath, bacteria settle down on the skin and multiply. And you're never really free from Body Odour.

THE SNIFF TEST

At the end of the day, raise your arm, and sniff under arm. Smell something? You probably will, unless you are a Cinthol user.

Switch to Cinthol and use it for atleast 7 days. Repeat the sniff test. You'll be surprised. No Body Odour. A sign that Cinthol is working for you.

Unless you use Cinthol. Cinthol is the ONLY general purpose bath soap in India that contains TCC – Tri Chloro Carbanilide. The TCC in Cinthol prevents bacteria from multiplying and perspiration from smelling. Not just immediately after a bath, but a full 24 hours following it.

So all you have to do is take atleast one bath a day with Cinthol. And you can say goodbye to Body Odour for the rest of your life.

Cinthol
Prevents Body Odour.
Builds Body Confidence.

MADISON-G-67

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

GEARING UP FOR THE FUTURE

V.K. MODI

Ladies & Gentlemen,

On behalf of the Board of Directors and on my own behalf, I extend to you all a very warm and cordial welcome to this 18th Annual General Meeting of your Company. The Directors' Report and audited Accounts for the period ending March 31, 1989, have been with you for some time now and may I, therefore, with your permission take them as read.

ECONOMIC ENVIRONMENT

At the outset, I would like you to join me in complimenting our dynamic Prime Minister Shri Rajiv Gandhi and his Government for valiantly grappling with various challenges faced by our country and at the same time making a bold bid to harness our cyclically volatile economy. I am sure, you also share my feeling that aided by timely monsoons, the nightmare of drought, staring us in the face during 1987-88 is already a thing of the past. A record breaking growth of 23% in agricultural produce, about 9% in industrial sector and 29% in exports, alongwith major leaps in technology speak volumes for the sagacity and drive of our Government and commitment of our people. The timely and wide dispersal of rainfall, during the current monsoon spell, is another good omen for this year too.

It is indeed a very pleasant co-incidence that we are exuding this optimism in the birth centenary year of a great visionary and the architect of modern India—Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru. The planned economic development, conditioned in difficult democratic set-up, conceived and initiated under his leadership has come a long way indeed.

Encouraged by the achievement of targtted growth rates in different sectors during the first four years of the Seventh Plan, and spurred by the urgencies of time, a higher growth rate of 6% in GDP and 9% in industrial production is being targetted for the Eighth Plan period. This would necessitate mobilisation of resources to the extent of Rs. 6,50,000 crores. Since, as per the approach paper to the Eighth Plan, the main thrust is on elimination of poverty and amelioration of common man's life, through better employment, food, clothing, shelter, education and health-care measures, all of us should feel obligated to extend our fullest co-operation for the success of this plan.

In the recently released Annual Report for 1988-89 by the Reserve Bank of India, while certain trends are heartening, there are indications for concern in areas like foreign exchange reserves, current account deficit and inflation. Our Government is seriously siezed of these problems and given the general co-operation and support necessary for such stupendous tasks, will be able to tackle the same effectively. We on our part pledge to contribute our mite in this national endeavour.

Turning to private industrial sector as a whole, I am proud to state that this sector has always shown its maturity and self-discipline and responded to somewhat hesitant liberalisation measures of the Government, with great aplomb. The initial apprehensions having thus been allayed, we hope that the policy of liberalisation will be pursued openly to ensure accelerated growth of our economy.

While entering the new decade of the nineties, if we pause and take an historic perspective, our hearts will be gladdened to see that a solid foundation, in hitherto non-existent, infrastructural industries, industrial and consumer product goods industries, as well as our backbone, the agricultural sector has already been laid. We also possess an over-flowing reservoir of trained man power to draw from. Notwithstanding the usual problems relating to accelerated growth, on the whole the nation is brimming with confidence.

CAPITAL MARKET

Turning to all important capital market, I would like to quote from RBI's Annual Report. "With noticeable improvements in basic economic fundamentals as also better performance by the private corporate sector, the capital market experienced considerable buoyancy during the year. Fresh Capital Issues were significantly larger and evoked better response. In the secondary market, the share prices registered a sharp rise in 1988-89 after a moderate decline in the previous year."

To this, I would like to add, that capital market owes its optimism to the liberal economic and pragmatic financial policies being pursued by the present Government. The continuation of vibrant trend at this juncture, in defiance of the normal uncertainties associated with the outcome of General Elections, reflects the faith of the investing public in the inherent strength of our economy. No wonder, our capital market is now being openly mentioned, if not reckoned, as one of the emerging giants in the world.

OUR PERFORMANCE

I am pleased to report that during the 11 months period under review, your Company achieved a record production of 22.26 lakhs tyres and a turnover of Rs. 413.84 crores. The exports of Rs. 16.22 crores during the period is also a record breaking performance. It is a matter of genuine pride for all of us, that we continue to maintain brand leader status in domestic market and No. 1 position on the export front. The operations during first quarter of the current year are also encouraging as we have achieved a turnover of Rs. 120.32 crores against Rs. 108.07 crores during the same quarter last year.

PROFITABILITY

During this period, the profitability of your Company, however, has not been as high as it should have been under the normal circumstances, due to over 50% increase in the costs of some of the basic raw materials like Natural Rubber and Nylon Tyre Cord. Moreover, due to acute shortage of some of the raw materials, the same had to be imported at much higher prices due to very high incidence of import duties.

Your Company made a profit of Rs. 17.51 crores during the 11 months period after providing Rs. 8.62 crores towards depreciation. The after tax profit was Rs. 13.51 crores against Rs. 14.78 crores for the last year (12 months). You will thus appreciate that on pro-rata basis we have been able to maintain our after tax profit at the same level as the last year.

DIVIDEND

Your Company has recommended, for your approval, a dividend @ 25% for a period of 11 months' operations, which on an annualised basis works out to 27.27%; and will absorb Rs. 259.50 lacs out of profits.

RAW MATERIALS

I have earlier stated that escalation in the prices of raw materials, which account for 80% of the cost of production of a tyre, had significantly eroded our profitability. In this context the following figures indicating percentage increase over last two years speak for themselves viz. Nylon Tyre Cord 54%, Natural Rubber 51%, SBR 26%, PBR 14%, Carbon Black 33% and Rubber Chemicals 71%.

It is an open secret that the prices of raw materials for tyres, in India are almost double the prices prevalent in the international market; in addition, some of the major items are generally in short supply.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Modi Rubber Limited

Registered Office: Modinagar-201 204, District: Ghaziabad, U.P.

SPEECH DELIVERED BY SHRI. V.K. MODI, CHAIRMAN & MANAGING DIRECTOR AT THE 18TH ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING, SEPETEMBER 27, 1989.

Natural Rubber

Since Natural Rubber accounts for 28% of the raw material cost for tyres any price increase on the same upsets the production costing of tyres. The average price of Natural Rubber was Rs. 18,000 per tonne last year. This year, the price has remained above Rs. 20,000 per tonne and peaked at Rs. 25,000 per tonne. Similarly as against release price of Rs. 17,500 per tonne last year, STC released imported Natural Rubber at prices varying from Rs. 23,500 to Rs. 27,400 per tonne. It has been assessed that this price increase put an additional burden of Rs. 100 crores on tyre industry during this year.

Without at rest the controversies on what is the fair price for Natural Rubber, three years back the Costing Branch of Finance Ministry had undertaken a production cost study on Rubber and come to the conclusion that a price of Rs. 19,500 per tonne shall be remunerative to the growers. The tyre industry accepted the price thus determined but pleaded with the Government to ensure that Rubber is made available at the fair price by STC releasing Imported Rubber at the fair price determined by the Government. It was requested that it should be ensured that the domestic Rubber price also stabilises at that level. Subsequently, based on the cost updating, Government has been revising the price of the Rubber, the last updating resulting in the fair price going up to Rs. 17,800 per tonne. Unfortunately the international price of Rubber went up last year and as the Government was reluctant to adjust the import duty to enable STC to release the Rubber at the fair price, STC had no other alternative but to release the Rubber at very high price influencing the domestic price also to go up to new high levels.

The tyre industry has repeatedly stated that the growers should get adequate price for Rubber. For this purpose a mechanism was evolved by Government, nearly three years back, of having Buffer Stock Scheme and adjusting import duty on Rubber to the level enabling STC to release Rubber at the fair price determined by the Government. Unfortunately during 1988 and 1989 this scheme did not work at all due to high release price by the STC.

In brief, the requests of tyre industry are:

- Rubber should be made available to the industry at the fair price determined by the Government. This can only be done by STC releasing Rubber at fair price and further STC could do it only if the import duty is reduced to 10%, and
- Import of adequate quantity of Rubber should be effected so that no shortage is felt.

Nylon Tyre Cord

Nylon Tyre Cord is another important raw material accounting for 30% of the production cost of tyres. Last year while tyre production went up by 26%, Nylon Tyre Cord production could not be stepped up. This resulted in shortage of Nylon Tyre Cord. On the one hand, import of Nylon Tyre Cord was an uneconomical proposition because with an extremely high import duty of 104%, imported Nylon Tyre Cord was costlier by Rs. 50,000 per tonne, on the other hand, the Government wanted tyre industry to increase production. The well-meented suggestion of the tyre industry to reduce the import duty on Nylon Tyre Cord to enable tyre industry to import the same at economical cost, unfortunately has not yet been agreed to. Thus tyre industry had to bear additional financial burden of Rs. 30 crores in import of Nylon Tyre Cord. What is maintained by the Government is that there would be no incentive to increase production of any product, and so also tyres, if the fiscal policies are such that cost of production becomes prohibitively high. If the import duty had been reduced as requested by tyre industry, revenue loss to the Government would have been only Rs. 30 crores. But on the ground that it is uneconomical to import Nylon Tyre Cord at high price and to produce tyres, had the industry not imported Nylon Tyre Cord the consequent drop in production of tyres, apart from creating shortages for tyres, would have resulted in Government losing revenue of more than Rs. 200 crores by way of import duty on Nylon Tyre Cord and excise duty on tyres.

Nobody disputes that indigenous industry should not be protected. But it does not make sense to keep import duty on any material at such a level that import becomes an uneconomical proposition. The request of the tyre industry is that import duty on Nylon Tyre Cord should be reduced to 104% enabling import of Nylon Tyre Cord at economical cost while at the same time giving full protection to the indigenous Nylon Tyre Cord industry.

HIGHLIGHTS

- Prime Minister and Government deserve to be complimented for valiantly grappling with challenges. Optimism about revival and strength of economy. Concern about diminishing foreign exchange reserves, deficit finance and inflation.
- Outlook for 1990's optimistic.
- Capital Market emerging stronger — conventional uncertainties and fluctuations reduced.
- Turnover increased from Rs. 400.13 Crores (12 Months) to Rs. 413.84 Crores (11 Months). Profitability affected due to unprecedented increase in the cost of inputs but after tax profits maintained.
- Dividend of 25% (27.27% on annualised basis).
- Emphasis on need to make raw material prices fair and economical by adjustments in duties.
- Export performance improved; 22.53% share of total exports captured CAPEXIL award for the third successive year.
- Import of tyres not necessary. Call to increase duty on import of tyres or reduce duty of inputs for a fair and even competition.
- Delicensing of tyre industry welcome as liberalisation measure but apprehension of fragmentation of capacity.
- Future of industry promising. Potential for 20% per annum growth.
- Strengthening of R&D and development of human resource capital undertaken. Modernisation and rationalisation results already discernible.
- Ambitious plans for future growth include new project for Nylon Tyre Cord/Fabric.

Butyl Rubber

The Butyl Rubber is a better substitute for Natural Rubber for the manufacture of inner tubes for tyres. There is no indigenous production of Butyl Rubber. Still there is an effective import duty of 85% on Butyl Rubber.

Where is the justification for such a duty, more so as tyre is already subjected to high rate of excise duty?

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

EXPORTS

Considering its vital importance, I would like to make a special mention about our export performance, which continues to be a source of justifiable pride. As mentioned earlier, we could touch an all time high figure of Rs. 1622 lacs in exports which accounts for 22.53% share in total tyre exports from India. In the process, we have improved our exports to such technically advanced countries as the USA, UK and USSR and are consolidating our position in other countries like Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Italy, Middle East, Singapore and UAE.

Your Company has also added yet another feather to its cap by winning CAPEXIL Top Export Award, for the third successive year.

However, exports remain a losing proposition. I request the Central Government that the industry should get total Cash Compensatory Support (CCS) of 12% on exports against 5% presently available. The CCS should not be linked to the value addition.

IMPORT OF TYRES

Although, the industry is in a position to cater to any increase in demand, and if I may say so, even yearning for such an increase, to make better capacity utilisation, yet in its wisdom, the Government has permitted import of tyres under OGL. The import duty on tyres has been reduced from 145% to 105%. This is contrary to the policy of giving Tariff protection to indigenous industries, by prescribing import duties on finished products at higher rate than the import duty on raw materials of the concerned item.

The industry feels that this is patently unfair and smacks of discrimination.

I, therefore, sincerely appeal to the Government that either the import duty on tyres be restored to the earlier level of 145% or import duty on raw materials should be reduced to 65% to give us a chance to fight competition on an even basis.

DELICENSING

It appears that reacting sharply to transient imbalance between the supply and demand of tyres, the Government has decided to delicence the manufacture of tyres and tubes. Its implications are too obvious to be highlighted. While we certainly welcome this measure as yet another step towards liberalisation of controls, we have a feeling that this would lead to fragmentation of capacity and would be against the policy of setting up plants of minimum economic capacity.

MOTOR VEHICLES ACT

The industry welcomes the promulgation of Motor Vehicles Act, as it will be instrumental in effectively curbing the practice of over-loading of commercial vehicles and reduction in air-pollution. It is felt that with control on over-loading the manufacturers would not be required to over-build their tyres for ensuring extra safety. The tyres would thus be lighter and more efficient. The demand for commercial vehicles and consequently tyres would also increase.

FUTURE OUTLOOK

Large and diversified, as our country is, the role of road transport—passenger as well as goods, cannot be over-emphasised. Growing population, continuous development and improvement in standard of living will always put pressure on the production of tyres. It is estimated that as against a demand of 11 million tyres during 1987-88 the demand is likely to touch 28 million by the end of next plan, providing a potential for growth at over 20% per annum for the industry as a whole. The future seems to be bright and full of challenges.

EXPANSION/DIVERSIFICATION PLANS

Your Company is gearing itself to face the challenges of change by strengthening its R&D effort and improving human resources capital. In addition to this, we have undertaken a programme of modernisation, expansion and rationalisation at both the locations and the results of initial steps in this direction are already discernible.

In order to improve controls and decision making processes we are also enlarging and up-dating our computerisation programmes.

ALL STEEL RADIAL TYRES PROJECT

I have pleasure to inform you that we are seriously working on the implementation of our Radial Tyre project for the manufacture of 4,00,000 units per annum. Our foreign collaboration agreement with M/s. Continental Aktiengesellschaft, West Germany already stands approved by the Government.

NYLON TYRE CORD PROJECT

You will be glad to know that recently, your Company has been granted a Letter of Intent for establishment of a project for the manufacture of Nylon Tyre Cord/Fabric at Nanded in the State of Maharashtra. This will not only eliminate our dependence on others for this vital item but also reduce out- flow of precious foreign exchange from the country. Effective steps are being taken to implement this project.

DIVERSIFICATION PROJECTS

We have already identified a few other projects for which requisite sanctions are being obtained. We will keep you posted with their developments from time to time.

SECURED NON-CONVERTIBLE DEBENTURES

Your Company proposes to issue fresh Secured Non-Convertible Debentures amounting to Rs. 1038 lacs on Rights basis to meet a part of its working capital requirements. A resolution to this effect has been incorporated in the notice for this meeting for your consideration and approval.

I am positive that with your good wishes and co-operation and encouragement from the Government and Financial Institutions we will be able to implement our plans and earn for your Company, a well deserved status of a flagship, in its own right.

LABOUR RELATIONS

I am happy to acknowledge that cordiality and harmony in labour management relations have been a major contributory factor in our achievements of improved operational results. I am confident that the sense of belonging and excellent team spirit will continue to be the basis of our work culture.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I would like to record my thanks to my colleagues on the Board for their invaluable counsel and guidance. I also consider it to be my very pleasant duty to place on record our appreciation of the entire work force, staff and the management employees; for all the good work done by them during the year and hope that they will continue to excel their own performance. I would also convey my gratitude to the Central and the U.P. Governments. Financial Institutions, Banks, Dealers, Customers and Shareholders, deserve our praise for their guidance, co-operation and support as well as their faith in the bright future of this Company.

My thanks are also due to our collaborators M/s. Continental Aktiengesellschaft, West Germany, for making it possible for us to be what we technically stand for.

I profusely thank you too, ladies and gentlemen for having graced the occasion and heard me with attention and patience. My best wishes to you all.

Thank you.

V.K. MODI

Note: This does not purport to be a record of the proceedings of the Annual General Meeting.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Har

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SARANGI

Strains of a Dying Art

The classical instrument faces an eclipse

Photographs by BHAWAN SINGH

The grand finale of the Sarangi mela in Bhopal: a celebration of the instrument

THE music was lilting, the night magical. On the banks of Bhopal lake, more than 70 players—renowned ustads and little known radio artistes, seasoned septuagenarians and teenaged amateurs—played the sarangi to the urgings of Padma Shree winner, 62-year-old Pandit Ram Narayan.

It was the first time that as many as 125 exponents of an instrument congregated at one spot. And they all seemed to have struck the right chord. The finale of the three-day 'Sarangi Mela' organised in September by Bhopal's Bharat Bhavan proved a grand celebration of the sarangi. But there was a tragic note too—the threat of extinction hanging over the 400-year-old instrument.

The festival began with a soulful mangal dhwani by Rajasthani folk sarangiyas which drew applause from the masters—Ustad Sultan Khan, Pandit Hanuman Mishra, Pandit Ram Narayan and Dhruba Ghosh. But the piece de resistance was the recordings of the greatest sarangiya of the century—the late Ustad Bundu Khan.

But so dramatic has the slide of the sarangi been over the last two decades, that the Bhopal mela could well be its swan song. The instrument that once adorned royal courts—for solo performances and as an accompaniment for classical music and dance—has few patrons or players today. Sarangi manufacturers too are dwindling. One rare survivor is Ridmal Khan Langa, a Jodhpur carpenter. Says he: "It takes over a month to make one sarangi but I get about Rs 2,000 per piece."

This century had produced legendary sarangi players—Bundu Khan, Mamman Khan, Abdul Aziz Khan, Bade Ghulam Sadir Khan, Ashik Hussain (Panipatwale) and Gopal Mishra. But after their deaths, few have matched their standards. Says Sardar Khan, sarangi instructor at the Gwalior Sangeet Vidyalaya who complains of getting just three students a year: "This is a very difficult instrument to master. In today's

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

IF YOU THINK THAT THE BEST OF 100% SOLID STATE ELECTRONIC BALANCES ARE YET TO COME, THEY HAVE ARRIVED EVEN BEFORE YOU COULD GET STARTED.

Anamed electronic balances, 100% solid state microprocessor technology. Manufactured in association with Denver Instruments Co. U.S.A., the world renowned pioneers in manufacturing and marketing Ainsworth balances globally for over 100 years.

Here's a close look at the wide range, tailored to suit your specific requirements.

MX 8000 series for precision weighing and counting ideal for component manufacturers with a last weight memory recall. A highly sophisticated balance can transmit print order to a printer or computer, via data link.

If you are looking for a simple functional balance then opt for M series 55. Functions and price are perfectly matched.

Or the 7000D series carat balance It's every diamond jeweller's must and pride. With an optional slave display.

Or the 7000 series 1kg balance with 10mg sensitivity for gold jewellers.

Anamed electronic balances-100% solid state microprocessor based technology that use LVDT weight sensing technique and backed by the widest network of service engineers.

Whatever is your specific weight problem. We have the right balance for you-ANAMED.

ANAMED

ANAMED INSTRUMENTS PVT. LTD.
7, First Floor, Sita Estate A, Plot CTS 133-136, Mahul Road, Chembur, Bombay 400 074.
Phone: 551 6908. Telex: 72290. Grams: MATCHLESS

Adimpact

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Quality. The built-in magic that has made VENUS a best-seller...

For 28 years!

Venus has the distinction of staying on top for over 28 years.

Built-in quality

Unlike several cheap water heaters where only buying and assembling of parts are done. Venus is manufactured to strict quality control standards all through the production process. That's why all the models of Venus water heater from 10 to 50 litres carry the ISI mark.

Making Venus in the long run maintenance free and ensuring a trouble-free service.

Built-in safety

Venus comes to you with built-in safety features like Fusible Plug, Pressure Release-cum-Vacuum Release Valve. Unlike other water heaters where safety features are optional accessories.

Making Venus totally safe.

Built on expertise

Venus water heaters are built on innovative technology that comes with the expertise of 28 years.

Quality in service

A nation-wide distribution network makes Venus available every where and assures prompt after-sales- service.

Built to your choice

Venus water heaters are available in a range of 10, 15, 25, 35, 50, 70 & 100 litres capacity in Vertical, Horizontal and Dwarf models.

Venus, always the leader.

IS:2082 ISI

VENUS®
WATER HEATERS

Manufactured and marketed by:
STANDARD ELECTRIC APPLIANCES

Central Marketing Office:
S-2, Green Park Extension, New Delhi 110 016.

H.O. & Factory: Tuticorin, Tamil Nadu.
Branches at: Madras • Bangalore • Calcutta • Bombay.

ADW/AVE/SEA/3603 RR

Adimpact

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Sarangiyas tuning their instruments: a declining tradition in desperate need of patrons world of ease and speed, few are likely to take it up."

Rajesh Bahadur, a former pupil of Bundu Khan, believes sarangi recitals must be livened up: "The media has reduced it to a morose instrument by playing it only when a public figure dies. But it's also an instrument of joy."

Public tastes have thus reduced the sarangi to a mere accompanying instrument. Pandit Narayan, credited with popularising the sarangi as a solo instrument, says: "The sarangi is both an accompanying and a solo instrument, but it has unfortunately got typified in its former role. It isn't called saurangi (having a hundred shades) without reason." Even as an accompanying instrument the sarangi faces competition from the harmonium. Says Joep Bor, a Dutchman who heads the Indian music department at the Rotterdam Conservatorium: "The harmonium, an inferior instrument, has taken the sarangi's place."

Ashok Vajpeyi, secretary of Bharat Bhavan, blames the decline of the sarangi on the "disappearance of the traditional trend of conserving expertise in the gharanas (music families) and unwillingness on the part of old masters to share their expertise with learners".

Ridmal Khan Langa: rare survivor

In fact, several accomplished sarangiyas gave it up for other forms of classical music. Abdul Karim Khan, Adbul Wahid Khan, Bade Ghulam Ali Khan and Amir Khan gave it up for singing; Sahabdad Khan for the sitar; and Abdul Aziz Khan for the veena. Pandit Onkar Nath Thakur, a master sarangi player, is now a classical singer.

If the sarangi tradition still survives, credit goes to a handful of old stalwarts and a few young innovative players. Dhruba Ghosh, already famous at 30, has introduced "methodical and scientific simplifications". Using his sarangi—he's replaced the traditional strings with gut from a tennis racket—it is possible to play for three hours at a stretch instead of the usual half-an-hour. Purists frown on such "corruptions" of the sarangi.

On a positive plane, the festival came up with a charter of suggestions. Among them: ask AIR and Doordarshan to give the sarangi more time; ban classical singing accompanied by the harmonium; make the use of the sarangi compulsory. There were others too: offer scholarships, simplify the sarangi, and ban the playing of the instrument during mourning. Some were impractical, others difficult to implement.

And so the instrument which Yehudi Menuhin had praised for "most poignantly and most revealingly expressing the very soul of Indian feeling and thought", today appears a case for charity.

—SHARMILA CHANDRA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

d by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri ndful of old ew young

s. Dhruba nous at 30, methodical simplificasarangi—traditional m a tennis ble to play a stretch al half-ann on such e sarangi.
plane, the ith a char-
s. Among an to give classical e harmo-
e sarangi
s too: offer angi, and ent during ctical, othwhich Ye-for "most lingly exan feeling a case for CHANDRA

Pounding five miles.
Pumping weights.
Fifty push-ups.
Four eggs.
And twin blade pleasure.

Touch of steel on skin.
Slice of lather in a stroke.
Cool smooth shave.
A Wilman shave.

Shaving Systems
Wilman II
Smooth days begin this way.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Photographs by RAGHU RAI

ENVIRONMENT

A New Militancy

The gathering of tribals, villagers and social activists in Harsud led to a dam-burst of protest against 'destructive development', attracting world-wide attention. More importantly, it announced the arrival of the Indian Greens.

IT was an environmentalist's nirvana. Gaily-dressed tribals from the Narmada valley, a victorious army from Baliapal in Orissa who have battled against a missile test range, Sarvodaya leaders from Karnataka, hundreds of villagers displaced by large irrigation and power projects in Madhya Pradesh and a star-studded galaxy of social activists—Baba Amte, actress Shabana Azmi, Sunderlal Bahuguna, Kannada writer Shivram Karanth and maverick saint-politician Swami Agnivesh. A gathering this large could hardly pass without attracting politicians, this time in the form of V.C. Shukla and Maneka Gandhi.

But what they collectively achieved was remarkable enough: a dam-burst of protest against "destructive development" that attracted attention from all parts of the globe and firmly placed the obscure town of Harsud (population: 18,000) in Madhya Pradesh on the international environmental map.

Harsud was at once a symbol and a show of strength. The town was symbolically selected since it will soon be submerged under the largest man-made lake in the world—a result of the controversial Narmada valley project. "There will be 50 feet of water where we are standing today," declared Satinath Sarangi, an activist who has been organising local villagers against the project. The two giant dams over Narmada in Madhya Pradesh and Gujarat will submerge 40,000 hectares of prime teak forests, 84,000 hectares of cultivable land and displace 2 lakh persons.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

But more than the medium was the message of Harsud: that the environmental movement in the country has finally come of age and is building up into a potent force. The Harsud rally was organised by over 100 environmental and social action groups and actively supported by several international organisations. It was by far the biggest ever environmental protest in the country.

IT also, more significantly, announced the arrival of the Indian green movement, the idea born last summer in Baba Amte's Anandvan, the leprosy patients' home he runs. Says Amte: "The time is ripe for such a green front which would act as a pressure group and force political parties to take notice of the millions who suffer from degradation of the environment and the destruction which so-called developmental projects wreak."

But it was the enthusiasm of the villagers, who bear the brunt of development projects, that was most infectious. They came from all over, bearing packets of mud from different parts of the country to erect a pillar symbolising the new collective will of environmentalists. After the rally, thousands of people formed a human chain to encircle Harsud as an eloquent expression of their concern for the 1,000-year-old town.

The man who towered over the proceedings was, of course, Murlidhar Devidas 'Baba' Amte, 75, winner of the Padmashree, Rastra Bhushan, Jamanalal Bajaj and Magasaysay awards, best known for his work among tribal leprosy patients. Although he had fractured his arm a week earlier, Amte, who cannot sit erect because of spinal problems, motored 500 km of rough road in an ambulance to reach Harsud. The moving spirit behind the rally, Amte was brought to the stage on a cot and a passionate roar greeted his pledge that: "As long as I breathe I am with you. The dam will not be allowed to come up."

The most fiery speech was delivered by Shabana Azmi who declared: "Have the urbanites more right to live than the rural folk? The people of Harsud have only one place to live, and that is Harsud." Despite her busy schedule, Azmi, known for her support to the Bombay shanty-dwellers' struggle, spared three days for the rally.

Map by B.K. SHARMA

Torchlight procession; Amte, Bahuguna, Azmi and Patkar

Sunderlal Bahuguna, one of the pioneers of the 'chipko' movement in the Himalayas, was his usual eloquent self. The frail, white-haired environmentalist told the people of Narmada valley: "I've brought for you the message from the Himalayas." The message: consumerism was destroying nature everywhere.

Kannada writer Shivram Karanth, 87, was another star of the show. The elderly author, few are aware, is actively involved in the struggle for protecting the unique Shola forests of the western ghats. Another prominent personality was the saffron-clad opposition politician Swami Agnivesh, known for his work among bonded labourers. There was Megha Patkar, whose battle against the Narmada valley project has been inspirational. And there was Srilatha Swaminathan from Rajasthan to register her protest against the submerging of 30 tribal villages "to provide water to sprinkle the lawns of the rich in Udaipur".

But the real emotion came from the simple village folk who were invited to speak. There were several from the Narmada project submergence area. Setun Apa, 50, a farm labourer of Harsud declared simply: "I do not want to leave Harsud because this is where I want to die." An illiterate tribal, he told the rally: "No government has any right to make us homeless."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

There was also a protest of a different kind. The environmentalists clearly resented the presence of politicians. "We do not want politicians here," Patkar told Shukla. And Bahuguna threatened to get down from the dais if Shukla or Maneka addressed the rally. Before storming out in a huff, Maneka said: "Obviously the movement has passed in the hands of leftist intellectuals and I have my doubts whether they can be successful on their own."

But whether it has or not, it is a movement whose time has come. The Indian Greens promise to make their presence forcefully felt in the months ahead. Nothing symbolises that more than Harsud, the town that refuses to die.

—N.K. SINGH in Harsud

LARGE IRRIGATION PROJECTS

Questionable Record

FOR 16 years, we have poured in money. The people have got nothing back, no irrigation, no water, no increase in production, no help in their daily life." This wasn't the Opposition lambasting the Government, but the prime minister himself recognising a bitter truth: the disastrous failure of the irrigation strategy based on huge, costly irrigation projects—providing debatable benefits but notching up mounting losses and threatening environmental implications. Ironically, Jawaharlal Nehru had celebrated these very projects—Bhakra, Hirakud and Damodar Valley Corporation—as the temples of modern India at their inception.

Significantly, the criticism of these major projects has a strong economic basis. India has invested planned resources worth Rs 33,771 crore in the last four decades to acquire an irrigation potential of 80.4 million hectares. But even official statistics concede the gap between the potential created—on paper—and its utilisation in terms of actual irrigation facilities at the ground level. The ineffectiveness of the irrigation policy is evident from the fact that today 104 million hectares—59 per cent of the cultivated area—remain unirrigated.

Currently, nearly 9 million hectares of the irrigated potential which theoretically exists in the planners' files remain unutilised, primarily due to the states' inability to ensure that land is properly levelled. C.G. Desai, Planning Commission advisor (irrigation), laments: "We are not able to tell a farmer whether his land would come under irrigation or not once the project is complete." There is an obvious lack of co-ordination between the policy makers and the farmers.

Even the yield on land which has been showered with irrigation funds—more than Rs 40,000 per hectare—has been a dismal 1,700 kg, which is way behind the expected level of 5,000 kg. What is worse is that the yield from irrigated areas continues to steadily drop. I.P. Abrol, deputy director-general of the Indian Council of Agricultural Research, said: "The yield is half of that expected on 90 per cent of the irrigated land." The declining yields are primarily due to siltation and waterlogging which have already rendered 10 per cent of the irrigated land useless.

Dam site: contentious debate

Today, 182 irrigation projects stand incomplete, some of them soaking in investment resources since the First Five Year Plan: the Nagarjuna Sagar project started in 1959, the Gandak project launched in 1960 and the Indira Gandhi Canal project begun in 1970 are the worst culprits. Recently, the Public Accounts Committee has castigated the Planning Commission for sanctioning major schemes without ensuring the availability of funds or technical personnel. These projects seem to be caught in a vicious circle of escalating costs and delays.

The irrigation sector has been parasitic on public funds with losses amounting to Rs 1,757 crore during the first three years of the current plan. Besides the expenses incurred during the initial investment stage, the Government provides other subsidies: the average day-to-day running cost for irrigating a hectare is estimated at Rs 3,250, out of which a farmer pays Rs 100 leaving the Government to bear the rest of the burden.

The widespread disillusionment with the large-scale irrigation concept is increasingly leading to a search for alternatives. Abrol suggests: "Tube wells and other traditional irrigation systems are environmentally safe and economically viable." Prominent soil scientist, S.S. Khanna, explains: "The cost of creating a hectare of irrigation potential through large projects is about Rs 40,000 while the cost of achieving the same in the small sector is a much more affordable Rs 8,000." If the cost of draining waterlogged land—estimated at Rs 25,000 per hectare by the Central Soil Salinity Research Institute—is added, the cost of large projects would spiral.

But, not all economists see a dichotomy between large and small scale projects. C.H. Hanumantha Rao, former member of the Planning Commission, reasoned: "There is no contradiction here. What is required is a good combination of large, medium and small projects."

Even as fundamental questions are being raised about the irrigation policy, the Government seems to be merrily marching towards hitting its target: creating an irrigation potential of 113 million hectares at an estimated cost of Rs 100,000 crore by 2010 A.D. What is problematic is that decisions made today—if ill-conceived—may continue to have ecological and economic implications which might be irreversible in the future.

—SUDHIRENDAR SHARMA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya

hey can be not, it is a come. The make their the months that more efuses to die.

GH in Harsud

escalat-lays.
n sector sitic on h losses
e during ent plan.
d during the Gov-dies: the cost for nated at ner pays ment to onment concept arch for : "Tube rigation

safe and nent soil ns: "The rigation ojects is cost of ll sector 8,000."
erlogged
000 per Salinity
the cost ee a did small cha Rao, ng Com-no con-ired is a medium

uestions
rigation
ns to be tting its otential
timated
010 A.D. ecisions
d—may nd eco-night be

SHARMA

Selected Watch & Jewellery Stores (Telephone Nos.): BOMBAY: Tribhovandas Bhimji Zaveri: 341010 ● A.K. Motiwala Jewellers: 6428081 ● Apsara Pen Mart: 271101 ● Cliftons: 264288 ● T.T. Trade: 6490011 ● Lawrence Watch Co: 2048416, 2040130 ● Marcks & Co: 270999 ● Akbarallys: 6490612 ● Eastern Watch: 264711 ● Anja San: 6420801 ● PUNE: Pundole Enterprises: 446275, 446276 ● DELHI: Johnson Watch Co: 3322002 ● Fine Watch Co: 264636 ● Aar-tee Watch Emporium: 2527044 ● Big Ben: 3320216 ● LUCKNOW: Rupani Bros: 43619 ● KANPUR: Thakurdas Jewellers 42146 ● Kashi Jewellers: 212746, 212887 ● CALCUTTA: Rams: 431590 ● MADRAS: Doshi & Doshi: 565118, 560963 ● Chhotabhai & Co: 32024 ● SECUNDERABAD: Ramesh Watch Co: 72649 ● HYDERABAD: Meena Jewellers: 231073 ● AHMEDABAD: Vajubhai Jewellers: 401901 ● Kenya Watch Co: 448035 ● Favourite Watch Co: 78395 ● Khazana : 466625

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

When mes t for rock sembl here ar

A dian S

In fact, there seemed to b none in India. Not in 1986. Only NASA had the technology, the resources and the people to design and construct a 40-met tall workshop weighing 650 tonnes for vertical assembly of rockets. And which could travel on wheels. Only NASA. Or so everyone believed.

It took Mukand and ISRO to prove them wrong.

The Machine B Mukand success commissioned ject in just 22 plete with ove ies, thyristor d trolled platform ng a great boo tional space pro ercoming techno

This seems to favourite purs chine Building D nsider the large dia that we ma first indigenou ufactured doo e ovens that w al Steel Plant. nsfer cars for t And, of course ge of quality cr en famous and m cranes for st plications to mic trolled rotating

Yes, we relish are well armed h world-class d

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

When mes to developing a mobile service structure rocks sembly, with 376 critical specifications, here are no simple solutions.

A dian Space Research Organisation.

seemed to b n 1986. Only nology, the people to ct a 40-met ning 650 assembly of could travel
SA. Or so

d and ISRO
ng.

The Machine Building Division Mukand successfully developed commissioned the gigantic ject in just 22 months. mplete with overhead travelling ges, thyristor drives, remote-rolled platforms and doors. ing a great boost to the tional space programme. And ercoming technological hurdles.

This seems to have become e favourite pursuit at Mukand's chine Building Division. nsider the largest rotary drier Asia that we made for SPIC. Or e first indigenously nufactured door extractor for e ovens that we made for ai Steel Plant. As also the ore nsfer cars for them.

And, of course, the wide nge of quality cranes we are st famous and trusted for. ith cranes for steel plant plications to microprocessor-rolled rotating trolley cranes.

Yes, we relish challenges. And e are well armed to meet them. th world-class design capability.

With technical associations with the world's best in material handling. With a thrust on indigenisation. With engineers we are proud of. Who constantly give shape to their technological dreams. At Mukand's Machine Building Division.

For further information on – Cranes • Bulk Material Handling Systems • Rolling Mill and Auxiliary Equipment • Bulk Material Process Equipment • Ore and Mineral Dressing Equipment • Metallurgical Plants • Projects – call or write to:

MUKAND'S MACHINE BUILDING DIVISION

MUKAND LTD.

Belapur Road, Dighe, P.O. Kalwe
Thane 400 605, Maharashtra.
(Formerly Mukand Iron & Steel Works Ltd.)
Tel: (0215) 2171-5. Tlx: 011-77011 MUKT IN

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Rediffusion/M/7811a R

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

WHAT WOULD SUIT YOUR EXCLUSIVE LIFESTYLE ?

ATTENTION N.R.I.'S BOMBAY CALLING!

A FABULOUS PENTHOUSE WITH A VIEW OF THE HILLS OR A MAGNIFICENT ROW HOUSE AMIDST NATURE IN FULL BLOOM

LOK PURAM THANE

A sprawling, modern township with broad, tree-lined avenues and landscaped gardens complete with a duck pond and a mini waterfall. In fact, Lok Group has engaged the services of a full-time, professional horticulturist to care for them.

Lok Puram has its own school, a vast shopping plaza, a play ground and recreational facilities including a fully equipped gym. Plus a central dish antenna and a cable T.V. system. Every home has the interiors and fittings of the finest quality. Come, see for yourself.

TOP-OF-THE-WORLD FEELING

The duplex penthouses with an attached terrace are located on the top floors of impeccably-designed modern 7-storeyed buildings.

As you enter, you'll notice the spacious living room and the terrace together form a splendid reception area, ideal for entertaining. And the neat, well-designed kitchen is sure to delight even your difficult-to-please cook!

Move up via an internal staircase to the large, airy bedrooms. In some penthouses, the terrace is attached to the master bedroom on the upper floor. So you can wake up and step out to enjoy a view of the distant hills. What better way to start the day?

RETURN TO NATURE

Hafeez Contractor the eminent architect has created exclusive, ultra-modern one-storeyed rowhouses. Few in number, they are sited in a quiet, secluded part of Lok Puram.

Walk up the path through the front garden, taking in the attractive facade, the individual parking area and the ornate M.S. railings around the perimeter. Stroll through the elegant, sun-lit rooms. Marvel at the sleek lines of the interior. Examine the immaculate rooms on the upper floor. Take in the view from the attached terrace.

Move on to the vast private terrace at the top. Breathe in the fresh, balmy air. Take a look at the back garden with its traditional Indian swing. Think of the bonfires and barbeque parties on a chilly winter's night. The pleasure of waking up to the chirping of birds.

Come and talk to us, you'll find living here will appeal to your head and your heart. The penthouses are ready for possession. Work on the rowhouses is on in full swing. For further information, do get in touch with us.

You can also contact HDFC for booking and information on their loan schemes and simple application-sanctioning procedures.

Full payment by cheque only.

Builders
LOK HOLDINGS
14, Vishal Shopping Centre
Sir M.V. Road, Andheri East
Bombay 400 069 India
Tel: 6341163 (5 lines)

Site Office
Smt. Gladys Alvares Road
Off 2nd Pokhran Road
Thane (West) Tel: 594660

Designed by ARCHITECT HAFEEZ CONTRACTOR

Land Owners
GLEITLAGER (INDIA) LTD.
And ESTATES OF
MR. & MRS. E.M.ALVARES

LOK PURAM THANE

लोक
SHELTER FOR THE PEOPLE
LOK GROUP

CATALYST/LG/021069

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

An Infirm Institution

JUST when the newspaper world was beginning to wonder what had happened to the high-profile ombudsman, appointed by The Times of India, we have been given the first progress report on his work, admittedly for a limited audience.

Briefings, the in-house Times group journal, has announced that P.N. Bhagwati, the former chief justice, has been pegging away at his innovative work, despite the lack of evidence in the paper of his existence.

We are told that Bhagwati has entertained 150 complaints of varied nature. About half of them had nothing to do with the Times. Bhagwati, it was assumed, was a general tribunal for complaints. There were complaints against government departments and public and private sector corporations and all sorts of petty grievances like pensions, insurance claims and legal disputes.

Many sought redressal of grievances with regard to articles published in other Times group publications. But Bhagwati is ombudsman only for the Times and is concerned with judging the newspaper's news and editorial columns.

What happens to the complaints that fall within his scope? The complaint, and a resume of the action taken, goes to him. If the editor feels no action need be taken or the complainant remains dissatisfied, the ombudsman gives his directions.

Let's look at the complaints. Cartoonist R.K. Laxman's use of the popular expletive "Aw Jesus" was objected to for offending religious sensibilities. Result: editor's assurance that casual use of such expressions would be avoided.

We, as a people, singularly lack a sense of humour. The sometimes funny and sometimes not-so-funny third leaders provoked complaints. One, on a Goa church group's report on tourism's ill-effects on the environment, was objected to by a reader for the casual treatment of an issue of major public concern. He was propitiated by the editor's offer that he write an article on the subject, which was published.

Bhagwati wrote to the offence-takers that they should treat such leaders in the spirit in which they are written.

On occasion, Bhagwati has decreed that an article on the experiment to melt Himalayan snow and another on the statute on cow slaughter should be balanced. A report describing a complainant as a "rumour-monger" led to the editor's apology and a stern reprimand of the reporter concerned.

Apart from such grievances which dealt mostly with articles which had religious overtones, there were the more predictable complaints of the traditional tribe of enthusiastic letter-writers. The ombudsman's sphere of intervention has been circumscribed to letters which make a new point on a published article.

Bhagwati has given Times a clean chit even though its reporting on the Mathrubhumi take-over issue was partisan.

It is a pity though that on the most significant issue to emerge during this period, the attempted take-over of the Malayalam daily Mathrubhumi by the Times group, the institution failed to measure up to the billing. On the take-over move itself, Bhagwati said that corporate moves were beyond his jurisdiction. Fair enough. But on the nature of the reports carried by the Times on the controversy, Bhagwati has astonishingly given the editor a clean bill of health.

Anyone familiar with the controversy will recall the rank partisan nature of reporting by the Times. Since the newspaper group was involved, it should have bent over backwards to maintain a balance and report all what the management of Mathrubhumi had to say about the take-over bid. According to Bhagwati's finding, the Times had not blacked out the opposition view. Two United News of India (UNI) reports carried by the paper are cited as instances of balanced reporting.

Balance in a newspaper cannot be determined by such criteria, and it is here that an ombudsman with a newspaper, as opposed to a judicial background would serve the institution's functions better. The UNI reports in question were the proverbial fig-leaf to maintain the pretence of fairness.

The Briefings account draws comfort from the view that since the ombudsman's appointment, "Times reporters and editors are extra sensitive to the need for fairness in their work." This might well be true, but the conclusion that "this new ethos is a true measure of the success of the ombudsman even as the post begins to evolve" is unwarranted.

Thus far, the appointment of the ombudsman has raised more questions than it has answered. Is a person with a judicial background suitable? Isn't it inhibiting an ombudsman to appoint him for a short term? Shouldn't he have a more visible presence in the newspaper in terms of periodically commenting on his decisions on significant complaints?

The management's objection to appointing a journalist as an ombudsman seems to be that there would be the danger of his becoming a super-editor, despite the encouraging traditions of newspapers like The Washington Post. The short term can be justified on the ground that this is in the nature of an experiment; hence the need for caution. And, as has been suggested, the institution is evolving.

The jury is still out, but the Mathrubhumi verdict can scarcely endear the institution of the ombudsman to those readers who know of its existence.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

In his Calling

Khushwant's stories enthral

THE COLLECTED SHORT STORIES OF KHUSHWANT SINGH
Ravi Dayal Publisher
Price: Rs 90; Pages: 219

IT is with efforts such as this that he unmasks himself. That he tears down for fleeting moments, the facade of superficiality, lascivious senility and uncaring irreverence that he has so wilfully fashioned for himself over the years through innumerable journalistic columns.

Beyond the drooling over bottoms and breasts, beyond the naive if bona fide vacillations of political judgement, beyond the pandering to cretinous jokes and the lowest-common-denominator, there reclines Khushwant Singh the writer. And to those who may beg to differ: stand referred to his collected short stories which have recently been put out in hardback.

The 32 stories included represent his true metier. The exertions of four decades, they are based around a panoply of characters and settings. But the tone is distinct, unmistakable: the sardar may be in the terrain of art, and no longer lucratively ensconced in the ephemera of the editorial bulb, but his propensities remain unaltered. The stories are hedonistic, they are erotic. But above all, they are woven around the spine of debunk.

Here is the classical man of means, driven by no dogmas, possessed of no passionate principles—except of his own choosing—and seized by no sect's shenanigans, taking a bemused look at the claptrap, the ironies, the foibles that make for men. The chasm which separates these stories from his daily outpourings that syndicate across languages countrywide, is that of skill.

Whether he is tackling high farce as in The Interview, or drawing poignant cameo as in The Portrait of A Lady, or being ruminative as in The Fawn, or debunking as most of the time, the quality of the craft is of the finest: never the overstatement, never the self-conscious false-note, never the over-explanation, skilful side-stepping of the maudlin, and the touch always inclusive—drawing the reader in, making him a party in the unravelling of the tale.

Then there is the entertainment. Khushwant is not hewed from the modernist mould, where short stories are dense clumps of angst, stream-of-consciousness, surrealism and stylistic experimentation. This is a writer who sets out the traditional rules for himself and obeys them: the stories are short not novellas, amazingly they have a beginning, middle and an end, and in the last paragraph they carry the twist, the proverbial sting in the tail. And what if hemmed in by these self-imposed limits he cannot convey the ineffable or manufacture great literature, he can certainly entertain, and tell a whacking good story which also illustrates a point.

Thus, Man, How the Government of India Run!, amuses even as it sums up the workings of the Government of India in one fell swoop. Sunder Singh and his two fellow clerks, Sambamurthy and Ghosh Babu, spend the day consuming tea, shifting the odd file, reading and discussing the day's news, deriding superiors for their ability to seem busy without working, and participating in a volleyball match. In the evening Sunder returns home to irritably impress his wife with the fatigue of a hard day's work.

Several stories are written in the first person, and convey the quality of raptness which is invoked by a raconteur. With the narrator invariably being a Sikh, one can almost see a young Khushwant as the protagonist in The Man with a Clear Conscience, The Great Difference, My Own My Native Land, The Bottom-Pincher, When Sikh Meets Sikh. These are written engagingly, and in particular the last two entral. When Sikh Meets Sikh, a pithy four-page effort, remarks on the pioneering spirit that marks Sikhs, and goes on to illustrate it with the story of Nanjo—Niranjan Singh—in Toronto who has married a Canadian and become a professional wrestler in order to survive. One statement of Nanjo's towards the end of the story is enough to sum up the indomitable nature of the Sikh spirit. In the dressing-room after a bout in which he has beaten a Californian hulk Mazurki, the short, thick-set Nanjo tells the narrator in rustic Punjabi: "I could floor the lot of them, but my manager won't let me."

Not all the stories work well. Death Comes to Daulat Ram and The Memsahib of Mandla are supernatural forays which deflate for lack of emotional content. Others like The Riot and The Insurance Agent are trite, while some like Mr Singh and the Colour Bar are predictable. But the strength of the writer lies in the quotidian nuances of life that he manages to catch, and in the gamut of settings he manages to exploit: from the rural to the urban, from the Raj to independent India, and from Toronto to London to Paris. An ability akin to that of Somerset Maugham, the writer whom Khushwant regards as perhaps the best short story craftsman of all time. Maugham had another ability that he personally rated—albeit controversially—as paramount: the ability to entertain intelligently. Khushwant has it too, and for that alone his stories demand to be read.

—TARUN J. TEJPAL

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

Singh: the skilful touch

EXTRACT

Their bottoms presented a tempting variety of sizes and coverings. One was a young girl's in blue skin-tight jeans; her buttocks were like two nicely rounded, unripe water melons. Besides her was an older woman in a bright red sari. She was massive like one big pumpkin. The third in the row was a twelve-year Lolita in a white and so mini a skirt that when she bent down it exposed all her thigh and a bit of her bottom as well. I could see Pesi Lalkaka's left arm twitch. The triumverate of bottoms thus served up proved too powerful a temptation to resist. His hand came out of the pocket and caressed the three in quick succession.

—from The Bottom-Pincher

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

What makes Camlin's Unique the gift par excellence?

Exclusive features, perfected for the first time in India by Camlin, put Unique writing instruments in international class.

The pen incorporates a unique Converter mechanism perfected by Camlin, and found only in famous international pens.
The Converter unit can also be easily replaced by disposable, Continental-size ink cartridges. Unique capillary action ensures uniform ink flow without clogging.

The matching, elegant ballpen features an easy-to-use twist mechanism.

Qualities like these make Camlin's Unique truly exclusive writing instruments that speak of your thoughtfulness... reflect your personality.

Ask to see the full range of Camlin Pen & Ballpen Gift Sets to suit every taste, every pocket!

camlin

Unique — in so many ways!

CAMLIN LIMITED, STATIONERY DIVISION, BOMBAY 400 059.

Enquire at: Bombay 636 60 11 (4 lines) • Bangalore 32 02 47 • Calcutta 27 33 22
Delhi 572 28 63 • Hyderabad 23 14 05 • Madras 76 085 • Lucknow 47 323

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

2BCI-054

At any given moment of any day, thousands of people are taking off aboard Boeing jetliners. Thousands of others are just landing.

This ebb and flow of passengers and planes goes on around the clock at major airports around the globe. At Heathrow. De Gaulle. Narita. JFK. LAX. And hundreds of others.

It all adds up to nearly two million people flying on Boeing airplanes. Day after day. Every day of the year.

In fact, every 2½ takes off or lands Boeing. We of airplanes. We

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

f others.
rly two mil-oeing airplanes
ay of the year.

In fact, every 2½ seconds a Boeing jet takes off or lands somewhere on earth.

Boeing. We don't just deliver a lot of airplanes. We deliver a lot of people.

BOEING

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

KEEP THE RIGHT COMPANY IN BUSINESS.

For organisations wishing to host a prestigious conference, a necessary piece of information. Countless international forums have chosen the Taj Palace Inter·Continental, New Delhi. With outstanding results. If hosting a successful conference is important to you, it always helps to know the company you will be keeping.

TAJ PALACE INTER·CONTINENTAL, NEW DELHI

THE TAJ GROUP OF HOTELS

INTER·CONTINENTAL HOTELS

It's where you go when you've arrived.

Call for reservations: Bombay 2022524, New Delhi 3010404, Calcutta 292513, Madras 474849, Bangalore 258076, Hyderabad 848246, Cochin 6811.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Valuable Guide

Unique study of elections

INDIA DECIDES:
Elections 1952–1989
by DAVID BUTLER, ASHOK LAHIRI, and PRANNOY ROY Living Media
Pages 372; Price: Rs 350

UNLIKE the steel mill, the television station, the national airline and the national news agency, psephology cannot be a badge of new nationhood. Regrettably, much of the Third World is not governed by a democratic polity and hence can have little use for the study of elections.

In the developing world, India is unique in the 40-year record of elections held for the better part, in a free and fair atmosphere. The new vogue for public opinion polls is a sign of the times.

Psephology has, indeed, arrived in India and this admirable, sober work is the most definitive and exhaustive of its kind. Yet those who expect to discover who will win the next election will be disappointed. They themselves must find the answers from the wealth of data on candidates, parties and constituencies. Almost magisterially, the authors tell us: "The pattern lies in these pages for those who have the patience to look for it." They rightly make a sharp distinction between forecasting and analysis. "Election forecasting," they say, "is a fascinating game. Election analysis is a serious business." But they start from the premise that patterns can be found "in the inchoate mass of Indian voting figures" and they believe that, granted the killing costs, sample surveys on a nation-wide scale can be a better indicator of voting intentions and political attitudes than any other method.

Veteran politicians will, of course, disagree because they rely on an almost intuitive feel for the political wind. Human beings, we must remember, are not always logical in their behaviour: numbers meticulously totted up with the refined aid of differentiated gradients do not always add up to political reality.

But veterans have also been proved wrong in their forecasts—witness 1967, 1977, 1980 and 1984. The authors of the present volume deserve respect and attention because they give us what they describe as an unvarnished presentation of facts—the what, not the why, of the electoral record. It is raw material for the politician to work on. The only cautious forecast they make on the result of the next general election is that it will reflect the combined impact of a change in the "index of opposition unity" and the swing in votes from the 1984 election, which is not saying much as far as the politician is concerned.

Briefly, the authors' conclusions are: the Indian electorate is volatile. It generally votes more for the party than for the candidate. No party has survived the last 40 years without splits and amalgamations. India was never as close to a two-party system as at the 1977 election. The Congress has never obtained more than 49 per cent votes in any general election.

David Butler

Ashok Lahiri

Prannoy Roy

The authors give an unvarnished presentation of the facts—the what, not the why, of electoral record.

There are other interesting nuggets culled from the study. The Opposition is far more divided in the north than in the south. In all eight general elections, opposition splits have affected changes in margins of victory by as much as one-third. Fifty-seven per cent of the opposition members of Parliament elected to the Lok Sabha in 1984 were from regional parties. An amazing 80 per cent of candidates forfeited security deposits in 1984. By-election results are not a true indicator of a general election result.

Here's food for thought for the politician in the thick of battle. This volume is an invaluable reference work for the party strategist. It is not the political worker's cup of tea.

—S. NIHAL SINGH

New Heights

Mountaineering chronicled

MOUNTAINEERING IN INDIA
by CAPTAIN M.S. KOHLI
Vikas
Pages: 196; Price: Rs 495

INDIAN mountaineering gained momentum in the closing years of the 19th century and by the 1930s, Indian participation began in earnest. By 1951, the first Indian ascent of a major Himalayan peak (Trisul) had been made by Gurdial Singh, a Doon School teacher who inspired later expeditions like the one led by Captain M.S. Kohli in 1965.

Now Kohli—India's leading mountaineer whose 1965 expedition put a record nine persons atop Everest—has taken time off from his Air-India job and his management of adventure sports to write a landmark book which traces not only the first struggling footsteps of Indian mountaineering, but goes on to chronicle the peaks it has conquered since. The story begins with the initial exploratory Indian ventures, moves on to the larger expeditions of the '60s, and climaxes with the small groups now attempting extreme grade climbs.

Along with detailing the important expeditions undertaken by men, Kohli also highlights the ascent of Kamet, Nanda Devi and Everest by Indian women. The efficient accounts of disaster expeditions drive home the fact that in mountaineering, tragedy is ever at hand. Kohli's concern for the fragile mountain environment being steadily degraded by the rush of trekkers and expeditions is evident throughout.

Kohli highlights the trend of foreign mountaineers teaming with Indians to scale peaks of the Gangotri basin, the Nanda Devi sanctuary, Jitchu Drake and the Inner Line summits in the Karakoram. The contribution of the armed and paramilitary forces to Indian mountaineering is not overlooked.

Of course, Kohli's book is not elegantly written. It is the account of a mountaineer: ranging stolidly over the material, proceeding firm step by firm step, resolved to get there, rather than to bedazzle. And therein lies its worth.

—SUDHIR SAHI

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE SOFTWARE EXPORT
IF YOU'VE GOT THE
HELP YOU BEAT THE

The software opportunity. Are you ready for it?

It certainly isn't an effortless business. The world is your market, but it is also your competitor. And in an exacting environment where solutions have a short shelf-life, getting the right solution to the right place at the right time, involves a whole set of elusive variables. With only one constant factor on your side: Exim's financing package.

Exim Bank. The software export catalyst.

When it comes to the key resources—money, knowledge and time—it pays to get into the Exim mode. The Government of India announced the Software Policy in November 1986. Since then, Exim Bank has enabled Indian computer software exporters target over Rs. 100 crores of export business.

Exim Bank offers you swift, single-window access to resources. Scan the menu of benefits:

* A total financial package—foreign currency and term loans, plus working capital
* Rebate on Customs Duty for Exim Bank scrutinised proposals
* Clearance for import of computer systems in abo

Plus the Software Policy benefits:

— Release of 30% of excess export earnings for im new computer systems, augmenting existing com systems and acquisition of software companies
— Availability of foreign exchange to meet expense marketing abroad

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

EXPORT CHALLENGE. THRIVE, WE COULD T TRAFFIC.

ow access to urrency and nk scrutinise tems in abo rnings for im existing com companies neet expense

ce for foreign collaboration/foreign investment ch compensatory support ect tax benefits
cess to databases abroad via satellite links.

ow get into Exim's fast lane?

ly what it takes is a well-defined project backed by ood track record that proves management bilities
d financials with resilience to meet contingencies mprehensive export plan backed by a marketing collaboration.
e got it all, do talk to us. Today.
re information, please contact P.O.Box No.11697, Bombay.

EXPORT-IMPORT BANK OF INDIA

Access the menu of benefits.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

KHARIF CROP

An Election Harvest

But prices may not register an immediate fall

As a harvest, there was none as crucial as this for Rajiv Gandhi in his five-year term as prime minister. Coming just three months before the general elections, it would determine the mood of rural India. Anxiety about its outcome had, in fact, mounted in the past two months as the southwest monsoon played truant for a while and prices of certain essential commodities experienced a dramatic surge.

The tension was palpable at last fortnight's meeting of state agriculture ministries in New Delhi to review the progress of the kharif (monsoon) crop. As state after state presented its crop estimates, one worrying trend emerged: rice production would not be as high as 1988's bumper yield. But crucially, the overall foodgrain production was unlikely to fall below last year's record output of 96.5 million tonnes. As a senior Union agriculture ministry official said: "Barring a few hiccups, it's been an excellent kharif season. And the mood is upbeat."

On the overheated sugarcane and oilseeds front, however, the mood was mixed. Happily, for harried civil supplies department officials, this year's sugarcane crop is heading for a bumper yield. With overall production likely to cross the magical figure of 200 million tonnes, by November the sugar squeeze is likely to loosen considerably. And officials cautiously predict a drop in the sky-high prices that sugar has reached.

In oilseeds, however, the situation is less optimistic. With rains failing initially in Gujarat, the major groundnut producing state, yields were expected to drop by as much as 40 per cent. But showers in September have raised hopes of a substantial recovery in production.

Harvested rice in Punjab

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

■ Total rice production may drop only marginally despite poor yields in Uttar Pradesh and West Bengal.

■ With a bumper sugarcane crop expected, the current sugar crisis is likely to ease considerably.

■ Groundnut production after initial hiccups is staging a dramatic recovery. Result: prices may decline.

Overall foodgrain output may beat last year's record.

Coupled with good yields from Andhra Pradesh, Karnataka and Maharashtra, only a marginal drop in last year's record of 7.3 million tonnes is now expected. That could see groundnut oil prices, which had risen steeply in the previous two months, decline.

But for the Central Government there were several dampening factors. In Uttar Pradesh, West Bengal and Andhra Pradesh, all major rice growing states, output was likely to drop by 3 million tonnes as compared to last year. In Haryana and Rajasthan, the bajra crop was hit badly by lack of rains and yields are likely to drop significantly. And in Tamil Nadu, pulses are in trouble.

Fortunately, much of the drop in production in these states has been offset by some excellent yields in others. With Punjab and Orissa reporting outstanding harvests, the overall drop in rice production would be less than a million tonnes. In coarse cereals, Maharashtra and Karnataka are likely to produce record yields of jowar. And to ease the pressure, overall pulses production is likely to go up by half a million tonnes. Since 1988 saw a massive upswing in foodgrain production, this year, with the monsoon slightly less favourable, the performance is, as one official puts it, "satisfactory".

Importantly for the Government, in Punjab and Haryana, the major contributors to foodstocks in the public distribution system, rice production has been good. With last year's procurement of rice turning out to be poor, rice stocks in government godowns had reached an all-time low of 1.7 million tonnes.

Worse, last month the Government was forced to import 5 lakh tonnes of rice from Thailand and Vietnam to tide over the crisis. Civil Supplies Ministry officials are now hopeful of procuring 9.6 million tonnes of rice—more than enough to meet the coming year's needs as well as to rebuild its buffer stock. And with the coming rabi (winter) crop expected to be good, it could boost stocks further.

Despite these encouraging trends, few officials are willing to predict a dramatic fall in prices in the coming months. The ruling party at the Centre can at least take cold comfort in the fact that the good kharif yield may prevent prices from escalating further.

—RAJ CHENGAPPA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Take a shot at this

NATURAL COLOR GRADATION

SUPER plus brings out natural color gradation for evenly balanced color reproductions.

TRUE-TO-LIFE COLOR

SUPER plus reproduces colors – from brilliant hues to subtle shades – vividly and faithfully.

TOTALLY FAITHFUL TEXTURE

SUPER plus brings astonishing sharpness to superb gradation for totally faithful textures. And thanks to the ultra-fine grain, you get perfect enlargements every time.

DEPTH IN THE IMAGE

SUPER plus always gives a proper perspective. A sense of distance is created with background subjects appearing far away and those in the foreground, appearing close.

SUPER plus

Colors that come to life!

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Another Satisfied Voltas Customer.

Voltas is India's most widely diversified company, dealing in over 800 product lines. These include products for agriculture, industry and consumer markets.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ost widely dealing in o
ese include re, industry

d every one of these products des real, tangible value to a mer. We've made sure of this by three different things.
st, by absorbing some of the very best technology in the world.
Second, by investing crores of rupees over the years in developing new and improved products. And third, by developing what is perhaps the finest service network in the land.
All these efforts have created a loyal, satisfied customer base.

And that, in turn, has made
Voltas a stable, solid organisation.

VOLTAS LIMITED The Results Are Showing.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Some of our technology is only .00004 inches thick.

And some is 21 inches wide.

Microchip technology to home electronics. You really can't expect less from NEC. Formerly the Nippon Electric Co. Ltd. As Japan's frontline electronics company, manufacturers today of over 15,000 products. And the undisputed leader. In supercomputers. Semiconductors. Industrial robotics. Putting high technology to work in the manufacture of TVs and VCRs — some of the finest in Japan and in the world.

That's NEC. Electronics in the service of man. And his family.

Models FS-3300 & DX-1000 E

FROM HI-TECH TO HOME TECH.

NEC

NEC Corporation, Japan

*For information

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

IMPORTS

Booking Culprits

Rs 70 crore scam in book imports unearthed

THE imported volumes bear impressive titles: Golden Claims, Foreign Exchange in Britain and Europe 1987. Ostensibly, they are educational and scientific publications which can be easily imported under open general licence. But in reality these books are rejected volumes bought at throwaway prices abroad, simply raddi (waste). Many importers of such books in India quote the cover price less trade discount and get the equivalent in foreign exchange released after paying rupees in cash here. The companies exporting such books are owned by relatives of these importers, so valuable foreign exchange is siphoned out of the country.

Since September last year, a series of scams involving a staggering sum exceeding Rs 70 crore have been unearthed by the Enforcement Directorate and the Directorate of Revenue Intelligence. To put this figure in perspective, legitimate imports of books are valued at around Rs 60 crore a year. Hansraj Madhavji Thakkar and Pushpa K. Sitlani, both Bombay-based importers, allegedly masterminded two of the biggest scams, each costing the exchequer about Rs 22 crore.

Thakkar floated a proprietorship concern in Singapore in September 1986 and a year later, transferred its ownership to his daughter-in-law Yasmin Mohammed Yunus Walibhoy alias Rupal. This firm used to buy the books and sell them to Thakkar's own firm in Bombay.

After Thakkar was arrested on September 7, 1988—he could not explain to whom he had sold imported books worth Rs 22 crore—he was detained under COFEPOSA. On April 20 this year, the Bombay High Court ordered that he be released on bail of a record Rs 50 lakh but later reduced it to Rs 25 lakh on condition that he surrender his passport. Thakkar, however, remained in jail custody. On May 18 he was removed to Breach Candy Hospital where he is now.

Sitlani, described in official records as a "high profile socialite", and her relatives control many firms in India and abroad including one in UK called Title Zoom. Following her arrest under COFEPOSA she managed to get a bail in Bombay for Rs 10,000 with the help of lawyer Mahesh Jethmalani. On April 17, Sitlani obtained an interim stay order from Justice Paritosh Kumar Mukherjee of the Calcutta High Court—she falsely claimed she was a resident of Andaman and Nicobar islands so that the case could be heard in Calcutta—restraining the Government from detaining her under COFEPOSA. Satisfied about the "extreme urgency" of the case, the judge waived the requirement of the court having to serve notice on the detaining authorities before issuing the stay order. The stay order was finally vacated by a division bench of the court on July 31. But before that date Sitlani had fled the country violating court directives. Early last month, the Bombay High Court proclaimed Sitlani an absconder.

Among other cases which have been detected is that of P.V.Subramaniam and Virendra Mehta of Image Agencies, Madras. The firm imported books which had an invoice value of Rs 3 crore but were sold in India for Rs 4 lakh. Both Subramaniam and Mehta have obtained anticipatory bail.

Another case is that of J.S. Manchanda of Bombay. Between 1986-89 Manchanda's firms had imported 87 consignments of books with a declared value of over Rs 19 crore. Records show that the imported books were sold to shops which turned out to be non-existent. In fact much of such imports are sold by weight as waste. Manchanda did not stop at such frauds. In one case, he went one step further and got foreign exchange released after producing documents purporting to show that a consignment of books had been shipped to India. The consignment never arrived.

With such cases of major fraud being detected the question now is whether the rule on book imports should be changed. Says C.M. Chawla, managing director of UBS Publishers (one of the largest book importers): "We want all book importers to be registered with the Department of Education." Chawla who also heads the import committee of the Federation of Publishers and Booksellers Associations in India feels that, among other things, all importers should be asked to furnish documents under the Income Tax Act.

The Government is yet to act on many such suggestions but there are indications that the book import policy may be changed next year. Judging by the extent of the current frauds, however, it will obviously be a long time before this particular chapter is closed.

—PARANJOY GUHA THAKURTA

■ Imported books at a pavement stall: major fraud

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

Books bought from abroad at throwaway prices are overinvoiced by quoting the cover price resulting in a major drain of foreign exchange.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

PRIESTS

Modern Rites

An unorthodox approach

FROM 6 a.m. to 10 p.m., the phone rings incessantly in the office of T.S. Ashwini Sastrigal and T.S. Rohini Sastrigal in Madras. The brothers have their hands full, answering calls and recording the callers' names in a rexine-bound book. Occasionally, they zip off on their motorcycles to keep appointments.

No, the Sastrigal brothers are not businessmen assiduously cultivating clients. The two happen to be priests. And the office is that of a unique agency for Vedic priests. On their roll call are an assortment of priests, part-time and full-time, specialising in various rites: shraddam(death anniversary), upanayanam(thread ceremony) or a wedding.

Ashwini and Rohini are the new breed in town—priests as professionals. The two maintain that the agency is "not a business, but a service to people". With priests dwindling in numbers, it isn't easy to find one at short notice.

The brothers have shed their orthodoxy. Their father was a panchagacham-clad priest. The sons wear three-piece suits, sport long hair and swank wrist-watches. And they also act in films, albeit as priests.

Today, only astute priests like them manage to survive—by exploring a traditional occupation to its farthest boundary. Asks priest Mani Iyer's son: "With the world getting computerised, where will people find time for pujas?" Not surprisingly, some rituals—including mantras—are lopped off on the way. Says Rohini: "We have cut down the ceremonies by half by leaving out the frills." The new generation priest is scaling down on unaffordable items like ghee and coconut required for pujas—from the traditional requirement of a padi (1.5 kg) of each item to a tumbler-full of each. While earlier, 64 kalasams (jugs) were a must for a 60th birthday function, today, some make do with even five.

SHYAM TEKWANI

Sastrigal brothers: zipping ahead

Audio-cassettes are also storming the priests' bastion—telling the lay person how to perform pujas without a priest. The most popular are Gayatri Japam tapes for Brahmin boys at their thread ceremony. Another venture, a do-it-yourself videotape, however, did not meet with the same success.

Priesthood is increasingly becoming an "on the side" profession. With monthly earnings between Rs 750 and Rs 2,000, priests are pushed to seek other sources of income. Says Lakshmi Narayan, a priest working in a bank: "It's difficult to earn three square meals a day through priesthood."

Ashwini and Rohini also have an alternative profession—acting in films. The 'Cinema Sastris', as the brothers are dubbed, have featured in over 100 films, while their agency supplies priests to the film industry. At present, they are working in Dasari Narayana Rao's teleserial Vishwamitra. Claims Rohini: "We are considered portenders of good fortune. So we are called to perform the puja for the launch of a film." Their clientele include stars N.T. Rama Rao, Sridevi, Nageswara Rao, Vijaykanth and director Balu Mahendra.

Expectedly, conservative priests are up in arms. Says an elderly priest at an Egmore temple: "It is not in keeping with our tradition." Adds another: "A sacred profession has been reduced to a business." The harsh truth, however, is that priesthood is a dying profession. But in their office on a bylane off Pondy Bazaar in T. Nagar, Madras, the Sastrigal brothers show a way of survival. And if it proves successful, hi-tech priesthood may soon become a way of life for many more.

—KAVITHA SHETTY in Madras

CASSETTES

Hymns Go Pop

THERE is big money in religion. And audio-cassette manufacturers are certainly cashing in on it. Result: a staggering 50,000 devotional music cassettes sell in the south every month. Riding on the crest of the wave are Sangeetha, AVM, Echo, Indreco and even CBS. Sangeetha, with a 1,200-title catalogue, sells more than four lakh cassettes a year.

But the sales have a rhythm coinciding with the seasons. For example, during the Sabarimala season, sales of songs worshipping Lord Ayyappa peak, while during Navaratri, Amman songs are more popular. Says Shrikrishna of Sangeetha: "While the demand for film music dies down once the film is off the theatre, the demand for devotional songs keeps returning."

With devotional cassettes priced at an affordable Rs 12, they find an easy patron in the middle class. This assures steady royalties for the singers. While classical artistes like Bala Muralikrishna and the Bombay sisters are popular, the best sellers are film singers, S.P. Balasubramaniam, K.J. Jesudas and S. Janaki.

With some waning film music directors, such as M.S. Viswanathan, switching to devotional music, some of it now sounds like crass film music. Questions a music critic: "What kind of devotional music will have a sixty piece orchestra?" The sad truth is the lure of lucre has driven devotional music from a sublime religious experience to popular entertainment.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

M.L. Mittal, Chairman

Chairman's Statement at the Fo Annual General Meeting of the Company held on 19th September, 1989

Dear Shareholders,

I welcome you all to the Fourth Annual General Meeting of your Company. The Directors Report and Abridged Accounts for the 18-months period ended 30th April 1989 have been with you and with your permission I would like to take them as read.

As always it gives me the greatest satisfaction to see our Shareholders grow from strength to strength in each year. Today, we are a large family of over 2 lakh Shareholders spread throughout the length and breadth of this country as also abroad. I welcome all the Shareholders present here with an assurance that we will endeavour to ensure that our relationship is mutually rewarding and fruitful.

Economic Scenario

Before going into details about your Company's performance for the period covered by the Directors Report, I would like to make a brief reference to the current economic scenario in the country. In the past few years, we have seen an unprecedented rise in Industrial Productivity, Exports and overall Development of the Economy despite several natural calamities which the country had to face during this period. The emerging picture for the future is also, therefore, encouraging. A wind of change is presently sweeping the Indian Steel Industry. The recent announcemen the Government for Liberalisation of the Indi Policy as regards Steel as also the increase i minimum economic capacity of various plants different types of Steel Products augurs well for future of the Industry. There is still scope for fu liberalisation and in my opinion, the mini economic size of different types of Steel Plants still substantially lower as compared to Inte tional Standards. Your Company is also poise take up New Challenges by setting up a new b of Steel Making and Processing Facilities and out with a range of specialised Flat Products.

Expansion & Modernisation

The production of the Cold Rolling Mill rec commissioned was, as envisaged, well receiv the market. As a result of the tremendous resp received from the end users, the Company proposed to double the capacity for Cold R Steel Sheets. The increasing shortage of Ma Scrap and escalating prices in the Interna Market has increased the demand for Sponge leading to an explosion in its demand all ove world, including our country. With the exp gained by the group in operating Sponge Plants in the West Indies, I see this as an business opportunity for the Company Company proposes to set up a Gas Based Sp Iron Plant for the manufacture of 8,00,000 to of Sponge Iron per annum.

Capital Market

The Indian Capital Market has undergone change in the last few years. An improveme the overall Corporate Results together improved Economic Conditions have led to gr confidence of people in the Corporate Secto finance the new ventures, your Company also be issuing fresh capital and we w informing you shortly the details of the Investment Opportunities.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SPAT LIMITED

ghlights

- Cold Rolling Mill Commissioned – tremendous response from end users
- Expansion and Modernisation of CR Mill – doubling capacity from 1,25,000 to 2,50,000 tonnes
- Proposal to set up a 8,00,000 tonnes Gas-Based Sponge Iron Plant – to meet the accelerating worldwide demand
- Turnover of Rs.155.81 Crores, Gross Profit of Rs.16.99 Crores and Profit Before Tax of Rs.5.77 Crores for the period ended 30th April, 1989
- 30% Dividend

erations

Turnover of the Company during the period 30th April, 1989 was Rs.15581.66 Lakhs. Profit and Profit Before Tax for the same was Rs.1699.73 Lakhs and Rs.577.42 Lakhs tively. As mentioned in the Directors Report, esults have been satisfactory in view of the constraints under which the Company was ing during the period. Accordingly, your tors have recommended a Final Dividend of for the year after taking into consideration the Dividend of 12% already paid. This is in line the Company philosophy of continuously ing its Shareholders. The outlook for the year continues to be satisfactory. In the first onths there has been over 100% utilization sed capacity in the Galvanizing Plant and % in the Cold Rolling Mill. It is expected that the current year the Company's turnover ceed Rs.300 crores.

ket Standing

As far as the Products are concerned, we are the Market Leaders in the Thin Gauge ed Steel Sheet Market. As a result, we e a steady growth and a further rise in the tage of sales accounted for by this division. production of the Cold Rolling Mill commissioned during the period was well received in the market because of its precisely controlled shape, flatness and other superior features. With the advent of the PVC/Colour Coated Steel Sheets by the end of the year, a new dimension would be given to the applications of Flat Steel Products in the country. For the first time Steel Sheets in a variety of colours and designs would be available for the Interior and Exterior Applications in Construction, Architecture, Electrical Appliances and other Industries.

In order to maintain our competitive advantage, we must continuously upgrade our Product Quality and make the most efficient use of Financial Resources and achieve higher returns on investment. By constantly working to improve value addition, reduce costs and tighten control of working capital management, we aim to increase the overall profitability and to ensure a position of leadership in our various product lines.

Work Force

In order to effectively implement these programmes, we continuously rely on a highly trained, motivated and dedicated Work Force. Our cordial Employee/Management Relationship is one of our great strengths and one of the main reasons that we are confident that the future will see our Company maintaining its position as a leader in the manufacture of Flat Steel Products in the country.

It is with utmost confidence I pledge to you the dedication of THE ISPAT GROUP to growth as the "Continuous Pursuit of Excellence".

With best wishes.

M.L. Mittal
Chairman

NOTE : This does not purport to be a record of the proceedings of the Annual General Meeting.

ISPAT

NIPPON DENRO ISPAT LIMITED
Park Plaza, 71 Park Street, Calcutta 700 016

"In continuous pursuit of excellence"

PRESSMAN

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

◆ All she wanted to do was be an air hostess—and they declared her the prettiest one doing the rounds. From the backwaters of Chandigarh, 21-year-old Suneeta Sodhi had to go all the way to Paris to win her laurels. When she appeared at the Casino de Paris, first in her uniform,

Sodhi: flying high

NAMAS BHOJANI

then in a swimsuit, she needed to outdazzle 16 others. No problem. In a flash of ivory teeth, she had the Miss World Airlines sash draped across her shoulder. Modestly, she says: "I want to remain an air hostess and serve Air-India." Maybe that'll make travel by the airline 'a great new experience'.

◆ This is one Indo-Pak match in which the Indians have been clean bowled. At least Sadia Dehlvi, 31, is sure about that. Says she, cheekily:

Dehlvi and Pervaiz: Indo-Pak overtures

MRF Shuttle: out of the world

"All the Indians lost out." The vivacious Delhi socialite who edits the Urdu fortnightly, Shama—occasionally popping up in the who's who columns of various publications—has just tied the marital knot with snow-haired Reza Pervaiz, a 52-year-old Pakistani executive who works in the automobile industry in Islamabad. It was a wedding to remember: a round robin of parties, including one by the Pakistani ambassador. And then Khushwant Singh finally gave Dehlvi away with champagne, cake and tears. Says Pervaiz, known for his wild parties in Pakistan: "I love her for her non-conformity." Good luck, Islamabad.

◆ How do you improve on Viv Richards, Kapil Dev, Imran Khan, and Allan Border? No you don't. Because you can't. But then how do you make one world cup more impressive than another? By improving the effects. So, while the Reliance extravaganza of 1987 innovated with a motorised drinks trolley, MRF for its Nehru Cup matches has slapped together a space-age craft. The MRF Drinks Shuttle is equipped with a music system. And to avoid bickering, rules have been spelled out: choice of music rests with the captain of the fielding side. Asked why something so outlandish, an MRF spokesman said: "We wanted something out of this world." Literally so?

◆ She's the Portia the Indian judiciary has never had. And by becoming the first woman judge of the Supreme Court, she's crumbled one of the last male bastions. But that's been the story of her life from the very day she stepped into the Quilon district court in Kerala. For Meera Sahib Fathima Beevi, 62, has steadfastly fought the conservativeness of her middle class Muslim background to notch up the successes. The jurist feels there ought to be many more women judges, for they are less corrupt, and can help to "awaken women in general". Says she: "In the modern world it is not very difficult for a single woman to survive if she has self-confidence and is true to herself." The Shylocks had better beware.

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

Beevi: scaling male bastions

◆ Indians do not always have to be at the receiving end of awards emanating from the West. They can also confer some prestigious ones of their own. So one of the four artistes of international repute honoured by the Ustad Hafiz Ali Khan Memorial Society, is classical guitarist John Williams. The other three to be awarded the Hafiz Ali Khan Award are Ustad Ali Akbar Khan, M.S. Subbalakshmi and Ustad Bismillah Khan. Says a pleased Williams, who has been a student of Andrés Segovia: "It is a tribute to western classical music from the other great musical tradition—Indian classical music." Also a tribute from one musical great to another: for handing over the award is none else than Amjad Ali Khan, the society's president.

Williams: eastern accolade

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

COVER STORIES

CONGRESS(I)

Playing it Safe

By nominating most of its sitting MPs to contest the coming general elections, the Congress(I) has firmly plumped for the status quo and against change. More important, the decision seems to be an admission that Rajiv cannot win on his own without the support of key regional bosses.

26

THE OPPOSITION

Cocky Confidence

The Opposition is in an upbeat mood. In a rare display of unity, various parties spanning the entire range of the political spectrum have tacitly agreed to come together and take on the Congress(I) in what effectively amounts to one-to-one contests in a majority of constituencies.

38

RAJIV GANDHI

Promise that Failed

Last week, Rajiv Gandhi completed five roller-coaster years in office, a tenure that has traversed giddy highs and gut-wrenching lows. But the dazzle of his initial promise only serves to spotlight his subsequent failures.

68

REGIONAL PARTIES

Growing Clout

The influence of three regional parties—the Telugu Desam, the DMK and the Akali Dal—is essentially restricted to their home states. But in a closely contested election, they could determine who rules at the Centre.

54

PUNJAB

An Orphaned Future

In the absence of state policy, Punjab's many traumatised orphans live in shattered households. Amid this darkness, one man's crusade to help the innocent victims of terrorist slaughter has lit an inspiring flame of hope.

SPECIAL FEATURE.....96

CRICKET

A Gruelling Battle

The Nehru Cup has produced enthralling cricket with fortunes swinging incredibly. India and West Indies which started off shakily, soon got their bearings and entered the semi-finals along with Pakistan and England.

SPORTS.....162

BEEDI BARONS

Rolling in Money

The few families dominating the Rs 3,000-crore beedi industry cling to traditional methods and a conservative life-style. But some are now installing computers, setting up laboratories, and diversifying into other areas.

BUSINESS FEATURE.....104

BENGALI PAINTERS

A Brush with Bounty

Calcutta has become the new vogue-city in the business of art. Its almost-comatose art market has come alive, with new galleries doing brisk business. As Bengal painters emerge from the shadows, a renaissance is on.

ARTS.....176

CONTENTS

COMMENT.....11
CAPITALOOK.....13
VOICES.....14
INDIANOTES.....19
THE FORTNIGHT THAT WAS.....21
COVER STORY.....24
CURRENT EVENTS.....77
SPECIAL FEATURE
Punjab: Rescuing an Orphaned Future...96
BUSINESS FEATURE
Beedi Barons: Rolling in Money.....104
TRADE WINDS.....110
BUSINESS.....114
MEDIAWATCH.....143
MEDIA
The Press: Under Pressure.....146
DEFENCE
Espionage: Leaks in High Places.....154 TELEVISION
The Bible: A New Testament.....161
SPORTS
Nehru Cup: A Gruelling Battle.....162
THE ARTS
Persian Ramayan: Secular Treasure.....173
HEALTH
Medicine: The Wonder Beam.....182
AMONG BOOKS.....187
BOOKS
Indian Writing:
Finding a Firm Niche.....190
A Significant Study.....196
EYE-CATCHERS.....200

Cover photograph by RAGHU RAI

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

WILL YOU ALLOW YOUR DAU
A MAN WHO LOVES HIS EEP

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

He conforms to contradictions: Combining velvet-glove elegance with animal energy.

But take courage in your hands and invite him to tea one day.

OUR DAUGHTER TO MARRY HIS JEEP?

Get him talking. He'll be reluctant to speak much about himself (about how his business has grown ten-fold in a couple of years or about the many corporate offers he has received from abroad).

But coax him to speak about his second love (his Jeep) and he'll open up.

He'll confess to be driven by a passion for civilized power. Or his need for a friend he can trust in fair weather and foul. "The Jeep demands so little", he'll say, "and gives so much."

He might mention in passing how his analytical brain is seduced by the Jeep's economy (25 paise per kilometer).*

And soon you'll realise that while this man's guts make him say " I-don't-give-two-hoots-for-the-world", his heart says "I'll-give-the-world-for-my-first-love."

That should help you arrive at a decision. Though you will grow to see that he really won't care. One way or other.

Mahindra Jeep MM 540 DIESEL

DRIVEN BY A PASSION...FOR COMMON SENSE

*At current diesel prices. Fuel consumption: 15 km/lit. at 40 km/hr under test conditions.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

LINTAS MM P3 2537

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Solidaire adds life. To colour.

Yes, in fact Solidaire adds a new dimension to everything it does.

To give you the extraordinary. Everytime. With an eye for detail, painstaking efforts for perfection, and years of R&D. And a sheer commitment to excellence.

Which is what earned Solidaire international recognition. In the form of large export orders for colour TVs from leading East European, Middle East and African countries.

As the final touch, Solidaire also believes in adding one more thing to your viewing pleasure: value.

So that you get a value-added, value-based product. Everytime.

Solidaire TV

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

INDIA TODAY
THE COMPLETE NEWSMAGAZINE

VOLUME XIV NUMBER 21
FOR THE FORTNIGHT NOVEMBER 1-15, 1989

EDITOR
AROON PURIE

EXECUTIVE EDITOR INDERJIT BADHWAR
DEPUTY EDITOR DILIP BOBB
SENIOR EDITOR PRABHU CHAWLA
PICTURE EDITOR RAGHU RAI
FEATURES EDITOR SHEKHAR GUPTA
ASSOCIATE EDITOR RAMINDAR SINGH
ASSISTANT EDITOR P.G. MATHAI

CORRESPONDENTS
SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT RAJ CHENGAPPA
NEW DELHI MADHU JAIN
PARANJOY GUHA THAKURTA
SIMRAN BHARGAVA
DAVID DEVADAS
PANKAJ PACHAURI
SURAJEET DAS GUPTA
BHASKAR ROY
AHMEDABAD UDAY MAHURKAR
BANGALORE CHIDANAND RAJGHATTA
BHOPAL N.K. SINGH
BOMBAY M. RAHMAN
SALIL TRIPATHI
S.N. VASUKI
CALCUTTA FARZAND AHMED
HYDERABAD AMARNATH K. MENON
LUCKNOW DILIP AWASTHI
MADRAS C.S.G PRASAD
PATNA UTTAM SENGUPTA
TRIVANDRUM RAMESH MENON
NEWS COORDINATOR SANDHYA MULCHANDANI

ART EDITOR SHIRLEY JOSHUA

CARTOONIST AJIT NINAN MATHEW
CARTOGRAPHER B.K. SHARMA
CHIEF OF PRODUCTION ANURADHA KAPOOR
LAYOUT ARTISTS PEALI DUTTA GUPTA
PRABAL MANDAL
KAMINI SINGH

ASSISTANT PICTURE EDITOR BHAWAN SINGH
PHOTOGRAPHERS PRAMOD PUSHKARNA
PRASHANT PANJIAR
NAMAS BHOJANI
SHYAM TEKWANI

COPY EDITOR TARUN J. TEJPAL

COPY DESK SABA NAQVI BHAUMIK
NANDITA SARDANA

MARKETING DIRECTOR MOHINI BHILLAR

REGIONAL MANAGERS ADVERTISING
BOMBAY NEENA MONGIA
NEW DELHI NAGINDER RISHI
CALCUTTA MEERA PAUL

ADVERTISING MANAGERS
MADRAS R. ANAND
BANGALORE S.J. NAIDU

• REGISTERED OFFICE LIVING MEDIA INDIA LTD. F-14/15, CONNAUGHT PLACE NEW DELHI 110001. PHONE: 3315801-4. TELEX: 031-65 INTO IN CABLE: LIVMEDIA. NEW DELHI • SUBSCRIPTIONS: LIVMEDIA INDIA LIMITED. POST BOX 706, FARIDABAD-121001, HARYANA • TRADE CIRCULATION: INDIA TODAY CIRCULATION MANAGER. F-14 CONNAUGHT PLACE, MIDDLE CIRCLE, NEW DELHI. PHONE: 3313076-8. TELEX: 31-62634 INTO IN • ADVERTISING OFFICES: 28 A&B JOLLY MAKER CHAMBER II, NARIMAN POINT, BOMBAY-400021. PHONE: 2026152, 2029326, 2040580. TELEX: 11-5373 THOM IN. CABLE: LIVMEDIA, BOMBAY • 14 BANGALORE CIRCUS, NEW DELHI-110001. PHONES: 3325378, 3325379 AND 3321273. TELEX: 31-62124 THOM IN. CABLE: LIVMEDIA NEW DELHI • FAGUN CHAMBERS, 26 COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF ROAD, MADRAS-600105. PHONE: 477188, 479163. CABLE: LIVMEDIA MADRAS • 74/1 ST. MARKS ROAD, BANGALORE-560001. PHONE: 213017, 212448. CABLE: LIVMEDIA, BANGALORE • 8 BURDWAN ROW, CALCUTTA-700016. PHONE: 44 CHOWRINGHEE ROAD, CALCUTTA-700016. PHONE: 447726. CABLE: LIVINMEDIA, CALCUTTA • COPYRIGHT © THE WORLD, REPRODUCTION IN ANY MANNER IS PROHIBITED BY AROON PURIE FOR LIVING MEDIA INDIA LTD. PUBLISHED AT THOMSON PRESS INDIA LTD. FARIDABAD HARYANA • INDIA TODAY DOES NOT TAKE RESPONSIBILITY FOR RETURNING UNSOLICITED PUBLICATION MATERIAL •

COMMUNALISING POLITICS

The quest for the Hindu vote ("Dangerous Dimensions", October 31) is on in right earnest. The call for Ramshila pujas given by the BJP has hastened the communalisation of Indian politics. The Government is equally to be blamed for this situation: the timing for granting second language status to Urdu had an obvious ulterior motive. The result is that communalism is now rapidly spreading to all parts of the country. The loser in this political game, of course, is as always the Indian citizen.

New Delhi — V.A. MENON

SOARING PRICES

The spiral in prices ("Crisis on Prices", October 15) is a result of bad planning and mismanagement of resources. The frenetic activity to curb it will, in all probability, be forgotten after the general elections leaving the middle class consumer in the lurch.

Bombay — PETER YORKE

■ The prices of all essential commodities should be strictly state-controlled and monitored by government agencies.

Chandigarh — R.K. SUNDAN

■ The Government's failure to check the rising prices has given a big blow to the middle class. Unless a tangible change is brought about quickly, the results are likely to be devastating.

Kanpur — RAAJ GOPAL MEHROTRA

■ An effective consumer movement is the only answer to force the Government to bring down the prices.

Bombay — N.G. WAGLE

■ The present crisis stems from deficit financing, inept management and pouring in of money into unproductive ventures like the Jawahar Rozgar Yojna.

New Delhi — PUNAM RIJHWANI

■ Will the Government list how many more public welfare schemes (like the Jawahar Rozgar Yojna) it has in mind in order to pay tributes to Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru in this election year, so that we citizens can plan out how much less we will get to spend over the coming months?

Vadodara — AJAY KUMAR

■ The rise in prices will be an effective weapon for the Opposition in the coming general elections and it will blunt the achievements of the Government.

Kottayam — V.K. SATHYAVAN NAIR

■ With the rise in prices, hoarding and profiteering have become rampant. It is imperative that the Government take immediate measures to curb this growing menace.

Trivandrum — K.C. MADHAVA KURUP

■ Price rise is the last nail in the political coffin of Rajiv Gandhi and the Congress(I).

Jabalpur — RAVI OSWAL

THE GUN CULTURE

"March of the Gun" (October 15) lays bare the genesis of the growing gun culture in India—whether it is the Babri Masjid-Ram Janmabhoomi dispute or terrorism in Punjab and Jammu and Kashmir. Most of these problems are kept alive by the government agencies because they gain by accentuating fanaticism.

Ludhiana — K.S. SOIN

A NEW AWAKENING

"Changing Sexuality" (October 15) does not quite apply to the Indian woman, though the frustrations of marriage like male impotence and brutality of the husbands have been well discussed.

Hyderabad — MUTHENDER VELISHALA

■ The experiences recounted in the article are not new. The only difference is that economically independent women have become more expressive about their sexual needs.

New Delhi — DR L.K. SINGHAL

■ The change in the people's attitude towards sex is not really sudden; it is a belated fulfilment of old desires.

Bhagalpur — ALOK KUMAR JHA

■ It is wrong to suggest that women of the earlier generation were conservative and unhappy. The present openness

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

is a sign of degrading intellectuality in urban India.
Tiruchirapalli — J.P. MAHESHWARI

■ Changing sexuality in the middle class women is a result of our changing behavioural patterns.
Indore — DR PRATEEP VYAS

■ It is nice to know that in our male-dominated society, women have begun to assert their rights to indulge in sex outside marriage.
Ranchi — SUBHASH SERAPHIM

■ It is not only women who have changed their attitude towards sex in the past decade, men have also understood the importance of a fuller expression of love during sex.
Hyderabad — VIJAY SONI

■ Infidelity is on the rise in India as people seek sexual stimulation outside marriage. Traditionally, it was always the wife who accepted her husband's infidelity. A man's behaviour was never questioned. In fact, keeping two wives was even considered a status symbol.
Kanpur — KUMUD MEHROTRA

■ Your article tries to glorify extra-marital affairs. That women are increasingly indulging in extra-marital sex because their husbands are incapable of providing them with what they want is being unfair to the husbands.
Jaipur — RAJESH KABU

■ We should credit traditional society with some intelligence. If sexual affairs had been fun and safe, our ancestors would have approved of them. The moral streak is inherent in every man and woman and the guilt attached to extra-marital relationships can never be overcome.
Madras — S. VENKATESH BHAT

■ Sigmund Freud has used sex in a very vast panorama. According to him unfulfilled sexual desires have many socially and morally accepted outlets. Story and poetry writing, painting, acting, singing and other such acts are modes of fulfilling these desires.
Patna — JASBIR KAUR

■ I was surprised to be quoted, or rather misquoted, in the story. I don't believe that the three lines which have been boxed make much sense. The discussion with your correspondent took place over a period of time. And suddenly to see in print a jumble of words which seem to say nothing is not doing any good for the person who is being quoted, for the reader or for the magazine. I was talking from the point of view of the need for a sense of identity for the Indian woman, all of which does not appear in the copy. Moreover, I would like to add that I am still very much with Saheli.
New Delhi — PRABEEN SINGH

SMEAR CAMPAIGN

The St Kitts bank account controversy ("Calling the Bluff", October 15) is aimed at tarnishing the reputation of V.P. Singh. The release of documents involving Ajeya Singh, their projection on Doordarshan, and banker George McLean's meetings with selected pressmen make this motive clear.
Kanpur — ROHIT MAINDWAL

■ Can one believe that an educated banker, whose mother tongue is English, could ever sign a paper which states, "Daily interest $211.18 per day per $10,00,000.00"?
Calcutta — APARAJIT SARKAR

FATAL FLAWS

It is paradoxical that a country like ours which invests so much on training aviation manpower still suffers from flaws ("Heading for a Crisis", October 15). Perhaps we are the only country where there is a shortage of trained pilots as well as experienced crew. This despite a large number of Air Force pilots who retire early and can be re-employed. Many of these pilots are also experienced traffic and radar controllers and can meet any exigency affecting air safety.
Ahmedabad — R.N. BALI, Group Captain (Retd)

■ Frequent air crashes, delay in departure of flights, and the rude behaviour of airline staff have put the future of Indian Airlines (IA) and Vayudoot in jeopardy. Veteran transport pilots, with wide administrative experience from the Indian Air Force should head IA and Vayudoot to streamline the administration.
Calcutta — B.N. BOSE

VENDETTA KILLING

It is wrong to ascribe every killing in Punjab to terrorism ("Dangerous Strategy", October 15). The murder of Rajan Bains, son of SSP Gobind Ram, is a case of retribution. Proper redressal of the people's complaints by the police could have prevented this incident.
New Delhi — SUDHIR K. NAIR

GREAT LANGUAGE

Urdu is a popular link-language of India ("Urdu Uproar", October 15) which is widely spoken and understood. The language is not confined to the Muslims alone. All those who are opposed to Urdu ought to be condemned. In your article, it has been said that a population of 30 per cent is required under Article 347 of the Indian Constitution to make Urdu an official language. The status of the official language is conferred under Article 345 of the Constitution, which does not lay any restriction on population.
Patna — DR ABDUL MOGHNI

■ History is proof of the significant role of Urdu in every aspect of Indian culture and politics. The attitude adopted by the BJP and the Shiv Sena towards this language is totally unfair.
Allahabad — RAHILA SAYEED

LAGGING BEHIND

The Nehru Centenary Athletics Meet ("Tracking the Stars", October 15) has once again proved that Indian sportspersons are still far behind international standards. To bridge this gap, what the sportsmen need is vigorous training and more participation in international competitions.
Madras — ROBIN PALARAMB

TURBULENT VALLEY

Your comment ("Indianise Kashmir", September 30) analyses the causes of trouble in Kashmir in their proper perspective. Every description of turbulence in the valley as communal and pro-Pakistani demoralises the nationalist Muslims and perpetuates a sense of alienation from other Indians.
Bhopal — ZAKI-UR-RAHMAN KHAN

GOOD REJOINDER

General K. Sundarji has convincingly answered the questions raised by the Government's rejoinder to his revelations ("Sundarji Replies", September 30). In turn he has also raised new questions to be answered by the prime minister and his party.
Tilhar, Uttar Pradesh — L. SHARMA

■ How long could General Sundarji remain silent when the quality of the Bofors gun was being questioned by those who have little knowledge of weaponry?
Calcutta — M. THIRUMURTHY

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Take the world in your stride.

dinesh

Exclusives ▲ Suitings ▲ Co-ordinates ▲ Safaris

The choice of leading fashion houses, internationally.

Trademark

HI-COMFORT WOOL

Dinesh showrooms: BANGALORE: Pushkar • MYSORE: Sagar • BHOPAL: Vishal Corner • INDORE: Dawar's • BHAGALPUR: Lavanya • PATNA: Bhartiya Bastralaya • JHARIA: Bharat Cloth Store • PATNA: Bhartiya Bastralaya

(IT/7)

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

DO FOR YOUR HOME WHA

INTRODUCING ROYALE

Inspired by the secrets of creation. In a palette of 35 designer shades, created, for the first time, to bring to life the colours of the earth. And the glorious hues of heaven. Give your home the divine splendour of Royale. Supreme luxury acrylic finish. The finest premium among premium emulsions. Perfected on earth by Asian Paints.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

OMEWHAT GOD DID FOR THE EARTH

ROYALE
THE FINEST WALL FINISH
SINCE CREATION.

asian paints

ed,
f heaven.
ish.
Paints.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

An Indelible Blot

OUT, damned spot! Out, I say!...All the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand....Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood clean from my hand? No, my hand will rather the multitudinous seas incarnadine, making the green one red."

Like the permanent bloodstain that Lady Macbeth saw on her hand, the Bofors scandal has become an indelible blot on the Rajiv Gandhi Government that cannot be wished away either by a general election or by Doordarshan's new attempt at exorcism wherein, as a matter of policy, newsreaders have been instructed not to refer to Bofors by name but only to the 155 mm Howitzer gun. And all the statements by officials and ministers and all the "investigations" the Government has ordered have failed to sweeten its odium. If anything, the stench of Bofors gets more rancid by the day.

The real issue is not the sum of Rs 64 crore or even Rs 100 crore in pay-offs that may or may not be eventually recovered from the Swedes. The sum is immaterial. It's not the money. The real issue is one of faith. Faith in the system, faith in the Government, faith in the prime minister. This is what makes a democracy and a country tick and move forward. And this loss of faith is not because the Opposition has willed it for its own selfish political advantage, or because anti-Rajiv Gandhi conspirators in the press have calculatedly worked in tandem with invisible foreign forces to destroy it.

This sordid situation is squarely the creation of the Government. And that's where responsibility must ultimately be placed. Immediately after the scandal surfaced in April 1987, the prime minister, along with his cabinet colleagues, made solemn, drumbeat pledges of punishing the guilty by getting to the bottom of the matter. "The Government will leave no stone unturned to get at the facts," they said. "We want to know who opened these (Swiss) accounts and when, and who operated them." "If we are guilty then hang us....somebody had run away with the country's money. Let us find him....Let us show this country that we want to get at the truth." With its own words, the Government was demonstrating that nothing short of the national honour was at stake and that it would be satisfied with nothing less than the punishment of the guilty—whoever they were. It was telling the Indian people that the system is accountable. Pursuing the culprits in the Bofors scandal, going by the Government's own statements, was made a national objective.

In keeping with this, the Government sent delegations to Switzerland and served notices on Bofors representative Win Chadha. These, as The Hindu's stories have revealed, were a game of charades. And precisely because it has not followed its own directives with any seriousness, the Bofors scandal has refused to go away. Now it has sent yet another team to Switzerland after The Hindu revealed that all along, the Government's attempts to get at the truth—the Joint Parliamentary Committee's investigation, the kid-gloves treatment accorded Chadha—were farcical.

Illustration by AJIT NINAN

BUT that's not all. The Government's spokesmen have gone so far as to attack the motives of the press. Journalists and others who have followed the Bofors trail are not necessarily ill-wishers of Rajiv Gandhi or even his party. They are, after all, pursuing the national objective laid down by the Government itself. Their revelations, if credible, and if leading to the truth should be lauded by the Government. Instead, they are derided and attempts are made to put the brakes on their investigations. By doing so, the Government not only keeps Bofors alive but also commits a breach of faith with the people who have reposed their trust in it.

For more than two years Bofors has hobbled what was surely one of the most popular governments elected by the Indian people since Independence and prevented it from getting along with the business of effective governance. The pity of it is that even if Rajiv Gandhi is re-elected, the paralysis will continue, as new exposes are bound to prove embarrassing and destabilising to a new government. And with the prospect of a far more numerically powerful opposition in Parliament, the issue can hardly be expected to die out. What is at stake is the very stability of the system.

Equally dangerous is what foreign governments may do to blackmail a new government. There is speculation that the superpowers with the enormous resources at their command, may already have a pretty good idea of who is behind the Bofors deal and who may have taken the money. The fear is that this kind of information in the hands of foreign powers could render the Indian Government vulnerable to blackmail from abroad—thereby jeopardising the very sovereignty of independent India. It is for these reasons that the Bofors scandal is not just a question of a Rs 64-crore bribe. And it is therefore paramount that in the interest of faith, stability and sovereignty, Indians must get to the bottom of the matter.

Bofors must be buried. In order to get the nation moving again we have to get it out of our system. And the only person who can do this effectively is Rajiv Gandhi. As he goes into his second general election he must treat the event not as something that will deflect Bofors into a side issue but as an opportunity to force his government to come clean on the subject—and the devil take the hindmost. If he can do this he will, in a single stroke, be able to restore both the national pride and his own honour and will have earned a vote of thanks from the entire nation. If he does not, and still emerges the victor, he will, like Macbeth, perhaps "feel his title hang loose about him like a giant's robe upon a dwarfish thief".

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

GUESS WHAT HAPPENS TO PUMAPLY IF YOU BAKE IT FOR ONE HOUR IN AN OVEN AT 200°C ?

NOTHING. ABSOLUTELY NOTHING.

Water boils at 100°C.

Pumaply can take more. Much more.

Because it is 100% Heat Resistant.

Think of what this means for your kitchen cabinets exposed to the continuous heat of ovens, pressure cookers, toasters and everyday frying and cooking.

And, yes ! Pumaply is also Termite Resistant.

No wonder, it is the ideal plywood to use in your homes and offices—wherever long life is of prime importance.

So, the next time you're making furniture, ask for Duro's Pumaply. And be 200% sure of plywood that's virtually indestructible.

DURO PUMAPLY ™

FROM THE MAKERS OF DUROBORD

VIRTUALLY INDESTRUCTIBLE !

Sarda Plywood Industries Ltd. General Sales Office: 1/7, D.B. Gupta Road, New Delhi 110 055

Regional Offices: Bombay, Ph: 343891/332058 • Ahmedabad, Ph: 398534/9035 • Madras, Ph: 31358 • Bangalore, Ph: 215451

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Brusque Bureaucrat

● Bureaucracies are known to become catatonic as a general election nears. But T.N. Seshan, Union cabinet secretary, has different ideas. The country's most powerful bureaucrat has instilled fear among his colleagues by launching into a review of the performance of all additional and joint secretaries in the various ministries. The idea of the exercise, apparently, is to screen the best of the Government's 'B'-team and weed out the non-performers.

Seshan has been doing it in his usual brusque, no-nonsense style. The key bureaucrats in a ministry are asked to prepare a brief on what their departments have been doing and need to do in future. He then convenes a meeting of all top-level staff, where individual members are asked to make 12-minute presentations. They are then subjected to an intense grilling by Seshan, who loses no opportunity to tear them apart.

Those who come out unscathed either retain their posts or are recommended for promotion. Others are transferred peremptorily to insignificant ministries. Recently, an additional secretary in a key ministry was given the short shrift by Seshan when he found her performance lackadaisical. A week after that, her transfer orders came. Meanwhile, Seshan has been busy giving other ministries his special treatment.

Singh Snafu

● Last fortnight, the Malaysian Government made the unusual announcement that nobody with the surname of Singh would be granted an entry visa into the country until the end of the three-day Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in Kuala Lumpur. The edict was passed out of solicitude for the Indian Government—a clumsy attempt at preventing the entry of terrorists.

But the Indian External Affairs Ministry found itself in an embarrassing position. After all, Minister of State for External Affairs and the Foreign Secretary, are both Singhs—K. Natwar Singh and S.K. Singh. Worse, India's High Commissioner in Kuala Lumpur is P.M. Singh.

S.K. Singh brought this to the Malaysian Government's notice, which said it was a security measure for Rajiv Gandhi who was expected at the summit. But a concession was made: any Singh coming on official or diplomatic business would be allowed in. So Natwar Singh and S.K. Singh were ensured entry at Kuala Lumpur airport—unlike other ordinary Singhs.

Illustrations by AJIT NINAN

Giani's Memoirs

● Guess what is considered the hottest forthcoming prospect in the capital's publishing world? No, it is not Shobha De's sequel to Socialite Evenings. It is, instead, the memoirs of former President Giani Zail Singh.

While avoiding publicity for the past many months, the Giani has been busy penning down the story of his chequered life—or rather telling it to a former AIR official who is writing it for him.

With the Giani having been a ringside witness to the making of India's recent history, it is not surprising that publishers are making a beeline for his story of his life.

An international publishing house is ahead of the rest of the pack, but it has a problem. The hard-headed editors are interested only if the Giani writes in detail about the tumultuous political happenings when he was home minister and President.

On the other hand, the Giani, who is on a trip of narcissistic nostalgia, is more keen to ramble about his humble childhood, his village, his youth and things of that sort. And as the publishers persuade him to write a sensational political kiss-and-tell, many in the ruling party are worried.

But now, even if the Giani decides to say it all, can he meet the deadline his fans in the Opposition want him to keep: before the elections?

Changing Times

● Unknown to the outside world, profound changes have been taking place in the neighbourhood. Last month, Delhi's press corps, so used to making do with lime 'n soda at Pakistan Embassy receptions, were surprised to find liquor flowing freely at a reception to celebrate Pakistan's re-entry into the Commonwealth.

But other things have to change too. The Pakistan Embassy will now become a high commission, the ambassador the high commissioner and so on. This will require a change in stationery, name-plates et al. The expense involved: approximately Rs 50,000.

That too when the mission reprints stationery only for external communications. For internal communications within the mission and with Islamabad, old stationery will continue to be used with a rubber stamp to erase 'embassy' and inscribe 'high commission'.

Given the nonchalance with which Pakistan walked out of the Commonwealth in the past, it may indeed be wise on the part of the embassy/high commission to keep its old stationery handy.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ELECTIONS 1989

The greatest event to mark the end of the decade is about to happen — The World's largest democracy goes to the polls. Do you have all the facts at your finger-tips to make a sound judgement on the outcome? Will you be counted among those who predicted correctly?

You could be right!

Prannoy Roy, Ashok Lahiri and David Butler present in INDIA DECIDES, a detailed analysis of how freedom of choice has been practiced since 1952. Its a barometer of electoral trends and the mood of the nation at the time of each election. No political analysis is complete without this unique publication.

- Statistically significant election figures.
- Analysis of electoral changes.
- Insights into the correlation between votes cast and seats won.
- Complete bibliography for cross referencing.
- For the first time, Lok Sabha results of all general elections, constituency results, close contest results, by-election results, and lots more — all in one volume.

Free Offer

Order immediately, and this 380 page deluxe hardcover edition will be delivered to your doorstep at NO EXTRA COST.

Just mail your Cheque/Demand Draft for Rs. 350/- (Add Rs. 5/- for outstation Cheques, ie., outside Delhi) payable to LIVING MEDIA INDIA LTD., alongwith details of your name and address to: LIVING MEDIA INDIA LTD., P.O. Box 29, NEW DELHI-110001.

INDIA DECIDES. Another exclusive from

INDIA TODAY

The Times of India

- It is a courageous step by Rajiv Gandhi.

■ MOTILAL VORA, on the election announcement

- Let us resolve to achieve these objectives (the ouster of Rajiv Gandhi and a sizeable presence of BJP in the 1990 Lok Sabha). If other opposition friends cooperate: with them. If they do not: without them. And if they oppose: in spite of them.

■ L.K. ADVANI in Sunday

- It is a matter of great regret that not even four persons from the opposition parties could muster up enough courage to stand up for the weaker sections of the society and others whom the act (Panchayati Raj and Nagarpalika bills) would have benefited.

■ RAJIV GANDHI

- This is a verdict against the bullying tactics of the Government.

■ M.S. GURUPADASWAMY, on the Government's failure to get the Panchayati Raj and Nagarpalika bills passed in the Rajya Sabha

- Sir, I need your help.

■ AJEYA SINGH in a letter to President R. Venkataraman

- It is Tikait's proximity to Delhi that has made some of his blurbs newsworthy. But I think it's time we called a spade a spade and an idiot an idiot.

■ SHARAD JOSHI in The Sunday Observer

- I, or I should say we in the Cabinet, have merely fulfilled an election promise made in 1980.

■ N.D. TIWARI, on granting second language status to Urdu, in The Illustrated Weekly of India

- I am isolated in my party because if I say the right thing, nobody supports me.

■ KAMLAPATI TRIPATHI in The Statesman

- I am a coward. I don't like unpleasantness. I run away from controversies.

■ MURLI DEORA in Bombay

- They have disbanded the relay team which was formed by the 'golden girls'. You are talking about cricket, here our best girls have been thrown out thanks to politics.

■ MARGARET ALVA, on the AAFI, in Sportsworld

- I love to see my face in the mirror. But even I'm getting bored of that face.

■ KAMALAHASAN in Newstrack

- At one time Manmohan Desai used to call Amitabh Bachchan a castor oil hero. Today he claims to be his mentor.

■ PRAKASH MEHRA in Movie

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Who gives a damn!

Flamboyant.
Daring.
Defying the rules.
And the fabric —
Oswal Premium.

OSWAL®
PREMIUM
SUITINGS

Product of Arihant Fabrics Ltd.

For the rebel in you!

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Nicole le Chevalier.

A red Porsche. Smouldering black dresses on a willowy 5'9" frame. Very, very dramatique.

Like those swirling silks she shapes in her design studio at Montparnasse.

"My designs are... how do you say it... flamboyant? They free the spirit! But the magique is that they work. Like all good design should."

"Just like the Hansa Aqua Mixer. It's so perfect that even we French are buying German design... c'est la vie!"

For a free booklet, write to : Auto Controls Pvt. Ltd. (A Ranutrol Group Company), Home Improvement Division. Corporate Office ☐ F-85, Okhla Indl. Area, Phase-I, NEW DELHI-110 020. Tel : 683 6001. North Zone ☐ X-37, Okhla Indl. Area, Phase-II, NEW DELHI-110 020. Tel : 63 3494, 684 5055. ☐ 1108, Sector 33C, CHANDIGARH-160 031. East Zone ☐ Flat No. 5-1, Stephen Court, 18A, Park Street, CALCUTTA-700 016. Tel : 29 1035-0.

In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The Ranutrol Hansa Aqua Mixer. The world's most elegant way of mixing water, with pleasure.

Flawless to the minutest detail. Functional adornments in the finest settings in over forty countries.

An exquisitely crafted range with the distinctly superior ceramic cartridge technology. Pioneered and perfected by Hansa Metallwerke AG of West Germany. Brought to India by the Ranutrol Group. For the discerning few.

RANUTROL HANSA
AQUA MIXER
From Hansa Metallwerke AG, West Germany.

TECHNOLOGY QUALITY SERVICE RANUTROL GROUP

South Zone ☐ Flat No. A-4, 2nd Floor, Parsan Menere, 602, Anna Salai, MADRAS-600 006. Tel: 86 7121 ☐ Natraj Complex, 2nd Floor, 9, Residency Road, Richmond Circle, BANGALORE-560 025. Tel: 21 1846, 21 4683, 21 5429. West Zone ☐ 114, 1st Floor, A2 Building, Shah & Nahar Indl. Estate, Lower Parel, BOMBAY-400 013. Tel: 492 0297, 492 7125 ☐ 1012, Embassy Centre, Nariman Point, BOMBAY-400 021. Tel: 23 3629, 23 4424.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Enterprise/D/ACL/312

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Highly recommended by all who fly.

Lufthansa

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

PAYING ACTS

■ Tinsel-town Bombay is not the only place where a performer's success is rated by the price he, or she, charges. The same now holds true of small-time performers who come out of hibernation around Dussehra time.

Those playing the lead role are not always the highest paid. The price depends on how the actor interprets his role. So the highest paid at a Ramlila in Kanpur, Uttar Pradesh, was the angry Parshuram. His rate: Rs 300 per day. Surprisingly, the lowest paid was Ram whose beatific smile, the organisers felt, was worth just Rs 55 a day. The price of the actor playing the ten-headed demon Ravana was Rs 150 and the aggressively enacted Lakshman was worth Rs 100.

With Ramlila performances becoming money-spinners, the astute organisers have perfected their own star system which apes the Bombay model. Bombay had better beware. Today's Surpanakha might just be tomorrow's Rekha.

DOGGED BY RED TAPE

■ Human beings are not the only victims of red tapism. Canines too can suffer bureaucrat-inflicted indignities. A case in point: Vespa, the golden labrador acquired by the Calcutta Detective Department for its dog squad two years ago, who still awaits an appointment letter from the Government.

Although Vespa has an impeccable track record in the police—having doggedly sniffed out drugs and explosives and even having stood guard during one of the prime minister's visits to Calcutta—his future seemed very bleak. For all his snooping, he had failed to find a place in the Detective Departments's six-strong dog squad.

But Vespa was not the only one growling. His previous owner, Nilanjan Banerjee, a dog-breeder, complained that the police still owed him Rs 2,000. However, since two dogs in the squad died recently, Vespa may finally fill one of the vacancies. Every dog has his day.

ASS ASSEMBLY

■ Never heard of a donkey mela? Then you better head for Luniawas, a tiny village near Jaipur, known all along for its beautiful pottery or tie-and-dye dupattas and, more recently, for its annual donkey mela. Or the mela at Majra, Haryana, which is billed as the biggest in the world, and attracts traders from Rajasthan, Madhya Pradesh, Himachal Pradesh, Uttar Pradesh and Punjab. Around 40,000 donkeys are paraded at the fair. And they sell at prices ranging between an abysmal Rs 200 and a whopping Rs 1 lakh.

One lakh for a donkey? Surprisingly, yes. This is because donkeys are an important dowry item among members of the potter community. The donkey mela also serves as a marriage mart for the potters; many matches are made and feuds forgotten. And which groom do you think stands the best chance of winning a winsome Haryanavi belle? The one with the sturdiest donkey, of course.

MIRACLE MAN

■ In a country where religion and superstition go hand in hand, crusaders against superstition often feel they're banging their heads against a wall. One such crusader is Shyam Manav, who has even been beaten by irate people who feel he is questioning age-old beliefs.

To prove his point that most miracles "performed" by sadhus and godmen were mere sleights of hand, Manav recently gave a demonstration in Bombay, where he converted a vessel of water into pedas. He then invited members of the audience to come up to the dais and taste them.

An elderly man ambled up to the stage, reverently picked up a peda, lifted it to his forehead as if it were holy prasad, before eating it. The purpose of the rationalist sermon was totally defeated. Instead of provoking the audience to question such "miracles", the rationalist had become a miracle man!

MARUTI BHIM

■ The Mahabharat's big man Bhim in a Maruti? Incongruous, maybe, but that's the sight that Delhiites see when this monstrous Pandava comes to visit his family.

Bhim, alias Praveen Kumar, was recently mobbed by shoppers in the capital's Connaught Place, who followed him shouting "Bhim, Bhim" and offered currency notes to be autographed.

Not many people know that the 6 ft 7 inch, 129 kg Praveen Kumar has actual feats of strength to his credit: his national hammer throw record is unbeaten.

Things are going well for Bhim. Was it divine intervention that made the BSF settle his pension claim after an eight-year wait? Bhim picked up his cheque and drove off in his Maruti. Does he have problems fitting into the tiny car? No, he says, it has more headroom than the Mercedes 300 he drives in Bombay. Bhim in a Mercedes?

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Dornier Lithotripter MPL 9000

Technology of the Future for Human Gall-bladder/Kidney Stone Therapy

From Dornier Medizintechnik GmbH of West Germany, the inventors of the machine. Installed in 400 centres world wide, and over 1 million patients treated. The most up-to-date method of providing therapy for most stone patients. The Dornier Lithotripter MPL 9000 provides:

- Easy and positive stone location,
- Disintegration of stone into fine grain,
- Easy and best positioning of the patient at the touch of a button,
- Computer aided,
- Safe and reliable.

All this without anaesthesia, and of course without the scalpel.

Sales Representatives

All India (except South India), Bhutan, Nepal, Sri Lanka & Bangladesh.

DSSI

DYNAMIC SALES SERVICE INTERNATIONAL (P) LTD.

210 Din Dayal Upadhya Marg (Rouse Ave), New Delhi-110 002.

Phone: 3310130/3310135/3310136/3318722
Telex: 31-61896/65129 Cable: PRESBUTTON
Fax: 011-3312720

In South India

HEALTH WARE

6-3-456/22, Dwarakapuri Colony, Hyderabad-500 482

Phone: 226204, Grams: ITMA
Telex: 0425-6699 VIJAY IN
Fax: (0842) 242072

Now available in India

F N /XIII-388

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Edge of History

NOW it is down to the wire. In the blink of a fortnight, India suddenly finds itself teetering on the edge of history. A decision relegated to the basement of the collective mind now suddenly looms frighteningly near. It is, at every level, a decision that has never been more vital for this fractious republic. What India will decide in the dizzying span of three weeks is not the political fortunes of 529 mostly invisible politicians. What India decides will be crucial for the future course of Indian democracy.

RAGHU RAI

It is not, in the end, a question of stability. The alarmist advertisements and posters, so flagrantly flung around by the ruling party, would have been inexcusable were not hyperbole an accepted weapon in electoral battle. The truth is that India is too large in size and population, too federal in its political configuration, too strongly pillared on institutions immune to political upheavals, to disintegrate into pieces merely because of a change of government.

The truth is that it is essentially governments which encourage the aura of instability for political ends. The truth is that it is essentially politicians who aggravate the communal itch for the same objective. The truth is that it is political parties who conspire in the erosion of institutions to suit the political dictates of the day. The truth is that India is no less or no more unstable than at any time since 1952 when the first Lok Sabha elections were staged.

If anything, it is infinitely more mature, more immune to political manipulation and more resilient to political change. Even its most vulnerable phase—the insecurity and infighting within the Janata government between 1977 and 1979—did not lead to any great instability as far as the country was concerned. India not only survived, but emerged much stronger in its democratic credentials.

The key issue is that the politician has betrayed his pact with the Indian people.

The real test of Election 1989 is the message the electorate sends to its future leaders.

That is what makes this election so suddenly crucial. More so, since the choice before the electorate has never been more difficult or more ambiguous. That the major electoral pitch of the ruling party centres around the imagined threat to the country should the Opposition come to power, in the end, says more about the Rajiv Gandhi Government than it does about the Opposition. What it does convey is that his government has a shortage of successes to proudly parade before the electorate. Equally, the Opposition is armed with one solitary election plank; the removal of Rajiv Gandhi. In terms of issues, this election will harp on the negative rather than the positive.

The Opposition may present a confusion of ideological hues. It may also possess the potential to self-destruct before its designated mandate should it find electoral favour for the second time in Indian history. But political ideology—except at a limited level—is no longer an overriding issue in the public mind. It has, and often enough, been sacrificed in the desperate scramble for power.

The issue is that the politician, whether of the ruling party or the Opposition, has betrayed his pact with the Indian people. At no other time has the credibility or image of the country's political community sunk so low. At no other time have electoral pledges and promises been less meaningful.

That will be the real test of Election 1989. Not which party is finally elected to power. But the message that the electorate sends to its future leaders come November. In the midst of a bruising, brawling electoral battle, it is easy to forget that the collective wisdom of the Indian electorate has always instinctively led it to take the right decision. There is no reason why this time should be any different.

—DILIP BOBB

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

For every changing
whim and fancy ...

A man of principles.

Fabric
Royal Gold
Blend
Super 80's
extra fine
Merino Wool
Season
Autumn, Winter
Occasion
Whenever the intention is to make headlines

Royal Gold

Raymond's
The Final Word.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

GENERAL ELECTIONS

CLEAR CHOICES

WHAT the country will witness during the next three weeks will be nothing short of a political eruption unmatched anywhere on the globe as the people of the nation exercise their birthright to hold to democratic accountability—to punish or reward—those to whom they loaned their power for the last five years. A mind-boggling 489 million voters, nearly twice the entire population of North America, will parade to thousands upon thousands of makeshift polling booths in an open franchise, once again demonstrating to the world that this wretched, illiterate, strife-torn, sectarian, poverty-bedraggled land that by every notion of conventional wisdom should degenerate into chaos and anarchy, still clings tenaciously to a precept that gives back to the humblest and the unlettered, even if for a fleeting moment, his dignity as he votes. And in a world that is a silent spectator to tanks and jackboots that crush freedom and dissent, India's elections, more than her guns and warplanes, are her most potent demonstration of her innate strength. Her badge of honour.

And at the heart of this maelstrom stands the ragamuffin Indian voter. This question-mark of a man who befuddles the pundits, amazes the pollsters, defeats the doomsayers, and sends academics and social scientists scurrying for new research material with which they try and make sense out of his mind. For illiterate though he may be, he is politically mature, he is wise, and a far cry from being a head of cattle in a multitudinous herd that moos guffishly in support of politically-engineered waves of religious, sectarian and xenophobic emotionalism.

To those who argue that there are never real issues at the grassroots level and that all that counts in elections is the creation of, systematic pandering to, and exploitation of vote banks, the year 1967—when the fourth general election took place—should serve as a ready counterpoint. It bears some striking resemblances to 1989. Prime minister Indira Gandhi—a creature of dynasty, modern of mind, ambitious, politically hobbled by power-brokers within her own party, and challenged by equally influential politicians outside—was struggling to find her political identity. There was widespread government corruption, mismanagement of agricultural policy in a drought year, and a Jan Sangh-led anti-cow slaughter agitation. But the conventional wisdom was that these "issues" were only of interest to an incestuous urban elite and would count for nothing in the minds of the still semi-mature and illiterate grassroots voter who would choose the comfort of his vote bank.

BHAWAN SINGH

The biggest surprise of the simultaneous national-state elections of 1967 was when, with uncanny precision, the Indian voter dumped not only politicians identified with corruption but also important state agriculture ministers belonging to the ruling party and reduced Mrs Gandhi's lead to a slim majority in Parliament.

Mrs Gandhi learned a crucial lesson from this. The people of this country did respond to issues. If she were to escape the captivity of the Syndicate, she would have to abandon the comfortable vote bank political patronage scenario and appeal over the heads of party bosses along ideological and issue-based lines in order to gain effective political purchase on the Indian voter. Even if it meant splitting the party. So in 1971, in the face of the Syndicate's betrayal, she was able to deflect the Indira hatao line with an effective and catchy slogan: Yeh kahten hain Indira hatao, main kahti hoon

CC-0. In Public Do

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

garibi hatao (they say remove Indira, I say remove poverty). It worked. And she later consolidated her position by nationalising banks and abolishing privy purses. She was able to create herself and her party in her own image—that of a leader with a will, with decisive ability.

And her opponents, minus unity, minus issues, continued on the defensive until 1977 when they were able to defeat her, not on the strengths of patronage and vote banks, but again, on an issue—punish Mrs Gandhi for diluting democracy during the Emergency. Then came 1980, another solid, issue-based year where the anti-Janata wave knew no caste or religious barriers. The people voted intelligently to throw out the rascals who had betrayed their confidence and electoral mandate. And Mrs Gandhi's slogan—"a government that works"—a brilliant dig at the Janata government that obviously didn't work, as well as her making the rising cost of onions a campaign issue, served to help the Janata-ites clown themselves into political oblivion. They were left with no defence.

According to current political punditry, there were no real issues in the 1984 election, that a pro-Hindu, anti-Sikh backlash brought Rajiv Gandhi into power. But has anybody really made a micro-analysis of this hypothesis? After all, 1984, by all counts, was supposed to be a bad year for Mrs Gandhi. Power-brokers had re-emerged, the nation was drifting into corruption and Mrs Gandhi's era of decisive leadership was, in a sense, coming to an end. And the Opposition, splintered though it was, stood to gain a dramatic advantage. The post-assassination pro-Congress wave, a sympathy wave, as it were, was also a vote for stability, perhaps half of it. The other half, by many interpretations, was indeed an anti-Congress vote which, ironically, also went to Rajiv because he appeared to represent action, change and cleanliness. And in a country in which politician had become a dirty word, a vote for a non-politician. By that count, the 1984 vote was also a public outcry against national drift and decay.

No matter what the campaign rhetoric and ad campaigns, unless they match reality on the ground, the Indian voter has repeatedly cast his lot against corruption, against the mismanagement of his mandate, for stability, and does not hesitate to take a chance on a new face.

In 1984 he had turned to a new face, to Rajiv Gandhi for deliverance. The electorate votes with discernment and wisdom but once it puts a leader into power, instead of treating him as the mere mortal he was when they gave him his vote, it begins treating him like a demi-god, a redeemer, a saviour. And when the leader cannot perform miracles, those who elected him can be ruthlessly unforgiving and the demi-god comes crashing from the pedestal.

INDIA moves ever so slowly. Even giants like Jawaharlal Nehru and Indira Gandhi found themselves reduced in stature before the Indian public at the end of their days, unable to reach their destined tryst. So it is no surprise that Rajiv, who bounced upon the political stage promising speedy movement out of the grime and lethargy that had enveloped the nation, found himself as he entered 1989, a defensive and shaky counter-puncher reeling under hammer-blows of accusations of a breach of faith, of promises unhonoured.

And a government on the defensive extracts a heavy price from the nation because, for one thing, it is deflected from its promise of providing an effective government. For another, in the process of defending itself, it uses every institution on which democracy is based—the bureaucracy, judiciary, Parliament, the press—and compromises their integrity. And a compromised system is unable to ensure that governments are made accountable within the system itself. Without accountability, governments rise above the law of the land. And democracy perishes.

Surely, this is the critical issue of the 1989 election. Will the highest court of this land—the bar of the Indian electorate—now judge Rajiv's Government as one that sought to escape accountability while it reigned? Will it pass a harsh verdict? Will the Indian voter ignore economic issues and concentrate instead, on issues of constitutional relevance? In 1977, even though the economy had done well during the Emergency, the voter chose to deal with a politically fundamental issue—whether the perpetrators of authoritarianism deserved to remain in office. In 1989, does he believe that vital national institutions which are supposed to serve as checks on government wrongdoing have been debased for political gain? Will he then vote to restore the majesty of these self-corrective mechanisms so essential to maintaining the equilibrium of the democracy of which he is the beneficiary? Will the voter also pass a verdict on the contents of four years of government-controlled radio and television broadcasts and stun the world by showing that the illiterate Indian peasant does not take kindly to being bombarded by puffery and bafflegab from the official media?

Or will he vote for stability? Even with the Opposition coming together, the voter has not forgotten his betrayal by the Janata government. And could he not just as well dismiss the new-found opposition unity as nothing more than a temporary truce between power-grabbing opportunists whose track record on communalism and corruption is as murky as that of the ruling party? Is he wise enough to vote in a strong opposition—as an opposition—and watch its performance in Parliament for the next five years before deciding that it is fit to be given a chance as a ruling party in the future? In that case, will the voter give Rajiv—notwithstanding his sullied record—a second chance, restore him to his office but not to his pedestal?

That question mark of a man can pull any surprise. Don't take him for granted.

—INDERJIT BADHWAR

Illiterate the voter may be, but he is politically mature; no head of cattle in a teeming herd that moos guffishly in support of politically-engineered waves of religious and xenophobic emotionalism.

Will this voter then judge Rajiv's Government as one that sought to escape accountability? Or will it vote for stability by dismissing the Opposition unity as only a temporary truce between opportunists?

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE CONGRESS(I)

PLAYING IT SAFE

The list of candidates shows that Rajiv Gandhi has realised he cannot win on his own but needs regional bosses.

THE more things appeared to be changing, the more they remained the same. This was the political message flashing last fortnight following the Government's dramatic announcement of an early general election. Until days before, the nation's political circuits had been abuzz with talk—some of it coming from the prime minister's closest circles—that Rajiv's decision to call an early poll was a calculated gamble in which he would wipe his party clean of troublesome regional bosses and tainted politicians, and go before the electorate with fresh faces in an attempt to recreate the dynamism of 1984. That he would even take the risk of splitting the party to salvage his image and independence.

Suddenly, as suddenly as the poll had been announced, nothing happened.

The gambler seemed to have folded his cards. The Mr Clean of 1984 had acquired a new title in 1989—Mr Safe. The return of people like Gundu Rao, Pranab Mukherji, Chenna Reddy, and R.K. Dhawan to the fold indicated a return of wheeler-dealers and musclemen to the ruling party, and the beginning of the end of the reformist process Rajiv had initiated in the winter of 1984. Even a cursory glance at the Congress(I) candidate list of 1989 reinforces the impression that the party—the system—has closed in on its president. Rajiv has to go along in order to get along.

The new message is status quo and compromise. To pre-empt major dissent on election eve, the party has renominated over 80 per cent of its sitting MPs. This, despite the fact that the intelligence agencies he had so keenly depended on for information on candidates, sent depressing reports on the chances of dozens of MPs. Selection criteria established by the party such as performance in Parliament during the past five years were thrown to the winds. And the party did not even dare touch some of its known dissidents. For example, former general secretary Nawal Kishore Sharma, openly critical of the party leadership, was renominated. Also, Rajiv went back on his word that most of the AICC(I) general secretaries and PCC(I) presidents would not contest. Many have been included in the fray. A.B.A. Ghani Khan Choudhury in West Bengal, Virendra Patil in Karnataka, Murli Deora in Bombay, and K.N. Singh in Uttar Pradesh. Perhaps what most grotesquely symbolises this phenomenon is the nomination of Abdul Rahman Antulay from Bombay and Kali Pandey from Bihar, both with besmirched reputation and dubious track records.

Key groups which were targeted by the Congress(I) as new vote banks—youth, for whom a constitutional amendment was passed lowering the voting age, and women—found themselves out in the cold. In the first list of 206 names, there were only 17 women, far short of Rajiv's promised 30 per cent representation. The youth did no better. And many Youth Congress(I) activists, who had camped in the capital for days urging party bosses for tickets, left bitterly disappointed.

The obvious advantage of the emerging electoral scenario within the ruling party has gone to what is known as the Syndicate—the regional party bosses whose power Rajiv had been trying to diminish. They have demonstrated that the party's prospects—and the future of the prime minister—depend on them.

Since the Hindi heartland will decide the fate of the ruler in South Block, the role likely to be played by Chief Minister N.D. Tiwari, Bihar PCC(I) chief Jagannath Mishra, former Madhya Pradesh chief minister Arjun Singh, and Haryana's former chief minister Bansi Lal has been the subject of intense debate. Each has his power base, and a record of serious differences with Rajiv over the way they have been shunted around by the Centre.

And now, on election eve, they were extracting their pound of flesh. Tiwari, for instance. In Nainital, a constituency he had nurtured for years, he wanted to field a close relative. And when the high command expressed its intention of putting up Defence Minister K.C. Pant from there, Tiwari put his foot down.

Pant, who said that the prime minister himself had earlier given him the go-ahead to contest from Nainital, hit back. On October 30, the last date for filing nominations, he called a press conference where, in a strongly worded statement, he criticised the "revival of state party bossism". Pant read out two letters he had written to Rajiv. One said: "You may have had to change your mind under pressure, but I am unable to accept the presumption behind the change. My father abolished zamindari from Uttar Pradesh. I am not

An avalanche of

Rajiv Gandhi

The
is stat empt n electio has ren cent of about to acce mindari in my he complained Rajiv, he wa minister's telep order. Pant re

diktat to cont
Delhi. Still, he partyman. Ask the Cabinet was

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SHARAD SAXENA

Rajiv Gandhi posters for the elections: salvaging an image that the Centre has always played a divide-and-rule game between him and Amarsinh Chaudhary.

As much as to catch the Opposition on the wrong foot, the device of calling an early election was aimed at letting the Syndicate bosses know that they ought to fall in line for Rajiv had his own organisation of bureaucrats and campaign managers who could run an election. Dissidents were being told, in effect, that if they left the party unhappy over not getting a ticket, they would not be accommodated by the Opposition which too would be scrambling for tickets.

That this strategy was nixed largely because of a groundswell of resentment from the party bosses is now obvious. Rajiv has perhaps realised that he cannot win on his own wave. But at least he tried, and in deadly earnest.

The real compulsions were somewhat different. For the last three months, Congress(I) leaders have been speculating about an early poll. The Bofors scandal, they believed, had been all but buried during the monsoon session of Parliament. Rajiv's advisers believed that the party could win big once they were able to coin an effective slogan. This, eventually, emerged with the Panchayati Raj bill: "Power to the People." The bill could have been introduced in the last session of Parliament. But it was delayed to time it closely with the elections. That an early election was in the air was being discussed as early as in June. Its timing and logistics were a closely held secret, discussed only within an inner circle—Dhawan, Satish Sharma, Arun Nanda, Mani Shankar Aiyar, and Sam Pitroda.

But by mid-October, the Prime Minister's Office (PMO) received three lists totalling about 4,000 prospective candidates. The lists were prepared after careful surveys by S.S. Ahluwalia, an MP from Bihar, who worked directly under the prime minister; by the IB, also reporting directly

> The new message is status quo. To pre-empt major dissent on election eve, the party has renominated 80 per cent of its sitting MPs.

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

about to accept anybody's political zamindari in my home district." Moreover, he complained, when he tried to contact Rajiv, he was told that the prime minister's telephone extension was out of order. Pant refused to accept the party diktat to contest from Unnao or New Delhi. Still, he insisted he was a staunch partyman. Asked whether his position in the Cabinet was not untenable, he replied: "I will have to decide about that."

The north's not the only problem area. In the west, Maharashtra Chief Minister Sharad Pawar and former Gujarat chief minister Madhavsinh Solanki can hardly be accused of conducting a lovefest with the Centre. Pawar, the high command has always feared, would abandon the party if it is defeated. Solanki, though professing to be a loyalist, has complained

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

An exclusive start to a new decade

SLIM-LINE DIARY 1990
Code: IT 102
Size: 82 mm × 177 mm
Price: Rs. 65

INDIA TODAY YEAR BOOK 1990
Code: IT 101
Size: 222 mm × 289 mm
Price: Rs. 250

POCKET DIARY 1990
Code: IT 103
Size: 79 mm × 127 mm
Price: Rs. 35

India Today Diaries and Address Book

The India Today Yearbook 1989 established distinctive standards which were widely appreciated by discriminating users, for meticulous attention to production and the quality of information offered. This year's edition, the India Today Yearbook 1990 upholds these fine standards and comes with a comprehensive range of exclusive pocket diaries and an address book produced with an eye to detail—a hallmark at India Today.

INDIA TODAY YEAR BOOK 1990

Much more than just a diary, this yearbook puts invaluable information on your desk where it belongs.

The information includes a statistical overview of the Indian economy, a political profile of India, a complete travel guide, city guides, International Time, and 16 pages of full colour maps.

The diary section is laid out with busy executives in mind. The easy-to-read, easy-to-write format includes: a week-at-a-glance, hourly slots for appointments, current and forward year planner, ample space for notes, address and phone number section.

Attractively produced with a burgundy red cover, gold leaf embossing, gilt-tipped pages and a handy ribbon marker, the India Today Yearbook 1990 belongs on your table.

DELUXE MINIATURE DIARIES.

To match the diary on your desk, there is now a slimline for your jacket or the briefcase and a pocket diary specially designed to be carried on your person. With these miniatures, you can now carry all the day-to-day information you need with you. Alongwith provision for space for your appointments, you get 35 pages of invaluable information like India at a glance, Conversion Tables, ISD and STD codes, International Times and a 3-year Calendar 1989-1991.

Make your selection now and send in the order with coupon

ORDER FORM—1990

Product Code	Product Details	Price (Rs.)	Qty. Ordered	Total Amount (Rs.)
IT 101	India Today Yearbook 1990	250
IT 102	India Today Slimline Diary	65
IT 103	India Today Pocket Diary	35
			Total (in Rs.)
	Gold Embossing of Initials @ Rs. 10 per Item facility available for diaries only.
			Total Amount of Order (Rs.)

Please give maximum of 3 initials per diary ordered, on a separate sheet.

I enclose my crossed cheque/DD for Rs. _____ (add Rs. 5/- for outstation cheques, i.e. outside Delhi) payable to 'Living Media India Ltd.' Please send the diaries and address books, as listed in the coupon, at the following address:

Name _____

Address _____

_____

_____

_____ Pin _____

Mail your order to:

Living Media India Ltd.
P.B. No. 29,
New Delhi-110001

FREE DELIVERY

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

to him; and by state intelligence units, whose lists were forwarded to Delhi by the chief ministers. Completing the final exercise would have taken at least a month. Speculation was that the election announcement would be made sometime in November, that the party would use whatever fate befell the Panchayati Raj bill as its key electoral plank: if it was passed, the slogan would be "We gave power to the people;" and if defeated, "The Opposition has deprived you of the power we were trying to give you."

But what hastened the pace and threw all timing out of gear was Bofors. Following the new expose in The Hindu, the scandal was beginning to stick like a magnet. Rajiv's aides argued that another expose, if it came close to linking him with the scandal, could give the party bosses and other disgruntled elements an excuse to defect. Besides, it would give more ammunition to the Opposition which was planning a march of all elected opposition leaders to Rashtrapati Bhawan to seek permission to launch a criminal case against the prime minister.

The PMO also received information that some senior MPs from the north had raised the slogan: Rajiv Hatao, Congress Bachao. It was no rebellion, but a hint of trouble ahead. One signal was Kamlapati Tripathi's attending a public meeting organised by Janata Dal leader Chandra Shekhar in Bihar to oppose the criminalisation of politics. Then there was a meeting in Delhi where he shared a platform with V.P. Singh.

A quick poll, Rajiv was told would:

▸ Reduce the period during which another Bofors revelation could do any

POLL ANNOUNCEMENT

Bid to Surprise

THE drama preceding the announcement of the early poll began unfolding on October 16. It was business as usual at 7, Race Course Road, the fortress-like office-residence of the prime minister. Rajiv Gandhi had just returned from his southern tour and was about to retire for the day. But before joining his family members, he had a word with his trusted aide, V. George who then directed all 58 members of the Union Council of Ministers to attend a meeting the next morning at 9 a.m.

SHARAD SAXENA

The party list being finalised

At dawn, Rajiv summoned all five members of the powerful Cabinet Committee on Political Affairs to a meeting at 8.30 a.m. Three of them—Home Minister Buta Singh, Defence Minister K.C. Pant and Foreign Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao—came promptly. The other two, Finance Minister S.B. Chavan and Human Resource Development Minister P. Shiv Shanker, were out of the country. The meeting, held in the teak-panelled small drawing-room of the Prime Minister's Office, was to the point. Rajiv announced: "I am ready for the polls." None questioned his decision. For the next 20 minutes, only the logistics and legal formalities for the poll were to be discussed so that the formal communication could be sent to the President and the Election Commission.

Then, the three ministers led by Rajiv walked into the next meeting hall where over 40 ministers had arrived. Said Rajiv: "We have decided to go to the polls." Again, if his ministers had any doubts, they did not display them. One of them, however, did raise the question of how the party could be ready for elections at such short notice. And here's where Rajiv really stunned them. He explained that the advertisement campaign, transport and all other ingredients of an election campaign were ready. The general secretaries would brief MPs on the details.

The whole idea was to create the image that the prime minister was a man in control, capable of making detailed logistical arrangements with the help of a few aides, without the party's involvement. He seemed to be saying, symbolically, that he did not need the party but rather that the party needed him, and that contrary to the impression that he had been bogged down by scandal and indecision, he was still a man of action. He had created, what it turns out to be, a tactical illusion to tell not only his party but the country, that he is still a leader.

POLL TALK

FORTRESS RAJIV

☐ Rajiv seems to be well fortified, if not politically, at least physically for this year's elections. A Special Protection Group (SPG) is sending Intelligence Bureau (IB) and SPG officers to places on the prime minister's campaign schedule for security liaison with state officials. Other SPG groups will organise anti-sabotage checks of aircraft, helicopters, VVIP cars, helipads and rostrums. In view of worsening threat, perceptions about security in high risk areas have been altered. Even the motorcade plan in the Blue Book—which provides guidelines for the protection of the prime minister—has been reworked.

The revised plan provides for a warning car, pilot car and media vehicle; prime minister's bullet proof car; escort I (SPG) and escort II (state police); spare car and ambulance; car for the governor/chief minister; car for state administration; party cars; and tail car (which prevents any vehicle from overtaking the motorcade).

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

WHEN DO YOU WISH YOUR COURIER WAS DHL?

WHEN

YOUR SWISS ASSOCIATE

IS MAD AT YOU

BECAUSE

HE JUST LOST A

MAJOR ENGINEERING CONTRACT

BECAUSE

HE COULDN'T MAKE

HIS PRESENTATION

BECAUSE

YOUR PROPOSAL

DIDN'T REACH YESTERDAY

BECAUSE

YOUR COURIER WASN'T

DHL.

RAKA:2767:89:B

THAT'S WHEN.

BECAUSE DHL HAS MORE OFFICES WORLDWIDE THAN ANY OTHER COURIER, YOU'RE IN SAFE HANDS ALL THE WAY.

DHL WORLDWIDE EXPRESS

DHL THE COURIER DIVISION OF AIRFREIGHT LIMITED

To contact us, please refer to your Telephone/Yellow Pages Directory.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

damage. And even if a new expose did appear, it could easily be dismissed as a political stunt during election time.

▶ Defectors from the party over the Bofors issue could then be painted as disgruntled Congressmen who had quit not over the scandal but because they could not get tickets.

▶ Give even less time for the still-feuding opposition to get its act together.

▶ Give him the upper hand in choosing candidates as well as allow him to dictate terms to regional bosses by not holding simultaneous elections. In other words, Rajiv would reward or punish his chief ministers in future assembly elections by judging how loyally they had worked for candidates of his choice during the parliamentary elections.

But no sooner did Rajiv make the dramatic announcement than things began to go haywire and he was forced to abandon his plan of dropping at least 30 per cent of the sitting candidates. He was able to change only about 50 names—the lowest in the Congress(I)'s recent history and a firm indication of the prime minister's helplessness. In the 1984 Lok Sabha elections and the subsequent as-

BACKROOM BOYS

Holding the Reins

THE mammoth Congress(I) election campaign has various layers and facets. If members of the party's parliamentary board had gruelling, non-stop sessions to select candidates, a small group, comprising mostly Rajiv Gandhi's personal friends, was busy directing the battle from behind the curtain last fortnight. Known in Congress(I) circles as 'backroom boys' they took control of the party's propaganda and logistics.

Visvajit Prithviraj Singh, a Doon School alumnus and Rajya Sabha member from Bombay, has taken charge as the central election coordinator, helping to despatch publicity material to the states. Soon after the elections were announced catching everyone by surprise, Singh was in action: he started contacting the PCC(I)s about their requirements.

Others roped in for the election effort are Arun Nanda, managing director of Rediffusion advertising agency, and Doon School friend Romi Chopra. Both have been entrusted with the task of giving a sharp edge to party publicity. They have decided the tone and theme of the Congress(I) poll propaganda. Mani Shankar Aiyer, also from Doon School, who resigned from the IFS immediately before the announcement of the polls, has chalked out the prime minister's tour programme for electioneering. And Surinderjit Singh Ahluwalia, a young Rajya Sabha member from Bihar, is in charge of the control room set up at the party headquarters for communicating with the state units. Thirty hotlines have been installed at a daily rent of Rs 4,500 each. He has also worked out the campaign programme of different Central ministers and state leaders. PCC(I)s are in constant touch, writing to him about the leaders they want for electioneering in their respective states. The odd senior person in this group is the reliable veteran Congress(I) Treasurer, Sitaram Kesari, who is in charge of distributing funds.

The resources at the disposal of these backroom managers are enormous. According to the Opposition, the central Congress leadership will be incurring an expense of over Rs 200 crore on the Parliamentary elections alone. This will be spent on a massive newspaper blitz and video war, 4,000 vehicles, over 1 crore multi-coloured posters, 1.5 lakh banners, and over 5,000 hoardings. Aerial support in the form of four planes and four helicopters has also been requisitioned.

The most crucial aspect, however, is being handled by the more earthy duo of R.K. Dhawan and Satish Sharma, perhaps suggesting the limitations of Rajiv's Doon School acquaintances. They are engaged in manoeuvres to entice an odd legislator from the Opposition camp or in engineering moves to embarrass political opponents. The latest entrant into this circle is Anand Sharma, former Youth Congress(I) president who, after being in the wilderness for long, has recently taken over as party spokesman. Briefed by Aiyer and some friendly newspaper editors, he turns up at the party headquarters for the evening press conference. Known for his vociferousness, Sharma has already acquired a distinction of his own. He has been dubbed as the "K.K. Tewary of the AICC(I)".

Prime Minister
RAJIV GANDHI

Resources
SITARAM KESARI

Co-ordinator
VISVAJIT SINGH

Political
R.K. DHAWAN SATISH SHARMA

Control Room
SURINDERJIT

Press
ANAND SHARMA

Travel
MANI SHANKAR

Publicity
ARUN NANDA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

When you buy VENUS water heaters you don't pay more.

You buy value for money.

You will value quality when you see it in VENUS water heaters.

Every part that goes into VENUS bears the stamp of quality because it is made in-house.

The exclusive safety features like fusible plug, pressure release and vacuum release valve are quality add-ons at no extra cost, built for trouble-free, long-haul service;

The catridge type element never comes into contact with water. So, no shock.

Country-wide dealer network

Manufactured and Marketed by :
STANDARD ELECTRIC APPLIANCES
H.O. & Factory :
Tuticorin, Tamil Nadu.
Branches at : Madras, Bangalore, Calcutta, Bombay, New Delhi.

In a rare call for service, you need not run after the dealer. Just one call is enough. VENUS may be the only water heater which bears ISI mark in 10 of its models.

Choose from a quality range of 10, 15, 25, 35, 50, 70 and 100 litres capacity in vertical, horizontal and dwarf models.

Look up to the leader in quality.

IS: 2082 ISI for 17 years

VENUS®
WATER HEATERS

Central Marketing Office :
S-2, Green Park Extension,
New Delhi 110 016.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

sembly elections, the prime minister and his advisers were able to change nearly 40 per cent. And throughout his tenure he wanted to change more. It was because he had tried to make changes at the state level that massive dissidence had broken out in Bihar, Rajasthan, Madhya Pradesh and Gujarat, turning into a near-revolt against the high command last year. The prime minister's fire-fighters—Buta Singh, M.L. Fotedar, and the late Bir Bahadur Singh—were unable to take control and Dhawan was brought in to cope with the problem.

Last fortnight, Rajiv found himself confronted with a similar problem. When he sprang his surprise on the state leaders by announcing the Lok Sabha election, he was expecting total support in the selection of candidates and conduct of the elections. This was an obviously naive assumption. Arjun Singh, Pawar, Solanki and Tiwari began immediately to lobby for simultaneous elections. They surmised that in a Lok Sabha poll, with a limited number of seats, their candidates would be left out thereby eroding their base of support. But if state elections were held simultaneously, the number of seats available to accommodate supporters would increase.

The strategy they chose was simple, but effective: refuse to recommend any candidates for the Lok Sabha election to the high command, and subsequently direct the fury of those denied nomination or re-nomination against the prime minister.

The first shot was fired by N.D. Tiwari who, in a late evening meeting with the prime minister, argued that a simultaneous poll would prove fatal for the Opposition because all its important leaders would be tied down to their states and not be available for national campaigning. He also argued that such a poll would bring out local issues thereby deflecting attention from issues such as Bofors. Tiwari flew back to Lucknow and summoned his cabinet to endorse his decision before the prime minister had a rethink. And he announced to the press that the state Government and not the Congress(I) party had chosen to call a simultaneous poll. He told INDIA TODAY: "We are all set to win but even if there was any chance of the Opposition winning, I would have still supported simultaneous elections. There could be nothing more democratic than this."

As uncertainty grew by the minute, the capital was deluged with ticket seekers and the followers of factional bosses. Delhi's state bhawans began to burst at their seams as Congressmen from all over the country arrived in their thousands demanding to see their state and Central leaders. For the first time in three years even the residence of Kamalapati Tripathi, which had worn a deserted look since his exclusion from active politics, wore a look of siege as crowds surged into the most private recesses of his home. Milling with the crowd was former Congress(I) general secretary N.C. Chaturvedi. "This is a very critical election for us," he whispered. "It's going to be a very tough fight."

In the west, like most others, Sharad

THE PRINT MEDIA CAMPAIGN

The sloganeering about Rajiv and his party being the saviours of the nation seems to have a tired appeal.

POLL TALK

STANDING ORDER

☐ When Rajiv went to file his nomination papers this year, the District Magistrate of Sultanpur, Subhash Kumar did not stand up to shake hands with the prime minister. Kumar was asked by Union Law Minister H.R. Bharadwaj not to repeat District Magistrate Pulok Chatterji's act of obeisance in 1984 when he stood up to receive Rajiv. Misuse of official machinery is the last allegation that the Congress(I) wants to hear.

LIP SLIP

☐ Once known as the loudest mouth south of the Vindhyas, Gundu Rao still has not lost his verbal flamboyance. Soon after his re-entry into the Congress(I), newsmen swooped on him with questions, designed to embarrass the man who had doubted Rajiv's credentials not so long ago. But Rao, hardly one to be caught napping, retorted immediately: "I was a supporter of Rajiv Gandhi when he had a clean image and I am a supporter when he does not have a clean image." Oops!

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

FENNER POWERFLEX

THE NO. 1 AUTO BELT. FOR A NUMBER OF REASONS.

1 ROBOTIC TECHNOLOGY

Powerflex Raw Edge Cogged Belt is the result of Robotic Technology. Ideal for any car, truck, tractor and all mopeds.

2 MADE BY THE NO. 1

Powerflex is from Fenner. The No. 1 in power transmission. Undisputed leader for 60 years.

3 LASTING VALUE FOR MONEY

Powerflex is a superior quality Cogged Belt designed and tested successfully for flawless performance. Minimum slippage for maximum fuel efficiency. And a life span close to 100,000 kms.

4 NO. 1 IN SALES

Powerflex is an original part in every new Maruti, Contessa, Premier 118 NE, Tata and Leyland truck and most of the technologically advanced mopeds. The international quality of Fenner Powerflex has made it India's first choice.

everest/589/453

POWERFLEX
RAW EDGE COGGED BELT
DON'T DRIVE WITHOUT IT

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Pawar was taken aback even as he was attending an early assembly session in Nagpur. He immediately tried to rush to Delhi. A Maharashtra Congress(I) MLA said: "Even the opposition leaders forgot about the business at hand, as many of us began worrying about how to get to Delhi double fast." In Gujarat, Chief Minister, Amarsinh Chaudhary admitted: "We were caught napping by the poll announcement. But, we are prepared for it." Said a UPCC(I) office-bearer: "If there were only Lok Sabha elections, the Opposition would have gone all out and exhausted all its financial resources to clinch the issue. They would have had to start from scratch for the Vidhan Sabha elections which would have helped us. Now they can blindly go all out as there is no need to hold back anything now."

But most chief ministers, fearing an erosion of their support, were adamant. Pawar and Virbhadra Singh of Himachal Pradesh began publicly supporting simultaneous polling. A day later, Shiv Charan Mathur of Rajasthan joined them. Seeing the tide building up, senior party bosses like Arjun Singh in Madhya Pradesh, Madhavsinh Solanki in Gujarat and Jagannath Mishra in Bihar also began demanding a simultaneous poll. This was unprecedented: senior Congressmen were publicly making a demand on a sensitive political issue without consulting Rajiv.

FOR the next four days there was total confusion in the party with all the chief ministers waiting for a final signal from Race Course Road where the parliamentary boards were meeting in strict secrecy for every state. Attended by the prime minister, the relevant chief minister and PCC(I) chief along with five MPs, the boards continued with the motion of taking up various lists and discussing possible candidates. The time that this process took—for example it took eight hours to clear 50 seats from Bihar and Delhi—showed that the prime minister's initial strategy had got bogged down.

The upshot is a Mexican stand-off between Rajiv and the party bosses. Rajiv's strategy has simply come unstuck. He ruled out simultaneous polls except in Uttar Pradesh, but accepted the renomination of just about every sitting candidate. This satisfied the party bosses—for more than 100 sitting MPs renominated owe allegiance to Tiwari, Arjun Singh, Pawar, Mishra and Solanki—but did not give Rajiv the clean slate of candidates he had in mind. As one high command official quipped: "The prime minister has virtually signed on the dotted line."

So the main plank of Rajiv and his party during this election is that they are the keepers of the nation's unity and integrity. Says party General Secretary K.N. Singh: "This general election will be a referendum on the issues of power to the people, stability and secularism."

However hardhitting Rajiv sounds in blasting the Opposition for defeating the Panchayati Raj and Nagarpalika bills, the Bofors pay-off charges are not going to disappear. Rajiv's think-tank has prepared a counter though it is far from convincing. Whenever there has been a prima facie case of corruption against any Congress(I) member, the party has never hesitated to take action, the prime minister is going to argue in about 300 public rallies. The instances of Antulay, Nilangekar and Arjun Singh will be cited. The press exposes on Bofors instead of pinning down any commission recipients have only made wild allegations, he is likely to say. This position, party strategists say, compares well with the fact that Andhra Pradesh Chief Minister N.T. Rama Rao has continued in office after having been indicted by the high court.

To a great extent the electoral battle this time will be fought on the video screen. When Delhi's Jain Studio refused to make films for the party (Dr J.K. Jain, owner of the studio is himself a likely BJP candidate) the party commissioned a couple of advertising agencies to make campaign films. The 10-odd films that the Congress(I) will use highlight the 'achievements' of Rajiv's five-year rule and "juxtapose the sense of enervation in the country at the time he took up the reins and the mood of confidence now", says a party general secretary. This general election is going to witness the most expensive campaign ever. Under a huge shamiana on the AICC(I) premises stand piled neatly packed multicoloured paper posters in different languages and banners. According to an informed source in the party, each Lok Sabha constituency will be given about one lakh posters and about 15,000 banners. The professional touch is evident in the language and rhyme in which the message is being conveyed. One banner reads: "Sthayee sarkar, majboot hai desh/ Sabhi ki pragati hamara udesh." (Stable government, strong nation/ every-

THE SYNDICATE

NAMAS BHOJANI

SHARAD PAWAR

BHAWAN SINGH

N.D. TIWARI

BHAWAN SINGH

JAGANNATH MISHRA

BHAWAN SINGH

ARJUN SINGH

The regional party bosses, each with a political base, have demonstrated that they can be ignored only at the party's peril.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

body's prosperity, our mission.)

A pamphlet containing Congress(I) slogans in Amethi testifies to the talents of a small-time versifier. Now being circulated in Delhi, it puts on its cover this slogan: "Rajiv Gandhi ka elan/ Sabko roti, sabko kapda, sabke liye makaan." (Rajiv Gandhi has pledged food, clothing and housing for all.) The Delhi-based Graffic Arts has designed the posters for the party. Every candidate will get six to seven vehicles—one for every assembly segment. For sorting out logistics problems, the party headquarters has been connected with each PCC(I) headquarters by hotline.

Pant at the press conference: open disgruntlement

ULTIMATELY, for all the rhetoric and razzle-dazzle, the unfolding campaign promises little that is new. What is new is what's on the other side of the fence—a level of opposition unity that few believed would be achieved. The sloganeering about Rajiv and his party being the saviours of a nation about to fall apart now seem to have a tired appeal. The advertisement campaign running in the print media appears needlessly hysterical. Will India survive a coalition government—demands one. The visual has two fighting cocks tearing into each other. Asks another: How far can a coalition of dramatically opposed ideologies take India? The visual has a rocking horse being driven in four different directions by V.P. Singh, Chandra Shekhar, Hegde, and N.T. Rama Rao. Carrying the canard to its lowest is the fact that Rama Rao is sketched to look like a virtual eunuch.

Notwithstanding the surging crowds of politicos in the capital, the mood in Congress(I) circles is far from upbeat. The crowds display anxiety and uncertainty, not the wild enthusiasm of 1984. A prominent Youth Congress(I) leader explains: "The prospect of facing one-on-one contests for the first time in their lives is admittedly frightening."

> One victim of the new assertiveness of state bosses was Pant, who was denied a ticket from Nainital as N.D. Tiwari opposed it.

According to the latest Intelligence Bureau estimates, the Congress(I) will win less than 180 seats in case of one-to-one contests. It was a bleak prospect and a senior civil servant was trying to ensure that the prime minister was not shown the latest estimate. AICC observers however predict the party will win over 350 seats. An advertising agency's estimate is about 300.

Whatever the final tally, for the present, the selection of candidates suggests that the party—notwithstanding the new slogans—has come full circle and decided to lean once more on its old-fashioned vote banks—the Brahmins, Harijans and Muslims. A situation similar to the one that prevailed before Mrs Gandhi's assassination, and doubly so because most of those renominated in 1989 are the ones selected in 1984 by party bosses like Arjun Singh, Gundu Rao, Jagannath Mishra, and N.D. Tiwari.

All this puts an onerous burden on Rajiv. Because of the continuing mutual distrust between him and the party bosses, he will have to campaign as never before if he is to carry his party with him. This time there are no special circumstances like the assassination of his mother. Rajiv is alone. On his own. He is the party's only national level campaigner and will be stretched beyond endurance to show that he is a winner. This is his last chance to emerge from the womb of the Congress(I) and break into a new world of Congress(R).

—PRABHU CHAWLA with BHASKAR ROY and bureau reports

POLL TALK

KRISHNA DARSHAN

☐ While Rajiv looms large on Doordarshan's national network, Union Minister of State for Information and Broadcasting, Krishna Kumar is busy hogging time on Trivandrum Doordarshan. With every function that Kumar attends finding tele-focus, it is increasingly being labelled Krishna Darshan. No wonder that Kumar is being swamped with invitations.

JEST IN DEFENCE

☐ Among the ticket-seekers outside the AICC(I) offices, an innovative joke is doing the rounds these days. It all started when an especially creative sycophant came up with an unusual defence of the Bofors pay-offs in a bid to impress. He flattered to deceive: "Even if Rajiv took the Rs 64-crore, so what. It works out to less than 75 paise per Indian for five years service. Is that too much to ask?" If the mystery of the smoking gun is ever solved—what was said in jest may well become Rajiv's only face-saving defence.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

YOUR VERDICT

ELECTION SPECIAL

CONTEST

The voice of a democracy, free and full-throated, is always its most impressive manifestation. And each time the world's largest democracy prepares to elect its government, the spectacle that unfurls is an awesome one.

This time around it will be doubly so: for the coming elections augur to be the most crucial in India's independent history. One in which personalities and issues will combine to make for a volatile mix. Political forces are polarising, the heat and dust of campaigning beginning to rise, and the excitement mounting.

Opinions are being voiced. Views being tossed around. In less than a month the largest democratic electorate in the world will deliver a verdict. Doubtless, a critically important and momentous one.

Will it conform to your verdict? Take part in the election special contest and find out.

INDIA
TODAY
Keeps you ahead

Hurry! Contest closes on November 20, 1989.

36 A

Avanti Kopp
Avanti Kopp Electricals Pvt Ltd
Hyderabad 500 482
Telex: 425-2039
SOCKET OUTLETS •
ELECTRONIC FAN REGULATORS
DIMMERMATIQUE

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

P R I Z E S

Courtesy

YOUR VERDICT
ELECTION SPECIAL CONTEST

Bumper Prize:

TAT AIR INDIA
round trip to New York for two by Business Class

BUSH colour TV & VCR

KINETIC HONDA DX Scooter

HERO PUCH 65 A PORSCHE DESIGN Super Deluxe Moped

Tribhovandas Bhimji Zaveri, Bombay Diamond model of Raymond Weil Watch

HOTLINE Cooking Range

ACN ELECTRONIC TYPEWRITERS FROM NASA, MAKE IN JAPAN INTERNATIONALLY THE BEST
Ranutrol Electronic Typewriter

Racold APPLIANCES LTD. Washing Machine

Godrej 300 litre refrigerator

Binatone Hi-Fi music system

SINGER MERRITT FASHION MAKER (Fantasy Motorised) Sewing Machine

PHILIPS DR 878 stereo Two-in-one

PLUS

2 MICROWIN Microwave Oven Cookers

5 Photophone HOT SHOT cameras

10 NEWSTRACK Annual subscriptions

1000 TODAY Address Books

Rules and Regulations

1. The contest is open to all resident Indian nationals.
2. This contest is called YOUR VERDICT in English and आपका फैसला in Hindi. Questions, their evaluation, the prizes and the rules to the contest are common to both.
3. Entries can only be sent on the official Entry Form contained in copies of INDIA TODAY English and Hindi dated Nov. 15, 1989. If you have any difficulty in obtaining the official Entry Form you may write in to Distribution Manager, Living Media India Ltd, 316, Competent House, F-14, Connaught Place, New Delhi-110001 enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.
4. Personal particulars are to be filled in ENGLISH only.
5. There is no Entry Fee. An individual can send in only one Entry Form.
6. Entries must be duly completed and mailed to YOUR VERDICT/आपका फ़ैसला, INDIA TODAY, PO BOX 29, NEW DELHI-110001 to reach on or before 20th Nov. 1989. Entries sent by Registered Post or hand delivered will not be accepted.
7. Entries shall be evaluated on a computer by means of a software package specially designed by Tata Consultancy Services. Evaluation of answers would be based on absolute percentage variance from the correct answer (which will be determined by the actual outcome of the Lok Sabha Elections) aggregated over all parts of all questions. All parts carry equal weight.
8. Incase two or more entries aggregate the same score the final winner shall be chosen on the basis of the tie-breaker which will be reviewed by a panel of judges whose decision will be final and binding.
9. Employees (and their relatives) of Living Media India Ltd; its Divisions, associate Companies, Ogilvy & Mather Pvt. Ltd, Milestones Advertising Consultants Pvt. Ltd; and Tata Consultancy Services are not eligible for participation in the contest.
10. Living Media India Ltd. is not responsible for postal delays, transit losses or mutilation of the Entry Form in transit. Living Media India Ltd. shall not entertain any correspondence except the official Entry Form in this regard.
11. The results of the contest will be published in INDIA TODAY by end December 1989/early January 1990. Winners will be informed separately by post.
12. All entries will be treated in confidence & will become the property of Living Media India Ltd. LMI & TCS shall endeavour to maintain the utmost confidentiality in regard to the Entry Forms & their processing on the computer. However LMI shall not be responsible for any claim of whatsoever nature in this regard.
13. Living Media India Ltd. reserves the right to terminate or extend the contest at any time, or to accept or reject any or all entries at their absolute discretion without assigning any reason.

Entry Form on the other side of this insert

36 B

that Kumar attends

Rajiv's only face-saving defence.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Mood Light Sonata by Dimmermatique

Endless light movements. Each a light touch away.

From bright to less bright.

From less bright to dim... to dimmer... to dimmer still...

Dimmermatique.

Always in perfect harmony with the mood.

A little switch (or is it a little bit of magique) that can control all the light points in a room. (Up to 500 watts.)

Dimmermatique.

For those who love to live life on a grand scale.

Tell me, is there anyone who doesn't!

In collaboration with Heinrich Kopp GmbH & Co K G West Germany

Avanti Kopp

Avanti Kopp Electricals Pvt Ltd
Kohinoor Amrutha Estates,
Punjagutta, Hyderabad 500 482.
Phone: 3 Telex: 425-2039

SWITCHES • SOCKET OUTLETS • ELECTRONIC FAN REGULATORS

DIMMERMATIQUE

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE OPPOSITION COCKY CONFIDENCE

With one-to-one contests against the Congress(I) probable in most constituencies, the Opposition is in an upbeat mood.

THE atmosphere, the faces, the vibes, were all familiar. So was the challenge. There was V.P. Singh, his chin resting in his palm, Hamlet-like. There was Devi Lal, ebullient as ever, reading out the riot act to anyone who began to sound even a bit troublesome. There was N.T. Rama Rao, hastily pulled out of the friendlier environs of the Brahmarishi Viswamitra sets, in the thick of an electoral battle that would decide his own future in his state besides that of the National Front which he leads. There was also M. Karunanidhi, draped in a maroon shawl, dark glasses et al, barely speaking or betraying emotion. Assam's Prafulla Kumar Mahanta smiled occasionally. On many occasions in the past, the leaders of these disparate opposition groups had gathered in similar huddles when faced with an electoral challenge from the Congress(I), only to flounder in disunity.

This time there was a difference, a new compulsion and a new mood. Suddenly, the gladiators of the Opposition—who routinely spend as much time fighting one another as they do fighting the Congress(I)—had been propelled into purposeful action. Rising above the cacophony of familiar claims and ambitions was a voice of reason they would ignore at their peril: this election was the Opposition's best chance in more than two decades except for 1977 after the Emergency. On top of it all, there was a realisation that if the Opposition failed to get its act together, it would never be forgiven by the people. "This is a historic opportunity to throw off the yoke of a corrupt and insensitive government," thundered an upbeat V.P. Singh as he set off to file his nomination from the Fatehpur constituency in Uttar Pradesh defying a bomb scare that delayed his Vayudoot flight by five hours. Now there wasn't even the talk of reviving the 'spirit of 1977'. "We have left that part far, far behind us," said V.P. Singh.

Despite many hurdles, near fist-fights, rounds of abuses and walk-outs, opposition leaders finally managed to forge some kind of workable unity on a national level. Unmindful of the fact that the 1977 bonhomie was nowhere in evidence, they agreed to give Rajiv a straight fight in at least 80 per cent of the constituencies. In fact, late last fortnight, indications were that the number of straight contests would cross the 450-mark.

That was a far cry from the shell-shocked state the Opposition had been in just a few days earlier as the prime minister's sudden announcement of elections sent it scurrying to battle stations. There was a feeling of having been caught unawares. A Janata Dal general secretary likened the predicament to getting caught naked in a dark room. "Everyone is fumbling for his clothes," he said.

But the Opposition was swift to regain its bearings. As the Congress(I) took its first measured, well-rehearsed step towards the polls, the Opposition juggernaut too began to creak and roll, albeit slowly. Seat adjustment talks with the BJP and left parties got underway. V.P. Singh asked Arun Nehru to play a familiar role—handle internal security—though in this case his brief was to keep peace and extinguish bushfires which the leaders know might erupt at any time within the Opposition.

And as he went about his assigned task, the pieces began to rapidly fall into place in a manner that surprised even the most strident opposition supporters. The first moves were made as the Janata Dal and the BJP made overtures to each other, setting in motion the process of seat adjustments. The top leadership of the BJP had made up its mind early enough that going to the polls without such an understanding would be self-destructive. The motions that the party went through in the initial stages of adjustment talks were more in the nature of thrust-and-parry, hoping to squeeze as much out of the Janata Dal as possible till the inevitable settlement was reached. The BJP knew that a washout in this election would mean its end as an electoral entity.

V.P. Singh filing nomination pape

THE SPIRIT

The election announcement has inspired the Opposition to a rare display of unity.

THE same thrust-and-parry tactics characterised the manoeuvres of the different factional leaders within the Janata Dal who, smelling victory, were disinclined to rock the boat at least till the elections. Within the party a truce of sorts had been achieved with Devi Lal

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Fatehpur after delay drama: upbeat mood

Chandra Shekhar and Arun Nehru, the Opposition's Kautilya who functioned as proxy for V.P. Singh, emerging as the core group deciding on the division of seats and nominations. Nehru worked as a fixer as well as a buffer. Armed with reams of data on the candidates and previous elections he put his past experience in distributing tickets to good use. At the same time he subtly managed to balance the various groups, making sure that no one got too many seats and that V.P. Singh's interests were not compromised.

The very momentum of the changing political situation and the swift response needed forced the formation of some kind of a command structure. Singh and Nehru met each night to take stock of the day. State leaders like Devi Lal and Hegde were given virtually a free hand in their states. In addition Biju Patnaik was given charge of Orissa, Chimanbhai Patel of Gujarat and V.C. Shukla of Madhya Pradesh. Bihar was left to Devi Lal loyalists Lallu Prasad Yadav and Sharad Yadav. Nehru handled Uttar Pradesh directly along with Ajit Singh and Mulayam Singh Yadav.

And while the attempts at accommodation within the party were kept up, the Janata Dal threesome continued to hold talks with the BJP's L.K. Advani and Atal Behari Vajpayee on the contentious but crucial question of seat adjustment. A workable truce with the BJP was of crucial importance as the party could take away 10-12 per cent of the opposition vote even if it was incapable of winning many seats on its own.

After the Janata Dal Minority Cell had torn apart the BJP's stand on the Ram Janmabhoomi, V.P. Singh had promised to take a tough line against the party. But once the bugle for the electoral battle was sounded, all such pious intentions were overtaken by compulsions of realpolitik.

The BJP, on its part, bent over backwards to accommodate the Janata Dal despite the annoyance of its workers among whom an incipient revolt was already evident. A bunch of angry BJP workers accosted Vajpayee at a party meeting and demanded a tough stand on Ayodhya, besides the restoration of the party's orthodox Hindu agenda. Retorted Vajpayee: "We have done it twice. Once in 1952, and we got two seats. Then in 1984 and again we got two seats. If you are so keen to get two seats this time as well, let's go ahead." Vajpayee's rebuff summed up the now-or-never mood among the top opposition leadership.

Once the BJP and the Janata Dal arrived at a settlement, the left too agreed to relent on the question of sharing seats with a party having truck with the BJP. And finally, wonder of wonders, Syed Shahabuddin, the bete noire of the BJP as well as large sections of the National Front leadership, agreed to contest on the Janata Dal symbol.

"The mood today," beamed the articulate Janata Dal parliamentarian and official spokesman, S. Jaipal Reddy, "is more upbeat than it was following the announcement of the elections in 1977."

A hiccup, however, came on the crucial question of the poll symbol which was yet to be sorted out. And it was here that the Janata Dal, the main component of the National Front, suffered a setback when the breakaway Janata Party—headed by Indubhai Patel and Subramanian Swamy—staked its claim to the original

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

WHEN YOU GROW UP WITH THE BEST YOU STAY WITH IT.

Lal Imli Dhariwal. Suitings that have remained classics through the years.

Yet, contemporary too! Keeping with to-day's fashion trends they offer you a range to choose from. Tweeds, Worsted, Blazer Material, Woollies, Blankets, Cosy Shawls, Knitting Yarn. And more.

Lal Imli Dhariwal. Always in style. Never out of fashion

THE ORIGINAL DRESS CIRCLE!

Lal Imli Dhariwal

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

SHTI/BIC/189

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

chakra-haldhar symbol. Chief Election Commissioner R.V.S. Peri Sastri froze the symbol much to the Janata Dal's discomfiture.

That was obviously Swamy's objective and he claimed jubilantly that he had won the case thanks to "my wife's legal brains and my gab". But Janata Dal leaders soon recovered from the disappointment. They even managed to find a silver lining in the adverse ruling. Their new symbol, the wheel, they said, symbolises change. Some even drew parallels with Lord Krishna's sudarshan chakra.

Once the symbol issue was sorted out to its satisfaction, the Janata Dal got down to brasstacks, deciding the list of candidates and working out a joint strategy with other parties to convert their main advantages into a victorious campaign. And as the count-down to the day of reckoning continued, the broad contours of the Opposition gameplan were visible.

THE STRATEGY

Convince people that Rajiv personifies Congress(I)'s corruption and incompetence.

THE key point of the Opposition strategy was: Don't lose sight of your target, Rajiv Gandhi. The National Front plans to keep its campaign pointed at Rajiv as its leaders believe that with their diverse interests, they cannot afford to let the campaign derail on local issues or the esoterica of manifestos. Simultaneous polls in the assemblies increase the possibility of peripheral issues leading to internal discord.

The spearhead of the Opposition offensive is thus the campaign against Rajiv's 'record of corruption'. There is widespread anticipation in opposition circles that some more revelations on the Bofors deal will come out before the elections, strengthening their case. It is no surprise that the most catchy Opposition slogans deal with corruption and Bofors: "Rajiv bhai, Rajiv bhai, tope dalalee kisne khayee" (Brother Rajiv, please tell us who swallowed the commission in the gun deal). There is another, a particularly vicious one, already sweeping eastern Uttar Pradesh based on mangal

SHARAD SEXENA

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

Devi Lal; (below) BJP leaders at meeting: strategic alliance

POLL TALK

MINISTERS' FATE

☐ Soon after simultaneous polls were announced, hordes of ticket aspirants began chasing ministers. The seekers were in for a surprise when a harried Uttar Pradesh minister frankly admitted: "First, let me ensure that I will be getting a ticket then I will start working for your tickets." Most others continued to accept applications—embarrassed to say that their own political futures were also a question mark.

AMETHI MUSIC

☐ The slogan-seekers of Amethi began with: "Amethi ka dankaa, bitia Priyanka." And then they coined: "Amethi ka bigul, beta Rahul." Since dankaa means 'drum' and bigul translates to 'bandpipe', a journalist commented: "They are hell bent on turning the Rajiv family into a band." Added a political scribe: "Ye Rajiv ka band bajaayenge" (These guys are going to blow Rajiv's chances).

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

bhawan amangalhari, the signature line of the popular teleserial Ramayan: "Mangal bhawan amangalhari, desh ka maal gaya sasuraree." (The country's wealth has gone to the parents-in-law).

The other facet of the same strategy is the fielding of relatively clean candidates against Congress(I) stalwarts who face corruption charges. Examples: Rajmohan Gandhi against Rajiv and former bureaucrat Kirpa Ram Punia against Buta Singh.

Corruption, government incompetence, price rise, Punjab and Sri Lanka—the Opposition's electoral quiver is chock-a-block with venomous arrows to shoot at the Congress(I)'s sensitive underbelly—the prime minister. Even on communalism, the National Front will try to go on the offensive, accusing the Rajiv Gandhi Government of deliberately fomenting trouble to foul the atmosphere and then reap electoral benefits. The Janata Dal's surprise adjustment with Syed Shahabuddin is also expected to win it some Muslim votes.

The National Front slogans will be based on three themes: swadeshi (native), swabhimaan (self-respect),

JAIN STUDIOS

Video Vision

THE bright yellow blossoms lend the landscape a romantic look. A song breaks out in the background, and suddenly the camera zooms in on a lonely figure strolling wistfully through the bed of flowers, plucking one, caressing a few.

No, it isn't Rekha wading through a sea of tulips. It is Haryana strongman Devi Lal, in a field of Haryanavi sarson (mustard). And the film is a political video film produced by Jain Studios in New Delhi. It's campaign time and Devi Lal is just one of the galaxy of opposition leaders flocking to the studio to shoot films with themselves in the lead role.

Films on opposition leaders: self-serving exercise

The list comprises at least a score of leaders—Ajit Singh, N.T. Rama Rao, Bal Thackeray to name a few. And the studio is working round the clock, with most staffers sleeping on the premises. Devi Lal, who says he owes much of his earlier success to electronic campaigning, has ordered 10 films, showing him as a farmer, administrator and politician.

The locales and the music vary with the hero. In the film on Devi Lal, the accompanying beat is Haryanavi: the rollicking ragini. The words change as he flits from the mustard field, to election meetings and his birthday rally. Sample:

Devi Lal aake jhat
kaadh dega saarey watt gaad dega latth Haryana khushhal ho.

Roughly, it translates: "The moment Devi Lal comes in, he will straighten all problems, emphatically stick his lathi in the ground and ensure Haryana's prosperity." For the balladeers Devi Lal is a yugpurush (epochal leader).

If Devi Lal relishes being called yugpurush, his uneasy political partner Ajit Singh prefers the title of lauhpurush (iron man). All fancies are catered to by the studios—for a price its owners decline to discuss. Ajit Singh prefers a squat, bushy crop to Devi Lal's mustard. And unlike Devi Lal, he strikes up a vigorous pace, a la Mahatma Gandhi at Dandi, followed by a gaggle of supporters, their gamchas swaying in the breeze. The lyrics are meant to stir voters' hearts:

Krishakon ke neta Ajit Singh
Patjhad mein phool khilayenge
Toofanon ka ab kya kehna
Woh aayenge aur jayenge

(Ajit Singh, leader of the farmers will make the blossoms bloom in fall, who is daunted by the upheavals, they will come and they will go).

N.T. Rama Rao has no time for rustic folk. His tribute to himself begins with a waltz by young girls to the tune of the Carpenters' Sing, Sing a Song. For Shiv Sena's Bal Thackeray, the studio came up with a mosaical combination of a royal Bengal tiger stalking the jungle, a statue of Shivaji and Thackeray's rather benign visage. But the film's message is anything but benign. Canned footage of explosions, mushroom clouds and mutilated bodies recur, interspersed with shots of the Red Fort and flames reaching out menacingly for the tricolour.

Others are waiting in the queue. Last fortnight, Subramanian Swamy was overseeing the editing of the film on him and H.D. Deve Gowda. Chandra Shekhar left the Janata Dal's Parliamentary Board meeting for 40 minutes to face the cameras. But the studio is secretive about a bunch of films it is making for the BJP, to which its owner, Dr J.K. Jain, owes allegiance.

The studio, however, has never been partisan in its approach. Earlier this year, it organised the Congress(I)'s video campaign in Tamil Nadu to the chagrin of BJP diehards. But Jain, who lives the avatars of doctor, magazine (Surya) owner and a television studio entrepreneur with aplomb, says: "When I take out a patient's gall bladder I don't care whether he is a Hindu or a Muslim, from the Congress(I) or the BJP. Politics has nothing to do with business or profession." The politicians seem to feel the same. They're rushing to the studio, drawn perhaps by the claim in the studio's own commercial: "Our films attract more people than the Pied Piper of Hamlyn."

—SHEKHAR GUPTA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

SONY

New from Sony... VHS video decks

Quality and performance from the leader in audio and video

SLV-X10/X10ME

Sony. the video expert, presents the X10. VHS video with world-famous Sony quality. The quality that makes Sony the choice of professionals around the globe. Plus the convenience of features such as the new Super Access Mechanism. To give you the picture on-screen in less than a second. Instead of the long wait with conventional VHS video decks. So now, there s really only one word you need to know to get the best in VHS video. And that word is... Sony.

● HQ ● AutoVolt ● 3ch-4ch ● Compatible with locally produced CTV ● 2 System (PAL/SECAM)

VHS
PAL

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Presenting Symphony bedsheets.

Inspired by the classic designs of Italy.

Proof that beds aren't just for sleeping.

For those who believe that beds are only meant for zzzing, Symphony also has a range of tranquil Japanese and traditional Indian designs.

Why Italians are such passionate lovers.

All fadeproof, shrink-resistant and yes, wrinkle-free.

Bring a little bit of Italy into your bedroom today.

But don't say we didn't warn you.

JIYAJEE

SYMPHONY

INTERNATIONAL

FLORAL

BEDSHEETS

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

There's so much to see! Khajuraho, with its exquisite temples— as if living, breathing beauty had magically been frozen into stone.

In Gwalior the massive fort and battle scarred ramparts brought visions of booming cannons and clashing swords vividly alive.

And you must go to Mandu — the 'City of Joy.' The beautiful mahals seem to echo with the love songs of Roopmati and Baz Bahadur. We also saw Hoshang Shah's tomb, said to be the inspiration for the Taj.

Oh, d'you remember those Jataka Tales we read as kids? Well, they're all depicted on the gates of the Stupa at Sanchi, and it is so quiet that you can almost hear the silence.

And of course, we went boating by moonlight at the Marble Rocks, near Jabalpur. Pearly cliffs and the gentle splash of oars — wish we'd gone there for our honeymoon!

The biggest surprise was finding a hill station in Madhya Pradesh. Pachmarhi is just the place for picnics and lazing.

But Ramesh was itching to go tiger watching, so off we went on a safari—to Kanha, Bandhavgarh and Shivpuri. Funnily, our excitement hungry hero chickened out when it came to tiger tracking, so we watched chinkara, nilgai and chital instead.

While we were in Bhopal to see the Bharat Bhavan, Mum and Dad surprised us with a call—and promptly packed us off on a pilgrimage to Ujjain, Omkareshwar and Maheshwar.

What with all that to see and do our vacation just flew past! All too soon it was time to leave and so much we hadn't seen! The medieval city of Orchha, and the rock paintings at Bhimbetka... Amarkantak, and the legendary Chitrakoot!

Getting there? There are many well organised tours... Transport? You can choose from coaches, cars or jeeps. And there are log huts and tourist villages to stay in. You'll go next holidays? Great! Maybe we could all go together..."

Come to Madhya Pradesh... It's surprising a lot of people like you.

For more information and instant computerised bookings, get in touch with Madhya Pradesh State Tourism Development Corpn. Ltd. NEW DELHI : 204-205 IInd Floor, Hotel Kanishka Shopping Plaza, 19, Ashok Road, New Delhi-110 001. Tel. : 3321187, 3324422 (Ext. 2353). Textel : 011-3327264. BOMBAY : 74, World Trade Centre, Cuffe Parade, Colaba, Bombay-400 005. Tel. : 214860, 219191 (Ext. 299). Textel : 022-217603. CALCUTTA : 'Chitrakoot' Room No 7, 6th Floor, 230A, A.J.C.Bose Road, Calcutta- 700 020. Tel. : 448543. Textel : 033-448543. BHOPAL : 'Gangotri', T.T. Nagar, Bhopal-462 003. Tel. : 66583, 66342, 64388. Telex : 0705-275 TOUR-IN. Textel : 075-01629.

MILESTONE SNVP

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

swachchta (cleanliness). The stress will be on personalities with a desi outlook and a clean public image. Besides, the National Front will attack the Jawahar Rozgar Yojana and Panchayati Raj moves. Says Surendra Mohan, chairman of the Janata Dal's manifesto committee: "If a Panchayati Raj plan is accompanied by a 248-page book of instructions, it certainly is not power to the people. We will expose that." How vicious the campaign is going to be is evident from the list of eight slogans officially released by the BJP to its cadres. These include: "Khoon kharaba vishwasghaat; Rajiv tumhari yeh saugaat" (Bloodshed and betrayal, this is your gift to the nation, Rajiv).

Opposition strategists are also only too aware of their greatest problem: the track record of disunity and confusion that made Mrs Gandhi label them with that immortal expression: khichdi. Now the leaders are trying desperately to grow out of that image. Says V.P. Singh: "Since 1984, only the Opposition has given stable state governments like Haryana, West Bengal, Andhra Pradesh, Kerala and Karnataka."

But the diversity of the leadership is also an advantage. Unlike the Congress(I), the Opposition is not dependent on a single star campaigner. It has, in fact, a star or two for each state or region. So while Devi Lal will lead the campaign in Haryana, Ajit Singh will be the spearhead in western Uttar Pradesh. Biju Patnaik is the obvious point-man for Orissa while in Rajasthan, the BJP's Bhairon Singh Shekhawat hardly needs any outside help. Similarly the regional groups and satraps, Karunanidhi, Rama Rao, the Akalis and the left will take care of their respective regions of influence. This will leave V.P. Singh with a relatively flexible campaign schedule.

Contrasted with the Congress(I)'s total dependence on Rajiv this actually gives the Opposition a healthy advantage. It is in this perspective that Rajiv's supposed stratagem in ordering simultaneous elections to the Uttar Pradesh Assembly actually came as a blessing to the Opposition. Rajiv had hoped that it would bog down the opposition campaigners. On the contrary, with seat adjustments working out quite well, it is Rajiv who will be tied down in Uttar Pradesh, a state his party cannot afford to lose. The Opposition would have been in some trouble if elections had been ordered, instead, in Rajasthan or Gujarat where seat adjustments would have been more difficult.

But the Opposition is still on the defensive on the question of its own leadership. There is obvious advantage in projecting a candidate for prime minister. In a loosely structured conglomeration of leaders with conflicting ambitions, however, doing this is well nigh impossible. So National Front Coordinator P. Upendra says: "Why should we project a personality? This is not a presidential election." Argues Ajit Singh somewhat hypocritically: "We are hitting out against dynastic rule."

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

Ticket-seekers at Janata Dal office: smelling victory

THE PROBLEMS

Infighting, mistrust, clash of ambitions and lack of money dog a determined pursuit.

SELF-RIGHTEOUSNESS apart, in the course of a fortnight of frenetic developments, there were many occasions when opposition leaders conformed to their tradition of behaving like crabs in a basket, each pulling the other down. The tone was set the morning following the poll announcement. At the National Front office, Arif Mohammad Khan lashed out at V.P. Singh for meeting Imam Abdullah Bukhari of Delhi's Jama Masjid and discussing seat adjustments with Shahabuddin. Khan

POLL TALK

WINNING FORMULA

A former Bihar Congress(I) chief minister has spelt out his gameplan: "For successfully fighting the general elections, three persons must work in tandem—the PM, CM and DM (the prime minister, chief minister and district magistrate)." And, he added happily: "All three are working just as they should for the Congress(I)."

TICKET TRAUMA

☐ For almost a week there were no ministers in Bhopal. Most assumed they had made a bee-line to Delhi for tickets. But the Madhya Pradesh ministers were in fact earnestly trying to convince the central leaders they would never win the parliamentary contests if they were nominated. The reason wasn't political eccentricity but the logic of privilege: they didn't want to lose their well-cushioned ministerial jobs in the state.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The stage is set
The nation is ready
To carry the light of hope across the land

Kindle the flame of brotherhood through the spirit of sport

JAWAHAR JYOTI

BHAVISHYA KI JYOT

Countrywide Torch Relay October 2 to November 14, 1989

The flame of Nehru's ideals burns today

The 'Jawahar Jyoti', a grand finale to the Nehru Centenary Celebrations, embodies the spirit of national integration and Jawaharlal Nehru's ideals of united endeavour, courage and perseverance for a better tomorrow.

The light of hope across the land

The Torch Relay consists of four torches which will start from four corners of India and pass through various cities and towns enroute to New Delhi. The Relay begins from Kanyakumari on October 2 (Gandhiji's Birth Anniversary), from Panjim on October 19, from Calcutta on October 22 and from Srinagar on October 29. The torches will be carried by eminent athletes.

Organised by AAFI, IOA and Implementation Committee, Nehru Centenary Celebrations

On the tracks of friendship: The AT&F Meet

The four torches will meet in New Delhi on November 14, Pandit Nehru's 100th Birth Anniversary, to light the flame of the Asian Track & Field Meet, being held for the first time in India. This is the biggest athletic event in Asia this year. For the sponsors, the ITC Group of Companies, this will be yet another opportunity for promoting sporting excellence.

Benevolent Fund for Sportsmen

During the relay, contributions will be sought to help those veteran sportsmen who have devoted their life to sport and who need help for their future.

Sponsored by

- Agri-Businesses Division
- Welcomgroup
- Bhadrachalam Paperboards Limited
- Tribeni Tissues Limited

ITC GROUP

New horizons. New hopes.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

burst out: "How dare you run me down before someone who is not even a member of the party. If you want to field him (Bukhari) against me, go ahead and campaign for him as well. I am not in politics because of you." It took party elders some time and effort to calm Khan down, but the damage was done as the argument took place within earshot of several reporters.

Chandra Shekhar was playing his own games, and the alliance with the BJP gave him just the opportunity he needed. "The BJP has become god today and we are responsible for giving them such an aura. Today, we have to go to them with a begging bowl," he complained. And his man, the Janata Dal's Delhi chief, Viresh Pratap Choudhuri, released an unauthorised list of party candidates from city constituencies, including BJP strongholds. But Chandra Shekhar was outsmarted by Devi Lal. Even while indulging in slanging matches with BJP leaders, Devi Lal lobbied vigorously for the alliance. So did Arun Nehru.

Fights routinely broke out each time the Janata Dal Parliamentary Board met. There were arguments on ticket distribution in each state.

During the stormy session on Bihar, Ram Bilas Paswan ended up crying because he was being denied his Hazipur seat. Paswan has his name listed in the Guinness Book of World Records for winning an election with the largest margin in 1977. His tears finally carried the day for him. But that is certainly not the way the Janata Dal would have liked to send its men into electoral battle.

Later, when Orissa—one of the first states taken up—was discussed, Biju Patnaik and Chandra Shekhar had a slanging match over the nomination of Rabi Ray for the Kendrapara seat.

As sparks flew, Chandra Shekhar got angry enough to hold up his chappal and ask Patnaik to shut up or else.... Ray, a Chandra Shekhar loyalist, had staged a walk-out when Patnaik protested his nomination. He was finally brought back, red-faced, into the conference room by Devi Lal. The fights underline a vital fact: the pre-election compulsions may have forced the stalwarts to bury their differences outwardly, but the subterranean tensions remain and could rock the Opposition later.

Lack of resources was yet another problem, and between the tight election schedules and V.P. Singh's stubbornness, very little could be done to solve it. "We have no money. Not to buy air tickets. Not even to buy a typewriter for our office," says Jaipal Reddy. Party leaders said there was no dearth of industrialists wanting to come forward with money. But the least they expected was that V.P. Singh would receive them personally which he absolutely declined to do. "Tell me, which businessman will give us money if V.P. will not even let him come and salaam him," asked an exasperated Janata Dal man.

Even the resourceful party Treasurer, Kamal Morarka, threw up his hands. Commenting on the financial health of his party he said: "If you ask me about Gannon-Dunkerley (his company), its financial health is good. My party's political health is quite good." Centralised fund collection is out, he maintained. But he shared V.P. Singh's optimism that small, voluntary donations would bring in enough to finance the election campaign.

It is a curious paradox. While V.P.

BHAWAN SINGH

V.P. Singh

Namboodiripad

BHAWAN SINGH

Chandra Shekhar

Illustration by B.K. SHARMA

If the Opposition wins there could be an intense power struggle between four aspirants with the BJP and the left deciding from the sidelines whom to back.

BHAWAN SINGH

Devi Lal

Advani

N.T. Rama Rao

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Singh and his key men have no money, factional Janata Dal leaders like Devi Lal, Hegde, Chandra Shekhar, Ajit Singh and Arun Nehru hold sizeable kitties from which they dispense funds to their own loyalists.

THE END-GAME

Use V.P. Singh to win, and once home, fight to get a bigger share in the power pie.

MONEY is crucial to the end-game scenario that each one of the players is drawing. Currently their concern is to ensure the victory of as many personal loyalists as possible. The purpose of the bitter lobbying for nominations by Devi Lal, Ajit Singh and Chandra Shekhar was to collect sufficient factional strength to influence the final power struggle. And V.P. Singh knows this. His supporters say that if the faction leaders expect to turn the tables on him, they are misguided. "How many who were given tickets by Arun Nehru remained loyal to him?" they ask.

On present reckoning, V.P. Singh is sitting pretty, the most widely accepted national figure in the Opposition. Devi Lal is believed to have confided to some Janata Dal leaders that he does not want to be the king, but wouldn't mind being kingmaker. "I may not be so well-educated but I have the common sense of the farmer. If I became prime minister what will I go and say at the non-aligned nations' summit," he told a partyman.

As the fortnight ended to make way for one of the most bitterly fought elections ever, the Opposition's best case scenario was this: the Janata Dal contests about 260 seats, the BJP 140, the Telugu Desam 32, the DMK 30 and the left parties 90. With much of the BJP's presence in the left bastions of Kerala and West Bengal merely for form's sake this would mean one-to-one contests in nearly 450 constituencies. Of these, the National Front will contest around 325 leaving it no option finally other than choosing either the BJP or the left as a partner in power.

All these calculations, however, become irrelevant if the Opposition loses. But last fortnight, it was in a cockily confident mood. Madhu Dandavate summed it all up: "If seat adjustment is good, we will win. Even if it isn't, this election will change the character of the Parliament. The days of brute majorities are over. Either way we'll win."

—SHEKHAR GUPTA with PANKAJ PACHAURI and HARINDER BAWEJA

POLL TALK

Reading the Stars

INDIAN politicians have always patronised astrologers, particularly those making electoral predictions. INDIA TODAY talked to some prominent ones in New Delhi, Madras and Bombay.

J.N. Sharma, 48, Delhi: He has a big following in the US—where he often appears on TV—and Europe. Has made several correct predictions: downfall of the Shah of Iran, Watergate scandal, the assassination bid on Ronald Reagan, Mrs Gandhi's killing. Many Delhi politicians are his clients. He is the only astrologer in the Cambridge University Press' 1982 list of men of achievement.

"Rajiv's Jupiter is very strong during the election period. He will return but with 275-280 seats. Many prominent Congressmen will lose. Communalism is here to stay. There will be no widespread violence during these elections."

Jagjit Uppal, 44, Bombay: The suave Air Force officer-turned-resident astrologer at Bombay's Taj Mahal Hotel writes several astrology columns. In 1979, he predicted that Mrs Gandhi would not be succeeded by Sanjay but by someone young and new to politics. He also predicted G.M. Shah's short reign in Jammu and Kashmir, and Farooq Abdullah's succession as chief minister.

"Rajiv will win, and the Congress(I) will return to power at the Centre and in Maharashtra. N.T. Rama Rao will win in his state, but I have doubts about the Telugu Desam's success. V.P. Singh will win from his constituency."

Vishwanath Sharma, 32, New Delhi: From a family of astrologers, he is a Sanskrit newsreader at AIR. This is the first time he's making political predictions though politicians are his clients.

"According to the natal chart of the Congress(I), the sun and Saturn are in Sagittarius—a disastrous combination. The aspect of Saturn on the 10th house is also not good. Therefore the Congress(I) will not win. A coalition government is likely but tensions will remain."

R. Narayanan, 58, Madras: An employee of the Central Marine Fisheries Research Institute. His clients include big Madras business houses and Sri Lankan President R. Premadasa. He'd predicted Mrs Gandhi's return to power, MGR's death, Karunanidhi's victory and the US earthquake.

"Congress will win 276 to 310 seats. In Tamil Nadu, the AIADMK-Congress(I) alliance will bag 26 to 28 of the 39 seats. Rajiv will have a big win in Amethi."

Lachhman Das Madan, 67, Delhi: An ex-government servant from a family of astrologers. In 1969, he wrote a book which predicted Emergency and Morarji Desai's becoming prime minister. He writes columns in The Times of India, Navbharat Times and London's Indian Mail.

"It is the destiny of V.P. Singh to become prime minister and nobody can change that. Rajiv will suffer a set-back in his 46th year and lose the prime ministership. Despite several advantages and the time being propitious for the Congress Party, Singh's destiny is larger. NTR will back Singh and they will work together like Ram and Lakshman."

R. Santhanam, 45, New Delhi: He operates from Delhi's Maurya Sheraton Hotel and has accurately predicted the return of R.K. Dhawan, V.P. Singh's resignation from the Congress(I), the breaking of the Bofors scandal. Editor of the Times of Astrology, he has written many books on the subject.

"Rajiv will get 315-320 seats. No new scandal will surface till the polls. The period between July to November '90 is not good for Rajiv. V.P. Singh will win from wherever he stands. Ramakrishna Hegde will find it tough going in Karnataka. NTR's stars are bright."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The Statesman who saw the Nation in a handful of grains

Jawaharlal Nehru.

The Statesman who expressed great concern for agriculture and the farmer, who felt that the Nation's wealth lies predominantly in Agriculture.

United India contributes to the vision of this great statesman through its Rural Insurance Policies.

Policies that offer a comprehensive protection From Pumpsets to Tractors Bullock carts to Houses. Poultry. Cattle. Ducks. And Personal Accidents.

Protection, for everyone and everything.

United India — Insuring your future

UNITED INDIA

UNITED INDIA INSURANCE CO. LTD.

(Subsidiary of General Insurance Corporation of India)
24, Whites Road, Madras - 600 014

MAA COMMUNICATIONS UI 89127

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

How the legendary Toyota keeps its production in top gear...

Nippon Denro Ispat Introduces To In Hi-
For Automobile Bo An

India's automotive manufacturers have too long been skidding about because of the difficulty in procuring world-class cold-rolled steel sheets.

They can now get into top gear – Nippon Denro Ispat Ltd. offers, for the first time in India, cold-rolled steel to match international standards.

Cold-rolled steel that's manufactured at a fully computerised plant that uses technology and equipment from three Japanese m in the field: the 6-high single-stand high crown control rev combination cold-rolling and skin pass mill from Hitachi; maintenance and operation know-how from Taiyo Steel; an continuous pickling and electrolytic cleaning line from Nippo Denro Mfg. Company.

All of which translates into world-class cold-rolled steel.

Available in a w conforming to I Through a cour supply.

To help the Ind pot-holes – at le Just like their le

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Central Marketing Office: 'GUMAN' 6th Floor, 77 Residency Road, Sadar, Nagpur – 440 001.Phone: 25742, 25750. Telex: 0715-426 NDIL IN. 3194. Cable: 'N

haj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri and how MARUTI, PREMIER, HM & MAHINDRA can now race ahead.

To Inc Hi-Performance Cold-Rolled Steel e Bots And Components.

Available in a wide range of gauges, lengths, widths and grades, conforming to IS 513, DIN 1623, JIS G3141, etc.
Through a countrywide distribution network that assures a ready supply.
To help the Indian automotive industry avoid driving into supply pot-holes – at least for cold-rolled steel.
Fast like their legendary Japanese counterparts.

ISPAT

NIPPON DENRO ISPAT LTD.
Park Plaza (1st Floor), 71, Park Street, Calcutta – 700016
-3194. Cable: 'NIPPON'

THE NEW BREED OF STEEL

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

REGIONAL PARTIES GROWING CLOUT

The Telugu Desam, DMK and Akali Dal can tilt the balance in a close election

THE three are vastly different political parties—their agendas vary, their concerns are often worlds apart, and their leaders' styles are a study in contrast. Yet the Telugu Desam, the DMK and the Akali Dal have an overriding similarity: the appeal of all three parties is regional. This is both their biggest weakness and strength. While it restricts their sphere of influence to the regions of their origin, it also makes for the three being formidable powers in their home states—Andhra Pradesh, Tamil Nadu and Punjab. As the three states together send 94 representatives to the Lok Sabha—nearly a fifth of the 529 seats being contested—these parties can tilt the scales in a tightly contested election.

With 42 Lok Sabha seats in Andhra Pradesh, Telugu Desam supremo N.T. Rama Rao will play a major role in post-election manoeuvrings. But during the pre-election battle, Rama Rao—who has never disguised his desire to play a more prominent role in the national political arena—is being forced to restrict himself to the regional stage. This is because along with the Lok Sabha polls, he has to prepare for assembly elections for the 294-seat Vidhan Sabha.

Though the flamboyant chief minister had himself asked for simultaneous polls in the state, the sudden announcement of the election took him by surprise and forced him to suspend shooting of his bilingual epic film, Brahmarishi Viswamitra—planned as a major campaign weapon against the Congress(I). Now, Rama Rao who had promised to "end Congress rule in Delhi", is busy containing the Congress(I) in Andhra Pradesh. Still, always the adept actor, he hid his disappointment and said: "I do not want to let down my own people. I want to remain as their man. I am not after power in the Delhi durbar."

> The sphere of influence of regional parties is restricted to their home states, but that weakness also happens to be their biggest strength.

Once the initial shock had subsided, Rama Rao was again in command of the situation. After suspending shooting of the film, he proceeded to unleash a series of missiles of a different sort—pre-poll concessions to various groups, and new projects. These include a Rs 359-crore lift irrigation project in Mahbubnagar and the Telugu Grameena Vidya Peetham Rural University, with an initial budget of Rs 5 crore.

He dangled other carrots: allotment of Rs 64 crore to implement revised UGC scales for college teachers. The money is to be paid before the elections. And to woo Muslims, the Government announced that 1,100 vacant posts for Urdu teachers would be filled and that grants would be given to 227 Muslim-run schools and colleges.

To cap it all, Rama Rao met leaders of the 1 lakh government employees—whom he had once called "bandicoots to be skinned alive"—and agreed to pay their salaries for the 53 days they had gone on strike in 1986.

Still, there are several factors working against the Telugu Desam—dissension within the party, the alienation of the Kappu community, and the corruption charges against Rama Rao.

But what could swing the elections the Telugu Desam's way is the alliance that Rama Rao has forged with other opposition parties—the Janata Dal, the BJP, the CPI(M). And he recently pulled off

SHYAM TEKWANI

Rama Rao in his Chaitanya Ratham (left); and Karunanidhi with supporters: gearing for battle

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SPECIALLY CREATED FOR PEOPLE WHO WORK HARDER

Your whole day is a race against time. Deadlines. Meetings. Work pressure.

No wonder you feel drained by the time you get home.

The natural way to cope with today's hectic pace.

Just a spoonful of Chyawanshakti taken twice a day goes a long way. Right through the day, in fact. To keep you fit and active. Its natural ingredients have been proven by Ayurveda to result in all round fitness.

Amla, the major ingredient in Chyawanshakti, is the richest known source of Vitamin C. This not only prevents coughs and colds but also revitalises your body tissues.

Its action is fortified by Ashwagandha which helps you combat mental and physical stress. Saffron – which acts as a stimulant to keep you active throughout the day. Draksha – which prevents gastrointestinal troubles. And Akarkara – which keeps your nervous system toned up.

All this goodness is enhanced with rich, natural honey which also acts as an excellent nutritious diet supplement.

So that you stay fighting fit – day after day after day.

CHYAWANSHAKTI

FROM THE MAKERS OF DABUR CHYAWANPRASH

DABUR INDIA LIMITED
HARSHA BHAWAN
'E' BLOCK,
CONNAUGHT PLACE
NEW DELHI-110 001.

ENRICHED WITH DRAKSHA, HONEY AND SAFFRON

everest/d89/DIL/228

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

a spectacular coup when he managed to rope in the CPI, a fierce critic for three years. With the entire opposition fighting together, the Congress(I) is in for a tough time in Andhra Pradesh.

While the Telugu Desam is riding the crest of Rama Rao's charisma, in neighbouring Tamil Nadu, the ruling DMK is depending on its efficient cadres. Though Chief Minister M. Karunanidhi was thrown off balance by the forward-ing of the polls, he is in a better position than other opposition parties. The nine months since he took charge have seen a steady consolidation of the DMK's already formidable grassroots base.

The canny chief minister has taken care to appease all sections. Taking a leaf out of his predecessor MGR's book, he has kept up a flood of populist measures: the free rice scheme, free saris and dhotis, marriage grants for young women, the noon meal scheme. And he has also cultivated the press by flooding publications with government advertisements regardless of their political leanings. Even Namadhu MGR, the AIADMK paper, receives a lot of state government advertisements.

Rival politicians are also being spared by the shrewd chief minister. The DMK regime has, in fact, ensured speedy construction of MGR's samadhi in Madras, and Karunanidhi never fails to mention that he was close to the late chief minister for 40 years. Similarly, he has started an award for schoolchildren on Kamaraj's birthday, and he recently offered financial aid to the late Congressman's sister. Said Congress(I) Propaganda Secretary Nellai Kannan: "It is difficult to come up with criticism about the DMK. Karunanidhi has been extremely careful."

HAVING returned to power after 13 years, he has been particularly careful in his dealings with the Congress(I)—knowing that a hostile Centre could seize any pretext to dismiss an opposition regime. So while consorting with the National Front, the DMK has all along kept a door open to the Congress(I) and partymen have been instructed to never attack Rajiv Gandhi personally.

The Congress(I), however, has not responded to these overtures. Vazhappadi Ramamurthy, TNCC(I) president, has expectedly gone in for an alliance with the AIADMK led by Jayalalitha, who has proved much more accommodating than the DMK would have been. The Congress(I) will contest in 30 of the state's 39 Lok Sabha seats—the largest share the party has ever got in an electoral alliance with Dravidian parties—while the AIADMK will put up candidates in just 10 seats.

Despite the DMK's unmatched organisational strength, the Congress(I)-AIADMK alliance could provide stiff competition. While backing a regional party in the state, during Lok Sabha elections the Tamil Nadu electorate has traditionally voted for the Congress(I)—and may do so again. The DMK will also be disadvantaged by a severe paucity of funds—particularly as the Congress(I)'s coffers seem bottomless.

In January, while campaigning for the assembly polls, Karunanidhi had said that he has to fight three things—the Congress(I)'s panam (money), Jayalalitha's pagattu (glamour) and MGR's widow, Janaki's paridhabam (pity). While Janaki has been totally eclipsed, the money-glamour combination could

SHYAM TEKWANI

BHAWAN SINGH

Jayalalitha at a public rally (left); and Barnala at a Sarbat Khalsa: marginal importance

POLL TALK

UNGUARDED MEETINGS

☐ AKALI Dal factions, suspicious that their gun-toting bodyguards were always snooping on them, discovered an excellent meeting point—the waiting room in the Election Commission office. Their gun-toting bodyguards had not been allowed in by securitymen at the office. So while waiting to meet the Election Commission officials, the politicians made the most of the opportunity to discuss seat adjustments.

ELECTION THREATS

☐ TILL a year ago, Chief Election Commissioner R.V.S. Peri Sastri was derided by the Opposition as the Centre's handmaiden. But faced with two new election commissioners, S.S. Dhanoa and V.S. Seigell, known to be close to Home Minister Buta Singh, it is singing a different tune. When Janata Dal parliamentary board members recently visited Sastri's office to lodge a protest, they refused to talk to Dhanoa. Snapped the bearded Chandra Shekhar: "We do not recognise your authority." He went on to declare that the new incumbents would be removed as soon as the Opposition came to power.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

president,
n alliance itha, who modating been. The 30 of the he largest ot in an dian parut up can-hed orga-HAWAN SINGH

ngress(I)- stiff comonal party elections tradition-
-and may be disad-of funds—
)'s coffers

gning for nidhi had things—ey); Jayand MGR's
n (pity).
eclipsed.
ion could rd visited dge a ed to apped dra not

t on to w be as the o power.

you share the fruits of our growth

LIC declares increased bonus to Policyholders

New bonus rates are:

Whole Life Plans: Rs. 80/-*
Endowment Plans: Rs. 64/-*

Bonus to policyholders has gone up year after year. The cumulative increase in the last 8 years is 128%.

Substantial increase in the final additional bonus, too. Now it ranges from Rs. 50/- to Rs. 350/-*

*per thousand sum assured

There is good news for Group Annuitants also. The group annuity bonus has now been increased from Rs. 3/- to Rs. 5/- per thousand of cash option.

Now an LIC policy is more attractive than ever before.

Buy a life insurance policy today and ensure a happy tomorrow.

Contact your agent or the nearest branch office for details.

Whole Life Policies Rs.	80*
Endowment Policies Rs.	64*

*per thousand sum assured

योगक्षेमं वहाम्यहम्

There is no substitute for life insurance.

Life Insurance Corporation of India

Efficient/LIC/11-89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

still prove a threat to the DMK.

While electoral alliances have been clearly established in Tamil Nadu, in Punjab the picture is still hazy. The warring factions of the Akali Dal—the Longowal group led by S.S. Barnala, the Simranjit Singh Mann group, the J.S. Talwandi group and the Baba Joginder Singh group—were still bickering days after announcement of polls.

The Mann group set a condition for putting up a one-to-one fight against the Congress(I): that Mann be accepted as president. The Talwandi group wanted the Barnala group to wind up. The Barnala group offered a solution: that all the top Akali leaders of all factions contest the elections. Others disagreed. The only point that all agree on is that Rajiv Gandhi must be opposed and that Mann (currently in prison) must be put up as a candidate from Tarn Taran.

The Congress(I)—which has always won an impressive number of the 13 Lok Sabha seats in Punjab—is in an upbeat mood. "How I wish the elections to the Vidhan Sabha too had been announced simultaneously," said a senior Congress(I) leader. The reason for the confidence: the disarray in Akali ranks.

Still, these elections are of great significance as they signal the revival of the political process in Punjab and could be a prelude to assembly polls. Eventually, as Basant Singh Khalsa, a supporter of the detained SGPC President Gurcharan Singh Tohra, put it: "Perhaps the voter will decipher the great puzzle of Sikh leadership."

He well might. And as he joins his brethren in Andhra Pradesh and Tamil Nadu to contribute his own tiny piece to the election jigsaw, he could also determine the future of regional parties in the national scheme of things.

—AMARNATH K. MENON in Hyderabad with KAVITHA SHETTY in Madras and KANWAR SANDHU in Chandigarh

LEFT PARTIES

RIGHT ON CUE

The communists emerge as an important factor

PRASHANT PANJIAR

CPI(M) top brass: high aims

IT is a destiny they never dreamt they would meet with so early in their history. The ninth general elections present to the left parties, the possibility of sharing power at the national level. And that too just three decades after first tasting the heady effervescence of power in Kerala—when the world's first democratically elected communist ministry came to power there in 1957.

That ministry was dismissed after only two years in power. But the architect of that short-lived historic revolution survived. And with him, his near-maniacal fervour and irrepressible flaunting of the communist dream. E.M.S. Namboodiripad, CPI(M) general secretary, is largely responsible for helping his party edge closer to the national political arc lights.

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

What Namboodiripad has in mind at the national level is the same type of coalition that he successfully forged in

POLL TALK

STAR ATTRACTION

☐ MANY party workers thronged around Raj Babbar when he came to Haryana Bhawan in Delhi to meet Devi Lal. Amused by those who scrambled to close in on Babbar and get his autograph, Devi Lal remarked, "He is going to campaign for us. See that your vote justifies his struggle."

THE WAR OF THE VEHICLES

☐ ANDHRA Pradesh Chief Minister N.T. Rama Rao has frequently been accused of harbouring medieval notions. When it comes to electioneering, however, he sure can be a trendsetter. Following the introduction of his Chaitanya Ratham to the election scene, the saffron-clad chief minister set off a veritable 'car war'. In Karnataka, R.K. Hegde followed Rama Rao's style by travelling in his Jaya Vahini during the 1985 assembly election. Now it is Deve Gowda who is dressing up a Swaraj Mazda, calling it Janata Vahini. The vehicle, incidentally, has been purchased from the contributions by coconut farmers in the state.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGa

The Thapar Gro

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

"I thought our computing needs were too diverse and sophisticated for PCL."

Santosh Pande
General Manager, The Triveni Group.

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

1987 in Kerala. "The National Front and left parties form the biggest and most powerful combination at present," he says.

It is perhaps an indication of the emerging importance of the Indian left that just a few days before he sprung the surprise election call, Rajiv Gandhi spent a day first going to West Bengal—laying the foundation-stone of the much-delayed Haldia petro-chemical project—and later addressing a Youth Congress(I) rally in Trivandrum. This time it was not to lambast the wrongs of the left but to present a friendly face. The reason was obvious: Rajiv was simply making a last-ditch attempt to keep the CPI(M) away from the Janata Dal and thus hang the communal tag on the Opposition. But the CPI(M) did not accept Rajiv's hand of friendship. Senior party leaders like Harkishen Singh Surjeet parleyed with the Janata Dal to cajole it into issuing an anti-VHP statement, and the CPI(M) manifesto declared the Congress(I) "totally unworthy of the people's trust".

The Left Front in West Bengal took no time getting off the blocks. "We need only 24 hours' notice to face the polls," said CPI(M) strongman Biman Bose. Left Front Chairman Saroj Mukherjee oozed arrogance: "We'll win all the 42 seats."

But it was not all sweet talk among the Left Front partners. The CPI(M) arm-twisted the Forward Bloc into giving up its north-west Calcutta seat in favour of Asoke Sen, former Union law minister contesting on a Janata Dal ticket, and ordered the CPI not to nominate Narayan Choubey from Midnapur as his wife had joined the Congress(I).

But CPI(M) leaders know such petty squabbles will be forgotten. The CPI(M) has put up 13 new faces including three MLAs and noted economist Dr Biplab Dasgupta.

Statistics favour the CPI(M). Its share of votes in the Lok Sabha polls has been increasing since 1967. From 15.7 per cent in 1967, it rose to 26.2 per cent in 1977, 39.9 per cent in 1980 before dropping to 35.9 per cent in 1984 when the Congress(I) got 16 seats.

KRISHNA MURARI KISHAN

CPI's Rajeswara Rao: pockets of influence

The CPI which had just six seats in the last Lok Sabha has pockets of influence in Bihar—where they intend to contest 15 seats—and in Andhra Pradesh where along with the CPI(M) they have aligned with the Telugu Desam and so might enhance their base.

In Kerala too the Left which won just three seats in 1984 has gone in for many fresh candidates including poet and lyricist O.N.V.Kurup and SFI president Vijayaraghavan. The Front has retained Suresh Kurup the lone CPI(M) winner from Kerala in 1984 and opposition stalwart K.P.Unnikrishnan.

What is of concern to the CPI(M) in Kerala is how the 16-lakh voters between 18 to 21 will vote. Campus polls show a disturbing trend. The student community seems to have rapped the Marxists for their stand against the pro-democracy students in China. The Congress(I) student wing, KSU, scored convincingly over the SFI.

Unlike in West Bengal, the CPI(M)'s share of votes for Lok Sabha elections over the years in Kerala has not risen perceptibly. In 1957, the united Communist Party of India got 37.5 per cent votes. In 1967 the CPI(M) got 24.6 per cent votes, 26.2 in 1971, 20.3 per cent in 1977, 19.1 per cent in 1980 and 22.3 per cent in 1984.

Today the left is on the threshold of a new chapter in its chequered history. Namboodiripad himself has been vague about the prospect of sharing power: "I do not want to commit myself about the inside or outside support to the National Front."

If by some strange quirk of electoral arithmetic and a heady ideological cocktail, the CPI(M) does manage to have a say in a National Front government minus the BJP, it will be yet another example of how the left has blended—and often compromised—Marxist ideology with the demands of the Indian polity. For Namboodiripad personally, it will be the incredible culmination of a journey on which he had embarked more than five decades ago, the ballot-box as his gun, screaming about the great communist hope.

—FARZAND AHMED and RAMESH MENON

POLL TALK

ELECTRIFYING ELECTIONS

☐ ELECTIONS it appears are potent revivers. At least Janata Dal Vice-President Ramakrishna Hegde's case makes it seem so. The week prior to the announcement of polls, he was bed-ridden with viral fever. The moment the news came, he was up and about. He even attended an Indian Institute of Science seminar, where he told his audience how elections 'electrified' him.

TICKET TAMASHA

☐ THE crowd of hopeful ticket-seekers outside the teeming office of the Uttar Pradesh Congress(I) Committee was growing restless. The meeting of the party election committee was getting prolonged. But there was comic relief. A worldly-wise aspirant who had been waiting for long said: "Na source se, na force se; ticket milega Bofors se (neither source will work, nor force; for a ticket you need Bofors)."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

WHEN THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS IS THREATENED –

IT MUST MEAN A VIOLATION OF THE FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS.

It is "an imposition on knowledge and would virtually amount to a burden imposed on a man for being literate and for being conscious of his duty as a citizen to inform himself about the world around."

That is what the Supreme Court said in 1984 as it reduced a Rs. 850 per tonne duty levied on the import of newsprint by the Government to Rs. 550 per tonne.

Now the Government newsprint mills have hiked newsprint prices by as much as 40 per cent, and the duty on glazed newsprint has been increased by 7-fold.

While some welcome concessions have been granted to small and medium newspapers, the rest who account for more than 80% of newsprint consumption still bear the crippling burden.

The implications spell themselves out : increased cost, increased prices of publications, increased advertising tariffs, mounting financial pressure on the newspaper industry. A pressure that retards growth, curtailing coverage and reach. Doubtless, the burden for being literate is becoming heavier.

Every citizen has the right to 'free' knowledge, information, stimulation and entertainment. The press is their only independent and affordable source. It is the heart of a democracy, the life-blood of political and social intercourse. In a country like India, with its multifarious cultures, religions and languages, it is the press which reflects the diversity. It is the symbol of freedom, the voice of the people, the safety valve for bottled-up emotions. As long as it is neither state-controlled, nor muzzled.

Now the Government has put it under severe financial strain, even as it has unleashed resources to expand the official media.

All this will extract a heavy cost. And it is not the newspaper industry that will suffer the final cut. It is the democratic spirit of the country that will fray; the tenets of our founding fathers that will flounder. That price will be paid by the people.

THE NATION'S LOSS CANNOT BE THE GOVERNMENT'S GAIN.

Issued in the interest of the Nation by the Indian Newspaper Society

MILESTONES/INS/34

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ELECTION COMMISSION

TORTUOUS TASK

Severe handicaps hamper efficient functioning

A mere block away from the stately Sansad Bhawan—seat of the world's largest democracy in New Delhi—stands Nirvachan Sadan, headquarters of the Election Commission of India. And in its dimly-lit office, surrounded by mounds of discoloured files, the commission is at work overtime, organising the biggest exercise of the secret ballot—the forthcoming elections.

S.S. Dhanoa, R.V.S. Peri Sastri and V.S. Seigell

An Indian election may pale in comparison with the extravagant festivity of the US presidential polls or the sophisticated media campaigns of the British polls. But when India votes, the event is awesome: more people cast their votes than in the US, Indonesia, Brazil, Japan, Nigeria and Bangladesh combined. Expectedly, poll preparations are a nightmare, as commission employees admit. Says an official: "It's as messy as our democracy."

The statistics are mindboggling. Over 49.86 crore people will choose 529 members to the Lok Sabha. Of these, more than 15.11 crore people will elect 1,547 legislators to the Uttar Pradesh, Karnataka, Andhra Pradesh, Goa and Sikkim Vidhan Sabhas simultaneously. Just to compile these figures, the commission took six months, aided by 9.97 lakh enumerators conducting a door-to-door survey costing Rs 5 crore.

The electorate will cast its vote at 5.98 lakh polling stations throughout the country, to be manned by over 30 lakh government employees. One lakh magistrates will be deputed to ensure peaceful polling. About 50 items—ranging from ballot papers to shellac, used to seal ballot boxes—have been identified by the commission for supply to the polling booths. The Government has already ordered 4.5 lakh litres of indelible ink—enough to top up the fuel tanks of about 12,800 Maruti cars—to mark the nails of those who cast their votes.

> The commission's biggest problem is that many of its powers to curb electoral malpractices exist only on paper.

The mammoth task is nearly an impossible one, thanks to the severe handicaps the commission works under. The understaffed commission—only 225 employees—has not even the benefit of the most basic computers. And with the new constitutional requirement for registration of political parties plus the consequent compilation of data, their burden has increased tremendously.

The Government will spend more than Rs 150 crore on the elections—almost 10 times more than in 1971. In addition, political parties will spend huge sums. A commission study revealed that parties, at a conservative estimate, spent about Rs 30 crore in 1977. But since then, the ante has been upped many times over.

With the entry of moneybags, invariably followed by musclemen, the commission is face to face with its bane: booth-capturing. In 1980, a repoll had to be ordered at 39 polling stations in 12 constituencies. The problem multiplied manifold in 1984, when fresh polling took place in 264 polling booths in 53 parliamentary constituencies. This time the elections threaten to be the bloodiest and bitterest ever.

What worries Chief Election Commissioner R.V.S. Peri Sastri the most is the large-scale induction of people with criminal backgrounds into established political parties. Peri Sastri says the commission is taking pre-emptive measures: "We have asked the Government for as many companies of Central police forces as they can provide." But in 1987 when the commission sought 60 companies of Central forces for the by-elections to the West Bengal Assembly, the Centre granted only 16.

And this time with barely a dozen paramilitary companies at the Home Ministry's disposal for deployment in sensitive areas, the situation is bound to be much worse. Most of the forces are stuck in Punjab, Jammu and Kashmir and the North-east. The 25 new battalions of Central forces planned for the elections are still under training. Caught unawares by the sudden election announcement, the Home Ministry, however, has managed to put together 150 companies of trainee recruits. Says a worried official: "We have to perform intricate jugglery."

The problems of rigging and booth-capturing might have been somewhat contained if the commission had been able to introduce electronic voting machines. The machines, found suitable after a seven-year-long experiment conducted by the commission, offer a system which would allow the presiding officer to block any possible tampering of votes or casting of unauthorised ones. In fact, the commission ordered 1.5 lakh machines from the government-owned Bharat Electronic Ltd of Bangalore and Electronics Corporation of India Ltd of Hyderabad. The strategy was to use these machines in 150 constituencies notorious for rigging. But with the preponing of the elections, the plan has been scuttled. Now, the machines will be used in only 50 constituencies.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Even this limited use has been bogged down by political controversy. The Janata Dal—spurred by distorted information—has challenged their dependability. When reports about computer bugging in the US elections surfaced, Arun Mehta, an independent computer expert, demonstrated—at the instance of some Janata Dal leaders—how the computers could be programmed to rig. But they ignored an important fact: the US voting machines are different from the Indian ones.

K. Ganesan, former secretary to the commission, says the Opposition's scepticism is not based on facts. Explains he: "Our machines are non-programmable." But both Ganesan and Peri Sastri agree that political parties should be taken into confidence before the machines are introduced. Clearly, the commission's tight-lipped stand on the issue has jeopardised a well-meaning step.

Significantly, along with the commission's machines, serious doubts are being raised about its integrity. The biggest eye-brow raiser was the Government's decision to revive the concept of a multi-member commission just before the poll announcement, even though the last three chief election commissioners had opposed it. Both the new election commissioners, S.S. Dhanoa and V.S. Seigell, began making sensitive decisions from day one. Sastri, who feels he had already prepared the ground for the elections, was so upset with the appointments that he even considered resigning, but changed his mind. Seigell's background as an intelligence man and his proximity to Home Minister Buta Singh have fuelled the Opposition's suspicions.

But the commission's biggest handicap is that many of its actual powers to curb electoral malpractices exist only on paper. Effective power and adequate resources are urgently required if the elections are to be managed with efficiency and credibility. Specifically, the commission needs to be given status on par with the Comptroller and Auditor General's office by an act of Parliament.

Clearly, in the absence of basic electoral reforms to strengthen the commission's autonomy, the Indian democracy can never become as towering in character as it is in numbers.

—PANKAJ PACHAURI

PRASHANT PANJIAR

Mob rioting during 1984 polls; and ballot paper

POLL TALK

SURREAL SYCOPHANT

☐ Ram Sevak, a Congress(I) MLA, turned seva into an absurdity when as one of Rajiv's proposers, he ceremoniously did a namaste to the pen he signed with. He then turned to the nomination papers and repeated the ritual of respect. Remarked an official: "Sycophancy is touching new heights." With innovative practitioners like Sevak, it is bound to scale further pinnacles.

NARCISSISTS ALL

☐ Journalists recently visiting Uttar Pradesh Janata Dal chief, Mulayam Singh Yadav found him exhorting them to listen to an election song. "Arey, ye suniye (please listen to this)," he urged. The irritated audience soon found out why—the song celebrated Yadav as a great politician who could easily demolish any opposition. That's one passion that consumes both the Oppositon and the Congress(I): that of self-praise.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Mr. G.V. Krishna Reddy, Chairman, Novopan India Ltd. and GVK America, Inc. seen with Mr. S.B. Chavan, Hon'ble Union Finance Minister, Govt. of India and His Excellency Mr. James G. Martin, Governor, State of North Carolina, U.S.A. after the ceremony performed on 29th Sept., '89.

NOVOPAN GOES INTERNATIONAL

Novopan India Limited, the market leaders in manufacturing and marketing particle boards which have been used for creating life styles and decorating homes and offices for over a decade have set up a Rs. 100 crore integrated project, GVK America, Inc. in the State of North Carolina, USA for the manufacture of prelaminated particle boards and furniture components. GVK America, Inc. will now draw the benefits of in- house technological know-how from the parent company.

The implementation of phase I of the project is estimated to cost around Rs. 20 crores. For the first time, State authorities have extended infrastructure facilities like 200 acres of land, high pressure water, sewerage treatment facility, etc. all free of cost to an Indian subsidiary company.

Foundation Stone Laying Ceremony and Ground Breaking Ceremony were performed on September 29, 1989 by:

Hon'ble Union Finance Minister	His Excellency Mr. James G. Martin Governor
Mr. S.B. Chavan	State of North Carolina
Government of India.

GVK America, Inc. will prove India's high standards of particle board manufacture, establish a presence in the competitive US market and further strengthen INDO-US ties.

NOVOPAN INDIA LTD.
'SURYODAYA', II Floor,
1-10-60/3, Begumpet, Hyderabad 500 016.

Novopan. A beautiful life style.

NOVOPAN

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

FIVE YEARS OF RAJIV GANDHI

THE PROMISE THAT FAILED

On October 31 Rajiv Gandhi completed a tumultuous five years as prime minister of the world's largest democracy.

They have their exits and their entrances.
And one man in his time plays many parts.
—As You Like It.

THE final scene in Rajiv's India, a 1985 documentary produced by American syndicated journalist Jack Anderson, features press baron Ramnath Goenka. At once avuncular and patriarchal, Goenka echoes a theme that threads its way through the film. "Now I can die in peace," he says, "knowing that the country is in good hands."

Four years on, the metamorphosis is complete. Goenka today is Rajiv's most implacable foe, consumed by the belief that the man who leads India is a Hitlerian disaster. His is undoubtedly an extreme view, coloured by his personal battle with the Government in power. But in the end, that dramatic turnaround says more about Rajiv Gandhi than it does about Ramnath Goenka.

Last week, Rajiv completed five roller-coaster years in office, a tenure that has traversed giddy highs and gut-wrenching lows. Five years ago, he seemed to have stepped straight out from the stars, the Peter Pan of Indian politics. If ever contemporary politics had a fairy tale to relate, this was it. The youth, the looks, the idealism, the dynamism. And above all, the mandate: the largest in Indian electoral history.

For a nation in need of a 20th century messiah, Rajiv Gandhi appeared like the answer to a congregational prayer. For one fifth of humanity, suddenly there was a dream to be shared.

It was a dream he enunciated with such eloquence before the US Congress in June of 1985. "I too have a dream. I dream of an India—strong, independent, self-reliant, and in the front ranks of the nations of the world in the service of mankind." For 'one brief, shining moment', Rajiv gave India something unique and priceless—pride in itself.

Pride, and then the fall. The first 18 months of Rajiv Gandhi's rule now seem like a surreal memory. In the totality of his five-year reign, the dazzle of his initial promise only serves to spotlight his subsequent failures and capitulation. In the balance sheet of history, Rajiv has clearly slipped into the red. For that, he has only himself to blame. The man who occupies the prime minister's chair today bears not the remotest resemblance to the Rajiv Gandhi who was elected to paramount power five years ago.

Then, he was the quintessential Mr Clean, determined to rid Indian politics of its corrupt configuration. Today, he stands indelibly tainted by the Bofors scandal, the first among others that have eroded his mandate and tarnished his government's image like nothing else has.

Then, he was Mr Accord, buying peace with honour and national interest intact. Sri Lanka, Punjab, Mizoram, Assam, Jammu & Kashmir, all followed in dizzying succession. Today, they stand as signposts to failure and lack of foresight, troubling reminders of what could have been.

In Punjab, even after Sant Longowal's assassination, Rajiv could have brokered peace by implementing some of the clauses like the transfer of Chandigarh. Instead, the Centre toppled the government of S.S. Barnala and derailed the peace process.

In Sri Lanka, over 1,100 Indian troops have died and the peace keeping force is now being pulled out, a tragic testimony to the lack of diplomatic foresight. Even the Kashmir accord remains a pact between Rajiv and Farooq Abdullah, neither of whom has been able to implement even its basic premises like accelerated development in the state. The result: a worrying rise in extremist discontent. That process also dovetailed with the dramatic change in Rajiv's political style, from one of conciliation to one of confrontation.

The transformation in Rajiv Gandhi is, in fact, so vivid and so drastic that five

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

1984 Amethi. Rajiv receives the largest mandate in Indian history

For a nation in need of a 20th century messiah, Rajiv Gandhi appeared like the answer to a congregational prayer. Suddenly, there was a dream to be shared.

1989 Amethi. A sombre prime minister files his nomination years now seems like a lifetime. Nothing symbolises that change more than the change in his closest aides—from Arun Singh and V.P. Singh to Satish Sharma and R.K. Dhawan. From a well-knit team that ably projected his initial energy and idealism, Rajiv has fallen back on conflicting groups of advisers; bureaucrats whose commitment is coloured by their personal stake in his political fortunes, politicians of the old guard like Buta Singh and H.K.L. Bhagat who operate by conventional rules and are uncomfortable with change, and cronies like Satish Sharma, Lalit Suri and Amitabh Bachchan whose political advice is suspect.

The reluctant Prince Charming of 1984 has turned into a brooding King Lear, a prisoner of the many cabals that swamp him with conflicting advice.

The change was thus, inescapable. The man who governs India today is not the same leader who, in December 1985, at the Congress Centenary in Bombay, fired the imagination with these words: "Millions of ordinary workers throughout the country are full of enthusiasm for the Congress policies. But they are handicapped, for on their backs ride the brokers of power and influence, who dispense patronage to convert a mass movement into a feudal oligarchy." Today, the same power brokers submerge Rajiv with the weight of their omnipotence.

In the bargain, the reluctant Prince Charming of 1984 has turned into a brooding King Lear, a prisoner of his own paranoia. The Rajiv Gandhi of 1985 would certainly not have said, as Rajiv did in public, that: "Conspiracies are being hatched and they have their godfathers abroad. We will teach them such a lesson that they will remember their grandmothers."

THE power that once lifted him to the heights of inspiration now finds expression in imagined threats and the succour of sycophancy. The boldness of vision that led him to sign the Punjab accord with Sant Longowal today manifests itself in the politics of confrontation. The warmth and innate charm that endeared him to millions is now replaced with a certain ruthlessness of purpose.

It is not that his government has been inefficient. It is just that it has been indifferent. Indifferent to the tidal wave of corruption charges when coming clean would have done him more good than harm. Indifferent to the erosion of institutions at a time when his credibility was lowest. Indifferent to the promises made and never fulfilled. And above all, indifferent to the fact that a mandate was being recklessly squandered away.

In retrospect, that may have been inevitable. Indian politics had never seen anything like him, certainly not in a position of absolute authority. Clearly, in 1984-85, the ruling party was as uncomfortable with him as he was with them. The immovable force and the irresistible object. On one side, a sophisticated young man with a modern mind and no ideological handcuffs, intent on political and social reform, on computers and high technology, on decontrol and liberalisation, on shaking up the bureaucracy.

Ranged against him, a creaking party machinery ruled by syndicates and power brokers for whom everything that Rajiv represented posed a threat to survival. One had to give in. That it was Rajiv who succumbed was a disappointment made sharper by the promise of change he initially personified.

Four months ago, in a speech at Vigyan Bhavan, Rajiv stated: "I found when I tried to change the system, to push the system to deliver, I came up against blocks, vested interests which just wouldn't let go. Every time I thought I had identified a solution, I couldn't convince those at higher levels...."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Accords with Longowal and Jayewardene ended in disarray and violence

Rajiv's initial politics of conciliation promised stability. Soon confrontation became the slogan and stability its main victim.

That is an astonishing admission to make for a prime minister. But not for Rajiv Gandhi. Today, the many masks he has donned over the last five years have turned him, at least in the public eye, into an irritating enigma.

More than anything else, what Rajiv faces is a serious image problem. From the open, disarming family man who could afford to take exotic holidays with his friends without facing undue criticism, to the somewhat desperate and dishevelled politician of today, Rajiv has passed through many stages of political evolution, each more complex than the previous one.

There is the Rajiv Gandhi who broke through seemingly unsurmountable diplomatic barriers in the case of China and Pakistan. There is also the Rajiv Gandhi who, by his government's actions—and somewhat misplaced ambitions—has earned India the distasteful title of regional bully boy.

There is the Rajiv Gandhi who speaks with such conviction about the preservation of democracy. There is also the Rajiv Gandhi who attempts to ram through such retrogative measures as the defamation bill.

But there is now, with his political career hanging in the balance, a clearer definition of the real Rajiv: a hard-headed politician in the mould of his late mother, opportunistic, uncaring of public opinion, disdainful of political propriety and trapped between conflicting cabals.

AT moments, the real Rajiv breaks through. In an interview with INDIA TODAY in mid-1986, Rajiv was totally sincere and candid when he said: "Oddly, I still don't feel as if I'm prime minister. I just feel that I am me, like I was. Perhaps the day I feel that I'm prime minister, something's gone wrong."

However, such moments are now increasingly rare. Rajiv has gradually allowed himself to become a creature of the cabals that surround and buffet him, with conflicting advice. The result is that despite his outward air of confidence, it is Rajiv's insecurity that brings out the darker side of him; the personalised abuse against his opponents, the wild conspiracy theories, the mistrust and suspicion that has distanced him somewhat from reality—and perhaps from the people.

He is now the symbol of insecurity. The grim-faced Black Cats, firmly wedged between him and the people, are symbols of one kind of insecurity—the terrorist threat that he has inherited and which two assassination attempts have brought dangerously alive.

But it is now the other kind of insecurity, reflected in the conflict of advice from his political satellites, that perhaps pose the greater danger.

The fact that he has orchestrated no less than 27 cabinet reshuffles and replaced over a dozen chief ministers in the last four years is symbolic of that insecurity. The result: the Congress(I) has been emasculated, a party with one voice (his) and only one leader (him).

Surrounded by the detritus of disappointment, Rajiv's successes have been inevitably overshadowed. One obvious example: the economy. In the first two years of his rule, Rajiv initiated sweeping changes to liberalise the economy, a process that, ironically enough, slowed down with the departure of Rajiv's bete noire, V.P. Singh, his former finance minister.

The Government's handling of drought relief in 1987 was exemplary

VOICES

MEMORABLE

■ People's expectations are scary. —In January 1985

■ Millions of ordinary workers throughout the country are full of enthusiasm for the Congress policies and programmes. But they are handicapped, for on their backs ride the brokers of power and influence, who dispense patronage to convert a mass movement into a feudal oligarchy. —at the Congress centenary celebrations in Bombay, in December 1985

■ Inside the soft glove, there is an iron hand and if the grip is not proper with the glove it has to be removed. —In May 1987

■ I categorically declare...that neither I nor any member of my family has received any consideration in these (Bofors) transactions. —In August 1987

■ Everyone grieves when his mother dies. But I gained courage for there grew a feeling in the country that every citizen had lost his mother. —at a rally in October 1988

■ I found when I tried to change the system, to push the system to deliver, I came up against blocks, vested interests which just wouldn't let go. Every time I thought I had identified a solution, I couldn't convince those at higher levels who had lost contact with the grassroots. —in August 1989

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

'The world has made astonishing progress in technology and material advancement. That is all to the good and we must take full advantage of it'. Jawaharlal Nehru

Videotext, Teletext, Electronic Mail, Radio Paging... Mahanagar Telephone Nigam is putting technology to work for better and more communication systems in the future for the common good.

- Increased services in tune with today's needs
  On line directory enquiry, registration for new demands, fully equipped communication bureaus have already been started.
- Ambitious and diverse future plans
  Incorporating the latest telecom technology for the benefit of the people.
- Phone Plus Services
  State of the art telephone instruments with advanced features... makes your communication so much easier.
- Ushering in a new era in telecommunications
  Electronic Mail, Videotext, Voice Mail, Audiotext, High Speed Data Communication, Paging, Cordless Telephones, Coin Card Operated Pay Phones... a state of the art telecom network at par with the world's best.

At MTNL, future plans are being geared towards a new dynamic communication network for the benefit of the country and its people.

महानगर टेलीफोन निगम लिमिटेड
(भारत सरकार का उद्यम)
MAHANAGAR TELEPHONE NIGAM LIMITED
(A GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ENTERPRISE)

We carry Nehru's vision with us.
It makes us stronger.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

1984: Rajiv with Arun Singh; Arun Nehru and V.P. Singh. 1989: Rajiv recalls R.K. Dhawan

He was the quintessential Mr Clean, determined to rid Indian politics of its corrupt configuration and bring in a team that symbolised change. The return of Dhawan signalled that Rajiv had come full circle.

and since then the weather gods have compensated with two good harvests, giving the economy an added buoyancy. The real annual rate of growth of the economy is expected to be around 5.4 per cent compared to the 3.5 per cent 'Hindu rate of growth' witnessed in the past 25 years. The industrial growth rate, at over 9 per cent, is another indicator of better economic management.

But there is also a dark side to the harvest moon. Much of the economic growth has been fuelled by easy access to imports and deficit financing. Despite the positive signals in the economic landscape, the downside has led to tight foreign exchange reserves, inflation and a sharp rise in prices of essential commodities, now looming ever larger as a major election issue.

Even on the industrial front, his government's preferential treatment in the case of favoured business houses—the Ambanis, the Thapars—has become a controversial issue. More important, it has ensured that Rajiv's pro-rich image has stuck and no amount of populism on his part has been able to obliterate that entirely.

EVEN Rajiv's other projected success, foreign policy, is an ambiguous one. Certainly, India's voice is heard in world forums. Rajiv has also established a personal rapport with leaders like Mikhail Gorbachev and George Bush. Rajiv's supporters also point to his original ideas like the Africa Fund, Save The Planet fund and his push for disarmament, which have been adopted by various international forums.

But in its broader sweep, India's foreign policy has been hamstrung by ad-hocism. Under Rajiv, the bureaucrats in the Prime Minister's Office have had more say in matters of international diplomacy than the mandarins in the Ministry of External Affairs. Again, this is a reflection of Rajiv's later style, listening to and trusting just a few selected advisers. The result: people like Finance Secretary Gopi Arora are given sensitive diplomatic assignments, undercutting the ministry responsible in terms of its morale and effectiveness.

The last five years have seen as many as six foreign ministers, six ministers of state and six foreign secretaries—one of whom was sacked in public—leading to unnecessary upheavals in an area where continuity and coordination are of paramount importance.

However, success and failure is also relative. In the current electoral context, with an opposition that is still to project an aura of stability, Rajiv's performance will be weighed on a different set of scales. Ultimately, the verdict on Rajiv's reign will be given by the electorate which may not judge him as harshly as history might.

DILIP BOBB

VOICES

ABUSIVE

■ Am I expected to reply to every dog that barks?
—Responding to Ram Jethmalani's charges, in June 1987

■ You (the CPI-M) always talk of Karl Marx, but you talk like Groucho Marx.
—to CPI(M) MP Amal Datta, in March 1988

■ It is a national affront not a National Front.
—In December 1988

■ These traitors (a reference to Ram Jethmalani) are roaming about freely and have even managed to enter Parliament.
—August 1989

GAFFES

■ When a giant tree falls, the earth shakes.
—in November 1984 after the anti-Sikh riots

■ If it (the Emergency) had finished off in a few months, it would have been okay.
—In October 1985

■ Conspiracies are being hatched and they have their godfathers abroad. Hum unko naani yaad dila denge (We will teach them such a lesson that they will remember their grandmothers.)
—In May 1987

■ They (Indian Airlines pilots) have them....A pool in itself is not all that expensive.
—in November 1989

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Remember how we felt when the thunder of molten steel first resounded in an Indian steel plant...

When Satyajit Ray won the award at Cannes...

When our first oil well was spudded at Bombay High...

When India won the World Cup...

Now once again, its the same kind of feeling...

मारुति
MARUTI

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

For India it is a dream realised. Exporting cars to France, one of the world's most competitive car markets. Part of the EEC. With uncompromising standards for performance, safety, emission control, driving comfort and overall quality. To qualify, the Maruti underwent the tough EEC crash test and

Voila

tests for braking force, emission, peak performance and reliability on every critical compo

Q U A L I T Y I S T H E B E S T

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Rediffusion/MU/895

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

What did the Skypak Man say to the "Little Boy" at Brussels?

"If you're going to take long ... mind if I hop along to Tehran and New York and be back with you soon?"

We'll deliver. Wherever on earth. SKYPAK The worldwide couriers.

Skypak House, Off M. Vassanji Road, Marol, Andheri (E), Bombay 400 059.

Avenues.SC.500 89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

BIHAR

Mounting Mayhem

"Communal forces are again creating trouble, but we will check them."

S.N. SINHA
Chief Minister, Bihar

COMMUNAL riots piled on extremist killings. October proved a bloodsoaked month for Bihar. First came the massacre by Naxalites after a lull in their activities. Then the communal conflagration spread to Bihar after having wreaked havoc in other parts of the country. Even by the state's dismal standards, excessive blood was spilled in Bihar last month.

Communal rioting claimed the maximum number of lives. Violence first broke out in Jharia town of Dhanbad district on October 16 when a Ramshila procession was attacked. Though property worth lakhs was destroyed, mercifully, only one person died in the subsequent police firing. From Jharia in south Bihar, the communal virus soon spread to Sitamarhi, Bhagalpur and Madhubani districts—among others—in the north. Between October 23 and 25, bloody street battles between Hindus and Muslims were witnessed. The toll of human lives was considerable: 35, according to the Government's conservative estimates.

At Bhagalpur it was again the Ramshila procession that caused the trouble on October 24. Violence broke out when a Ramshila procession of about 10,000 to 15,000 persons tried forcing its way into Nathnagar, a Muslim area, despite being denied permission by the administration. As the police tried stopping the processionists, a large number of Muslims gathered. Someone fired a shot and soon a riot was on. The police resorted to firing, resulting in the loss of three lives. Chief Minister Satyendra Narain Sinha air-dashed to Bhagalpur the same night. Yet, the situation deteriorated even further the next day. Troops were called out and shoot-at-sight orders issued as stepped up violence claimed at least 13 lives.

Police patrol affected areas; and a victim amid the ruins of his home

In Sitamarhi too it was the Ramshila procession that led to the orgy of violence in which about 12 persons lost their lives on October 23. In an unforgiveable lapse, the administration allowed Hindus to take the procession through a Muslim-dominated area—a route they had not taken since 1954. Though Muslims had threatened violence if the procession passed through the route, their warning was not heeded. Equally shocking, the police outpost in the communally-sensitive village of Fathehpur was removed.

Similar events took place in Madhubani district: an unruly Ramshila procession, provocative slogans, stone pelting by Muslims, Hindus hitting back, the police opening fire.

In each instance the administration resorted to fire-fighting instead of preventive measures. Ignoring the consequences, it allowed the Ramshila processionists to raise provocative slogans. One sample: Hamen dar nahin Babar ki santaan kaa (We are not afraid of Babar's descendants). Villagers, in fact, complained of police inaction to the Central team comprising Minister of State for Home Santosh Mohan Dev, Finance Minister S.B. Chavan and AICC(I) General Secretary A.R. Mallu, who airdashed to Sitamarhi on October 24. And while demanding an immediate ban on Ramshila processions, CPI MP and AITUC President Chaturanan Mishra pointed out that only Congress(I)-ruled states were witnessing unbridled communal violence.

The chief minister, on his part, explained that it was not possible for

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Ramshila processions to be banned in Bihar when they were allowed elsewhere in the country. Said he: "How can we ban a procession when we were assured that it would be peaceful." For good measure he added: "Communal forces have again created trouble, but we will keep them in check."

Still, the state Government was undoubtedly embarrassed as the communal conflagration came on the heels of renewed extremist violence. On October 14, the chief minister proudly informed Delhi pressmen that the Naxalite threat had been contained in Bihar. As evidence, he pointed to the fact that there had been no extremist killings in the state for the last several months.

The very next day Sinha's complacence was shown to be ill-founded. On the afternoon of October 15, Naxalites struck in Sikaria village of Jehanabad district. As many as four armed squads—each made up of 15 men—of the Party Unity, a CPI(M-L) group, descended on the village. While three of the squads formed a ring around the village, keeping a lookout for the police, one made its way to a hut belonging to a woman named Kunti Devi. The armed extremists surrounded the hut and asked the inmates to come out and surrender. Four persons came out and their hands were promptly tied behind their backs. But the fifth occupant, Sahajanand, opened fire. The intruders set fire to the hut and as the man came running out, he was shot dead. Of the four hostages, two managed to escape while the other two were shot dead.

This time the police was literally caught napping: members of the Bihar Military Police manning the police post in Sikaria village were taking an afternoon nap while the extremists were murdering villagers.

All the victims belonged to the Mazdoor Kisan Sangram Samiti (MKSS), a Naxalite group, whose rivalry with the Party Unity has already claimed many lives in Bihar. The Jehanabad killings therefore portend further bloodletting between the two groups. MKSS President Dr Vinayan even charged at a press conference in Patna that the Party Unity squads were eliminating those who had deserted them and joined the MKSS.

Much of the stepped up violence is linked to the general elections. Politicians are shamelessly playing communal politics in the hope of polarising communities and gaining votes. And in the cacophony and confusion of the electoral battle, old scores are being settled. November is unlikely to bring respite to Bihar. —UTTAM SENGUPTA

Posting Posers

Appointments create ripples

MADHYA Pradesh Chief Minister Motilal Vora is not known for springing surprises. But last fortnight, he created ripples among the state's IAS and IPS officers when he announced the names of the new chief secretary and the director-general of police (DGP).

Ram Singh Khanna's appointment as the chief secretary wasn't totally unexpected even though he was due to retire in two months, since he is the senior-most IAS officer in the state. It was Prem Dhar Malaviya's selection as the DGP that shocked the state's police community. Said a senior officer: "He was a dark horse."

Photographs by R.C. SAHU

S.V. Singh (left); and Malaviya: conflicting interests

Malaviya's appointment as director-general of police has caused more than normal resentment as he superseded six director-generals.

It does seem that the chief minister has applied double standards in making selections for the two critical posts. The chief secretary was chosen strictly on the basis of seniority. But now Khanna, who took over as chief secretary on September 30, has been granted six months' extension due to the elections.

In contrast, Malaviya, an officer of the 1957 batch, has been made DGP over the heads of eight officers including three of the 1956 batch and one of the 1957 group. Surendra Vikram Singh (1955 batch)—chairman, Madhya Pradesh Police Housing Corporation—has lodged a protest with the Government. Clearly, in the DGP's selection there seems to have been considerations other than what is normal.

The chief minister's prerogative to appoint a man of his choice is generally conceded. Yet, it is widely felt that Malaviya's case is unique. Till now, the Government used to select officers only from the director-general (DG) rank—even when it wanted to play the game of administrative musical chairs. For instance, during his last tenure, Vora had removed his predecessor's nominee, B.K. Mukherjee, and replaced him with M. Natarajan, an officer of equivalent rank. When Arjun Singh returned to power last year, he brought back Mukherjee as DGP and shunted out Natarajan. This year, Vora replaced Mukherjee with Natarajan once again.

Malaviya's appointment has caused more than normal resentment because the Government has broken convention to promote a relatively junior officer to the post. Till his appointment as the head of the department, the present DGP was just an inspector-general, while there were as many as six officers holding the rank of DG.

This is all the more surprising since many of the officers superseded enjoy reputations of competence. They include Dharm Narayan Ahuja (1955 batch) and Satish Chandra Vidyarthi (1957 batch). Vora also ignored the claim of the extremely competent Mohammed Qureshi (1956 batch) who has been recently appointed as special secretary in the Union Home Ministry—an important post in the IPS hierarchy.

The reasons for Malaviya's elevation are not clear. Some of the IPS officers whose claims have been ignored allege that Vora has repeatedly favoured his own community, and almost all the key posts in the state are manned by Brahmin officers. Others feel that though Malaviya has a reputation for honesty, he may have been seen as a more pliable officer as compared to most of the other contenders. Whatever the truth, it is clear that a well-tested administrative convention has once again been broken—and for no convincing reason. —N.K. SINGH

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ation—has vernment.
tion there tions other ogative to s generally felt that ll now, the fficers only

G) rank—he game of
rs. For in-
. Vora had nominee, l him with equivalent eturned to ght back unted out replaced nce again.
has caused nal resenthe Govern-n conven-te a rela-ficer to the pointment he depart-nt DGP was or-general, re as many olding the

the more e many of uperseded.
ns of cominclude an Ahuja nd Satish rthi (1957
so ignored extremely ohammed atch) who ently ap-cial secrenistry—an archy.
s elevation
PS officers ored allege oured his all the key y Brahmin
Malaviya
, he may e officer as contend-lear that a onvention and for no

N.K. SINGH

Sugar Free sets you free!

Free from bitter saccharin taste. Free from weight-inducing calories.

Throw those saccharin tablets away. Don't even look at sugar! Now you have Sugar Free, made from 'aspartame' — a natural protein derivative.

Sugar Free type sweeteners are approved in over 69 countries and used in products like Diet Pepsi and Diet Coke. Sugar Free. Brought to you for the first time with the Cadila stamp of international Quality.

Say YES! to Sugar free

CADILA FOR QUALITY

Cadila CHEMICALS LTD

It's not saccharin. It tastes just like sugar.
Confirm with your doctor. See instructions on pack.

MULTIMEDIA AQUARIUS/CC/5/89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Sarayu Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

There's always been a premium on strength

Consis

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Consistent, Stronger, Optimal-Setting.

VIKRAM
Premium
CEMENT

Vikram Cement. A unit of Grasim Industries Limited.

Nexus

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ENCHANTMENT ALL THE WAY TO MALAYSIA AND ACROSS THE WORLD

Every Sunday, Malaysia Airlines flies you non-stop to Kuala Lumpur. Our home and one of over 60 destinations across the world.

Malaysia Airlines has a destination network that spans the globe, offering you cities in Asia, Australia, West Asia, UK, Europe and USA.

Wherever you fly, you'll experience an inflight service renowned for its special quality and spontaneity. For it comes with the genuine warmth and charm that only Malaysians can offer.

malaysia AIRLINES
ENCHANTMENT WHEREVER YOU FLY

AMMAN • AMSTERDAM • BANDAR SERI BEGAWAN • BANGKOK • COLOMBO • DELHI • DENPASAR • DUBAI • FRANKFURT • FUKUOKA • GUANGZHOU (CANTON) • HAT YAI • HONG KONG • HONOLULU • JAKARTA • JEDDAH • KARACHI • LONDON • LOS ANGELES • MADRAS • MANILA • MAURITIUS • MEDAN • MELBOURNE • PARIS • PERTH • PHUKET • SEOUL • SINGAPORE • SYDNEY • TAIPEI • TOKYO • ZURICH & 34 DESTINATIONS WITHIN MALAYSIA.

FOR RESERVATIONS AND MORE INFORMATION, CALL YOUR FAVOURITE TRAVEL AGENT OR MALAYSIA AIRLINES/GENERAL SALES AGENT:
STIC TRAVELS PTE. LTD., DELHI TEL: 3326302, 3325786, 3324308, 3321605 OR MALAYSIA AIRLINES, MADRAS TEL: 868625, 868985, 868970, 862802.

AMC-MZG

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

VAYUDOOT

Rough Ride

Airline in a bad shape

PARALYSIS seemed to have gripped India's tertiary airline, Vayudoot, last fortnight. Not only were operations haywire as most of its fleet was grounded with corroded wings and cracks, the staff was in disarray, ranged for and against Managing Director Harsh Vardhan.

It all began with the September 23 crash of a Dornier aircraft (toll: 11). Manufacturers and pilots having repeatedly warned of such a disaster in light of Vayudoot's poor maintenance, it opened a Pandora's box of resentment. Chief Commercial Manager M.P. Singh had already emerged in recent weeks at the head of a strong coterie of dissidents.

Vardhan acted fast. Three days after the crash, he sent in his resignation to Minister of State for Civil Aviation Shivraj Patil. Two days later, he promoted 48 staffers at various levels—including a number of Singh's supporters and made connections. Hundreds of staffers arrived in company transport, a few days later, at the Civil Aviation Ministry, asking that Vardhan's resignation not be accepted.

Along with the unprecedented promotions, Vardhan deftly sidelined Singh, designating him officer on special duty. Singh alleged he was eased out after he refused to waive the dues of some Vayudoot agents (about Rs 14 lakh in one case), and refused to continue giving advertisements worth tens of lakhs of rupees to unheard-of magazines.

Cartoon by AJIT NINAN

Meanwhile, the director-general of civil aviation (DGCA) had ordered a 'one-time check' of Vayudoot's eight Dorniers. Wings of five were found corroded, two of them seriously enough for them to be grounded. As if that was not enough, a crack was discovered on one of Vayudoot's Avros. So all the Avros were also grounded for checks. For three days, then, there was not a single plane available for operations out of three of Vayudoot's six regional bases.

Amid this bleak scenario, the announcement of elections provided Vardhan a breather. The board of directors met routinely on October 23, ignoring his resignation entirely, and the ministry postponed a decision pending the crash inquiry. Ministry sources said they cannot think of anyone who'd be willing to take on a company in such bad shape. Losses continue to spiral, reportedly totalling Rs 4 crore in the three months from June to August. "His successor would come a cropper in six months," says a senior official. So, for the moment, Vardhan continues to hold the baby.

—DAVID DEVADAS

BOMBAY

Sordid Drama

THE roll-call of its past students reads like a directory of giants from India's freedom struggle. But times have changed for Bombay's Elphinstone College. Last fortnight, the 130-year-old government-run institution was rocked by scandal following the gang-rape of a student.

The outrage occurred while a group of students was having a party after college hours, to celebrate the nomination of Avinash Patil, a B.A. student and NSUI member, as representative to the Bombay University students' body.

According to reports, the party turned out to be an all-male Bacchanalia. But one unfortunate girl who stayed behind, was allegedly dragged by Avinash and five others into a room and gang-raped. Her skirt stained with blood, she took shelter in the quarters belonging to the watchman, who informed Principal S.V. Gholkar. The principal telephoned the girl's father, an IAS officer, who took away the girl.

No official notice was taken of the incident for over 10 days since both the principal and the girl's father were reluctant to acknowledge it. The traumatised girl was reportedly sedated and sent out of Bombay. Avinash, however, was seen at the hostel till a few days after the story broke in the press. In fact, he gave an interview, declaring: "Once again, I am stating that we did not commit any rape." He was not traceable subsequently, but his father, while refusing to comment on the incident, said: "Wait and see what happens."

FAWZAN H.

As news of the atrocity became public, a delegation of past students, led by jurist H.N. Seervai and political commentator Minoo Masani, met Gholkar, demanding an inquiry. Gholkar's role in the drama came in for criticism. He had denied the gang-rape to newsmen, and worse, defended Avinash against charges of drunken and violent behaviour in the past. Said Masani: "I was not happy with the principal's attitude."

Students of the college took to the streets with banners reading: 'Gholkar is a liar, Avinash is a rapist.' They met Joint Police Commissioner Arvind Inamdar, who ordered an inquiry. Women's groups took up the issue,

Photographs by SHAILENDRA YASHWANT

Gholkar (top), Avinash; and protesting students: public outcry and, as morchas began to be held daily, the examinations were postponed.

Gholkar has now been transferred, but it is obvious that the reputation of the once premier institution has suffered irreparable damage.

—M. RAHMAN

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

HINDUSTAN MOTORS

If you think we are more than an automobile company, you're right.

At Hindustan Motors, the nucleus of our highly diversified activities, is a commitment to design and manufacture products in keeping with the needs of the marketplace. And a continued emphasis on research and quality control. Today, the Company ranks among the top 25 private Indian Companies – 20th in terms of assets and 22nd in terms of sales.

Our 1988-89 turnover of over Rs.525 crores is poised for rapid increase. The future looks good with a healthy order book and development of new market-oriented vehicles like Contessa Station Wagon, Diesel Contessa and an upgraded Ambassador. Also under implementation, is a strategic Rs.250 crore investment programme for modernisation and technical upgradation, to ensure higher levels of productivity and profitability.

Hindustan Motors is set for accelerated growth. Soon, our shareholders will have an opportunity to strengthen their claim in our exciting future!

HINDUSTAN MOTORS LIMITED
Regd. Office : 'Birla Building', 9/1 R.N. Mukherjee Road
Calcutta 700 001

A new momentum

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Our diversified activities include manufacture of Automobiles, Earthmoving Equipment, Power Products and Heavy Engineering Machinery

Collaborations with world leaders

	Fortune '500' Ranking based on Sales
■ General Motor Corporation, U.S.A.	1st
■ Caterpillar Inc., U.S.A.	35th
■ Mannesmann Demag Group, West Germany	55th
■ Isuzu Motors Limited, Japan	74th

Source : Business Standard Survey of top 300 companies (1987-88)

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

PRESSMAN

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

UTTAR PRADESH

Private Army

Allahabad varsity in turmoil

BOOKS seem to have joined bullets in Allahabad University, where Vice-Chancellor Wahiduddin Malik has set up a unique private army, respectfully called the Allahabad University Security Force (AUSF). Recently, students and teachers began an indefinite strike—the first in 10 years—to protest against the controversial force, which has been accused of using strong-arm methods to silence the opponents of the vice-chancellor. Ostensibly, the AUSF had been set up to protect some of the top administrators of the university.

Malik put together the security force comprising 30 students and former students in February 1988. Five of its members are designated as senior security persons, and are paid Rs 1,000 while the rest are simply junior security persons earning Rs 750 per month. Malik's rationale for setting up the force is: "They would not let me function and the police never came to my help." But this convinces few on the campus. Most see the AUSF as a veritable agent of criminalisation in the university. U.S. Srivastava, formerly head of the zoology department and now member of the university's executive council, says: "Today we are afraid to attend executive council meetings because of these commandos of the vice-chancellor. It was never like this before."

In fact, the controversial security force has been involved in a number of incidents during the past year. The protests began when P.N. Pandey, superintendent of the Sunder Lal Hostel was assaulted on March 16, 1988. Two of the assailants identified were AUSF members. Then, less than a month later, on April 3, an AUSF member was killed in an encounter with the police in Ghazipur. On May 16, K.M. Sharma, superintendent of the G.N. Jha Hostel was beaten up by a group comprising some members of the force. A few days later, the daughter of Manish Dev, a university teacher, was allegedly molested by some AUSF men. Prabhakar Batt, former general secretary of the students union, who had tried to save her, said: "I had instantly recognised them as members of the AUSF. When I told them to leave the girl, they shot at me." Radhey Shyam, a university professor wrote to the state home minister, demanding a CID inquiry into the incident; he was soon abused and threatened by some persons. Later, when Bir Bahadur Singh, then chief minister, visited Allahabad, a delegation went to lodge a protest with him—but they were publicly attacked by AUSF members in the very presence of Allahabad's district magistrate and superintendent of police.

S.K. YADAV

Protests have followed wide-scale accusations that the AUSF uses strong-arm methods to silence the opponents of the vice-chancellor.

Protest against vice-chancellor's security force; (below) Malik

VIJAY AGGARWAL

Though the alarm bells have been ringing in the campus community for a while, the immediate provocation for the recent strike was a meeting of the executive council on September 9, where AUSF members armed with illegal weapons reportedly abused and threatened some council members who dared to oppose Malik. Allegedly, its members attempted to enter the council chamber to assault Ashok Bajpai—a former MLA and son of Union minister Rajendra Kumari Bajpai—who was demanding that Malik spell out the details of the expenses incurred to maintain the security force. Some teachers intervened to block their entry. After the meeting ended, Bajpai and one of his supporters, Shyam Pandey, managed to escape amid abuses and threats by the AUSF members. Says Bajpai: "Both of us were expecting to be assaulted any moment."

Next day, when the meeting resumed, B.K. Tripathi, a teacher-member of the council, aggressively asked the vice-chancellor to reply to a representation. Soon, he was bodily dragged, kicked and thrown out of the chamber by AUSF members while others watched helplessly. Just then, Bajpai and Pandey entered escorted by gun-wielding supporters and began verbally sparring with Malik. The vice-chancellor had to declare the meeting postponed.

Students, teachers and employees have lodged their protest with both Chief Minister N.D. Tiwari and Governor Mohammed Usman Arif, who is the chancellor of the university. In response, the Government has instituted an inquiry into the university's affairs and directed it to disband the security force. Meanwhile, Malik, who seems determined to oppose the Government, says: "If the Government can offer me protection I am ready to disband the force. But I am not going to listen to the Government unless it assures action against those who disrupted the executive council meeting by bringing in armed gunmen."

Despite Malik's self-righteous defence, most teachers are against the security force. Ranjana Kakkar, senior lecturer, says: "The commando force has to go. But at the same time the outsiders who are attempting to criminalise the campus must also be stopped." All the unions—of the teachers, students and employees—have formed a

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The ideal bed mate.

ESSMA

continental quilts

Right in your bed!
With its new range of Continental Quilts. Made of 100% pure virgin wool. It insulates you, allows air to circulate around your body and absorbs moisture.
No more bedtime blues of turning and tossing in bed.
Yes, add pure warmth to your nightlife. It comes only from ESSMA.

Woolmark
(वूलमार्क)

FILLING
PURE NEW WOOL

Seal of pure warmth.

3M-1361

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

As dusk descends on Kundam, a village near Jabalpur in Madhya Pradesh, Sushilabai awaits her husband's return from the fields. Balram, their elder son, is herding the cows home while little Rajni plays in her arms. The infant's joy brings a smile to Sushilabai's face, lighting up memories of the time she had come here as a young bride. When she and her husband had planned their family with care and understanding to bring security and happiness for the future. That was nine years ago, when ITC came to their help...

Sushilabai of Kundam. The thought of marriage held out little joy for her. She feared that her life would be like her mother's: burdened with too many children.

Then, ITC showed her husband the simplest way to plan a small, happy family.

ITC distributes Nirodh contraceptives in the heart of rural India.

Working closely with the Family Planning Association of India in its Kundam Rural Integrated Project, ITC is helping dispel traditional taboos and is popularising maternity and child health care. Utilising its widespread distribution network and considerable marketing experience, ITC has been promoting Nirodh contraceptives since 1968.

In 1989-90 alone, over an area where more than half the country's population lives, ITC will spend above Rs 1 crore on this project: in manpower training programmes, on distribution and on promotion.

Today the country's largest distributor of Nirodh contraceptives, ITC's efforts have been rewarded with the 1988 FICCI Award for Family Planning: an honour that is a symbol of hope for hundreds and thousands of families seeking security and joy in the future.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Where else is ITC working for India?

Agro-industry: ITC's technological expertise, gained from decades of R&D in seed development, is being transferred to produce high-yielding oilseeds. With the manufacture and marketing of edible and non-edible oils and their derivatives, ITC is helping reduce imports.

Cottage-sector Craftsmanship: With looms, raw materials and technical know-how, the ITC-promoted Triveni Handlooms has revived Shahjahanpur's traditional craft of carpet weaving. These carpets are exported by ITC along with many other products from small-scale and cottage-sector units.

Paper and Board—in the core-sector: The ITC-promoted Bhadrachalam Paperboards is a leader in its field. It has set new standards by combining record productivity with exemplary concern for wood conservation, environment protection and tribal welfare.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

New horizons, new hopes.

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Novino Gold

A pack of two packs in the power of four!

Novino launches a new era in penlite batteries.. with Novino Gold. A battery made with the latest zinc chloride technology. With twice the power of conventional penlite batteries.

Use it for all your high-drain equipment – cameras, walkmans, electronic toys, dictaphones... see the difference. Novino Gold lasts twice as long... and more. In a camera flash for instance, you get 110 flashes, not just 50.

Great news . No leaks!

Forget those awful fears of damaging your expensive equipment. Novino Gold is virtually 100% leak-proof. It is the only penlite battery with a metal jacket and a one-piece thermo-plastic seal. Its leak-proof qualities make it ideal for both high-drain products and low-drain ones (calculators, clocks, pocket radios, hearing aids...)

Only Novino could have done it all!

First, we brought you Novino Hyper and Novino Special. Both far ahead of the rest.

Now it's Novino Gold.

To bring it to you, we went to Japan to get the latest zinc chloride technology from Matsushita. Makers of the world-famous National and Panasonic products.

We commissioned a new plant near Indore at a cost of Rs.16 crores. We've spared no effort. We've saved no cost. And here's what we have to offer you. A penlite battery like no other...

Novino Gold. Go for it.

National NOVINO GOLD PENLITE

A REAL TRIUMPH OF TECHNOLOGY

Lakhanpal National Limited. Makers of Novino Hyper, Novino Special and Novino Gold.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Sista's-LNL-2

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

joint council which, on September 16, called for an indefinite strike. D.N. Srivastava, general secretary of the council, says: "There would hardly be any teacher, student or employee leader including myself who hasn't been roughed up by these commandos."

Though most of the campus community opposes the AUSF, some teachers see merit in it. Says S.C. Srivastava, head of the Sanskrit department: "Many vested interests were against Malik when he joined." The vice-chancellor's supporters say that after he took over in April 1987, he was assaulted by students and employees on at least four occasions. The police never turned up and even refused to act on an FIR which named the offending students. Says Vijay Kumar Sinha, an executive council member: "Malik will not be able to function for five minutes without this security force."

If the force is disbanded, Malik would join the list of vice-chancellors in Indian universities who don't dare enter their own offices. In contrast, if the AUSF stays, it sets a dangerous precedent which recognises the criminalisation in Indian universities—but also propels it forward. The issue of disbanding the force and the ensuing strike has thrown Allahabad University into academic anarchy. The controversy needs to be settled fast if the university, which was once known as the Oxford of the East, is to be saved.

—DILIP AWASTHI

BOTTOMLINE BY D. BUNKER

Poll Pundits

RAJIV Gandhi's election announcement has caught everybody with their dhotis down and exposed the shortcomings in the Opposition camp. It also caught quite a few Congressmen nodding off. But in general, political pundits have hailed the elections as a masterstroke. While the political parties grapple their way into the electoral akhara, the surprise move has sparked off intense debate among the pundits on what exactly prompted Rajiv to push the poll button. Here's how their conversation went:

A Political Pundit: Gentlemen, since I happen to have the inside story, I will disclose why Rajiv chose November 22 as the right date. Actually, it's all in the dates. By November 2, Pakistan will have won the Nehru Cup. Rajiv can then project his party as the only one capable of blunting future threats from across the border. October 31 is Mrs Gandhi's death anniversary which will resurrect the sympathy wave. And November 14, all the hoopla over Nehru will rub off on his grandson.

Apolitical Pundit: You mean he performed this masterstroke just by looking at his desk calendar? I refuse to believe that. Remember how he confused August 15 with January 26? Dates is just not his thing. It must be something else.

A More Political Pundit: Take it from someone who knows the real inside story. It was all due to Mani Shankar Aiyar. His resignation prompted Rajiv to call the elections early. You know the saying, mani makes the mare go.

Apolitical Pundit: But why should that matter?

The More Political Pundit: Only us insiders know that Mani's quitting would have led to a deluge. If he stands for elections, Partha is certain to demand a ticket to contest against him. Gopi Arora will then demand a ticket, so will Suman Dubey if he can find a safe constituency. I even heard Ronen Sen asking for a ticket but that may have been for Kuala Lumpur. But can you imagine the PM without the PMO? It's like Macbeth without the ghost. Rajiv had no choice.

Apolitical Pundit: It all sounds very bizarre to me. Surely there must be something more to it?

Another Political Pundit: Of course, there is. I have it straight from the mare's mouth. It was all because of the President.

Apolitical Pundit: You mean another Zail Singh? That sounds more like it. But frankly, I didn't think he'd go so far.

Another Political Pundit: He didn't. That's the problem. Rajiv wanted him to take an African safari. Apparently there are several invitations pending for years from that part of the world. But the President refused to go till Rajiv announced the election dates. He said he thinks the Indian elections will be more interesting than an African safari.

Apolitical Pundit: That's a wild theory if you ask me.

Yet Another Political Pundit: Ask me and I'll tell you the inside of the inside story. He wanted to catch his own partymen off balance.

Apolitical Pundit: That he did. But what for?

Yet Another Political Pundit: You have to be a political pundit to read Between The Lines and figure out what is really happening. Let me explain. By catching them off balance, he gets them to agree to let him finalise the list of candidates. That way, he is sure he will include all the people he trusts. Simple isn't it?

Apolitical Pundit: A bit too simple. How many trusted candidates are his?

Yet Another Political Pundit: Five. But that doesn't matter. It's the message not the number that is important.

Apolitical Pundit: That's terrible election arithmetic. I'm still convinced there's more to it than meets the eye.

A Plain Pundit: Of course there is.

Cartoon by AJIT NINAN

Apolitical Pundit: Who are you? Not another political pundit I hope.

A Plain Pundit: I'm just a plain pundit. But I also happen to be Rajiv's PA. Private Astrologer, that is. Actually it's very simple. He asked for the most auspicious dates and November 22 came up.

Apolitical Pundit: You mean this so-called masterstroke was because you picked a date from a hat?

A Plain Pundit: I didn't. My parrot did.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

KARNATAKA

Secular Stand

● IT'S one of the country's most powerful religious seats. And it recently acquired a new incumbent. Last fortnight, Siva Rama Anjaneya, 38, better known as Bharati Theertha Swami, was installed as the 36th Shankaracharya of the Sringeri Sharada Peetham following the death of Sri Abhinava Vidya Teertha Swamiji last month. The coronation of the Swami had a touch of glamour. As he

MUSHTAQ AHMAD

The 36th Shankaracharya

ascended the silver throne, a 6.5-kg diamond-and-pearl studded gold crown was placed on his head.

Also, the regular quota of political luminaries was present at the coronation on the banks of the Tungabhadra in Karnataka: pre-eminently Governor P. Venkatasubbaiah and Union Steel Minister M.L. Fotedar. Conspicuously absent was former chief minister R.K. Hegde, busy with poll preparations.

Mercifully, the Swami appeared to be eschewing communal politics. On the Ayodhya dispute, he said: "All parties concerned should accept the court decision as final." Clearly, a blow to the fundamentalists.

ASSAM

Hostility at Home

SAIBALDAS

Mahanta: flood of troubles

● WHILE the Bodo stir continues to simmer, the All Assam Students Union (AASU) is threatening to add to the Assam Government's woes by launching its own agitation.

Last fortnight, AASU, which brought the AGP and Chief Minister Prafulla Kumar Mahanta to power, called for a peaceful bandh in the state, meeting with success. It also launched an indefinite non-cooperation stir and threatened to sever all links with the AGP. Its complaints: the Government's failure to revise the electoral rolls to identify foreigners, rehabilitation of the "martyrs" of the Assam movement and, most importantly, withdrawal of the Congress(I)-instituted criminal cases against AASU activists during the movement.

The chief minister has managed to defuse the crisis by promising to hold talks on the issues. But this is likely to provide him only a temporary respite.

PUNJAB

Warring Women

● Amarjit Kaur and Rajinder Kaur Bhathal, both senior Congress(I) members, were close friends. And so, after Bhathal was appointed chairman of the Punjab State Social Welfare Board in August 1988, Amarjit was made the head of the Central Social Welfare Board (CSWB) at Delhi.

But within two days the friends crossed swords with Amarjit complaining against Bhathal's "arbitrary functioning".

From then on it has been a litany of complaints. Bhathal complained that Amarjit—who had unsuccessfully contested the Patiala parliamentary seat in 1985—was partial to that district in the implementation of socio-economic projects. Amarjit denied the charge saying that projects for other districts like Sangrur—Bhathal's constituency lies in this district—were not cleared due to lack of relevant data. The denouement in this irrational scuffle came when the CSWB froze funds of the state board. But the battle continues.

Amarjit Kaur (left) and Rajinder Kaur Bhathal: bitter rivalry

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

BHAWAN SINGH

MAHARASHTRA

Question of Survival

● THE trade in human organs took a macabre twist in Bombay last fortnight when a patient suffering from renal failure narrowly escaped receiving a kidney from an AIDS-infected donor. The patient, a 35-year-old woman from Kashmir, was offered the kidney for Rs 25,000 through an agent. As tests were being conducted on the donor before removing his kidney, Dr I.S. Gilada, secretary-general of the Indian Health Organisation, who has been campaigning relentlessly on the AIDS issue, was tipped off about the dubious organ transfer. The prospective kidney donor, an unemployed graduate, was a professional blood donor notorious for his stated resolve to continue selling blood in spite of being an AIDS-carrier. He has escaped detention by using false names at different blood banks.

According to Gilada, he was informed by another regular blood donor that an AIDS-infected blood donor was about to sell his kidney. Gilada traced the man to an expensive downtown hospital and the kidney transfer was abruptly called off.

Dr Gilada: saving grace

The sensational case once again highlights the need both for compulsory AIDS tests for blood donors and for rehabilitating professional AIDS-infected donors who continue to sell their blood to survive.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE NEW INDIAN CLASSIC

INTRODUCING
THE ONLY SOAP
WITH SANDAL AND GLYCERINE.

A classic blend of natural sandal oil
and pure glycerine.
Let the sandal soften, smoothen
and perfume your skin.
Let the glycerine gently moisturize your skin.
All the year through and specially during winter.
And let your skin be simply divine.

CLASSIC

Hmm... So exclusive. So exciting!

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Mudra Bir MSC.237 89

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Yamatake Honeywell, Japan – Instrumentation.

Honeywell, USA – Instrumentation.

Nakajima All, Japan – ACN Electronic Typewriters.

Valentine, France – Ranutrol Hansa Showers.

Centre for Development of Telematics, India – ACX EPABX Systems.

Schlumberger (Singapore), Wayne Kerr & Deltest (UK), Polar (Channel Islands), Aehr (West Germany)–Automatic Test Equipment.

SINCE 1969, THE RANUTROL GRO
WORKED VERY HA

Twenty years ago, we started with a dream.

Today, the Ranutrol Group has a turnover of over Rs. 30 crores.

And twelve foreign collaborations and business co-operations, stretching from Tokyo to Minneapolis. Each an undisputed world leader in its field.

To get them was difficult enough. But the real hard work began after the handshake was over.

The result is a team of over a thousand well-trained personnel. Three factories. Nine branches. An advanced R&D Centre.

And thirty five world class products that can pass the most difficult quality control tests. Anywhere in the world.

From home improvement products (Ranutrol Hansa Aqua Mixers, (ACN Electron electronic proc

Ranutrol Aqua
Instrumentatio
So, every tim forward to one

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Homer Group, UK – Power Showers.

Teledyne Water Pik, USA – Ranutrol Aquapure Water Filters.

Paul Isphording Metallwerke, West Germany – Gas Controls.

Emerson Electric Gmbh, West Germany – Heating Controls.

Hansa Metallwerke AG, West Germany – Ranutrol Hansa Aqua Mixers.

Teddington, West Germany – Air-conditioning & Refrigeration Controls.

GROUP OF COMPANIES HAS HARD INDEED.

Ranutrol Aquapure Water Filters) and office automation equipment (JACN Electronic Typewriters, EPABX Systems) to advanced electronic products (Automatic Test Equipment, Process Control Instrumentation).

So, every time we shake hands with someone new, you can look forward to one more.

The Ranutrol Group.

We want you to have the best.

TECHNOLOGY QUALITY SERVICE RANUTROL GROUP

Corporate Office : F-85, Okhla Industrial Area, Phase-I, New Delhi-110 020. Tel : 683 6001. Telex : 031-65372 ACPL IN. FAX : 91-011-684 1386.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

In the apathetic absence of state policy, Prakash Chand Joshi, an RSS activist, launched a humanitarian crusade in 1986 to provide a future for Punjab's 8,000 children orphaned by terrorist bullets. Joshi died last fortnight, but his message is being picked up by others: do not build walls of communal tension, instead build a child's future.

PUNJAB

Rescuing An Orphaned Future

Q. What happened to your father?
A. Uggarvadis (terrorists) came to the shop and killed him.
Q. Who is a terrorist?
A. They are dakus (dacoits).
Q. Why did they kill your father?
A. I don't know.

AS Rajiv Kumar, 5, says these words, his eyes transmit confusion, pain and fear, symptomatic of the trauma faced by the 8,000-odd children in Punjab orphaned by the terrorist gun. Left fatherless, economically vulnerable, these children—together with their widowed mothers—present the most tragic face of terrorism. In the apathetic absence of state policy, many of these orphans are left with nothing but the memories that haunt their everyday existence.

On the fateful day, Rajiv's brother, Sanjeev Kumar, 8, remembers sitting with his father in their Amritsar ration shop, readying to pull the shutters down. In the enveloping darkness, a group of masked men entered the shop and shot his father dead at point-blank range. Sanjeev still wonders why his father was killed. He says: "I feel scared at night and often dream of daddy."

Traumatic memories also haunt Deepak Kumar, 4, who began to cry when he saw someone resembling his father. These are few of the many traumatised orphans in today's Punjab who live in shattered households, their mothers forced to become breadwinners. But bread is scarce.

Amid this darkness, one man's courageous crusade has lit an inspiring flame of hope. He is Prakash Chand Joshi, convener of the Peedit Prakalp Sewa Samiti, an organisation he conceived and almost single-handedly oversaw to help the innocent victims of Punjab's human tragedy. Deeply moved by the plight of children orphaned by terrorist violence, Joshi, an RSS member, started a unique 'adopt an orphan' scheme by convincing the more affluent people in the state to 'adopt' a child by paying Rs 1,000 annually towards his upbringing. The money is used for paying school fees, buying uniforms and books. The idea is to provide an economic pillar to help build a child's future.

The scheme took root when Joshi toured villages to visit families struck by terrorists and noticed little children clinging to their mothers. Or just sitting alone in a corner, looking lost, their toys lying abandoned. Fear, not grief, gripped them. Touched by their innocent suffering and concerned about their future, Joshi decided to develop the scheme in earnest.

Armed with photographs of the children, Joshi canvassed potential adopters in homes and factories. Some apprehended terrorist reprisal. But, in general, the response has been gratifying. Says Baldev Chawla, the samiti president: "The scheme has met with an overwhelming response." Till now, 1,200 children have been adopted, including one by former chief minister Surjit Singh Barnala.

For Joshi and his colleagues in the samiti, the continuing terrorist violence keeps them occupied. Whenever news of a terrorist attack reaches them, the samiti's workers rush to the affected village and identify the bereaved children. Comforting the widows, they record the names of the children, advising the relatives to visit their Amritsar office for adoption.

In several cases, all the male members of a family have been killed. The women can't even bear the funeral costs. In such cases, the samiti provides the family with Rs 3,000 to Rs 5,000 for immediate expenses. Chawla says: "It's not the funeral alone, but questions like, how will I

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Photographs by PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

Adopted by the Jainendra Gurukul High School and housed in its hostel, Rajiv and Sanjeev Kumar are once again beginning to find the security which had been completely shattered by terrorist bullets.

Children at the gurukul; (inset) late Prakash Chand Joshi: pioneering work be able to feed and educate my children, which seem to be weighing on the mothers' minds."

Sampati Devi, a mother of four is prototypical. Disaster struck when her husband, Madan Lal Sharma, a shopkeeper, was killed with 21 others on May 21, 1986, in Amritsar's Krishna Nagar. The samiti has found foster parents for the Sharma children, Rajni, Deepak, Vijay and Ajay. Although Sampati Devi has been appointed as a peon at the Chief Agriculture Office, her salary of Rs 1,075 a month is not enough to support four children. The adoption scheme has come as welcome relief, allowing the children to continue with their education. More importantly, it gives them a chance to go out, to be away from a surcharged atmosphere at home. To play and mix with children of their own age. To once again, feel normal.

By highlighting the seriousness of the problem, the samiti is attracting an increasing number of people wanting to 'adopt' orphans. Last month, the Amritsar association of the heads of public schools announced that they would adopt five children each. Thirty principals have already started enrolling orphaned children. Arun Arora, the association's general secretary, says: "There are 400 public schools in Amritsar and they are all willing to co-operate."

The Peedit Prakalp Sewa Samiti's unique 'adopt an orphan' scheme has made it possible for widowed Sampati Devi's four children Rajni, Vijay, Ajay and Deepak to continue their education.

The Jainendra Gurukul High School in Panchkula recently adopted 50 children, housing them in its hostel. Ved Prakash Jain, the gurukul president, explained: "They need a total change of scene." Recalling the inmates who arrived two years ago, he says: "Most of them behave normally but the memories are yet to fade."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The future on your wrist.

Ceramics - not only aerospace engineers but Rado designers have rediscovered it. The result? The new Rado DiaStar Anatom. Slim and slightly convex, it is the most comfortable watch you could wear as it molds itself perfectly to the anatomy of your wrist. It is watersealed and its ceramic bracelet and its crystal are fully scratchproof. Available in ladies' and gentlemen's models.

RADO
Switzerland

When you're driving down a rain-swept highway, improper lighting could mean the difference between life and death...

TRUST BAJAJ TO DESIGN GHTING SYSTEM. E RIGHT SITUATION. RIGHT RESULT.

Bajaj brings you a range of luminaires and lighting systems. Designed by computers to suit virtually every lighting need. Be it for industries, commercial institutions or street lighting.

Each made to our own demanding standards. As well as to the stringent specifications of the Bureau of Indian Standards, Commission Électrotechnique Internationale and of other international organisations.

For our advisory service on lighting and or lighting installation design, write to, General Manager (Lighting), Bajaj Electricals Limited, 51, Mahatma Gandhi Road, Bombay 400 023., or contact our nearest regional branch office.

bajaj

bajaj LUMINAIRES

Spreading Light – scientific

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

BEEDI BARONS

Rolling in Money

The Rs 3,000-crore labour-intensive beedi industry is dominated by a few families which came up the hard way. Bound by traditional values, many of them reject modern management techniques. But winds of change have started blowing and a few are diversifying and also installing computers.

SCENE: an austere, dusty, decrepit building in Mysore. Inside: a vast, dimly lit, cavernous hall. Dozens of clerks sit in stolid silence, heads buried in jumbo-sized ledger books. The highest paid employee is the general manager. Take home pay: Rs 2,500. A few accountants are paid a measly Rs 500. Often the boss spends as much as 90 minutes poring over accounts and signing cheques, some of them for as little as Rs 25.

No, this is not the headquarters of a sick industry, making a last-ditch attempt to keep its head above water. This is Mangalore Ganesh Beedi Works, the country's largest manufacturer of beedis. Daily production: 13 crore beedis. Placed end to end, that would stretch all the way from Kashmir to Kanyakumari. The company disburses around Rs 20 lakh daily to a lakh of workers engaged in collection, production and marketing. In 1988, the annual turnover was Rs 150 crore.

And profits? Since the company is a closely-held private company, figures are not easy to come by. But what is known is that seven members of the family which runs Mangalore Ganesh together paid Rs 5 crore as income tax and find a place among the top 10 income tax payers in the country.

But despite such phenomenal wealth, the owners of Mangalore Ganesh are merely the first among equals amidst India's beedi kings—spread across Karnataka, Madhya Pradesh and Gujarat. Prominent among them: the Ahmedabad-based Prabhudas Kishoredas Tobacco Products Ltd and allied firms (annual turnover: Rs 91 crore) the Jabalpur-based Mohanlal Hargovinddas (Rs 65 crore) or the Sagar-based Chottabhai Jethabhai (Rs 60 crore) and Bhagwandas Shobhalal (Rs 20 crore).

It is not just beedis that are their concern. Many of them dabble in politics. The Mangalaore Ganesh beedi family back the RSS and BJP and Making beedis: traditional methods

R.C. SAHU

R.C. SAHU

SHRAVAN KUMAR PATEL
Partner, Mohanlal Hargovinddas
Annual turnover: Rs 65 crore

The group has 6,000 regular employees, pays nearly Rs 10 crore in excise duty and owns "more vehicles than the Mafatlals".

JAVED RAJA

RAJNIKANT BHAI PATEL
Partner, Prabhudas Kishordas
Annual turnover: Rs 91 crore

The company has installed computers and has promoted a soyabean extraction plant with a turnover of Rs 1.5 crore.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

MAHESH BHAT

RAGHURAM PRABHU
Founder, Mangalore Ganesh Beedis
Annual turnover: Rs 150 crore

Prabhu, who was a beedi roller, went into business in 1932. Now seven family members are among the top ten tax-payers.

P.C. SAHU

DALCHAND JAIN
Partner, Bhagwandas Shobhalal
Annual turnover: Rs 20 crore

Dalchand's father used to hawk clothes and then started rolling beedis. Today the company makes 2 crore beedis everyday.

one of the partners, Ananda Rao, was jailed during the Emergency. In Madhya Pradesh, which produces 65 per cent of the country's tendu leaves and one-fourth of its beedis, the beedi kings are potent political players. Beedi baron Vithal Bhai Patel is a member of the Motilal Vora Cabinet. And a dozen MLAs, are either beedi manufacturers or their nominees.

All this pelf and power is founded on a simple product—bits of tobacco leaf wrapped up in a leaf of the tendu tree which is found in the forests of central India. The two met about a century ago, and the poor man's smoke was born. Small and easy to carry, it soon edged out the hookah and the chillum. And so was born a flourishing industry.

Today, the beedi industry employs 50 lakh labourers in a dozen states. Everyday, they turn out about 150 crore beedis. In some states, it is the second largest employer—after agriculture. Last year, the industry's total turnover was estimated to be between Rs 2,500 crore and Rs 3,000 crore. Annual wage bill: Rs 700 crore. Excise revenue paid to the Central Government: about Rs 200 crore. This year, with beedi prices nearly doubling, turnover is expected to reach a staggering Rs 5,000 crore.

It's a phenomenal achievement for an industry that operates without giant factories, power or machinery. A decade short of the 21st century, beedis are still laboriously rolled by hand in dingy surroundings in the homes of workers. Sattedars distribute the tendu leaf, tobacco and thread to the workers. They also pay wages at government rates.

But the labourers are not exactly overjoyed by the meagre wages they are paid. K. Radhakrishna Rao, general secretary of the Mangalore Ganesh Beedi Workers' Association, says about his employers: "They may be the country's highest tax payers, but they cough up the money by hitting workers in the stomach." Retorts Janardhan Rao, son-in-law of the patriarch: "We pay what we think they deserve. We do not earn easy money to throw it about."

HIS statement is questionable. Estimates of the industry's profit margins vary, depending on who's quoting them. Laxmi Narayan Silakari, who has been working among the beedi workers of Madhya Pradesh since 1950, says: "There is a 40-per cent profit on turnover." Industrialists put the figure at a modest 1 to 3 per cent. But there are not many takers for that figure. Tendu traders, for instance, often used to complain that they could hardly make ends meet. Last year, the Madhya Pradesh Government handed over the tendu trade to cooperatives. In the very first year, they earned a huge profit of Rs 200 crore on a turnover of Rs 400 crore.

This thriftiness is probably born of the beedi kings' humble beginnings. Mangalore Ganesh's patriarch, Raghuram Prabhu, was himself a beedi roller. In 1932, he borrowed a few hundred rupees and went into business. When the business grew, he roped in his brother-in-law, B. Madhava Shenoy, a clerk in the Mysore Palace office. The two would travel on bicycles distributing beedis. It was a hard road but they persevered. By the time they handed over charge to their heirs in the '70s, the empire was worth a few crores.

In Madhya Pradesh and Gujarat too,

Beedis being transported

MAHESH BHAT

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

When it comes while supply indige there

Ask Skoda

At stake is the timely completion of the Vishakhapatnam Steel Plant.

The Medium Merchant and Structural Mill of this plant was to be designed by Skodaexport of Czechoslovakia. They needed an Indian partner to manage the project and supply from India 10500 T of plant and equipment. Monitoring, controlling, erecting and commissioning. To keep a Rs. 200-crore project under control.

No one company in India was in a position to attempt it. Nobody could. Or so everyone believed.

It took Mukand to prove them wrong.

Mukand took up the challenge and the mammoth project is going full steam ahead. At an international level of expertise. Vindicating the trust. And shattering technological shackles.

This seems to have become the favourite pursuit at Mukand's Machine Building Division.

Consider Asia's largest rotary drier that we made for SPIC. Or the mobile service structure for vertical assembly of rockets that we designed and manufactured for ISRO. The first indigenously designed door extractor for coke ovens was made by us for Bhilai Steel Plant, as was the ore transfer car for them.

And, of course, the wide range of quality cranes we are most famous and trusted for. From cranes for steel plant applications to microprocessor controlled rotating trolley cranes.

Yes, we re
e are well ar with world-cla with technical

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

When it comes to co-ordinating a Rs.200-crore project, while supplying 10500 T of plant and equipment indigenously on behalf of a foreign company, there are no simple solutions.

Ask Skodaexport of Czechoslovakia.

Yes, we relish challenges. And we are well armed to meet them. With world-class design capability. With technical associations with the world's best in material handling. With a thrust on indigenisation. With engineers we are proud of. Who constantly give shape to their technological dreams. At Mukand's Machine Building Division.

For further information on — Cranes • Bulk Material Handling Systems • Rolling Mill and Auxiliary Equipment • Bulk Material Process Equipment • Ore and Mineral Dressing Equipment • Metallurgical Plants • Projects — call or write to:

MUKAND'S MACHINE BUILDING DIVISION

MUKAND LTD.

Belapur Road, Dighe, P.O. Kalwe,
Thane 400 605. Maharashtra.
(Formerly Mukand Iron & Steel Works Ltd.)
Tel: (0215) 2171-5. Tlx: 011-77011 MUKT IN

Rediffusion/M/7812 a

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

it's the same rags-to-riches story at every beedi company. Sixty years ago, the Prabhudas Kishoredas family began its journey to prosperity when Prabhudas Bhai quit his job as munim in a beedi firm in Jabalpur to launch a unit of his own in Ahmedabad. Soon, his two sons, Jaswantlal and Prahlad, joined him and set up another unit in Damoh, Madhya Pradesh. Today, the group—with its flagship Telephone brand—is controlled by 11 brothers and cousins but the reins are held by Rajnikant Bhai Patel and Ashok Bhai Patel. It makes 8.60 crore beedis and pays Rs 3.60 lakh in excise duty every day. The family's Beediwal Park in Ahmedabad has six swank bungalows.

It's the same story at Mohanlal Hargovinddas. Mohanlal used to roll beedis by the roadside at Jabalpur in Madhya Pradesh until he started marketing them under the Sher (Lion) brand name in 1902. The company grew to be the country's largest, until it was overtaken by Mangalore Ganesh. Mohanlal handed over control to his adopted son, Parmanand Bhai, 68, who has since retired.

Everyday, the company and its five allied firms which have 6,000 regular employees, pays Rs 10 crore as excise duty and owns "more vehicles than the Mafatlals". The company turns out 6 crore beedis at a dozen centres and hawks them all across north India. And it exports beedis with filters.

Parmanand Bhai and his sons—elder son Shravan Kumar Patel is a Congress(I) MLA—are non-smokers and even advocate a ban on smoking. But such sentiments haven't slowed down the Patels. They live in style in a double-storeyed mansion fitted with Italian marble, huge chandeliers and period furniture.

ARVINDBHAI PATEL
Partner, Chhotabhai Jethabhai
Annual turnover: Rs 60 crore

The winds of change are blowing. Computers have been installed and Arvindbhai's only son is studying in London.

With a turnover of Rs 60 crore, Chhotabhai Jethabhai is just a step behind Mohanlal Hargovinddas. But the company has seen far more glorious days. At one time, it was the country's second-largest beedi manufacturer. Leading brand: 27 No. Then, due to a family feud and a long legal battle, business was suspended for over one year in 1974. Now 40 production centres make 4.25 crore beedis a day.

The group was set up by the brothers Javer Bhai and Jetha Bhai in 1919 in Gondia, Maharashtra. Twenty years, later, the Sagar branch was opened which later became the headquarters. During the Second World War, the group established its presence in the North-east when supplies were disrupted in that region. Today, it is a force in other states in the north and the east also. Last year, it paid Rs 8 crore as Central excise and Rs 1.5 crore in sales tax on tendu leaves.

Bhagwandas Jain, founder of Bhagwandas Shobhalal, used to hawk clothes and other goods, moving from village to village in Sagar district. In 1920, he started rolling beedis himself, and then gradually began employing labourers. Recalls his son, Dalchand Jain, 61, Congress(I) MP from Damoh: "My father used to walk for miles, later he purchased a bicycle and in 1930, he bought his first Morris." Today, the firm and its allied companies have a turnover of Rs 20 crore and manufacture about two crore beedis every day. But in an age of digital quartz, the beedi industry has remained a clanging medieval clock. As Janardhan Rao, partner of Mangalore Ganesh says, "We have no faith in all these management techniques and gadgets. Success has come to us even as we have continued to follow what others condescendingly refer to as traditional methods."

But nevertheless the first winds of change have begun to blow in the beedi industry which clings to traditional values. Mohanlal Hargovinddas has installed computers and has also set up laboratories and advertised its products on film and radio. At Chhotabhai Jethabhai too, computers have been installed, though munims are still relied upon. The only son of Arvindbhai Patel, senior partner of Chhotabhai Jethabhai, attends a school in London. Rajnikant Bhai is sending his children to an English-medium school "so that they don't face the same problems" he did.

And perhaps most important of all, many of the beedi kings are diversifying into other fields. Two years ago, the Prabhudas Kishoredas group launched a drug unit in Kalol in Gujarat. Today, it boasts an annual turnover of Rs 3.40 crore. Chhotabhai Jethabhai promoted a soya extraction plant in 1984. Turnover: Rs 1.15 crore. And Bhagwandas Shobhalal has diversified into plastics, soya extraction, flour mills and mechanised farms.

But old fashioned or modern, all the beedi kings have an eye on the future—which they want to make sure is every bit as glowing as the past. Raghurama Prabhu may have been speaking for all of them when he said: "I still think of our venture as a small baby."

—N.K. SINGH in Sagar, Damoh and Jabalpur with CHIDANAND RAJGHATTA in Mysore and UDAY MAHURKAR in Ahmedabad

Anand Rao of Mangalore Ganesh: scrupulously honest

MAHESH BHAT

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

LISTEN TO THIS PICTURE ON MELTRACK

Frenzied fingers on the fretboard ♪ Rolling wrists on the drumset. ♪ Mind blowing modulations on the microphone ♪ Scintillating sounds from the synthesizer... Music ♪ The greatest tonic of our times ♪

And Meltrack ♪ The greatest tribute to the magic of music ♪ A product of authentic Japanese technology ♪ Exacting quality control ♪ Rigorous testing ♪ To bring you your favourite music exactly as you know it ♪ And love it ♪

Meltrack ♪ Born out of a genuine understanding of the power of music ♪ Pure music ♪

MURUGAPPA ELECTRONICS LTD.

MELTRACK
Audio Cassettes
Music. Pure and Clear.

Mudra:M:ME:3747

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

RELIANCE ENTERS FINANCE

EVEN as the legal controversy over Larsen & Toubro's public issue hogged headlines last month, a significant development in the Reliance group went virtually unnoticed. In early October, the group received official permission to float a finance company with a share capital of Rs 125 crore. This particular proposal had been shot down three years ago by the then finance minister, V.P. Singh. Reason: a finance company can borrow ten times its net worth—in this instance Rs 1,250 crore—giving the group tremendous clout in the stock-market. But that's a thing of the past. A Reliance spokesman now says the new company, headed by a former Peerless employee, will pool the group's substantial investible resources and deploy them in the stock-market. However, banking sources contend that the company, besides dabbling in the inter-corporate deposit market, will serve as the group's new take-over arm. Move over Trishna, Reliance Capital and Finance Trust is here.

BUILDING BLOCKS

BALLARPUR Industries Limited (BILT), the flagship of the Rs 1,200-crore Thapar group, is entering the real estate and construction materials business in a big way. The company has formed a separate real estate division, and taken over the Rs 2-crore Modern Stramit (India) Limited, which manufactures fire-proof boards for doors and windows out of rice and wheat straw, at Rajamundhry in Andhra Pradesh. A Rs 27-crore project to produce light concrete blocks, using fly ash from the Badarpur thermal power plant, is underway at Palwal in Haryana. And plans are afoot to take over a similar unit near the Ennore power plant in Tamil Nadu. BILT, apparently, is keen to literally live up to its name.

DIVERSIFICATION SPREE

MORE and more large industrial houses are jumping on to the food processing bandwagon. The latest being the J.K./Singhania group. J.K. Industries Limited, controlled by Hari Shankar Singhania, has sought government approval to set up two such projects in Uttar Pradesh involving a total investment of Rs 43 crore. The first unit, to come up in Rampur district, will produce flavoured yoghurt, milk and cheese products, while the second will be for the manufacture of "high fructose" corn syrup at a yet undisclosed location. Another faction of the J.K. group, headed by Vijaypat and Ajaypat Singhania, is also on a diversification spree, this time into telecommunication equipment. This faction has drawn up plans to take over a telephone exchange manufacturing unit located at Srinagar.

CIRCUMVENTION STRATEGY

THE Rs 60-crore Hyderabad-based Dr Reddy's Laboratories group has devised a unique plan to counter the threat of American trade retaliation under Section 301 of the US Trade Act. While many Indian pharmaceutical concerns apprehensively await a curb on exports of bulk drugs to the US, Dr Reddy's Laboratories is not letting the grass grow under its feet. The group plans to set up an export-oriented venture in Mexico. Reason: there are no restrictions on pharmaceutical exports from Mexico to the US. The venture may also enable the Indian company to obtain a toe-hold in the burgeoning pharmaceuticals market in Latin America. At present, Dr Reddy's Laboratories exports Rs 50-crore worth of methyldopa and ibuprofen to the US. And this figure is expected to treble in three years' time.

BOFORS SYNDROME

STOCK-MARKET indices may or may not be barometers of the health of the economy. But one thing is certain: investor sentiments take a beating every time there is bad news on the Bofors front. Within a week of the Swedish radio breaking news about kickbacks in the Bofors Howitzer deal, the Economic Times index fell by more than 6 points. The decline was twice as much when the Swedish National Audit Bureau's report was disclosed by the Government. Curiously, the fall in the Economic Times index was much less (4 to 7 points) after the release of the report of the Comptroller and Auditor General. Gen. K. Sundarji's revelations in INDIA TODAY and the recent series of reports prepared by N. Ram and Chitra Subramaniam. Have Indian stock-markets become apathetic to the Bofors scandal? That's a moot question.

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

FACE-SAVING PLANS

FACED with charges of asset-stripping by its union leaders, the management of ICI India Limited is trying hard to convince all and sundry that the company does not want to curtail its operations in the country. Yes, it's fertiliser plant in Kanpur is up for sale. But not necessarily to the Abhey Oswal group, as has been widely reported, say company sources. Three others have bid for the plant, including a section of the Birla group, and a final decision is yet to be taken. Further, the sources add that though ICI's polyester staple fibre unit is performing badly, the company has not decided to hawk it. From the sale proceeds of its fertiliser unit, ICI plans to set up new projects manufacturing speciality chemicals, including new generation rubber chemicals, and hybrid seeds. There is also a plan to get into animal husbandry. That is not all. ICI hopes to invest Rs 250 crore in a new plant to produce base materials for polyurethane.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Che

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kang

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Is your hero a C an Edmund Hillary, a Mithun Ch a Jane Fonda or a

HERO HAWK

e Racer's Edge!

If you have the drive and fire to n, here's the fastest racer for you. th the speed and swiftness of a iwk. The power of imported con gears—in single, 5 or 10 eeds.

And the body of a top-class nlete for sure victory!

HERO Ranger

The lure of adventure!

If you dare to go where no other bike has been before, India's only all-terrain bike is for you. Equipped with balloon tyres, to smoothen the roughest terrain.

A straight handlebar for perfect balance against the fury of the wind. Die-cast brakes to stop you on the steepest incline...

Go discover places!

HERO HANSA

Pure cycling pleasure!

For fun lovers, there's Hero Hansa—light, breezy, romantic! A real good-looker!

This star performer offers you the sheer comfort of a deluxe saddle. A well-designed chain cover. And a choice of exciting colours.

Now go for the fun that cycling was meant to be.

HERO HANSA (Ladies' bike)

She's a winner!

She's fleet-footed and graceful. Lightweight yet sturdy. She's the winning champion who's India's pride.

The Hero Hansa offers you the sheer luxury of soft finger grips. A deluxe saddle.

And effortless performance, no matter what the track!

lero gives you the largest range of cycles in India including the Hero Jet and Hero Royal—two of India's toughest bikes. n our range of bikes, each one is a hero. To find out more about our range, contact your nearest dealer for a free catalogue. nd just in case you want to gift a friend a Hero, remember Hero offers cycles in special presentation packages.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Carl Lewis, Chakraborty, a Shiny Abraham, or a Superman?

HERO FITKIT

Oh what a body!

She's fit, active and shapely. And she'll show you the keep-fit way. With no diet restrictions.

Because Hero Fitkit (Hero's workout bike) offers you 10 speeds to work on, with a free-pedalling wheel. A height-adjustable seat and handle bar... for the Jane Fonda look!

Skipper

For super adventure!

Kids, get ready for the thrills. Here comes your super hero — the Hero Skipper.

It'll take you to the world of adventure and fun. And grow as you grow, with its height-adjustable seat. Now take home your own super hero.

Rough Rider

The tough one!

For tough kids there's a hero too. Strong, tough and hard to beat.

With the body of an ace-champion — an all-steel welded frame. Balloon tyres for a strong grip on every terrain. And the perfect handlebar for better balance.

No.1 World-wide HERO BICYCLES

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

HTA 650

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

PRICES

A Rising Election Issue

Prices ease, but the Congress(I) can gain little

FIRST, the good news for the Rajiv Gandhi Government. Post-harvest prices of cereals and vegetables are down as is typical at this time. Now, the bad news. The ruling party can gain no mileage from this. Reason: prices of other food items—notably sugar, edible oils and tea—have already risen to such an extent that a small decline will have little impact on household budgets. So, even as a second successive bumper crop is on the cards, official spokesmen are less than enthusiastic. For inflationary pressures remain strong.

For the last two months, Cabinet Secretary T.N. Seshan has been meeting officials of the Food and Civil Supplies Ministry virtually every day to devise ways to control prices. In the capital's Krishi Bhavan, a "control room" hums with activity. But the news flowing in has been mixed. For the Government realises that despite imports of sugar, pulses, rice and edible oils, they can have at best a limited impact on retail prices. "Our economy is market-oriented and the Government can do only so much and no more to control prices," says a government economist.

Two separate developments last month highlighted the Government's dilemma. A programme on inflation, Money Matters, prepared by PTI-TV and due for telecast on October 14, was abruptly withdrawn. Doordarshan developed cold feet because noted economists lambasted the Government's policies, particularly the high level of deficit financing which they felt led to the spurt in prices. Surprisingly, even Abid Hussain, member, Planning Commission, contended that "exaggerated" production estimates and the consequent delay in "essential minimum imports" were responsible for sugar prices rising.

The other development was that in the Lok Sabha, Congress(I) members grilled Minister of State for Food and Civil Supplies Sukh Ram on prices. While Ram argued that the "overall price situation is not as bad as is being made out", others were unconvinced. Queried MP Kishori Ram: "How is it that the same Government which could check prices in the 1987 drought year, cannot do so now in spite of favourable monsoons?" That question continues to rankle officials. Admits a bureaucrat: "After managing the 1987 drought, we became complacent."

Still, the situation could have been worse. Official figures show that wheat prices are below last year's levels. "This is no mean achievement considering procurement prices have been hiked twice," says a Finance Ministry official. Rice prices rose by only 6 per cent between March and October despite paddy procurement prices rising by nearly 16 per cent.

The Government expects edible oil prices to "crash" in November following good harvests of groundnut and mustard. But industry sources are less confident. Production has risen but imports have dropped even more causing a shortfall, they say. Compounding the shortage were late imports—as in the case of sugar. But unlike sugar imports which were made when world prices were high, the Government waited for edible oil prices to drop before importing. "The country may have saved foreign exchange but consumers had to pay the price," remarks G.K. Sood of the Vanaspati Manufacturers Association.

In the case of tea, production fell only slightly (3 per cent), but prices rose by over 35 per cent in six

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Hindustan Lever Limited

Lipton India Limited

Brooke Bond India Limited

Ponds India Limited

COMMERCIAL MANAGERS

We offer a unique opportunity for young and competent Managers to build a career with us. Selected candidates can look forward to specialising in functional responsibilities or general management through diverse business exposure, need-based training and planned career development.

We currently require professionals in the following functions:

- Purchasing
- Commodity Buying
- Logistics (Transportation, Distribution and Sales/Stock Planning)

Applicants must be CAs/MBAs/Engineers with 5-10 years sound commercial experience in professionally run Companies. Preferred age 30-35 years.

The Unilever Group in India has a common pool of management resource which enables it to offer considerable career opportunities including international exposure for those with potential. Selected candidates can expect to be posted anywhere in India and will receive an attractive remuneration package which includes housing.

If you are interested in a career with us, do reply indicating the publication on the application and enclosing the resume, superscribing the position applied for on the envelope, which should be addressed to: Selection Manager, Hindustan Lever Limited, P.O. Box 409, Bombay 400 001.

LINTAS HLL HRD 345 2015

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

WE ARE LOOKING FOR A WINNING TEAM TO HANDLE THIS LEADER

JAMNA AUTO INDUSTRIES LTD.

(In collaboration with NHK Spring Co. Ltd. — JAPAN—

Without question, this company is recognised as one of India's leading Auto-Ancilliary Industries manufacturing suspension components using the latest state-of-the-art Japanese technology, with a present turnover exceeding 20 crores.

To keep pace with the growing demand of the Automobile Industry, the company has embarked upon major expansion plans. In addition to modernising the existing plant at Yamunanagar, the company recently set up a plant at Mohali manufacturing Parabolic springs and is now setting up a third plant to manufacture Coil Springs and Stabilizer Bars with an investment of 18 crores.

In order to accelerate this process they require People with Proven Track Record in the following areas to join their management team at Yamunanagar to be eventually absorbed in the two upcoming plants.

PRODUCTION

An achiever who meets production targets with leadership qualities to motivate a team of highly skilled engineers, supervisors and workers with strong emphasis on Productivity and Cost Control.

R & D

If you have a commitement to excellence and an aptitude for Designing, you would play a crucial role in Product Development to be able to meet Japanese specifications.

INDUSTRIAL ENGINEERING

You will be responsible for all IE aspects including production standards, manpower planning, systems and procedures, Productivity improvements and cost reduction.

QUALITY CONTROL

You are required to provide guidance to your team of Engineers, manufacturing department and vendors on how to reduce the number of "Rejects".

METALLURGICAL

You should be familiar with the latest techniques with special reference to HEAT TREATMENT, TOOL DESIGNING and FORGING.

MAINTENANCE

You will be responsible for all Mechanical and/OR Electrical installation and maintenance activities of PLANT MACHINERY AND UTILITIES for achieving peak performance levels.

TECHNICAL TRAINING

If you are an outstanding engineer who handles people with sensitivity you could take up this assignment of training people on the shop floor through imaginatively designed inputs & aids, and bring about the necessary changes in people skills and attitudes.

 For all the above positions candidates should be qualified engineers with 4—12 years experience. Placement levels in the organisation will be based on qualification and experience. Exceptional candidates will be considered for Senior Managerial Positions.*

PERSONNEL MANAGERS (2 POSITIONS)

You will be responsible for the total gamut of personnel, Industrial relations and administration of the plant, including manpower planning, recruitment, statutory matters and subsequently organisational development to meet the planned growth objectives. A Diploma in Personnel Management/Social Work in the age group of 30—35 yrs. Having 5—10 yrs experience.

The salary and Perquisite package is designed to attract the BEST AND THE BRIGHTEST. They are in the process of building up a top class team. They will take care of you — THAT'S A PROMISE.

Write at the earliest indicating the functional area to:
MS JYOTI B. SINGH

THE SEARCH HOUSE
(A Division of JBS SEARCH HOUSE PVT. LTD.)
G 6 MEGHDOOT, 94 NEHRU PLACE, NEW DELHI 19
PHONE NOs.: 6415108, 6440143.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

LEADERS IN EXECUTIVE SEARCH

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

months. Tea industry representatives were threatened that the Government would "resort to other means to safeguard consumer interests" if the decline in auction prices was not reflected at the retail level. The industry then agreed to sell tea at Rs40 a kg to consumers, a good Rs20 lower than the price two months ago.

In order to check the price rise, this year the Government has imported over Rs 800 crore of pulses, rice and sugar. This has had some impact. Sugar prices which were ruling at Rs 12-13 a kg in early-September are now down to Rs 9-10. Which is still much higher than the price of Rs 6.50 a kg in April-May. But such stopgap measures exact a price: foreign exchange reserves are today lower than what they've been for years.

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

"The overall situation on the price front is not as bad as is being made out."

SUKH RAM
Minister of State for Food and Civil Supplies

NAMAS BHOJANI

"The Union Government will blame traders for the mess because they are BJP supporters."

VIREN SHAH
President, Associated Chambers of Commerce and Industry

Faced with flak from all sides, the Government wants to make scapegoats out of traders. In fact, Ram alleged in Parliament that opposition leaders are hand in glove with blackmarketeers. "The Government will blame traders for the mess because they are BJP supporters," says Viren Shah, president, Associated Chambers of Commerce and Industry of India and an opposition sympathiser.

S.B. Gupta of the Delhi School of Economics also feels there's no point putting all the blame on hoarders. "What do you do if millions of housewives feel like hoarding essential commodities hoping to beat inflation?" he asks. Thus, despite the seasonal drop in agricultural prices, inflation remains a potent issue.

—PARANJOY GUHA THAKURTA with bureau reports

EXECUTIVE FOCUS

INDIA
TODAY
THE COMPLETE NEWSMAGAZINE

INDIA TODAY group needs bright young talent in its marketing department.

The group is expanding its operations rapidly as also planning new activities in related fields. Marketing is considered an integral and extremely important activity in the Company and is a high growth area.

We are looking for bright young people preferably Business graduates with 2–3 years experience in marketing of consumer products to join our young team at Delhi.

Interested candidates should send their resume along with a passport size photograph within 10 days to

Administration Manager
Living Media India Ltd.
Competent House, 2nd Floor
F-14 Connaught Place
New Delhi 110001

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

TELCO

Hotting Up

Workers intensify agitation

OVER the past 19 months, Pune has been witness to a series of skirmishes between two formidable opponents. One, the management of the Rs 1,600-crore automotive giant, the Tata Engineering and Locomotive Company (TELCO). And the other, the company's militant trade union, the TELCO Kamgar Sanghatana (TKS) led by Rajan Nair. Now another battle begins: an indefinite strike from October 24.

The strike is only a formal declaration of war. For months now, the labour unrest has cut production at TELCO to far below normal levels, besides crippling its ancillary suppliers. There have been countless morchas and several bandhs and rasta rokos. And last month, about 2,000 workers of the company went on an indefinite fast. They were arrested on September 30 but released later. The days that followed were a period of relative calm. Now, the city prepares for another storm.

Worse, the agitation threatens to spill over to other industries in the Pune-Chinchwad-Pimpri belt, home to over 2,000 industrial units with an annual turnover of Rs 3,500 crore. The unrest at TELCO has led to the formation of a federation of labour organisations, the Trade Union Council (TUC), which has over 70 member-organisations and claims the support of over 1.25 lakh workers in the area's organised sector. Says Ashok Manohar, the articulate convener of the TUC: "Support to the TKS is only the first step. The eventual aim is to broaden our base—and that means going to the unorganised sector." Others believe the TUC won't last long. Says Nana Shahane, a Pune-based consultant: "Each of the constituents has a different policy. The common goal is to fight the management, and hence they have come together."

For Nair, a Keralite who speaks chaste Marathi, the call for an indefinite strike is an attempt to regroup his supporters. He is more subdued now, no longer talks about "cracking the style of functioning of the management", and even concedes that TELCO Chairman Ratan Tata is a straight man who was "misguided" by the company's Pune management. Says he: "My main demand is that the 100-odd workers who had been suspended by the management be reinstated."

The management, on the other hand, seems more confident now. It claims that the company is turning out around 70 vehicles a day (the normal production is about 140 vehicles). A senior manager says that the number of employees on duty has risen from a low of 700 to 2,500. The company also claims that more workers are accepting the wage settlement signed with the breakaway TELCO Employees Union on September 19 that guarantees a raise of Rs 585 a month. Now, TELCO has made arrangements for the indefinite stay of 2,800 employees during the strike.

Nair dismisses the management's claims as propaganda, and says that no more than two or three vehicles are coming off the shopfloor. "There are only about 100 workers at the factory," he says.

RATAN TATA

As the labour strife at TELCO comes to a boil, it shows every sign of spreading to other companies.

RAJAN NAIR

NAMAS BHOJANI

Fasting workers: militant stance

Amid these conflicting claims, what's clear is that TELCO has been severely hit. The agitation comes at a critical time for the company. TELCO had reached an agreement, in principle, with Daimler-Benz of West Germany to manufacture commercial vehicles for export under the Benz banner. And negotiations were also on with affiliates of the US auto giant General Motors. Says J.E. Talaulicar, vice-chairman and managing director of TELCO: "With all our time and attention being taken up by the agitation, these have been put on the backburner." Still, TELCO's half-yearly results show a higher net profit (Rs 6.2 crore to Rs 9.05 crore). One reason: higher production at the Jamshedpur plant.

More severely affected are TELCO's ancillary suppliers which, in 1988-89, supplied about Rs 61-crore worth of goods to the company. For a lot of them, TELCO is the sole client. "The problem has got so critical that many have had to close shop or at least retrench half of their workers," says Kaushik Shah, president of the newly-formed Pune Ancillary Manufacturers' Association. An IIT graduate who set up his own unit after a two-year spell with TELCO, Shah has himself laid off several workers and can pay the rest only for a month more.

Add to that the fact that wages are far lower than in the large companies and it's not surprising that workers at ancillary units are resentful. At one unit, workers approached Nair who drew up a charter of demands—among them, a wage hike of Rs 2,800.

While that may sound unrealistic—and for the ancillaries, impossible to pay—the workers know that with elections round the corner, they are in a better bargaining position. They constitute a 2-lakh-strong vote bank, without taking their families into account, and Maharashtra Chief Minister Sharad Pawar is under severe pressure to bring about a settlement.

Even if a settlement is signed, one thing is certain. Industrial relations in the languid city of Pune will never quite be the same again.

—SHIV TANEJA in Pune and Bombay

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ason: highdpur plant.
are TELCO's
n 1988-89,
worth of ot of them, roblem has ave had to ach half of hik Shah,
d Pune An-ciation. An own unit
ELCO. Shah orkers and onth more.
ages are far nies and it's t ancillary

N NAIR

MAS BHOJAN

proached er of dee hike of ealistic—ossible to with elec-are in a ey constiwithout unt, and Sharad to bring ned, one ations in ver quite

d Bombay

LIVE LIFE KINGSIZE

O&M/102

FOUR SQUARE
KINGS

All the taste, all the way

STATUTORY WARNING : CIGARETTE SMOKING IS INJURIOUS TO HEALTH

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

There Are Still A Few Indians Whose Lives Have Not Been Touched By Voltas.

Voltas is India's most widely diversified company.

And its 800 product lines touch the lives of millions of Indians.

These products range from pollution control systems equipment to bottles. Betw products such machines too

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

widely ines touch the s.

from pollution control systems and power distribution equipment to cookies and feeding bottles. Between these extremes are products such as pumpsets, CNC machines tools, textile machinery, cold storage plants, pharmaceuticals, diesel forklift trucks, and hundreds more.

This diversity of product lines, and therefore of customer bases, is part of a business plan meant to keep the company steady even in an extreme economic climate.

And this policy has made Voltas an exceptionally stable, exceptionally solid company.

VOLTAS LIMITED The Results Are Showing

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

PREMIER AUTOMOBILES

Revving up for Growth

After a good showing, a dose of modernisation

FOR decades, the Indian automobile industry rolled along merrily without competition—on obsolete engines, rattling bodies and outdated designs. Then, in the '80s, Maruti Udyog Ltd (MUL) crashed in and proceeded to rewrite the rules of the automobile game. The result has been mostly one-sided.

The Madras-based Standard Motor Products of India Ltd barely survives at the bottom of the industry pile. And the Calcutta-based Hindustan Motors has plunged deeper into the red with losses increasing from Rs 2.69 crore last year to Rs 5.81 crore this year. Amid the debris, one automobile manufacturer has emerged stronger—the Bombay-based Premier Automobiles Ltd (PAL).

The Rs 465-crore flagship company of the Walchand Group (turnover: approximately Rs 750 crore) closed its financial year in June 1989 with a net profit of Rs 13.65 crore—an increase of 21.8 per cent over the previous year. Sales have grown by 19 per cent; the industry figure is 12 per cent. And market share has gone up from 22 to 24 per cent. "It's been a good year for us," says a visibly pleased Vinod L. Doshi, chairman and managing director.

Now, more ambitious plans are in the offing. Says Doshi: "Starting now, over the next 24 months, you are going to see a tremendous change in this company." It's already begun. Recently, the company relaunched the old PAL faithful, the Premier Padmini, with a host of new features and an advertising budget of Rs 1 crore. In September, it kicked off a Rs 150-crore revamping exercise—to overhaul, upgrade and modernise key manufacturing facilities and products. The company is also introducing a new high-speed diesel engine, initially to be used exclusively for taxis. And it's planning changes in two models of the company's cars.

By any yardstick, it's a remarkable fightback. So, how did PAL successfully stave off the Maruti challenge? The Premier Padmini had an advantage. Falling between the Ambassador and the Maruti, it has a niche market. Then, the company improved its fuel efficiency. And in 1986, it introduced the 118 NE.

Finally, it backed all this with good marketing. Says President and Managing Director J.M. Vakil: "To a large extent, our good performance has to do with innovative marketing." The company has just two basic models, but it offers a variety of categories—six for the Premier Padmini and two for the 118 NE. Explains Vakil: "Earlier, we did not have this categorisation. Now, we are far more attuned to customer needs than ever before. And I think this is beginning to pay off."

The attention paid to marketing is also evident in the additional features in the new-look Premier Padmini—backlit instrument panel, extra-soft leather cloth upholstery, dual tone horn, coat hanger hooks. Vakil admits the changes are "largely cosmetic in nature" though he hastens to add that certain mechanical and structural aspects of the car are also to be revamped.

Still, with competition hotting up, PAL seems to be aware that cosmetic changes won't work for ever. So it's taking a serious look at improving fuel economy and reducing noise levels and emissions. And in a bid to prepare for deep-going changes in future, the company is set on a major modernisation drive. The press shop at Kalyan near Bombay is being upgraded. The Kurla plant will get a brand-new press shop and its paint shop is being modernised. Also, the Nissan engine in the 118 NE is to be indigenised using computer numerical control machinery.

One objective of these changes: to substantially increase production of both the Premier Padmini and the 118 NE. Says Vakil: "Our immediate goal for Kurla is to increase production from the current 120 cars a day to 150." Clearly, the company expects demand to grow. Soon, however, that optimism will be put to a severe test after MUL launches the Maruti 1000 (see box).

Before it takes on that challenge, however, the company has another one on its hands—to successfully market its new high speed diesel engine. Developed by the Italian firm Frateli Negri Machines, it will initially be used exclusively for taxis in the Premier 137D model. The company expects to manufacture around 3,000 137Ds in the first year and raise this to 10,000 in five

"Over the next 24 months, you are going to see a tremendous change in this company."
VINOD L. DOSHI
Chairman and Managing Director

NAMAS BHOJANI

Padmini interiors; and taxi with diesel engine: success story

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

years. Industry watchers question the optimism. The price-tag of Rs 1,49,000, they point out, is too hefty. Says Gautam Sen, editor of Indian Auto Journal: "The pricing for this car is crazy—almost Rs 50,000 more than the existing model used for taxis." Vakil, however, justifies the cost: "With the price of diesel being almost a third of petrol, taxi owners stand to gain in the long run."

Others are not so sure. Says one expert: "On paper, the engine may look very good. But Frateli Negri is not an original equipment supplier to anyone in Italy. They are retrofitters." Another industry analyst belittles PAL's technological abilities: "No matter what Premier may say about their product, and no matter how much tinkering around they do, basically their engineering skills are grossly inadequate and will be reflected in the product."

Critics argue that success in the automobile industry must be measured in terms of volumes and exports, in both of which PAL is a laggard. Counters Doshi: "We can only think of exports and large volumes if the Government allows us a good product." And, he continues: "Given the level of technology available in India, Premier cannot support it—as has Maruti—but the Government will not allow us to."

Nevertheless, the company has managed to more than hold its own. But ironically, that good showing has made it the target of take-over attempts.

IN 1982, PAL had thwarted a bid by an R.P. Goenka company. More recently, it was in the news when BoB Fiscal, the merchant banking arm of Bank of Baroda that was involved in the controversial Larsen & Toubro take-over, bought a large chunk of the company's shares. Says Doshi: "They had acquired over 85,000 shares, and we had neither accepted nor rejected them for registration with the company."

Officials are cagey about divulging details. But sources say the company bought time by asking BoB Fiscal to comply with certain legal reporting requirements and that it finally repurchased the shares at a cost slightly above the market price.

While that external threat has been warded off, there's reportedly trouble brewing within the family. Doshi's cousin, Ajit Gulabchand, chairman of Hindustan Construction Company, a Walchand Group firm, is said to have urged a couple of industrialists to buy into PAL and enlist the support of the financial institutions which have a 21.25 per cent stake. Among the names mentioned are the Ambanis. Gulabchand, however, denies the rumours. Says he: "I will not comment on Vinod Doshi, or his style of working. But I will say that all these rumours are utter rubbish."

Whatever the truth, for the moment, Doshi is very much in control at PAL, five years after he took over from father Seth Walchand Hirachand. His son, Maitreya, who was inducted into the company three years ago, is now vice-president (corporate planning). But Doshi himself closely oversees the company's working—from production schedules to advertising plans.

It is such painstaking attention to detail that enabled PAL to survive the first onslaught of the Maruti juggernaut. For a company that began by assembling vehicles for the US Chrysler Corporation in 1944, and has had no modernisation since, this is no mean achievement.

—SHIV TANEJA

MARUTI

Fast Forward

IN the first round of the automobile battle, the judges' verdict was unanimous: the winner was Maruti. Last fortnight, Maruti Udyog Limited (MUL) served notice of round two by announcing a new upmarket model—a 1000 cc car which will hit the road by October 1990. Few believe that the second round will end any differently from the first.

Launched in Japan by collaborators Suzuki only in June this year, the new model is more spacious than the Maruti 800, has five forward gears, and a top speed of 140 km an hour. It's streamlined to reduce wind resistance, and runs 24 km on a litre of fuel.

Production plans are ambitious—the company hopes to roll out 30,000 a year by 1992. If these plans do work out, rivals could be heading for a toss. C.K. Birla, vice-chairman of Hindustan Motors, however, dismisses the possibility: "Our Contessa is a much bigger car. It will not be affected by the new Maruti car at all." Industry observers feel the principal victim will be the 118 NE which has been enjoying high premiums. PAL President and Managing Director J.M. Vakil simply says: "We will have to wait and see what the car is all about."

With a 1000 cc engine, the new Maruti car poses a serious challenge to the Premier 118 NE.

Much depends on the price-tag, which hasn't been announced. Says Managing Director R.C. Bhargava: "Let's see the demand after bookings close, what happens to the yen-rupee fluctuations and even the budget next year. We will price it so there's no premium. We are not sure but it will be slightly higher than that of the 118 NE (cost: around Rs 1,80,000)."

One dealer says that at that price, the car could command a premium of about Rs 30,000. He, however, expects the price to be closer to Rs 3 lakh.

To keep costs down, just 30 per cent of the parts will be imported at the outset (far lower than the figure for the Maruti 800) and this will be reduced to 6 per cent in three years. Says a senior company official: "Our initial foreign exchange outgo will be Rs 25 crore, apart from Rs 57 crore on the plant. We are not getting foreign exchange from the Government. The project is tied to exports of Maruti cars." And, he adds: "We might reduce the price once we indigenise more."

That's a tall order, if the price and indigenisation record of the Maruti 800 are anything to go by. Still, if the Maruti 1000 repeats the success of its little brother, few are likely to complain. Except MUL's rivals.

—SURAJEET DASGUPTA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

EXCLUSIVITY

LIKE YOU'VE NEVER EXPERIENCED BEFORE

VISIT SUMANGAL FOR EXCLUSIVE PURCHASE OF SUITINGS, SAFARI FABRICS, SHIRTINGS, TROUSERINGS, TWEEDS, BLANKETS, DESIGNER MEN'S WEAR AND TAILORING

DIGJAM, OCM and JIYAJEE, long considered amongst the leaders in premium quality suitings, safaris, tweeds and blankets have come together in a fashion shop for men. It stocks the widest range of fabrics and international designer class ready-to-wear garments, each created with a strict eye to lasting quality and enduring style.

DIGJAM

OCM

The shop is SUMANGAL

Exclusivity is the very backbone of good designing. That is why every SUMANGAL fabric or garment reflects a passionate attention to originality and elegance.

The best of DIGJAM, OCM, JIYAJEE fabrics are individually selected to live upto the SUMANGAL name and provide exclusive qualities to its patrons.

JIYAJEE

It is this singular fastidiousness that makes SUMANGAL indispensable for the well-dressed man.

SUMANGAL

DIGJAM • OCM • JIYAJEE

MILLS' PRESTIGIOUS SHOWROOM

At: New Delhi (South Extension and Karol Bagh), Calcutta, Madras, Hyderabad, Bangalore, Vijayawada, Visakhapatnam, Miryalguda, Indore, Kota, Jabalpur, Baroda, Kanpur and Allahabad.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

zed by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

An innovative spirit.
From the 'Model T' to the 'Big C'.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

For New India, growth has always been synonymous with service and innovation.

And that meant having to understand specific needs. Appreciate risks. And offer futuristic covers in tune with the changing times.

The first in the field

This credo soon found expression. In the type of insurance covers New India pioneered through the early years. Motor Insurance with the advent of the Ford Model T. Aviation Insurance with the historic Karachi - Bombay flight by J.R.D. Tata. Insurance for the first steel plant. The first textile mill. In fact, covers that reflected every new facet of India's development.

This leadership was consolidated soon after nationalisation in 1973. When New India expanded its activities to also cover rural India. Through much needed welfare-oriented insurance covers for the weaker sections of society.

70 years later

Service and innovation continue to find new expression. Through pioneering health insurance schemes (such as Cancer) where prevention is actually a part of the benefits. Plus a wide range of sophisticated covers. From Sea Food and Grape to every single satellite from the 'Aryabhatta' onwards. On to Himalayan Car Rallies. Even Test Match Weather.

No wonder New India's premium base exceeds Rs.725 crores. Serviced by over 1100 offices in 30 countries. Backed by a team of nearly 800 experts, including engineers and veterinary surgeons, offering specialised services.

New India. The giant, 20000-strong insurance company whose success lies on the solid foundation of service.

Service with a special personal touch.

For us, times change. Values endure.

NEW INDIA ASSURANCE

A subsidiary of the General Insurance Corpn. of India.

1919 1989

BORN TO LEAD

A public sector enterprise with the entrepreneurial spirit.

CONTOUR ADS-NIA-163E/89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

IT'S TIME TO CHANGE...
... INTO THE LATEST, LATEST.

Live up to the order of the day. From dawn to dusk. Always well-dressed to suit the occasion. With Newman's wide, wide range of clothings and accessories. Designer shirts. Pleated and baggy trousers. Casual jackets. Smart blazers. Belts and abstractly patterned ties... All trend-setting. Just the way you are.

Over 2000 new designs

NEWMAN

THE HI-FASHION MAN'S SHOP

Only in New Delhi at: South Extension I • Palika Bazaar • Karol Bagh

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri
CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

NRI INDUSTRIALISTS

Quiet Success

A new breed establishes itself

THEY are a different breed of non-resident Indian industrialists. Unlike the Chhabrias, they did not arrive with a bang. Unlike Swraj Paul, they did not leave with a whimper. And unlike both, they chose not to grow by take-overs. They also keep a low profile. Men like M.L. Mittal of the Ispat Group, Satyadev Bhardwaj of Sunflag, M.L. Lohia of Indo-Rama, Mahendra Mehta of the Mehta Group and the Lalvani brothers of Binatone Electronics. In the early '80s, when the Government liberalised the economy, they quietly set up a unit or two here. Since then, they have unobtrusively spread their wings.

M.L. Mittal of the Ispat Group (world turnover: Rs 1,000 crore) has set up four companies in India—Nippon Denro Ispat, Ispat Alloys, Gontermann-Peipers (India) and Ispat Profiles. Products range from galvanised sheets to high tension rails. The turnover from Indian operations is an impressive Rs 400 crore.

Now, the group is investing Rs 300 crore to expand its ferro silicon alloy, charge chrome and cold-rolled steel coil units. Last month, the Government cleared proposals for a seamless pipe and sponge iron unit. Also on the anvil are ventures in float glass and specialised oil drilling tubes. The investment tab: Rs 1,150 crore. Says group Chairman Mittal: "There is a tremendous potential waiting to be tapped in this country."

A year ago, London-based Satyadev Bhardwaj and his three sons of the Sunflag Group (turnover world-wide: Rs 500 crore) set up the Rs 250-crore Sunflag Iron and Steel Company Ltd at Bhandara in Maharashtra. This year, it expects a turnover of Rs 150 crore.

Next, the group plans to increase capacity from 2 lakh tonnes to 5 lakh tonnes and manufacture automobile components for export. Says Bhushan Bhardwaj, Sunflag chairman: "There's a large market. After expanding capacity we will move into downstream products." Expected cost: Rs 500 crore.

M.L. Lohia, chairman of the Indonesia-based Indo-Rama Group with operations in Thailand and Nepal (turnover world-wide: Rs 400 crore) has set up a Rs 21-crore synthetic and blended yarn unit in Indore. This year, Indo-Rama Synthetics India Ltd had a Rs 40-crore turnover, and is doubling capacity with an additional investment of Rs 25 crore. Says Managing Director O.P. Lohia, M.L. Lohia's son: "Our first project was set up only to understand local conditions. We are looking for big projects." The firm has tied up with the Madhya Pradesh Government for a Rs 200-crore nylon tyre cord project. The Lohias have received a letter of intent for a Rs 30-crore plant to manufacture blended yarn fabrics and ready-made garments.

Mahendra Mehta of the Mehta Group (turnover worldwide: Rs 250 crore) with interests in Africa, North America and Great Britain, was one of the earliest NRIs to venture to India—with a cement plant in Gujarat in 1960. But it was only after the liberalisation of the '80s that interest in India revived. In 1981, Mehta set up the joint sector Cement Corporation of Gujarat. The turnover in India is now Rs 120 crore, nearly half of the group's total turnover. Nevertheless, with the cement industry facing a glut, the group is cautious. Says Jay Mehta, Mahendra's son: "We're not planning any further investment until the cement industry stabilises."

The London-based Lalvani brothers—Gulu and Partap—of Binatone Electronics (world-wide turnover: Rs 200 crore) already derive one-fifth of their turnover from India. Still, the operations have not been very successful. Says Partap bitterly: "I would not have come back to India at all. I got my letter of intent in 1983. Yet after that, competitors placed various hurdles and I got my licence only two years later." He's the only one with regrets about setting up operations in India. The rest are upbeat about future prospects in India.

What prompted the move in the first place? The answer: liberalisation. In the '80s, the Government opened up the economy and set out to woo non-resident Indian investment. Says M.L.

Bhushan Bhardwaj, Chairman, Sunflag

"There is a large market in India. We are going in for expansion and downstream products."

Mohan Lal Mittal, Chairman, Ispat Group

"Our aim is to get into products not manufactured in the country and back it up with technology."

YASBANT NEGI

O.P. Lohia, Managing Director, Indo-Rama

YASBANT NEGI

"Government said it was not possible to export synthetic yarn. We proved it wrong."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Lohia: "We always wanted to set up units in India. The improved industrial climate here has now made it possible."

It hasn't been a cakewalk, though. The Lalvanis underestimated the competition. Partap laments: "We expected 10 per cent of the television market; we have 3 per cent." As a result, Binatone's turnover is expected to fall this year. The Lohias took three years to get their textile project cleared. O.P. Lohia recalls: "We were not able to convince them there was a demand for a spinning unit. They said it was not possible to export synthetic yarn. We proved them wrong." The Bhardwajs had trouble convincing the Government that a composite plant would be viable.

Nevertheless, all of them seem to have improved on their earlier attempts to gain a foothold in India. Binatone set up a 100-per cent export oriented unit in 1975, but found components too expensive. The unit is still operational, but not very successful. The Lohias tried to acquire textile giant OCM in 1971, but the Birlas outbid them. Says Lohia: "After that we decided we would never try to take over companies." In 1974, the Sunflag Group set up a small textile unit in Faridabad but it never really took off. The Mehtas who had long run a textile mill had to shut it down in 1983.

STILL, all five groups had an advantage—the first-hand experience of setting up industries from scratch. M.L. Mittal broke away from the family steel business in the '70s and moved to Indonesia when the Indian Government was reluctant to allow private sector steel units to expand. Satyadev Bhardwaj began with a small cottage hosiery unit in Nairobi. M.L. Lohia was initially a petty trader in Calcutta. Mahendra Mehta had to virtually start all over again when Ugandan dictator Idi Amin expelled Asians from Uganda in 1972.

The overseas experience helps in several ways—access to the latest technology, for instance. The Mittals imported technology for specialised silicon alloys, used in automobiles, from Alchem, the Norwegian steel giant. M.L. Mittal explains: "Our aim was to get into products not manufactured in the country so that there is no competition, and to back it up with the latest technology."

Overseas contacts also help exports. Says O.P. Lohia: "We already have a well-defined buyers' network all over the world." So the Lohias are already the country's second-largest exporters of synthetic yarn. This year's export earnings are likely to touch Rs 15 crore, half of Indo-Rama Synthetics' turnover.

The new breed of NRIs also seems to have brought with it superior project execution skills. Sunflag's steel plant was completed six months ahead of schedule. And the Lohias' synthetic yarn unit began production nearly a year ahead of schedule.

The close attention they pay to their projects doesn't stop with execution. Mittal is now a resident Indian. Two of his sons live in Calcutta and Pune. Binatone's Partap Lalvani spends nine months in a year in India.

Still, there's been criticism. A senior executive in a leading textile unit says of the Lohias: "They aren't bringing anything new. Synthetic yarn is manufactured by many other units. Soon they will face tough competition."

Possibly, but if their past is anything to go by, they should be able to weather that too. Proving that while they are—or were—non-resident Indians, they are here to stay. —SURAJEET DAS GUPTA

TAX BOARD

Post Haste

HISTORY was created in the Central Board of Direct Taxes (CBDT) last fortnight. For one, the junior-most member of the board, A.S. Thind, was formally appointed chairman, flouting all conventions. And for another, Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi personally intervened to ensure Thind's appointment.

But the appointment came as no surprise. For much before it was announced, the Government had made it clear that none else than Thind—who is due to retire on January 31 next year—would head this crucial department which will collect over Rs 9,000 crore in income tax this year. A peremptory letter was sent by J.C. Lynn, additional secretary in the Ministry of Personnel to N.K. Sengupta, revenue secretary, on September 27: "The prime minister has indicated that these orders must be implemented today." The orders: immediate transfer of CBDT members T.N. Pandey, O.P. Bhardwaj and C.S. Jain.

There was a flurry of activity in the Finance Ministry when the letter communicating the Cabinet's Appointments Committee's decision on the transfers was received the same day. Officials scrambled to telephone Sengupta, who was in Meerut, and to contact Jain, then holidaying in Kashmir.

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

Thind: unconventional appointment

What was unusual was the urgency of the orders. For the CBDT has been headless since its last chairman, G.N. Gupta, retired on July 31, with no one officiating in the interim. Also unusual is the fact that the seven-member board now has only two members. One was transferred to the Central Administrative Tribunal in June. So, apart from Thind, the only other member is A.V. Swaminathan, whose term ends in July 1991.

Officials are questioning the undue haste shown in the matter. "What was the tearing hurry to transfer three members and why did the prime minister take personal interest in the matter?" asks a senior bureaucrat in the Revenue Department. Sengupta's answer: the transfers had been planned earlier and the board's work is "not suffering".

Many disagree. Not only do they question the motives behind the transfers, but they also point out that the CBDT has not met for the last three months.

The goings-on in the CBDT have certainly had an impact on the morale of a large section of the country's 54,000 income tax employees. Says a senior official: "We are expected to work without fear or favour. But even if we do so, there is no certainty that we will get what we deserve. We may suffer the fate of Pandey, Bhardwaj and Jain."

For those in the corridors of power, however, that hardly seems to matter.

—PARANJOY GUHA THAKURTA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

SOME FACES, AS YOU CAN SEE, HAVE CHARACTER.

BORN OF A LINEAGE AS ILLUSTRIOUS AS HMT. TECHNOLOGY, GRACE AND SINCERE AFTER SALE CARE DISTINGUISHING THE FINEST FROM THE REST.

CHARACTER TELLS.

hmt
QUARTZ

everest/S89/473

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

SHE'S HERE.

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Or how the Conversation was skilfully steered.

Just look at her, I said to my husband excitedly. Th Wall Street Journal inched lower. (He's a little cautio you know.) She's the new Maruti 1000, I explaine ▶ Maruti? he queried. ▶ (Aha. We were gettin somewhere.) Imagine a gleaming work of art, style beautifully — aerodynamic is the word, I believe. Wrap-around design headlights, tempered glass windows. 5-speed gear shift for that effortless glide, kilometre after kilometre. ▶ Uh? ▶ (An expression I have come to recognize as Go on, tell me more.) Imagine sinking into sumptuously contoured seats, whisper-soft carpeting beneath our feet. S-T-R-E-T-C-H-I-N-G out in a cool, quiet haven. Everything we need at arm's length. Seat belts. Adjustable head restraints, I went on, warming to the subject. ▶ Uh. Uh. ▶

▶ BOOKINGS OPEN FROM NOVEMBER 14, 1989.*

*Maruti Udyog Limited reserves the right to close bookings anytime after 15 days from the date of commencement of booking, on receipt of a minimum of 25,000 booking applications.

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

(After seven years of marriage I knew I was nearly there.) Travelling at a speed that's luxury itself, I continued dreamily. ▶ Hmm... he responded, folding the WSJ patiently. ▶ (As you may have gathered by now, my husband is not of a very excitable temperament. But now appeared visibly moved) ▶ Sounds interesting, he finally ventured. And rather quickly added: And what else? ▶ She's the latest Suzuki model, I continued. Which means she's been nit-picked to perfection. She was launched in Japan only four months back. And is here, in India. ▶ The very same car? He actually got to his feet. ▶ (I could feel the reserve give way.) ▶ How do you know all this? he suddenly asked. ▶ Gossip! I replied nonchalantly, studying my fingernails.

MARUTI 1000

Quite a conversation piece.

मारुति
MARUTI

Gurukul Kangri Collection

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

A Guide To The Well Groomed Male.

Park Avenue After Shave
Park Avenue Styling Gel
Park Avenue Shaving Cream
Park Avenue Beer Shampoo
Park Avenue Talcum Powder
Park Avenue Cologne

Park Avenue
Men's Toiletries by Raymond's

Available at Raymond's retail shops and other select outlets.

everest/88/JKHC/356

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE MARKETS

Electoral Sway

Stock-markets go see-sawing

UP, down, up, down, up again. That's the see-sawing story of India's stock-markets for the past two months. Last fortnight was no different. The day after general elections were announced, market indices plunged dramatically. But they bounced back in no time at all. The Economic Times share price index dropped from 383.1 on October 16 to 375.2 the next day. But four days later, it again rose to 387.3, just below the month's peak of 388.3 touched on October 3.

Around the middle of the month, the mood was distinctly downbeat. Bears were ruling the roost and selling pressures were strong as old shares were offloaded to raise funds for subscribing to the mega issues. There was a squeeze on liquidity in the wake of the spate of rights issues of equity shares and debentures. Market conditions were characterised by considerable short-selling. For instance, in the case of the Larsen & Toubro share, sellers could not deliver scrips when the time came for settlement of business. Result: they had to cough up steep backwardation (contango) charges of Rs 13 per scrip.

Compounding the bearish situation was the bad news on the Bofors front. The downswing culminated in a knee-jerk reaction with the announcement of elections. But within a day, the pendulum had started swinging in the opposite direction. Investors evidently thought that the Congress(I) and not the Opposition would stand to gain by early polls. Thus, the 100 scrips national index of the Bombay Stock Exchange which had crashed by nearly 8 points from 377.72 on October 16 to 369.30 the next day, had recovered to 376.60 the day after.

The bullish sentiments which persisted thereafter were undoubtedly abetted by large-scale purchases by the state-owned financial institutions. And there is every indication that there will be no let-up in such purchases, if for nothing else, because of the fact that the Government can ill-afford to allow stock-markets to turn sluggish.

During the fortnight which ended on October 20, there were major gainers (see chart), but the overall picture was a mixed one for there were quite a few losers. Such shares included Food Specialities, Hindustan Motors, J.K. Synthetics, Southern Petrochemicals and Voltas. Despite the clearance given by the financial institutions to divide the assets of DCM Limited among the squabbling members of the Shri Ram family, the company's scrip failed to revive.

On the positive side, there were indications that the protracted labour dispute at TELCO's Pune plant may be coming to an end. And promoters of companies which went in for mega share issues claimed that investor response had been enthusiastic. Market observers expect that in the weeks to come, that is before the elections, equity values will move only in one direction—that is, upwards.

ACTIVE STOCKS

	1989 HIGH	1989 LOW	CLOSE 20.10.89	Change in Fortnight
Ashok Leyland	84.00	61.00	78.00	2.00 +
Associated Cement	345.00	230.00	292.00	24.00 +
Asian Paints	226.25	165.00	211.25	6.25 +
Atlas Copco	53.00	32.00	48.00	7.00 +
Bajaj Auto	450.00	290.00	321.25	18.75 +
Baroda Rayon	755.00	285.00	740.00	10.00 +
Bata India	89.00	60.00	67.00	1.00 +
Bayer	910.00	580.00	720.00	17.50 +
Bharat Forge	202.50	65.00	72.50	1.25 +
Birla Jute	73.75	41.50	61.00	0.50 –
Bombay Dyeing	162.00	104.00	124.00	3.00 –
Britannia Ind.	126.00	89.00	126.00	15.00 +
Brooke Bond	155.00	75.00	97.00	6.00 + *
Century Spinning	2295.00	1230.00	2295.00	140.00 +
Chloride India	88.50	72.00	83.50	0.50 –
Colgate Palmolive	371.25	162.50	195.00	16.25 + *
Cyanamid	92.00	55.00	88.00	5.50 +
DCM	85.00	31.00	52.50	5.50 –
Dunlop	95.50	70.00	74.00	1.00 +
E.L. Hotels	68.00	50.00	61.00	1.00 +
Escorts	84.00	58.00	79.00	1.00 –
Finolex Cables	430.00	290.00	320.00	10.00 +
Food Specialities	224.00	100.50	106.00	55.00 –
Garware Nylon	55.50	36.00	50.00	0.50 +
G.E. Shipping	46.50	33.75	43.35	2.85 +
G.S.F.C.	190.00	123.75	182.50	20.00 +
Grasim Ind.	137.00	75.00	102.50	1.50 + ***
Hind. Aluminium	327.50	155.00	255.00	15.00 +
Hind. Ciba	1090.00	600.00	970.00	nil
Hind. Cocoa	141.25	98.75	128.75	1.25 –
Hindustan Lever	103.00	69.50	101.50	0.50 +
Hindustan Motors	52.50	24.40	24.40	3.90 –*
ICI India Ltd.	68.00	39.00	50.00	2.00 –
Indian Organic	54.50	23.00	51.50	0.50 +
Indian Rayon	106.00	75.75	84.50	0.75 +

	1989 HIGH	1989 LOW	CLOSE 20.10.89	Change in Fortnight
Indrol	335.00	218.75	242.50	6.25 –
Ingersoll-Rand	423.75	267.50	385.00	17.50 –
ITC	129.00	46.25	66.50	0.50 +
J.K. Synthetics	92.00	62.50	65.00	8.00 –
Kinetic Engineering	395.00	126.25	133.75	3.75 –
Kirloskar Cummins	88.75	54.50	68.50	1.00 +
KSB Pumps	445.00	185.00	195.00	2.50 +
Larsen & Toubro	128.00	81.50	104.00	4.00 + ***
Lipton	90.00	81.50	104.00	4.00 +
LML Ltd.	28.00	12.50	16.00	1.00 –
Madura Coats	104.00	92.25	98.00	2.00 –
Mahindra & Mahindra	113.50	76.50	95.50	1.50 +
Milk Food	300.00	180.00	210.00	10.00 –
Motor Industries	695.00	560.00	660.00	nil
Mukand Ltd.	140.50	75.00	136.00	2.00 +
National Organic	1180.00	710.00	1090.00	25.00 +
Nirlon	17.00	8.00	12.50	1.50 –
Orkay Silk Mills	29.00	13.50	16.50	1.00 –
Pelco Electronics	30.50	16.50	23.00	1.25 –
Pfizer	80.00	58.00	73.00	1.00 –
Ponds	212.50	151.25	175.00	1.25 +
Premier Auto	68.00	40.00	62.00	3.50 +
Raymond	85.00	60.00	68.00	5.50 + ***
Reliance Industries	158.00	84.00	95.00	6.50 –
Siemens India	95.00	65.00	74.00	2.00 –
Shaw Wallace	103.25	62.00	87.00	4.00 –
Shriram Fibres	94.00	55.00	57.00	3.00 –
SKF Bearings	3020.00	1140.00	1260.00	nil
SPIC	67.00	39.00	44.30	4.70 –
Tata Steel	1580.00	1062.50	1237.50	42.50 +
Telco	1097.50	657.50	1070.00	58.75 +
Vam Organic	178.00	136.00	160.00	nil **
Videocon Int.	192.50	55.00	185.00	20.00 +
Voltas	1000.00	470.00	900.00	20.00 –
Wimco	32.00	15.00	23.50	5.75 +

*Ex-dividend Ex-bonus Spot delivery *Ex-right

WORLD VALUE OF RUPEE

COUNTRY	CURRENCY	UNIT	TT Selling Rates Rs	TT Buying Rates Rs
Australia	Dollar	1	13.1581	13.0144
Austria	Schilling	100	1.3079	1.2937
Bahrain	Dinar	1	44.5236	44.4128
Bangladesh	Taka	100	53.2928	53.1726
Canada	Dollar	1	14.4505	14.2988
Denmark	Kroner	1	2.3560	2.3306
Egypt	Pound	1	6.1526	6.1029
France	Franc	1	2.7473	2.6774
Hong Kong	Dollar	1	2.1721	2.1500
Indonesia	Rupiah	100	0.9526	0.9428
Iran	Rial	100	23.2928	23.1526
Italy	Lira	100	1.2482	1.2338
Japan	Yen	100	12.1655	11.8624
Kenya	Shilling	1	0.7926	0.7528
Kuwait	Dinar	1	55.9288	55.7128
Malaysia	Dollar	1	6.2984	6.2333
Mauritius	Rupee	1	1.0420	1.0100
Nepal	Rupee	1	0.6528	0.6128
Netherlands	Guilder	1	8.1242	8.0347
Pakistan	Rupee	1	0.7826	0.7528
Singapore	Dollar	1	8.6716	8.5799
Spain	Peseta	1	0.1300	0.1200
Sri Lanka	Rupee	1	0.4200	0.4000
Sweden	Kroner	1	2.6422	2.6136
Switzerland	Franc	1	10.4952	10.3831
Tanzania	Shilling	1	0.1160	0.1000
Thailand	Baht	100	63.2829	63.0000
UK	Pound	1	27.0083	26.8097
USA	Dollar	1	16.9635	16.7926
UAE	Dirham	1	4.1526	4.1000
USSR	Rouble	1	25.9829	25.7928
W. Germany	Deutschmark	1	9.3485	9.1158

These rates were supplied by The Bank of Tokyo Limited, New Delhi and quoted between the banks on 21.10.89.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

OVER 50% OF ACN ELECTRONIC TYPEWRITERS

Last year, over 50% of our sales came from repeat purchases.

Discerning buyers like HLL, HMM, ITC, BEML, Air France, American Express, 20th Century Fox, Hyatt Regency, (to name a few), did not need to think all over again when they needed more electronic typewriters. They just gave us a call.

Because ACN Electronic Typewriters gave them so many distinct advantages.

Ergonomic design. Optimum function efficiency. Superior print head that ensures unmatched print quality. And the unique Spell-Check.

After all, ACN Electronic Typewriters come with technology

For a free brochure, write to: AUTO CONTROLS PVT. LTD. (A RANUTROL GROUP COMPANY). CORPORATE OFFICE □ F-85, Okhla Ind. Area Phase-I, New Delhi-110 020. Tel: 683 6001. NORTH ZONE □ B-12, New Delhi House, Barakhamba Road, New Delhi-110 001. Tel: 331 0157, 331 6464. □ 1108, Sector 33C, Chandigarh- 160 031. □ C-976/77, Sector B, Mahanagar, Lucknow- 226 006. Tel: 77 289. □ 312, Guru Nanak Pura, Raja Park, Jaipur-302 004. Tel: 49 007. □ HIG-22, 1st Floor, Shivaji Nagar, Hoshangabad Road, Bhopal-462 016. Tel: 55 2478. SOUTH ZONE □ Flat No. A-4, 2nd Floor, Parsan Menere, 602, Anna Salai, Madras-30.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ITERS ARE SOLD BY ACN ELECTRONIC TYPEWRITERS.

hem so many ... Nakajima All, Japan. That's technology behind international best-sellers like Smith Corona, Olympia, Triumph Adler and ncy. Superior ... Technology that goes into 35% of the world's electronic And the unique typewriters.

That's why customers confidently opt for the ACN Electronic ith technology typewriter. Again. And again.

ACN ELECTRONIC TYPEWRITERS FROM NAKAJIMA ALL, JAPAN

INTERNATIONALLY, THE BEST.

TECHNOLOGY QUALITY SERVICE
RANUTAOL GROUP

ORTH ZONE ☐ 8-... 12, Guru Nanak Pura, ... Rai, Madras-600 ...

NORTH ZONE ☐ Kalyani Complex, 2nd Floor, 9, Residency Road, Richmond Circle, Bangalore-560 025. Tel: 21 2846, 21 4683, 21 5429. EAST ZONE ☐ Flat No. 5-1, Stephen Court, 18A, Park Street, Calcutta- 700 016. Tel: 29 1755 ... Lower Parel, Bombay-400 013. Tel: 492 6297, 492 7125. ☐ 1012, Embassy Centre, Nariman Point, Bombay-400 021. Tel: 23 3629, 23 4424 ... 114, 1st Floor, A2 Building, Shah & Nahar Indl. Estate, ...

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Enterprise/D/ACL/30...

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

After some months of reasonably good trade figures, the latest two rounds show very poor results; the export boom seems to have faded away, while imports continue to rise sharply. The balance of payments position and foreign debt are the single biggest worry in the Indian economy today. Prices showed some signs of reaching a plateau but the growth in money supply was considerable and can only add to inflationary tendencies.

All data are seasonally adjusted. Current trends are computed on the basis of six months' (weekly data) or one-and-a-half years' (monthly data) figures.

Wholesale Price Index

1970-71 = 100

Current Trend
2.17% p.a.

During the last fortnight, the spiralling trend in prices seemed to have come to a halt but there are no signs yet of a downturn.

Consumer Price Index

1960 = 100

Current Trend
7.1% p.a.

The rise in consumer prices during the last month was above trend—at a 9 per cent annualised rate.

Money Supply

Rs Crore

Current Trend
11.7% p.a.

There was a sharp increase in liquidity last fortnight. This may exacerbate inflationary pressures.

Commercial Bank Credit

Rs Crore

Current Trend
14.4 p.a.

Credit conditions in the country were tight during the last fortnight—rising by the annual trend rate.

Foreign Trade

Rs Crore

Current Trend
31.0% p.a. EXPORTS
15.35% p.a. IMPORTS

There was more bad news on the trade front. While imports increased sharply, exports failed to grow.

Foreign Exchange Rate

Rs per $

Current Trend
12% p.a.

The devaluation continues—but the annual trend is now 12 per cent compared to 20 per cent earlier.

Share Price Index

1984-85 = 100

Current Trend
10.0% p.a.

The stock-market showed remarkable resilience despite the series of mega-issues and consequent reduction of liquidity.

Closing Gold Prices

Rs per 10 gm

Current Trend
2.14% p.a.

Bullion prices continued to see-saw. During the last fortnight, the price of gold again increased by a small amount.

WHOLESALE PRICES

Growth of items in the 2nd fortnight of September 1989

	% Growth
Tea	17.87
Oranges	16.44
Onions	12.25
Cotton Seeds	8.27
Gingelly Seed	5.82
Turmeric	5.71
Betel-Nuts	4.65
Vanaspati	4.25
Moong	3.93
Diesel Engines	3.86
Khandsari	3.44
Art Silk & Artificial Fabrics	2.81
Ceramic Tiles	2.73
Ball Bearing	2.62
Groundnut Seeds	2.62
Hides Raw	2.57
Radio & T.V.	2.49
Boilers	2.34
Arhar	2.28
Groundnut Oilcake	2.10
Cashew-Nut	2.06
Mustard Oil	1.83
Atta	1.53
Urad	1.48
Handloom & Powerloom Products	1.32
Masoor	1.31
Linseed	1.28
Gram	1.20
Solvent Extracted Oil	1.17
Groundnut Oil	1.13
Cotton Cloth	1.11
Copra	1.11
Jute Textiles	0.93
Rape & Mustard Seeds	0.81
Wheat	0.79
Coconut Oil	0.76
Fish	0.67
Ghee	0.66
Cables & Wires	0.61
Coffee	0.53
Maida	0.52
Gingelly Oil	0.51
Electrical Motors	0.40
Board	0.39
Tractors	0.31
Butter	0.29
Dairy Products	0.11

Of the 136 series considered, 49 of them with a total weight of 38.324 had a positive growth and 21 of them with a total weight of 21.717 had a negative growth.

SELECTED INDICATORS

	1989	1988
Coal Thousand Tonnes, September	14720	14130
Saleable Steel Thousand Tonnes, September	697.8	722.0
Cement Thousand Tonnes, September	3300	3362
Petroleum Crude Thousand Tonnes, September	2765	2590
Petroleum Refinery Products Thousand Tonnes, September	3474	3703

Compiled by THE POLICY GROUP

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

And you thought Modi Continental only makes India's best truck tyres?

You could hardly help thinking that.

After all Modi Continental's N416 and RL8 truck tyres have led the way on India's challenging highways for the last 14 years – and have set standards others are still trying to match.

And the same proven technology – backed by the world renowned tyre manufacturer, Continental Aktiengesellschaft, West Germany– has gone into making Modi Continental No. 1 in two-wheeler tyres too.

What makes "Treadsafe" a safer choice for scooters and motorcycles?

- Special tread pattern and superior tread compound give better skid resistance, high cornering and braking efficiency
- Unique tread design gives maximum mileage
- Nylon construction and 50% more casing strength give good double impact resistance.

Plus! A nationwide network of 40 centres to ensure prompt after sales service.

Modi Continental two-wheeler tyres. Excellence only India's No. 1 tyre manufacturer can offer.

TREADSAFE

No. 1 in tyres – technology, sales, exports

Modi Continental

The tyre that never tires

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Germany's leading bank is now in Bombay and New Delhi.

The successful introduction of products to worldwide markets requires a bank with international resources. Deutsche Bank, with offices in more than 40 countries around the globe, is such a bank.

First-hand information, international know-how and professional advice on business trends and prospects are but a few of the advantages Deutsche Bank offers.

Because ultimately all business is local business, ask the bank that is at home wherever your business may take you.

Ask Deutsche Bank.

Deutsche Bank

Deutsche Bank AG
Bombay Branch, Tulsiani Chambers
Nariman Point,
Bombay 400021
Tel: 22/223262, 22/223292

Deutsche Bank AG
New Delhi Branch, Tolstoy House
15 – 17 Tolstoy Marg,
New Delhi 110001
Tel: 11/3313629, 11/3324079

Deutsche Bank's presence in the Asia/Pacific region: Bangkok, Beijing, Colombo, Hong Kong, Jakarta, Karachi, Kuala Lumpur, Lahore, Macau, Manila, Melbourne, Nagoya, Osaka, Pusan, Seoul, Singapore, Surabaya, Sydney, Taipei, Tokyo

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

A Dangerous Drift

IT is a sign of the schizophrenic times we live in that in the drama enacted by N. Ram, associate editor of The Hindu, to denigrate his uncle and editor, G. Kasturi, the majority of the press egged him on and cheered. And in an appropriately surrealistic act, C.R.Irani, managing director of The Statesman, pinned a medal on Ram's chest.

Almost all journalists' organisations came out in full-throated support of Ram, revelling in pulling down the editor. And the newspapers favoured by Ram to publish a part of the exposure of Bofors, vetoed by his editor, preened themselves in borrowed Hindu plumes the next morning.

It is immaterial whether The Hindu issue is an intra-family affair. The relevant point in the extraordinary denouement is that a member of the staff of The Hindu chose publicly to berate his editor while vowing to stay on in the paper.

The issue of Bofors must be separated from Ram's conduct. Ram and in particular his intrepid colleague in Geneva, Chitra Subramaniam, deserve the highest praise for their consistent expose of the Bofors scandal. With admirable meticulousness, the team tore apart the Government's self-serving alibis to land their paper the biggest scoop of the decade among Indian newspapers.

True, the manner in which the expose was displayed over the months was out of character. It would have been more in The Hindu style to underplay it, rather than plaster the front page and inside pages with facsimile of letters. But that is a relatively minor point of style.

It would appear that Ram was carried away by his own success and planned to continue hogging the paper for a succession of follow-up exposes on the Bofors deal. The vetoing of the controversial second portion of the Bofors story raised Ram's ire. Judging by what appeared in other papers, courtesy Ram, it is difficult to disagree with the editor's decision that it did not take the expose much further.

The point is not whether the editor was right or wrong, nor even whether he was influenced by the Government in the decision he took. The editor made a decision and the only honourable course for Ram, if he wanted to challenge it, was to resign his job and fight.

In the lengthy statement Ram made at the standing-room-only press conference in Delhi, he raised the question of the need to look at the decision-making structure in newspapers. He must know as well as any journalist that if the institution of the editor is denigrated, the loss is the newspaper readers'. Kasturi, indeed enhanced his reputation by publishing the full text of Ram's statement attacking him, together with his own brief rejoinder, couched in dignified language.

Ram addressing the controversial press conference

As editor, Kasturi had taken a decision and the only honourable course for Ram if he wanted to challenge it as associate editor, was to resign his job and fight.

It is perfectly in order that an owner should also be the editor of a publication if he has the yen for the profession. What is happening in Indian newspapers is the deliberate diminution of the editor's status, with the owner becoming a backseat driver.

There is no great mystery about the proprietor-editor relationship and how a healthy interaction between the two can benefit the paper and readers. A newspaper owner is fully entitled to lay down a policy, and if an editor is not in full agreement with it, he has no business to take on the job. Similarly, within the broad parameters of laid-down policy, the proprietor has no business to interfere with the editor's day-to-day direction of the newspaper.

The tragedy of Indian journalism is that the editor is becoming an endangered species. We have seen this happen over the years in The Statesman, and in more recent times, The Times of India has taken a sharp turn from being an editor's paper to a paper for advertisements and the make-up department.

As the poet said, a little learning is a dangerous thing, and an imperfect understanding of how the great American papers work has caused havoc. It is forgotten that a Sulzeberger of the New York Times can be an activist publisher in the American sense because he has been put through the mill and devotes full-time attention to the paper. In a sense, The Hindu structure corresponds to The New York Times tradition in that the co-owners, including Ram, have had to earn their spurs.

The Hindu controversy is another nail in the coffin of the editor's position. It also highlights a tragic aspect of the Indian scene. In the run-up to the elections, many journalists have become warriors in the political battle for or against Rajiv Gandhi.

The opposition parties are not the only ones who are licking their lips as another exposure on Bofors is flashed across the front pages of newspapers. Journalists are also rooting for one side or the other, having lost their professional scepticism and objectivity.

In the process, we are reaching further depths of partisanship in the newspaper profession. Perhaps it is unrealistic to hope that journalists can stay virtuous in the increasingly muddy pond of Indian politics. But we should be clear about the direction in which we are heading. It is a direction that bodes ill for the future of Indian journalism.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

No Indirect Landings

Monrovia

Windhoek

Direct Connections to West Africa

Zambia Airways

We're getting better all the time

For details Contact your Travel Agent or Call on us at

DELHI: Mohandev Bldg., 13, Tolstoy Marg, NEW DELHI – 110 001
TEL.: 332 2552/332 8129

BOMBAY: 207, Maker Chambers V Nariman Point, Bombay 400 021
TEL.: 202 6942/204 5573

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Garware Marine Industries Limited

Registered Office: Raheja Centre, Nariman Point, Bombay 400 021.

Statement by Mr. Ashok Garware, Chairman at the 12th Annual General Meeting of the Company on Friday, 22nd September, 1989.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I have great pleasure in extending to you a warm and cordial welcome to this Twelfth Annual General Meeting of your Company.

The Directors' Report and Audited Accounts for the 18 month period ended 31st March, 1989 have been with you for sometime now, I presume you have had the opportunity of going through the same, and I shall take them as read

Founder Chairman

On 29th October, 1988 Founder of the Garware Group and Chairman Padma Bhushan Dr. B.D. Garware resigned from the Board of Directors, after having guided and inspired the Company's growth since its inception, which has resulted in the Company's products receiving wide acceptance in the country and abroad. Due to his dynamic leadership, the Company is now poised for a bright future. You will be happy to know that his advice and guidance will always be available to the Company whenever he is approached.

Year Under Review

I look back with satisfaction at the period under review, inspite of the severe adversities faced by the Company during 1986-87. The results for the period would have been even better, if the price level of the input costs could have been contained. I am sure my feelings will be shared by all the Shareholders who are interested in the progress of the Company. Barring unforeseen circumstances the upward trend in sales and profitability is likely to continue.

Our Commitments

We on our part are continuing our efforts to reduce costs, augment productivity to achieve better results. The working of the Company during the current period till date has also been encouraging.

I am pleased to state that with the infrastructure the Company has established over the years, we are well equipped to face the challenges ahead.

Fisheries Industry

India has a 6,100 kilometre coast-line which offers vast potential for in-shore, off-shore and deep-sea fishing. It is estimated that marine fishing resources alone can be easily tapped to the extent of 14 million tonnes per annum. Against this back-drop the actual fish production in the country increased from approximately 1 million tonnes in 1962 to only 3.2 million tonnes in 1988, whilst the present world fish production is 85 million tonnes per annum. Thus India accounts for only 3.8% of the world output and the need to further augment and boost fisheries as a potential industry acquires significance.

On the export front India is fast emerging as the major exporter of marine products with exports for the year 1988 touching Rs.598 crores against Rs.460 crores in 1987. Frozen shrimps continue to have a dominant share both in terms of quantity and value in the overall exports of marine products. The major markets for Indian Marine products continue to be Japan, USA, France, Netherlands and UK.

Looking at the vast untapped marine fishery resources, I expect that with the growth of the Fisheries Industry - (increase in the fleet of deep-sea fishing vessels, as also thrust on the export front) - there will be larger demand for fishing nets as well as floats which are beyond the capacity of the un-organised sector of the fishnet-making industry. Consequently, your Company has a pivotal role to play.

Acknowledgements

Before I conclude, I wish to place on record my deep appreciation of the whole hearted support and valuable guidance received from my colleagues on the Board. At this juncture, I would like to make a special mention of the inputs of Mr. A.S. Sule who has closely guided the activity at the factories as a result of which, there has been a substantial increase in the production - and Mr. H.C. Sethna who similarly, has given direction to marketing and other activities normally carried out in the Head Office. The work of both these directors has contributed in no mean measure to the substantial progress made by the Company. I would like to express on behalf of the Board and myself, our sincere appreciation of the efforts being put in by the employees at all levels in the working of the Company. I also take this opportunity to express my gratitude to the Financial Institutions and the Banks for their continued and active support, and last but not the least I wish to express my sincere thanks for the support and understanding of all the Members as also those of you present here this afternoon.

Thank you,

Bombay, Chairman
22nd Sept, 1989.

This does not purport to be a report of the proceedings of the Annual General Meeting.

BIG A/GMIL/1/89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE PRESS

Under Pressure

Mega-battles over editorial ethics

THE delicate issue of press freedom came to the fore again last fortnight, embroiling in controversy some of India's most prestigious newspaper groups: The Hindu, The Hindustan Times, and The Times of India. A public battle resulted between the editors of the first, a threat to quit came from Editor H.K. Dua of the second, and an actual resignation from Editor Vinod Mehta of the fledgling The Independent, youngest sister in the gargantuan Times family.

The issues involved the authority and responsibilities of the editor and the duty of a journalist towards his editor, his sources and his readers. Not the least of the issues, though, was the political interference that emerged in each case.

Without any legal protection, the Indian press has often been buffeted by government pressures, the nadir being the Emergency censorship. On the slippery path to the general elections, the Government's subtle tentacles seemed hyper-active. If the associate editor of The Hindu had suspected (INDIA TODAY, October 31) the Government of pressuring his editor to suppress news, Editor Dua of The Hindustan Times had reason a few days later to suspect it of trying to use one of his senior staff to plant material in his paper. He put his foot down after the paper carried a report by Senior Editor Shubhabrata Bhattacharya, datelined 'lately in St Kitts', regarding alleged secret accounts of opposition leader V.P. Singh's son, Ajeya Singh.

Bhattacharya had been on leave, ostensibly on honeymoon in Udaipur, when he found his way to St Kitt's and returned to publish the report, all without the knowledge of the editor. A former Youth Congress activist, Bhattacharya has made no bones about his political preferences. While refusing to comment on the controversy, he did not deny the allegation that party backers paid for his trip. The Hindustan Times was the only paper apart from The Telegraph of Calcutta to print the allegations. Ajeya sued both and such disclosures could only further reduce the credibility of the paper, which has gained circulation during Dua's two-and-a-half year tenure. Newspapers speculated that he had put in his resignation, insisting on his prerogative to commission reports.

Dua refused to confirm or deny the rumour, though he insisted that "there is no problem between the proprietors and me. The issue relates to freedom of the press. There is need for all the newspapers to insulate themselves from pressures from outside."

The allusion was clearly to Race Course Road. This is not the first time Dua has taken a bold stand at variance with proprietor and Congress(I) MP K.K. Birla's political commitments on such issues as the infamous Anti-Defamation Bill. So while there was speculation that the management was using him as a front to balance out its pro-Congress(I) slant in the run-up to an election that might go either way, it was more likely that Dua was sending a signal, both to the owners and to the Government, by taking a firm stand.

While Dua's management was likely to stand by him, at least till the elections, Mehta was not so fortunate. His resignation was accepted after a front-page report in his 29-day-old, upmarket The Independent caused an uproar. The October 19 report had claimed that it was former deputy prime minister Y.B. Chavan, not former prime minister Morarji Desai, who had spied for the CIA. Based largely on a letter written by disgruntled RAW employees, it alleged that Chavan had a clandestine affair with a US woman diplomat.

Chavan is something of a Maharashtrian hero. The Shiv Sena has stoked Maharashtrian chauvinism in recent years, and with the tension of the impending elections, the issue became explosive. Chief Minister Sharad Pawar, a corner-stone of the Congress(I)'s poll strategy, is also president of the Yeshwantrao Chavan Pratishthan. The Government sacked the two employees responsible for circulating the letter and Pawar demanded that the paper apologise.

Intriguingly, the most scathing criticism of the report came from the editorial columns of the paper's own sesquicentenarian sister. After excoriating "juvenile zeal for sensationalism", the Times of India concluded: "The hysterical self-righteousness of sections of the press is only a facade for perpetrating politically-motivated intellectual terrorism."

In an editorial, Mehta defended the report as an attempt to reveal how

THE HINDU
India's National Newspaper
Rajiv Gandhi plays it safe
Most outgoing
Army called out in riot-hit Bhagalpur

Editor G. Kasturi was accused by Associate Editor N. Ram of buckling under government pressure.

THE HINDUSTAN TIMES
PM files papers for Amethi seat
200 submit nominations
Congress-I clears 150 names
Opposition heading for one-to-one contest
INSIDE

Editor H.K. Dua suspected the Government of using a senior staffer to plant a story in the paper.

THE INDEPENDENT
BRIEFS
Riot toll mounts to 42 since Sunday
19 killed; army out in Bihar
Rotable rate devalued by ten times
Fresh evidence leads to the top: N Ram

After retracting a controversial report, Editor Vinod Mehta resigned from his 29-day-old newspaper.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Unbridled aggression...

Exquisite grace...

Delicate touch...

Sheer power...

The speed of skiing...

The Swedish revolution...

The African antelopes...

WILLS BOOK OF EXCELLENCE

SPORTS PHOTOGRAPHY 1

Magic lenses recapture the milestones and legends of sport

Relive sports' greatest moments. Captured by the world's top photographers. Pictorial gems from Patrick Eagar, Sports Illustrated and others. Over 200 captivating photographs in colour and black & white. Any sports collection is incomplete without it.

"...an excellent concept in sports literature."

— Carl Lewis

Written by Ashok Kamath. Published by Orient Longman. Price Rs 150. Available at all leading book stores.

WILLS

Promoting excellence in sport

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

ANOTHER BREAKTHROUGH BY JI

Whe

UGH BY JINDAL

JINDAL

India's only fully integrated stainless steel plant.

Great deeds are the work of those who look for challenges, who strive ceaselessly, who actively pursue the discovery of breakthrough products and processes.

In steel, Jindal is one strong example. Jindal has pioneered India's only fully integrated stainless steel plant. Every stage in the manufacture of stainless steel — from the conversion of raw material into ingots and slabs to hot rolling strips & plates and cold rolling is done inhouse.

This is just one instance of breakthrough Jindal R & D and technology at work. Other Jindal breakthroughs include: ferro-chrome, the super refining Argon Oxygen Decarburisation process, DD & EDD grade cold rolled steel and large diameter submerged arc welded pipes. Jindal. Looking for challenges. And meeting them. With skill and determination. Ahead of the rest.

JINDAL

Where there's a challenge, there's Jindal.

Ferro-chrome • Stainless steel sheets, plates and coils • Cold rolled MS sheets and coils • Large diameter submerged arc welded pipes • Aluminium sheets and coils • Paints • Tea

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

RW
RAYMOND WEIL
COLLECTION

THE FASCINATION NEVER ENDS
RAYMOND WEIL JEWELLERY WATCHES. ULTRA-THIN. QUARTZ.
18-CARAT GOLDPLATED. A NEW DIMENSION IN ELEGANT, EXCLUSIVE WRISTWEAR.

MADE IN INDIA WITH TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE FROM RAYMOND WEIL, GENEVE.

ected Watch & Jewellery Stores (Telephone Nos.): BOMBAY: Tribhovandas Bhimji Zaveri: 341010 ● A.K. Motiwala Jewellers: 6428081 ● Apsara Pen Mart: 271101 ● Cliftons: 264288
.K. Time: 6490011 ● Lawrence Watch Co: 2048416, 2040130 ● Marcks & Co: 270999 ● Akbarallys: 6490612 ● Eastern Watch: 264711 ● Christian Bernard: 4948791 ● PUNE: Pundole Enterprises:
275, 63685 ● DELHI: Johnson Watch Co: 3322002 ● Fine Watch Co: 264636 ● Big Ben: 3320216 ● Mehra Sons (CP): 3324944 ● LUCKNOW: Rupani Bros: 43619 ● KANPUR: Thakurdas
ellers: 61146 ● Kashi Jewellers: 212746, 212887 ● CALCUTTA: Rams: 431590 ● MADRAS: Doshi & Doshi: 565118, 560963 ● Chhotabhai & Co: 32024 ● SECUNDERABAD: Ramesh Watch Co:
49 ● HYDERABAD: Meena Jewellers: 231073 ● AHMEDABAD: Vajubhai Jewellers: 401901 ● Kenya Watch Co: 448035 ● Favourite Watch Co: 78395 ● Khazana: 466625 ● BANGALORE: Perfect
e: 77516

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

intelligence is used to defame people like Desai. He offered to apologise if the Government produced Intelligence Bureau documentation and they proved the information wrong.

That, however, did not suffice. Pawar met the Jains, owners of the Times of India group, in Delhi. Mehta retracted the story and apologised on the front-page on October 25. Within 12 hours, he had resigned, stating that with the apology, he had lost his moral authority in the paper. "This whole thing has been politicised," he later said, adding that "Pawar is a politician, and he obviously saw his chance."

In the process, not only did the fledgling paper receive a possibly fatal blow, an editor—who had resigned from The Indian Post rather than accept the proprietor's orders to avoid criticism of certain key politicians—was deprived of his forum just before a crucial election. Pertinently, Pritish Nandy was allowed to continue as editor of the Times' sister publication, The Illustrated Weekly of India, despite his inability to substantiate the libellous story he published about Orissa Chief Minister J.B. Patnaik.

Meanwhile, the family battle at The Hindu landed in court, with affidavits and counter-affidavits over Managing Director and Editor G. Kasturi's October 18 move to suspend nephew-Associate Editor N. Ram. The case was adjourned till November 3 to allow a compromise.

However, any compromise is bound to be tenuous. For the rift represents a fundamental difference of perception. A prominent member of the Kasturi group held that the issue was that "much damage has been done to the reputation of the paper". Meanwhile, Ram flew to Sweden, Geneva and London where he revealed that he had made "a major breakthrough" in his Bofors investigations, hinting that his new disclosures would "lead right to the top".

That promises to trigger off another clash at the paper—Kasturi's staid conservatism against Ram's determined radicalism, which insists on taking a stiff stand on issues. Ram's pro-LTTE stand on the Sri Lanka imbroglio and his open support for the DMK in Tamil Nadu politics are among issues that have previously brought him into conflict with Kasturi. While none of these issues caused a break, the family is at the brink of coming apart at the seams over the suspicion that a shadowy hand is trying to stifle a major critic. Now, with the election charge at full tilt, the seats at newspaper boardrooms are likely to get hotter than ever.

—DAVID DEVADAS with bureau reports

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Z.R. ANSARI

Shock Charge

Minister accused of rape bid

An ordinary girl might have gone home and wept for two days, then dried her eyes and sulked back to her daily routine. But Mukti Dutta, 26, is no ordinary girl. Born to the owner of a huge orchard at Binsar near Almora in Uttar Pradesh, and alumna of the prestigious Maharani Gayatri Devi Public School in Jaipur, she has devoted herself for the last four years to grass roots work in about 300 villages near her father's estate. And she has earned respect for her work as secretary of the Jan Jagran Samiti which deals with environmental problems.

So she made a public issue of an incident on October 11 when she says Minister for Environment and Forests Z.R. Ansari, 64, molested and tried to rape her. She had gone to meet him in New Delhi about the misfunctioning of an Almora-based environmental institute and about the timber and resin mafia there. She says that after listening to her in his main office, he suggested they go to the ante-chamber.

According to an FIR lodged by her, Ansari shut the door behind them, "lunged at me and proceeded to embrace and kiss me and ran his hands over my body and under my clothes. I began to struggle violently. And during the course of the struggle, Ansari pinned me down on the couch and got on top of me". But she managed to escape.

Ansari had, obviously, not calculated on Dutta's contacts. Her father, Vivek Dutta, is a leading light of Almora, and former prime ministerial aide Arun Singh's current retreat is on land which belongs to her family. Her work has brought her into contact with Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, with whom she lobbied to have Binsar declared a sanctuary. She has also worked closely with Cabinet Secretary T.N. Seshan when he headed the Environment Department.

Within a couple of hours of her traumatic experience, Dutta contacted Seshan, demanding that he inform the prime minister. She says he promised to call B.G. Deshmukh, principal secretary to the prime minister. Meanwhile, a family friend, Brijendra Singh, called Rajiv directly and Dutta says she got the impression that Ansari would be sacked.

But after a week of assurances by Seshan, Deshmukh and Minister of State for Welfare Rajendra Kumari Bajpai, Dutta realised nothing would happen. She says Bajpai told her that, though what had happened was terrible, the situation was delicate because of the elections. Obviously, a beleaguered prime minister decided he could not afford to act against one of the two Muslim ministers in his cabinet.

Photographs by PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

Protesting activists; and (inset) Ansari

But when Ansari got the Congress(I) ticket, Dutta declared battle. She filed her FIR on October 26, and went to the press. "If a stand could not be taken on this kind of straightforward issue, then at what point will a stand be taken?" she asked. As many as 13 women's and civil liberties organisations have backed her.

After avoiding questions on the subject for a day, and after frantic phone calls to the Prime Minister's Office, Ansari finally denied the charge the next day: "I have been set up. This is a conspiracy by my opponents in the Congress and outside."

Said the delicate-looking Dutta: "I would like to invite Mr Ansari to come to the dargah at Ajmer Sharif and swear on his and on his children's head that he never laid a finger on me." The issue, she added, went beyond her and Ansari. "All these filthy politicians are the same, whether they are from the Congress(I) or the Janata Dal or any other party." Her soft voice expressed the anguish of the many women who suffer such indignities in silence.

—DAVID DEVADAS

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Sharp Corporation, Japan enters into a joint venture with Kalyani Sharp India Ltd...

to perfect perfection

When two world class leaders meet, the result is product perfection. International technological excellence for products made in India. Sharp Corporation, Japan. The global electronic giant that has pioneered technical excellence. Kalyani Sharp India Ltd., the electronic company set up by Bharat Forge Ltd. to infuse into the Indian electronic market products of superior standards, under the brand name Optonica.

SHARP

SHARP CORPORATION, JAPAN

Pioneering technological excellence

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Optonica colour TVs measure up to the most exacting international standards for Kalyani Sharp. Synthesizing world class technology to give the Indian consumer excellence.

The Kalyani Sharp India Ltd.joint venture with Sharp Corporation,Japan, is for the manufacture of a wide range of TVs and VCRs. Optonica will take up an on-line extension of colour TVs with moulded cabinets, flat square picture tubes and 14" colour TVs.

The venture is switched on. Now just wonder at the sheer excellence Optonica's international class gives to India. In every product perfection that's even more perfect.

OPTONICA

SHARPLINE TV ▪ VCR

The world's very best

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ESPIONAGE

Leaks in High Places

Prosecution of two officials sends shivers down bureaucratic spines

IN early April 1987, two innocuous looking packages landed on the desk of Joy Thomas, supervisor in the Delhi office of a little known courier company Trident Express. One package was addressed to Paris and the other to the Netherlands.

In the normal course, the packages would have been winging their way to their destinations in a matter of hours. But for a small discrepancy which triggered off Thomas' suspicions. He knew that the parcels had originated from William Jacks, a company owned by K.K. Jajodia and his son A.K. Jajodia, which frequently used his courier services. But the sender's name and address on both parcels had been intentionally falsified.

Thomas opened the packages. The one addressed to Paris contained an army document prominently marked 'secret': a photocopy of a trial report of a battlefield surveillance radar, evaluated by the Army School of Artillery at Deolali. The second package contained 13 letters addressed to the Ministry of Defence. Some dealt with the Flycatcher radar, used by the army to detect low-flying aircraft and the other referred to a modification proposal for the Super Flader Maus radar used by the defence forces.

The courier company promptly called in the CBI, which in turn raided Jajodia's house to recover another secret document, containing details of the army's operational requirement for utility helicopters. Tracing the source of the leaked documents, the CBI investigators sniffed their way into the very heart of the defence establishment.

One trail led the CBI to the office of the Adviser (Defence Electronics) in the Department of Electronics, Dr N.W. Nerurkar, and the other to Brigadier R.S. Diol in the Directorate of Weapons and Equipment at Army Headquarters. The Jajodias were arrested in June 1988 and Diol and Nerurkar in November 1988. The CBI charged them with offences under sections 3 and 5 of the Official Secrets Act, which carry a maximum punishment of 14 years.

Discreet inquiries were initiated to ascertain the extent of Nerurkar's access to the secrets of the three services. The Defence Ministry was horrified to discover that Nerurkar had been privy to a treasure trove of sensitive information pertaining to current and future equipment plans of all three services.

Nine years earlier, in 1979, the Defence Ministry had directed the army, the navy and the air force to inform the adviser (defence electronics) of all their plans to procure major equipment with an electronic component; the adviser would determine whether the electronic component could be manufactured indigenously or whether import was inescapable. Nerurkar had been performing this function of adviser for over 10 years, so there was little he did not know about the equipment plans of the three services. In exercise of the powers conferred on him, Nerurkar had, in the early 1980s, asked in writing for the Indian Air Force's future procurement plans.

Brigadier R.S. Diol, who worked in the Directorate of Weapons and Equipment, dealt with most of the army's equipment plans.

The arrest of Diol and Nerurkar set the alarm bells ringing in the Defence Ministry. "If Nerurkar is a spy, then the country's defence strategies, equipment and operational plans would have been compromised," commented a senior official of the Department of Electronics and a former colleague of Nerurkar. The same would apply to Diol, who, as brigadier (general staff) in the Directorate of Weapons and Equipment, dealt with most of the army's equipment plans.

As a first step, the Defence Ministry some months ago pruned the powers of the adviser (defence electronics): it ordered that all super-sensitive equipment plans need not be sent to the Department of Electronics for clearance. According to government guidelines, top secret documents are meant to be kept in the custody of officers of the rank of joint secretary and above and handled with utmost care. They are not supposed to take these documents home or even pass the documents on to people below them.

Papers marked 'secret' can be marked down to junior officials, but a record of the movement of the papers has to be maintained. The rules pertaining to movement of 'confidential' and 'restricted' documents are a little less tight.

There is a general tendency in government offices to over-classify papers. And even the senior-most officials are forced to take sensitive documents home, even though this is technically against the rules. They say it is logistically impossible for them to deal with all these papers during office hours.

But are Nerurkar and Diol really spies? The Additional Chief Metropolitan Magistrate of Delhi, J.M. Malik, found enough evidence of a prima facie case against them in September when he committed all the accused to stand trial before a sessions court. What is the evidence against them?

The CBI found that the evaluation report of the West German manufactured RATAC-S battlefield surveillance radar, discovered by the courier in the package being sent to France by the Jajodias, was a photocopy of the report sent to the Department of Electronics by Army Headquarters.

Nerurkar had received the report on February 17, 1987, and kept it with him till April 9, when he forwarded it to a joint director in his department, S.P. Singh. Experts of the Central Forensic Sciences Laboratory opined that the copy being sent abroad had been xeroxed from Nerurkar's copy.

The second parcel opened by the courier contained 13 letters pertaining to the army's Flycatcher radar and the Super Flader Maus radar. Nerurkar was dealing with these radars, and had in August 1986, sought written permission from the secretary of the Department of Electronics 'to continue dealing with the three radars. The CBI feels it was too much of a coin-

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Instantly filtered clean, pure water that tastes like clean, pure water.

Put the ordinary water filter to a taste test. You will find that the strong, unpleasant aftertaste filtered water puts you off the very idea of drinking filtered water.

Here's the Ranutrol Aquapure Water Filter. For instantly filtered water that is safe for drinking, and has the pleasant taste of natural, clean, pure water. The secret is its revolutionary new granular activated carbon technology, that not only filters, but improves the taste of municipal water—by reducing excess chlorine. Technology from Teledyne Water Pik, USA, brought to you by the Ranutrol Group, people who gave you the Ranutrol Hansa Aqua Mixer.

The Ranutrol Aquapure Water Filter. Puts taste back to filtered water.

Ranutrol Aquapure Water Filter

From Teledyne Water Pik, USA.

RANUTROL GROUP

For more details, write to or contact, the Home Improvement Division of Auto Controls Pvt. Ltd. □ F-85, Okhla Indl. Area, Phase-I, New Delhi-110 020. Tel: 683 6001. □ X-37, Okhla Indl. Area, Phase-II, New Delhi-110 020. Tel: 63 3494, 684 5055. □ 114, 1st Floor, A2 Building, Shah & Nahar Indl. Estate, Lower Parel, Bombay-400 013. Tel: 492 0297, 492 7125. □ 5-1 Sham Lal Lane, 14A, Park Street, Calcutta-700 016. Tel: 29 1755. □ Flat No. A-4, 2nd Floor, Parsan Manere, 603, Anna Salai, Madras-600 006. Tel: 86 7121. □ Natraj Complex, 2nd F Cantonment Road, Richmond Circle, Bangalore-560 025. Tel: 21 2846, 21 4683. □ H. No. 1108, Sector 33C, Chandigarh-160 031. Or, Contact your nearest dealer.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Enterprise/D/ACL

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

FROM VENICE TO VIENNA VIA MONTE CARLO

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Monte Carlo

COLLECTION

DESIGNER KNITWEAR
CREATED EXCLUSIVELY FOR

CAMPUS LOOK

SPORTING LIFE

EVENING ELEGANCE

COUNTRY CASUALS

LINTAS (DELHI) OWM/MC/189/27

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

NOW YOUR PRECIOUS DOCUMENTS HAVE THE OPTION OF GROWING OLD GRACEFULLY.

Does the picture on the left remind you of how your documents look after a few weeks of handling?

And would you believe us if we told you that the one on the right is the older, more used document?

Or would you think it's just an advertising gimmick?

Actually it's a document that's been laminated on a GBC Laminator. In an office. In a matter of minutes.

Give your documents lasting power. With a GBC Laminator.

Once your document is ready, all you have to do is choose the lamination you want. Thick or thin. Matte or glossy. Then switch on the machine and pass your document through it.

That's all. You've just made all your documents – blueprints, drawings, charts, maps, photographs, schedules and proposals – resistant to ink and coffee stains, greasy fingers and years of handling. And mishandling.

In addition, the GBC lamination enhances the colour and appearance of your documents. Giving them a real international look. A look that's here to stay.

After all GBC Hi-Tech (India) Ltd. is the undisputed Indian market leader. And an affiliate of the world leader and pioneer in binders and laminators, General Binding Corporation (USA).

And, GBC believes that your documents should stand up to the test of time as beautifully as your ideas do. Don't you agree?

 Also available : GBC Binders*

* Please send your representative to see me.
* Call me up to fix an appointment.

Name : _____

Designation : _____

Address : _____

_____ Tel : _____

Mail to 'Marketing' at Corporate Office.

GBC

BINDERS & LAMINATORS

SMART BUSINESS SENSE FOR YOUR OFFICE

GBC HI-TECH (INDIA) LTD. CORPORATE OFFICE : A-216, Okhla Industrial Area, Phase I, New Delhi 110 020. Tel : 683742, 639142, 6830837, 6842529. Telex : 031-75146. Fax : 011-6830936. * D/2, Basement, 6 Sri [illegible] Road, New Delhi-110 049 * Chandigarh, Tel : 42655 * Bangalore, Tel : 220313 * Bombay, Tel : 6365814, 6363475 * No. 8, 1st Floor, Prashant Apartments, Deccan College Road, Pune-411 006 * Calcutta, Tel : 430784 Telex : 021-7820 FTCI IN. Fax : 033-444614 * Madras, Tel : 452826 * Vadodara, Tel : 326440 * Hyderabad, Tel : 842895

CC-0. In Public Domain. Panini Kanya Maha Vidyalaya Collection.

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

evidence that a xerox copy of the evaluation report of one of these radars (BFSR) and letters pertaining to the other two, all being handled by Nerurkar, found their way to the Jajodias.

According to the complaint filed in court by the CBI, Diol too had gone out of his way to obtain a copy of the note on "operational requirement of utility helicopters for the army", prepared by the Directorate of Army Aviation. In the normal course, this note would not have come to the Directorate of Weapons and Equipment where Diol worked. But Diol pointedly asked Lt-Colonel S.K. Singh for the note on the helicopters and it was sent to him. Diol kept the note with him for about a month, from February 17, 1987, till March 20, 1987. On April 21, 1987 a copy of the same note was recovered by the CBI during a raid on Jajodia's house.

ON the note which had been sent to Diol, the Additional Director-General of Army Aviation, Brigadier Atma Singh, had made some handwritten notations. When the note was returned to Brigadier Atma Singh in June 1987, the notations were partially erased. Forensic experts told the CBI that the note found in Jajodia's house was a xerox copy of the one sent to Diol by Brigadier Atma Singh.

When the CBI subsequently searched Diol's house at NOIDA, it was looking for evidence that Diol was living beyond his means. What they found, instead, was a bunch of files, some dating back to the period Diol was military attache in Paris (1979 to 1983), and some to his stint in the Weapons and Equipment Directorate. A whole set of papers pertained to the 1982 Europe trip of General Sundarji, then deputy chief of army staff, to evaluate the now notorious Bofors 155mm Howitzer gun and its French and Austrian rivals. During that trip, Sundarji had handed over his set of evaluation papers to Diol. This Diol inexplicably retained, and they were found at his house by the CBI.

The bureau charged Diol under the Official Secrets Act, for allegedly leaking the utility helicopter note to the Jajodias, but has not till now charge-sheeted him in the case pertaining to the Sundarji papers. The CBI had, in fact, kept the recovery of the Sundarji papers very quiet, and not charge-sheeted Diol in this case.

But after Sundarji's interview (INDIA TODAY, September 15) which embarrassed the Government, a senior CBI official deliberately leaked to the press the news that Sundarji had been questioned for his carelessness in leaving his papers with Diol and not asking for their return subsequently.

The senior official is believed to have asked for the whole file on the Diol case to be put up to him and within a few days a front-page story appeared in a Delhi Sunday paper saying that the CBI would be questioning Sundarji again.

This was apparently done to warn Sundarji against making any more disclosures on l'affaire Bofors. Sundarji himself recognised this blatant warning. He said Diol was innocent of any wrongdoing as far as the Bofors gun papers were concerned. "Of course they are sending me a message," scoffed Sundarji. CBI and Home Ministry officials feel Sundarji had been remiss in leaving the papers with Diol and not inquiring about their fate later.

When they searched Diol's house, the CBI found 14 tolas of gold which he had brought back from France in 1983 without declaring them to the customs, and bonds worth Rs 1.8 lakh, bought with the money Diol had got by commuting his pension. Nerurkar's bank account too contained meagre savings.

As adviser (defence electronics), N.W. Nerurkar was privy to sensitive information about the equipment plans of all three services.

Though the CBI has charged Diol and Nerurkar with entering into a criminal conspiracy with the Jajodias, it has not yet been able to establish any connection between Diol and Nerurkar. The CBI's charge of a link between Jajodia and Nerurkar is based on a statement by Jajodia's driver that he used to take the Jajodias to the office of Nerurkar; and the presence of Nerurkar and Diol's residential phone numbers in the diary of Jajodia's telephone operator.

The Jajodia-Diol connection, alleged by the CBI, is also based on a statement by Jajodia's driver, Rakesh Kumar Singh. Singh said that on at least half a dozen occasions between the end of 1986 and early 1987 he picked up Diol from outside a five-star hotel and drove him to the Jajodias' house, and back after an hour. The driver's evidence will be crucial to the prosecution case. After the CBI raid, the Jajodias sent the driver back to his village; he sat at home for over a year and received his salary every month by money order. By spiriting away this crucial witness, the Jajodias unwittingly gave the game away.

This apart, the case has taken a strange turn. Prima facie, the strongest case appears to be against the Jajodias who were sending sensitive defence documents to a foreign country. Whether these documents actually came from Nerurkar and Diol can be proven conclusively only in the sessions court trial, which has yet to begin.

In the meantime, the Jajodias hired one of the best-known criminal lawyers in the country and obtained anticipatory bail from the high court. Seemingly unperturbed they have been travelling abroad frequently.

Nerurkar and Diol, on the other hand, are still in jail. Nerurkar's family finds it hard to pay for a lawyer, so Nerurkar argued his own case in the lower court. He has spent his time in prison studying law and the Official Secrets Act under which he has been charged. Diol's family too lacks the resources to hire a big name as lawyer.

This apparent injustice has united and angered the scientific community, which regards Nerurkar as a gifted scientist. When Nerurkar was arrested, his colleagues in the Department of Electronics met Professor M.G.K. Menon, science adviser to the prime minister, to plead that Nerurkar be given bail. Menon spoke to the then cabinet secretary, B.G. Deshmukh, who phoned CBI chief Mohan Katre, only to be told that this was a serious case. Nerurkar's colleagues are now collecting money to help him get legal aid when the trial begins in the sessions court.

Meanwhile, the trial looks like becoming a test case to challenge the antiquated Official Secrets Act, which, in the words of Dr Y.S. Chitale, president of the Supreme Court Bar Association, gives the Government "great potential to harass innocent persons, if it wants".

There is another side-light. The community of scientists is closely following the case. All of them regularly handle sensitive, secret documents. At the back of their minds is the worrying realisation: tomorrow it could happen to them.

—RAMINDAR SINGH

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

POWER BEHIND THE LIFT!

UB-MEC Traction batteries are built tough to withstand rigorous material handling operations. Consistent and unerring in performance these batteries are trusted as O.E. by Godrej & Boyce, Voltas, Jost's, Maini Materials and Mahindra Stiller. Its no surprise that UB-MEC Traction Batteries are regularly being exported to the U.S.S.R. in large quantities for two decades.

Bursting with power, bursting with reliability, bursting with energy — That's a UB-MEC Traction Battery.

MEC UB-MEC

TRACTION BATTERIES

BUILT TO PERFORM

UB-MEC Batteries Ltd., Regd. Office & Works: Mec. Factory Road, Yeswanthpur, Bangalore-560 022 Ph: 360161, 361112, 361113 Grams: 'MECWORK' TELEX: 845-2341
UB-MEC Batteries Ltd., Adarsh Ice Factory Compound, Marve Road, Malad West, Bombay-400 064 Ph: 6823579, 6820743
UB-MEC Batteries Ltd., 8/1B Chowringhee Lane, Calcutta-700 016 Ph: 241963
UB-MEC Batteries Ltd., McDowell House, No. 3, 2nd Line Beach, Madras-600 001. Ph: 521474, 516179
UB-MEC Batteries Ltd., No. 51, II Floor, Rani Jhansi Road, New Delhi-110 055 Ph: 771067
UB-MEC Batteries Ltd., Kodakkat Bldgs., 38/2204, Opp. YMCA, Chittoor Road, Ernakulam, COCHIN-682 035. Ph: 369257
UB-MEC Batteries Ltd., 161, Cherry Road, SALEM-636 001. Ph: 62513
UB-MEC Batteries Ltd., Amrit Ice & Cold Storage Compound, Begumpura Road, Nawabwadi, SURAT-395 003. Ph: 52415, 37413
UB-MEC Batteries Ltd., No. S-54, 'C' Scheme, Radha Marg, JAIPUR-302 001. Ph: 73504
UB-MEC Batteries Ltd., Rachana Building, Nehru Garden Road, JALLANDHAR-144 001. Ph: 57652

AAA/UB-MEC/8974

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE BIBLE

A New Testament

Another religious saga on the small screen

AFTER the epic success of the Ramayan and Mahabharat on the small screen there's another religious saga in the offing—Bible ki Kahaniyan. Appropriately, the 39-episode teleserial is slated for telecast just before Christmas. The time slot: Sunday morning.

Undertaking the mammoth Rs 5-crore enterprise is the Ernakulam-based Navodaya Films, run by M.C. Punnose—better known as Appachan. Navodaya, a trail-blazer in the Malayalam film industry, has the country's first three-dimensional film, My Dear Kuttichathan, to its credit. The genesis of the serial lay in an 800-page proposal submitted to Mandi House, with intricate details on the visual treatment of each episode. The script, based on the King James version of the Bible, has been written by Bhushan Banmali of Bombay. The final seal of approval, however, was given by a 12-member panel of church leaders, prominent members of different communities and scholars. Thirty episodes of the serial are based on the Old Testament and nine on the New Testament.

The 225 ft Ark; Raza Murad as Noah; (below) Shammi Kapoor as Nimrod: electronic opiate

Shooting for the serial has begun at impressive sets erected for the Noah's Ark. Plans are afoot to use electronic gadgetry to simulate the flood scene inside a studio using a miniature Ark.

Last month, shooting began at impressive sets erected for the Noah's Ark—225 ft wide and 300 ft high—and the Tower of Babel at Tirunelveli, near Kanyakumari. The temptation scene was shot at Ponmudi, a picturesque hill resort near Trivandrum. Though most of the shooting for the film will be done in Kerala and Tamil Nadu, to give the serial a touch of authenticity, some scenes will be shot in Egypt and Jerusalem.

The indoor shooting too will be on a grand scale, though not literally. Plans are afoot to use electronic gadgetry to simulate the flood scene inside a studio, using a miniature Ark. Says Jijo, 32, Appachan's son and one of the directors of the serial: "Having modern production techniques is an advantage. They were not available during the making of the film, Ten Commandments."

What makes the teleserial unique is that each episode will have a different director. Says Jijo: "This will ensure freshness in every episode." Adds Appachan: "It will also introduce a spirit of competition among the directors." Not surprisingly, the young directors, among them Jijo, Fazil, Rajeev Kumar, Sibi Malayil and Pratap Pothen, are working overtime to exhibit their directorial and technical brilliance.

While the doyen of film music in south India, Ilayaraja, is composing the title music, a galaxy of stars from the film industry and television is being drafted for the serial. Shammi Kapoor has been roped in to play Nimrod, Raza Murad to play Noah, and Alok Nath to play Jacob.

But the question that is arousing a great deal of curiosity is: who will play Jesus Christ? And the makers are not telling. Adding to the sense of anticipation is the fact that Christ will only appear for the first time in the 31st episode.

Appachan fervently hopes that Bible ki Kahaniyan will become a greater national obsession than the Ramayan and Mahabharat, and in the process break religious barriers. Says he: "The Bible has a universal message. This serial will be remembered for a long time." Religion, it seems, will now be the electronic opium of the masses.

—RAMESH MENON

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

NEHRU CUP

A Gruelling Battle

A tournament of upsets, heroics and swinging fortunes

WHILE India's Chetan Sharma was setting the Green Park Oval at Kanpur ablaze last week with a dazzling century, Micky Stewart, the English team manager, watched stoically from the pavilion. Soon after the match, which ended England's winning run in the preliminary rounds of the MRF-World Series for the Nehru Cup, he commented: "One-day cricket is so full of surprises that nothing surprises me any more."

Indeed, the two-week battle for the Nehru Cup produced some of the most capricious cricket ever played. It saw the West Indies initially crash to two defeats and then come back strongly to romp into the finals. It made Australia, riding high after wresting the Ashes in summer, bite dust and fail to make it even to the semi-finals. It saw the talented Sri Lankan team humble the mighty West Indies and give India and Pakistan a severe fright before their inexperience let them down. And it saw the underrated English team fight its way to the semi-finals, only to lose to a gritty Pakistan.

The ridiculously tight schedule—18 matches being played in as many days and in 15 centres—resulted in plenty of mediocre cricket too. The six competing teams spent most of their times scurrying from city to city, catching late night flights or early morning trains. Even the air force was pressed into service for flying the Pakistan and West Indies team to Jalandhar. Most players were soon suffering from what one West Indian team member described as "cricket-lag". Grumbled Pakistan Captain Imran Khan: "It's been very unfair to players. Our performance is related to many factors including a good night's sleep."

The result was that most of the teams were performing much below their peak levels. And fortunes fluctuated so dramatically that it was difficult to predict who would emerge the winner. In the initial matches, the formidable West Indies batting line-up seemed so brittle that a disgusted Viv Richards said: "I think we batters need a good kick up our butts for our performance so far." The English team began brilliantly, registering three straight wins to be the first to enter the semi-finals. But after that it looked a bedraggled side and crashed to three successive defeats. Australia, after their shock defeat against England in Hyderabad, registered convincing wins against West Indies and Sri Lanka but were soon on the mat losing to Pakistan and India.

For the Indian team the schedules were taxing. After their emphatic win against England in Kanpur, the hotel corridors smelt of pain balm as the team nursed its injuries. Mohammed Azharuddin, whose fielding was spectacular, held his injured left palm gingerly as crowds badgered him for autographs. And Kapil Dev was down on the ground in his briefs doing gentle push-ups to ease his aching body. Said he: "It's been really tough on us. And while our minds are willing to play, our bodies are certainly not."

Barring the matches in which the home team figured, crowds were

The Indian performance was patchy and the team surrendered tamely to the West Indies in the semi-finals.

Chetan tears England apart at Kanpur: new role

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Photographs by BHAWAN SINGH

Robin Smith cools off; and (right) ecstatic crowds: tough schedule

ed Azharudacular, held
y as crowds
. And Kapil
in his briefs
e his aching y tough on e willing to not."
which the

ourse in most centres. When England layed Sri Lanka in the opening match, for nstance, hardly 3,000 people witnessed t. And Doordarshan's sketchy telecast didn't help. It used the slow-motion replay camera so liberally that on one occasion, iewers had to watch Raman Lamba from three angles, inelegantly fending a ball away from his pads.

What saved the series from turning into a boring fiasco, however, was India's strong come-back in the preliminary matches that took the team into the semi-finals. Licking their wounds from Sharjah and riven by internal dissensions, the Indians at first played like zombies. Despite the strong batting line-up in the first match against Sri Lanka, they seemed as bogged down as the IPKF. The Sri Lankans came perilously close to overtaking India's total of 227 for eight, till Kapil Dev bowled a sensible last over to extract his country from the jaws of defeat.

Despite the lucky win, the Indians were still out of sorts in the next match against West Indies. Helped along by hazy conditions and a gentle breeze, the under-rated Indian pace attack restricted West Indies to a paltry 196. The crowd, sensing victory, raised banners of 'Mera Bharat Mahan' and one that read: 'Dearey, face the fury of Indian curry.' However, in an all too familiar sight, the middle order

The English initially played some gritty cricket, but lost their rhythm and succumbed to Pakistani might.

England in full cry: determined effort

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The West Indies began shakily, but they soon recovered and developed into a lethal force.

Richards being cheered by his men: super effort caved in and it was the Indians who found themselves in a soup.

For the West Indies, the victory over India ended a disastrous run of five defeats that began from the Champions Trophy at Sharjah. Suddenly, they were batting with panache and their bowling got back its lethal edge. And they went on to demolish India in the semi-finals at Bombay. A jubilant Viv Richards said: "What's most important is that we are clicking as a team."

India too had started clicking. In the next match against England in Kanpur, the team showed glimpses of the brilliance that had brought home one World Cup. Before the start, Gooch had commented that a score of 250 plus was enough to win the match. And though his side rattled up 255 in 50 overs, they didn't calculate on a diminutive bundle of energy called Chetan Sharma. In a gamble, that makes one-day cricket so exciting, Srikkanth sent Sharma at the fall of the second wicket. The rest was explosive history.

FOR the English, it was the first time in the series that they had to eat humble pie. Dismissed as the underdogs, especially after their disastrous summer season against Australia, the English had till then played cool, calculated and gritty cricket. And even if Gooch failed with the bat, there was Robin Smith, Larkins and the reliable Lamb to peg away and pile up big totals.

Australia, after being beaten by England in the first encounter, pulled themselves together to beat West Indies convincingly. Skipper Alan Border said happily: "We seem to be finally getting our act together." But two days later against Pakistan in Bombay, they succumbed tamely to Imran Khan's fierce pace and Abdul Quadir's mesmeric spin. And their challenge ended when they lost to India at Bangalore.

For India, that victory earned a semi-final berth. But their peformance only flattered to decieve. In the semi-finals against the Windies in Bombay, the team seemed strangely lethargic. After Srikkanth was run out foolishly, the Indian resistance seemed to give way. The middle order suffered its familiar collapse. And the West Indies contemptuously brushed aside its paltry 165.

The Indian performance was certainly far from satisfactory. Srikkanth's captaincy did see plenty of positive moves. But he tended to be impatient and was prone to emotional outbursts. His new role seemed initally to have cramped his batting style, but against Australia and Pakistan he regained his flamboyancy. With Raman Lamba batting well and Navjot Singh Sidhu striking a purple patch, the top order looked solid. But with Azharuddin, Dilip Vengsarkar, Ravi Shastri and Kapil Dev still searching for runs, the middle order was shaky. Though the bowlers did do better than expected, they lacked penetration and were at best restrictive. As team manager Chandu Borde said at Kanpur: "Our performance on the whole has been good only in patches."

Pakistan, India's arch rivals, initially looked anything but the Sharjah cup champions. They ran into all sorts of problems. Their run-machine, Javed Miandad, somehow could not strike his rhythm. And their bowlers seemed to

The indomitable Imran Khan led the Pakistanis from the front and was the pick of the captains.

Imran Khan marshals his forces: shrewd captaincy

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ENTRY FORM

YOUR VERDICT
ELECTION SPECIAL CONTEST

INSTRUCTIONS:

1. Fill in party code only. If you are making a prediction for say, AIADMK fill code 01 in the Party Box. The codes are given overleaf.
2. Mention number of seats in Arabic numerals only eg : write thirty five as 35 or five hundred and twenty nine as 529 etc.
3. All questions must be answered completely, otherwise your chances of winning are greatly reduced.

1 In the coming 1989 Lok Sabha poll 529 seats are being contested. Name the party which will win the largest number of seats in the new Lok Sabha and give the number of seats it will win.

Party code [ ][ ] No. of seats [ ][ ][ ]

2 How many seats will be won in the 1989 Lok Sabha elections by the following parties?

	BJP	CONGRESS (I)	CPI	CPM	DMK	JANATA DAL	TEL. DESAM
NO. OF SEATS WON

3 Given in the grid below are the total number of Lok Sabha seats being contested from various states. Choose any three states and predict the party which will win the largest number of seats in those states in the 1989 Lok Sabha Elections and give the number of seats it will win. If you answer for more than three states your entry will be treated as invalid.

	01 ANDHRA PRADESH	02 BIHAR	03 GUJARAT	04 HARYANA	05 J&K	06 KARNATAKA	07 KERALA	08 MADHYA PRADESH	09 MAHARASHTRA	10 ORISSA	11 PUNJAB	12 RAJASTHAN	13 TAMIL NADU	14 UTTAR PRADESH	15 WEST BENGAL	DELHI
TOTAL NO. OF SEATS	42	54	26	10	6	28	20	40	48	21	13	25	39	85	42	7
PARTY CODE
NO. OF SEATS

Tie-Breaker:

In not more than 50 words, give reasons for your answer to Qs. 1

International General Electric (India) Ltd.: Phone (91) 22-202-3075 Telex: 011-2363 or 011-2289 + IGEC IN Fax: (91) 22-202-7995 Bombay, India

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

YOUR VERDICT
ELECTION SPECIAL CONTEST

PERSONAL PARTICULARS

Instructions:

Write in block letters in ENGLISH only. This is necessary for Computer Evaluation.
Leave one space blank in between the various units in your name and address.

NAME _____ Surname _____ First Name

AGE (Years) ____ SEX (Tick one box) 1 Male 2 Female

ADDRESS _____

_____

CITY _____ Pin Code _____

The following particulars are required for research purposes. Please give us the following information to help us know you better.

Education: (Tick one box) Undergraduate 1 Graduate 2 Post Graduate 3 Professional 4 Others 5

Occupation: (Tick one box) Service 1 Business 2 Housewife 3 Student 4 Others 5

Monthly household Income: (Tick one box) 1500 or less 1 1501-2500 2 2501-3500 3 3501-4500 4 4500+ 5

YOU AND YOUR VOTE

This is not part of the contest and is purely optional. These details are meant for editorial and research purposes only, and will be kept confidential.

1. Which party do you intend to vote for in the Lok Sabha elections. ____
2. Which party did you vote for in the 1984 elections. ____
3. Which state are you a voter in: State Code. ____
   (In case your state code is not listed write 20)
4. Which part of the state are you in: (Tick one box)

North 1 East 2 West 3 South 4 Centre 5

CODES

State	Code	State	Code	Party	Code	Party	Code
Andhra Pradesh	01	Maharashtra	09	AIADMK	01	Janata Dal	08
Bihar	02	Orissa	10	AKALI DAL	02	National Conference	09
Gujarat	03	Punjab	11	B J P	03	Telugu Desam	10
Haryana	04	Rajasthan	12	CONGRESS (I)	04
Jammu & Kashmir	05	Tamil Nadu	13	C P I	05	Asom Gana Parishad	11
Karnataka	06	Uttar Pradesh	14	C P M	06	Janata	12
Kerala	07	West Bengal	15	D M K	07	Others	13
Madhya Pradesh	08	Delhi	16

INDIA TODAY
Keeps you ahead

Imran Khan marshals his forces: shrewd captaincy

Miandad, somehow could not strike his rhythm. And their bowlers seemed to

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

In diagnostic imaging there's never been a better time to choose GE.

For more than 90 years, GE has been a leader in diagnostic imaging technology, helping people around the globe live longer, healthier lives. But there has never been a better time than now to make us your imaging partner.

Today, we are the world's largest supplier of advanced imaging systems in X-ray, Computed Tomography, Magnetic Resonance, Nuclear Medicine and Ultrasound, plus our newest offering — Radiotherapy equipment. And all backed by our unmatched array of technical and financial support capabilities.

As an integral component of one of the world's most respected and best-managed companies, GE Medical Systems offers the market strength, financial stability and worldwide technological expertise you should expect from any imaging supplier. Yet, while our capabilities may span the globe, we remain strongly committed to serving each customer individually — no matter what your needs, no matter where you may be.

For our valued clinical partners in Asia/Pacific, we have strategically positioned our technical and marketing resources to provide the level of highly responsive service and support you deserve. Whether in products matched to your requirements, specialized sales support, responsive equipment service, or thorough applications training, GE Medical Systems is poised to respond.

To learn more about our wide range of products and customer support services, we invite you to contact us at our office below.

We think you will discover that there has never been a better time — or more reasons — to choose GE Medical Systems.

GE Medical Systems
Asia / Pacific

International General Electric (India) Ltd.: Phone (91) 22-202-3075 Telex: 011-2363 or 011-2289 + IGEC IN Fax: (91) 22-202-7995 Bombay, India.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Shree Synthetics

We're ready to advance into an era of exciting opportunities

Rights Convertible Debentures

Come, strengthen your claim in our future

Highlights

- An established, profit-making, dividend-paying Company – higher dividend of 25% for the 9-month period ended 31st March, 1989 (33.33% annualised)
- On-going R&D efforts to introduce new speciality yarn for higher value addition, flexibility and increased productivity
- Track record of growth and profitability – annualised increase of 75% in Gross Profit for the year ended 31st March, 1989
- Investment of Rs.200 crores envisaged in the next three years. In the first phase, a Rs.25 crore Balancing-Cum-Modernisation Programme – under implementation
- Further plans to increase Polyester Filament Yarn manufacturing capacity and diversification into market-oriented ventures
- Poised for accelerated growth, productivity and profitability

Debenture Features

- Face Value : Rs.50 each
- Interest : 12.5% per annum
- Attractive Conversion Terms : The Debentures comprise of two parts – Part 'A' of Rs.30 and Part 'B' of Rs.20

  Part 'A' of Rs.30 will be converted into one equity share of Rs.10 at a premium of Rs.20, on expiry of 6 months from the date of allotment. Present Market price : Rs.61.00 (Ex-Right on 29.9.89 in Bombay Stock Exchange)

  Part 'B' of Rs.20 is non-convertible and will be redeemed at par in two equal annual instalments on the expiry of the 8th and 9th year from the date of allotment

(Rs. in lacs)

Issue of 37,19,100 12.5% Secured Partly Convertible Debentures of Rs.50 each for cash at par

Managers to the Issue

The Industrial Credit and Investment Corporation of India Limited
Merchant Banking Division
163 Backbay Reclamation
Bombay 400 020

DSP Financial Consultants Ltd
914 Raheja Chambers
213 Nariman Point
Bombay 400 021

Union Bank of India
Merchant Banking Division
Union Bank Bhavan, 4th Floor
239 Vidhan Bhavan Marg
Nariman Point
Bombay 400 021

SHREE SYNTHETICS LIMITED
Registered Office & Works:
Naulakhi, Maksi Road, Ujjain (M.P.)

A commitment backed by strength and stability

PRESSMAN

Rights Issue Open

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SHYAM TEKWANI

The Australians came as favourites, but seemed out of sorts, crashing out of the tournament ignominiously.

Australia plays West Indies at Madras: a futile victory have lost much of his bite. But amidst the ruins, there was the indomitable Imran Khan who kept pulling Pakistan out of the woods either by intelligent bowling, attacking batting and some brilliant captaincy. In the semi-finals against England the team regained its class and notched up a convincing victory.

Off the field, Imran was the cynosure of all eyes wherever he went. He constantly fended off gossipy questions like whether he considered himself a sex symbol ("I don't see cricketers from that point of view") and whether he liked Indian women or Pakistani ("Both"). And despite his busy schedule, he took time off to publicise the magazine he edits, Cricket Life International, at a rumbustious function in Bombay.

Although all the teams complained of the tight schedule, none of them wanted to pull out. The simple reason: it was big money at stake. Each team was promised Rs 20.37 lakh as appearance money. The winners' purse was Rs 6.52 lakh, runners-up Rs 4.07 lakh, while semi-finalists got Rs 2.03 lakh each. And the man-of-the-match got Rs 19,650.

THE Nehru Cup too saw the subcontinent emerging as a contender for being the international cricketing capital. Suddenly, there are enough sponsors willing to spend money for cricket. Apart from MRF, the Madras-based tyre company which forked out Rs 3.5 crore for sponsoring the series, most of the stadia were filled with diverse advertisements for pan masalas, vacuum flasks, magazines and even for films. Says Ravi Mammen, MRF's bearded managing director: "Cricket's a national game and we have found that 90 per cent of our target audience also own scooters and cars. Naturally, it helps our sales to sponsor such events."

What helps too is the kind of adrenalin-pumping excitement that one-day cricket produces. With its built-in unpredictability, see-saw changes in fortunes and heroes being created and destroyed daily, instant cricket has instant appeal too. And as Border observed; "The beauty of one-day game is that any team can beat the other on a given day." His team, unfortunately, became among the first to learn the harsh truth of his words.

—RAJ CHENGAPPA in Kanpur, Delhi and Madras with SALIL TRIPATHI in Ahmedabad and Bombay

The talented Sri Lankans humbled the mighty West Indies. But their inexperience let them down.

Arjun Ranatunge: brilliant fight

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

GUJARAT STATE FERTILIZERS COMPANY LIMITED

Regd. Office : P.O. Fertilizernagar - 391 750, Dist. Vadodara

GSFC CHAIRMAN'S STATEMENT

Shri H.R. Patankar

HIGHLIGHTS

- Government's Economic Policies based on growth, liberalisation, self-reliance and social justice have improved the overall economic environment in the country.
- The new retention price formula would have a serious impact on the viability of new plants including GSFC's Coastal DAP Plant at Sikka.
- GSFC attains new peaks of record turnover of over Rs. 675 crores, fertilizer capacity utilisation of 118%, sizeable contribution of industrial products and high financial track record.
- GSFC takes big strides in implementation of its corporate growth plan of around Rs. 1300 crores with a diverse product range of Fertilizers, Petrochemicals, Industrial Gases, Plastics, Fibre and self-sufficiency in Power Generation.
- GSFC continues to maintain its excellence by bagging National and International Awards in different fields.
- Betterment of farming and rural community, research and development and innovation of new applications continue to be the strength of GSFC in the field of social obligations.

The following is the text of Statement made by Shri HR Patankar, Chairman, Gujarat State Fertilizers Company Limited at the Twenty-Seventh Annual General Meeting of the Company held on the 28th September 1989 at the Registered Office of the Company.

CHAIRMAN'S STATEMENT

Ladies & Gentlemen,

I take great pleasure in extending you a warm welcome at this 27th Annual General Meeting of our Company. The Annual Accounts and Directors' Report for the 15-month period are already with you and with your permission I take them as read.

ECONOMIC SCENARIO

The over-all economic environment in the country has been promising in more ways than one. A notable growth in agricultural and industrial sectors was noticed during the year 1988-89. The economic policies initiated by the Government based on growth, liberalisation, self-reliance and social justice have provided a new impetus to growth. Two successive good monsoons coupled with measures such as increased availability of credit, liberalisation in interest rate on crop loans and announcement of a new strategy for agricultural planning on the basis of agro-climatic zone will help in meeting the challenge of increasing food-grain production in the country. In this scenario, fertilizer production plays a key role in increasing food-grain production based on use of modern High Yielding Variety (HYV) technology supported by adequate irrigation facility. Concomitantly, there will be need to give a boost to fertilizer industry to produce more fertilizers in order to meet the increase in demand for food production. However the recent changes in basic parameters of depreciation and capacity utilisation adopted in the New Retention Price for the 5th Pricing period commencing from 1.4.1988 onwards are causing concern. An analysis of the revised retention price data shows that whereas old plants commissioned prior to 1982 are affected only marginally by changes in the basic parameters of pricing, the new plants commissioned in and after 1982 are more adversely affected due to lower coverage of depreciation charge only of 5% in the retention price based on the plant life of 20 years instead of 10 years' life span considered earlier. This would have a serious impact on the viability of new plants. So far as your Company is concerned, the new norms have an adverse impact only on the retention price of DAP produced in Sikka Plant where depreciation allowed in the retention price is only 5% as against 11% to be provided in the books of accounts.

During the last three years or so, the fertilizer industry has been subject to demands for excise duty on inputs and intermediates captively consumed in manufacturing fertilizers. Such demands have arisen out of a biased interpretation of the Central Excise Tariff Act, 1985. In this regard some reliefs have been granted by way of appropriate notifications to exempt a number of inputs and intermediates such as Reformed Gas, SO_2 and SO_3 from the levy of excise duty.

HIGHER PEAKS — YEARLY PERFORMANCE

It is a matter of pride that for the first time your Company crossed production of 10 lac tons of fertilizers at Baroda, which was a landmark in fertilizer operations. These plants achieved an enviable capacity utilisation of 118% producing 10,43,120 MTs during the 15-month period. With the addition of over 4 lac tons of DAP at Sikka Unit, the total production of fertilizers for all plants has achieved a new milestone of 14 lac tons during the period under review. Ammonia, Sulphuric Acid and Phosphoric Acid Plants performed very well with a capacity utilisation of 101, 105, 159 percent respectively. Urea production achieved the highest ever capacity utilisation for the 15-month period. In spite of plants being more than 20 years old, it is gratifying to note that efforts at all levels for excellent maintenance have made it possible to run the plants at a fairly high capacity.

The production of fertilizers would have been much more, had it not been for the stoppage of production at the DAP Unit at Sikka for four months on account of non-availability of Phosphoric Acid due to high international prices. Supplies of imported PA resumed only in July 1989. It is expected that with stability of prices, it should be possible to get higher allocations of Phosphoric Acid for production of more DAP for which the Sikka Unit is fully geared.

I am also happy to inform you that debottlenecking of Anone Section of the Caprolactam Plant coupled with excellent plant performance resulted in a record output of 26010 MTs of Caprolactam. Compared to the previous years' production, this is substantially higher. The Nylon-6 Plant registered a capacity utilisation of 137% with production of 6848 MTs. For the first time the Melamine Plant achieved 100% capacity utilisation during the 12-month period of 1988. In spite of a 19-day shut down in 1989, the overall capacity utilisation for the 15-month period worked out to 94.35% which is much higher than the production in 1987. There has also been substantial improvement in production and profitability of the Polyol Unit.

I take immense pleasure to inform you that your Company achieved a record turnover of Rs. 676 crores for the 15-month period as compared to Rs. 357 crores of the previous year of 12 months which in turn improved the profit of your Company. This brilliant performance is an indication of the good health of your Company.

For the period after 1st April 1989, the production of fertilizers and industrial products has exceeded the budgeted targets. The sales for the first six-month period are expected to be of the order of Rs. 300 crores. According to present indications and barring any unforeseen situation, it is hoped that your Company's current year's performance would be better.

AWARDS

I take pride that your Company has bagged the following prestigious awards :

1. FAI Award for the best performance

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

OMPANY LIMITED

phatic Fertilizer Production for the year in succession.

National Productivity Council Award for excellent productivity performance.

CI Award for the best industrial relations performance. Your Company is the first organisation in Gujarat to receive this distinguished honour.

Award of Honour of National Safety Council of America for the best industrial safety performance.

National Safety Award of Ministry of Labour, Government of India for excellent safety performance.

"Padmaja"—Gujarat Governor's National Trophy for excellence in agriculture for the fourth year in succession.

AL OBLIGATIONS TOWARDS ING & RURAL COMMUNITY

Company has always kept the interest of and rural community uppermost in its You would have noticed for the last years that your Company is to help the farmers in as many possible so that in the larger interest they are able to produce more food feed the growing population. Your has established nearly 230 Farm Centres with the object of various promotional, extension activities in the rural areas and different agricultural inputs to the Based on the principle that "Seeing", your Company has organised on farmers' plots to convince the optimum use of fertilizers, quality seeds and other inputs. Company has also been operating soil testing laboratory for the benefit of These services are available to free of charge. Based on the analysis appropriate fertilizer dosages are To demonstrate efficient use your Company is constantly trials on farmers' fields. Neem Urea, Gypsum Coated Urea, Fertilizer Drills, Rice Garden and Biofertilizers are some of the efforts in agricultural research, and application of inputs.

Youth Training Programme, Sardar Harmye and the Reclamation of Soils are important activities aimed knowledge and skills of modern to the farming community. Forward Project in the tribal areas about upliftment of the adivasi Your Company has meaningfully to the National Watershed Programme launched by the of India. In association with Land Development Corporation, your implemented this programme from onwards and has taken block on the farmers' fields. The are encouraging.

RESEARCH & DEVELOPMENT THRUST

As you are aware, your Company gives high priority to research and development in terms of developing new processes and products, augmenting productivity and promoting diversification activities. During the year, new Corrosion and Materials Testing facilities were set up with a view to providing a fillip to plant operations and maintenance. A collaborative programme for developing Biopesticides has been taken up with a US Company. Intensive R&D work on recovery of valuable products from Waste Streams has made considerable progress. In the Polymers area, a cost effective process for Nylon composites based on local minerals has been developed. It has given promising results and is likely to be profitable.

NEW PROJECTS

Caprolactam Expansion

While I am thankful to all of you for your splendid response to the Rights Issue of Secured Redeemable Convertible Debentures, I am happy to inform you that the Caprolactam Expansion Project is progressing as scheduled. Basic engineering work is almost over. Import Licences for major critical equipments have already been obtained. M/s. UHDE-India has commenced the detailed engineering work. All financial arrangements including foreign currency loans have been appropriately tied up.

Co-generation of Steam & Power Project

During the period under review, the first phase of the co-generation project costing Rs. 33 crores was commissioned. The second phase costing about Rs. 39 crores will be commissioned during the current year. This being an energy saving project, your Company will derive some tax benefits after commissioning. With the availability of additional steam and power from this project your Company's dependence on GEB will be considerably reduced.

Gujarat Industries Power Company Ltd.

As you know your Company is one of the major promoters of Gujarat Industries Power Company Ltd. (GIPCL). Your Company's contribution to equity capital of GIPCL will be about Rs. 9.7 crores. The first gas turbine of this project is expected to be commissioned in April 1990 and the remaining three turbines will be commissioned in a phased manner thereafter. At full capacity the generation of power in GIPCL will be 145 MW. Out of this, your Company's share is likely to be 37%. The availability of power from GIPCL would result in less drawal of power from GEB. It would then be possible for GEB to supply power to others in the interest of development of the Gujarat State.

Gujarat Nylons Ltd.

I am also happy to inform you that with your Company's financial, technical and managerial assistance to Gujarat Nylons Ltd. (GNL), it has been possible to complete the project. Two spinning lines have already commenced trial production of nylon yarn which has been well received in the market. The remaining three spinning lines and Polymerisation Section will be commissioned sometime next month. To broaden the shareholding base, your Company has been able to obtain requisite permission to make a public issue of Rs. 11.10 crores through GNL. Your Company has also obtained approval for reservation of 17.5 lac shares on preferential allotment to the existing shareholders. This is the maximum possible reservation under the extant guidelines. I am sure that GNL will prove to be a success story in the years to come.

EXPANSION/DIVERSIFICATION

As part of the strategy for planned growth, your Company is always on the lookout for expansion and diversification. Your Company has already received a Letter of Intent for expanding Melamine capacity from the present 5000 MTA to 15000 MTA. Preliminary work on setting up the expansion facility is expected to commence shortly. Your Company is also holding a Letter of Intent for Ammonia expansion which is under consideration. Your Company had the unpleasant experience of keeping the Sikka DAP Plant closed for over four months for want of imported Phosphoric Acid. In order to avoid repetition of this closure and also to meet the requirements stipulated by the Government in the Letter of Intent for the coastal DAP Plant at Sikka, your Company has decided to set up a Phosphoric Acid Plant at Sikka at an estimated cost of about Rs. 300 crores.

With a view to effecting savings in water consumption, your Company proposes to put up a facility for purifying sewage water and using it in plant operations. Work is already initiated in this direction and it is hoped that the scheme may be commissioned by the end of 1989. It is expected that there will be a saving of about 7 lac gallons of water per day, which could be utilised for other plants.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I wish to conclude by recording my grateful thanks to the Government of India, Government of Gujarat, Indian Financial Institutions, IFC (W), Banks and other agencies who have willingly and whole heartedly supported your Company in fulfilling its objectives. I am also grateful to my colleagues on the Board for their guidance and contribution.

I will fail in my duty if I do not extend my sincere thanks to staff and officers of the Company at all levels for their deep sense of dedication, hard work and exemplary team spirit without which it would not have been possible to achieve the spectacular results achieved from year to year.

JAI HIND

Note : This does not purport to be a record of proceedings of the Twenty-Seventh Annual General Meeting of the Company.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SYNDICATION

Excelling at Selling

A string of new firms are busily hawking columns by sports stars.

IT started as a trickle, turned into a flood and now threatens to engulf the sports pages with a new brand of commercialism. Suddenly, media coverage of major sporting events has been virtually taken over by a bevy of syndicates: Dev Features, Professional Management Group (PMG), Radiant Sports Management (RSM) and Playmakers.

The once drab sports pages are today dotted with glamorous bylines while sponsoring companies are laughing all the way to the nearest bank. The result: small and regional newspapers who had never dreamt of covering major national and international events are now featuring celebrity bylines, suddenly available at affordable costs.

The economics of sports coverage has turned topsy-turvy. A newspaper might spend up to Rs 1.5 lakh just to send a journalist to cover an India-West Indies Test series without the bonus of a celebrity byline. Kapil Dev's Rs 5 crore syndicated column agency, Dev Features, offered reports by Tony Lewis and Gary Sobers on the Indian cricket tour of the West Indies this year for diverse newspapers, including Aajkal of Calcutta and Dainik Bhaskar of Bhopal for a mere Rs 300-Rs 600 per piece. Even major newspapers like The Times of India have changed their game-plan, preferring to pay for syndicated columns that feature star bylines. Says Kapil Dev: "Companies like us are making sports much more paying than it was ever before. And it is the reader who benefits."

Last year, in the India-West Indies series, Sunil Gavaskar's PMG had Ravi Shastri and Gavaskar lend their literary talents to 21 newspaper editions, including regional newspapers like Pratap in Urdu and Parvasi in Gujarati. Former Indian hockey captain, M.M. Somayya, was roped in to write on the Champions Trophy hockey tournament in West Germany, an event that is beyond the financial boundaries of most news organisations. Even Geet Sethi and Michael Ferreira are potting in more than prize money through syndicated columns.

The syndication business made its debut four years ago, when cricket legend Sunil Gavaskar joined forces with advertising executive Sumedh Shah to launch PMG. Trying to endorse Swedish Davis Cup players, Mats Wilander and Stefan Edberg, PMG lost Rs 40,000 in its first year. Soon, they adopted the surer wicket, syndicating columns of cricket stars like Ravi Shastri and Bishen Singh Bedi.

The idea caught on. Kapil Dev partnered Lokesh Sharma to set up Dev Features in 1987. Sharma remembers: "We raised about Rs 60,000 to start the company by hawking Kapil's columns." Aushim Khetrapal—a junior national tennis champion—founded RSM intending to market tournaments and syndicate columns. Satish Dayal—a travel agent and biscuit manufacturer—started Playmakers to market tournaments. He underwrote the total cost—Rs 5 lakh—of the Indo-Pakistan benefit hockey match for Charles Cornelius.

Predictably, newspapers lap up columns of only a few star-names—Ravi Shastri, Vijay Amritraj, Tony Lewis, P.T. Usha are some major attractions. Says Shah: "Cricket columns were the most popular. We have tried very hard pushing other sports, but newspapers weren't willing." So PMG realised that Ravi Shastri's column from England on the county circuit had nearly twice the readership than columns about the Champions Trophy in Berlin.

Clearly, syndication is big business. It has, for one, increased the financial earnings of sports stars phenomenally. Test cricketers are paid Rs 7,500 per match—plus Rs 3,500 as pocket money. In contrast, they charge Rs 5,000-Rs 6,000 for a single article which is syndicated to a number of clients. Writers command

Kapil Dev with Garfield Sobers

Started by hawking Kapil's columns, Dev Features has become a Rs 5-crore agency.

Indians need to play more attacking cric

Gary Sobers writes from Barbados

QUITE frankly, I am surprised at the rather listless manner in which the Indian cricketers surrendered this opening match in the one-day series against the West Indies.

The Kensington Oval wicket here was one on which they had their best chance in the series of winning a match. But they muffed it. So easy-paced was the wicket that the West Indies bowlers could get absolutely nothing out of it, and I thought the Indian batsmen ought to have had few problems in going for the runs, notwithstanding the imposing target.

It was a good toss to win, for this seemed to be a wicket ideal for chasing a target. India-Windies in Greenidge early, but that was more because the batsman played ... playing on off the inner Indies score along any-which-way, did just that before Richards was out for a not-very impressive 40. But in one-day games, it is the patience. If he is prepared ... more on this time, he ... start adjusting ... mean? realize that in ... quick-fire ... something ... wrong ...

'Mr backhand' Becker

'BOMBER' Becker he has been known since his sensational title triumph in 1985 as the booming service on grass courts. That epithet was for his serves can have another honorifica ... 'Mr backhand' Becker.

Against top seed and rule-hunter Ivan Lendl in the semi-final on Saturday, Becker was, as expected, at his bombing best with his service, a deadly weapon with which he demolished all his rivals in straight sets on way to the final. After having had problems with his service due to which he had some anxious moments in the earlier rounds, Lendl was also as his pounding best.

The two were equally balanced in the vital service department. What then tilted the scales in Becker's favour was his superb measured backhand returns, a trait which remind ... me of Ramanathan Krish ...

JAIDIP MUKERJEA COMMENTS

BURTON

CIGARETTE SMOKING IS INJURIOUS TO HEALTH

broken rack other. Becker-Lendl's serve ... and the No. 1 seed paying a back on his ... tie-breaker was the only way to break ... Wish Becker, caught in a sudden ... service, Lendl rushed to a 4-1 lead and ... incredible backhand returns to clinch the ... tie-break at 7-2.

Level at one-set all, on the powerful strength ... clean slate of Becker of having not conceded ... he has elephantine marks on the final. Lendl ... breaks of Becker. Till then a ... service, the young German became vulnerable ... service. A 6-3 win in the set, which was stopped ... more than one hour due to ... Wimbledon champion of 1978 has ... Wimbledon title, on a young ...

At Becker, let down by his double faults ... curiousness for the 31-year old winner of the 1985 and 1986 titles and runner up to Edberg last year ... passing through spasms of aggression. Becker ... bombed with two glorious passes ... well as the German ... stands stunned ...

RSM pays sportsmen like Ferreira and Amritraj whooping sums, yet makes large profits.

Aushim Khetrapal with Mark Ferreira

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Richards and Gavaskar with Shah

Gavaskar's PMG hit the jackpot syndicating cricket columns, and is now into home video.

West Indies not invulnerable

(1982-83) senses the players knew that it was just a matter of time before we spring the big surprise. That came once in Berbice, Guyana, on March 19!

USEFUL START: The players travelled by helicopters from Georgetown to Berbice and landed on the ground itself. After a more than useful start, Kapil launched into the span of Gomes and Richards in a manner that was simply breathtaking. The spectators could not help applaud such a tremendous damage and they were awestruck by Kapil's Great hatting. They perhaps thought that only Richards or the 'Big Cat', Lloyd, were capable of such huge sixes. We were that game and later in England that West Indies twice in three games to win.

quence. In fact, after that they have not won any championship in which more than three teams have participated. However, they have dealt with India rather brutally in the one-day games that have been contested and have beaten India in all the games barring the one in Calcutta and in Sharjah. Will the story be any different now?

If at all the West Indies are vulnerable it is in the one-day games. Their enormous natural ability has got them out of sticky situations time and again and the experience they garner by playing in England has come to their rescue often. Yet the West Indian mind, used to living for today and not really planning for tomorrow can get flustered in the quick-fire one-day competition.

This is a game for which there can be no real planning, no real escape routes. A few overs can put the game in such a tail-spin from which it is difficult to recover. The West Indians who are used to dominating the game can get into panic situations when things begin to go wrong. The finger-pointing, the glaring and staring will not make it easier for the members of the team and India needs to put pressure on the West Indies to get them into such situations.

LOOKING BACK: If one has a look at the scorecards to continue exerting pressure on the opposing batsmen. Thus even if we were dismissed for a small total our bowlers, backed by superb ground fielding, did not allow the opposition to score the runs. A lot of those bowlers are now gone into semi-retirement and though the spearhead is still there most of the other bowlers are as useful as arrows in this nuclear age. This could be one of the major reasons for our non-performance in the one-day games recently.

With Marshall out for the first three one-dayers the Indian team should breathe a lot easier. He has been the outstanding fast bowler in recent times both in Tests as well as the one-dayers. Also a dangerous batsman. But the beauty of the West Indian fast bowling factory is that they have more than adequate replacements waiting for the older models to be put to sleep. If in Ambrose they have found another Garner, in Benjamin they have a customer who can bowl as slippery a bouncer as Marshall does.

The West Indian batting still relies on the big three of Greenidge, Haynes and Richards, though Richardson and Logie have taken the load off their shoulders often with their dazzling strokeplay. And the West Indian fielding will be quicksilver.

thrown thudding

Playmakers put up Rs 40 lakh for the Indira Gandhi Gold Cup and recovered the entire money.

Satish Dayal with E.A.S. Prasanna prices according to their marketability, receiving about 80 per cent of what the column sells for. Commenting on the lucrative business, Aushim Khetrapal of RSM says: "Profits on syndicated columns range from 20 to 25 per cent per article."

It's not just cricket stars who're benefiting. Chess champion S. Vishwanathan gets as much as Rs 2,500 for a column. Vijay Amritraj demands and gets Rs 20,000 a piece. And Michael Ferreira netted Rs 3.5 lakh from RSM in a single year.

Significantly, foreign writers are clearly on the inside track in the financial race. West Indian cricketer Gordon Greenidge raked in Rs 64,000 through his literary efforts during the recent India-West Indies series. Tony Lewis and Sobers earned a comparable amount while tennis sensation Boris Becker has entered into a three-year contract with Dev Features for pumping in his articles into India—for an undisclosed sum. But on an average, foreign stars get Rs 5,000 per piece while Indian players get around Rs 2,000.

Players who write well—like Tony Lewis, Gavaskar or Bedi—are a treasured species. Ferreira does not relish the idea of his copy being touched up. Lewis enjoys the reputation of being a flawless writer. In contrast, Kapil Dev, Ian Botham or Gary Sobers are not very readable. P.T. Usha expresses her views in Malayalam, which are then translated into English. So most use ghost writers, an increasingly important appendage in the syndicate game. Sumedh Shah of PMG says: "Ghosts have certain requirements; they shouldn't have ego hassles, they should find out what columnists have to say and put it in the way they speak."

The controversial edge of the business is being sharpened by sports bodies who have banned players for defying rules on writing. The Cricket Control Board banned Vengsarkar from playing for six months after last year's India-West Indies cricket series. His crime: penning columns.

But there is clearly a gold-mine to be tapped and the name of the new game is sponsorship: companies like Hindustan Lever, ITC, MRF or Reliance finance a star-column if the quid pro quo is the company logo boldly splashed on the sports page. When companies are generous, a large number of newspapers gain, including smaller newspapers. Earlier, a column could be pitched between Rs 5,000 and Rs 7,000—way beyond the financial reach of smaller newspapers. Today's sponsored column is offered at an affordable Rs 300.

Syndication companies are now branching out into other areas, sponsoring tournaments, producing television serials, buying television rights for international events and home videos. In 1987, RSM was content with a sponsorship of Rs 50,000 for its junior national-level tennis championships. Within just two years it made financial sense for Playmakers to underwrite the entire Rs 40 lakh expenditure of the 1988 Indira Gandhi Gold Cup hockey tournament. Their confidence was rewarded when they recovered all their money from the sponsors.

Now, private companies are asking syndicate agencies to develop sports tournament concepts. PGM, for instance, was asked by Hindustan Lever to design a tournament. Says Shah: "I recommended hockey. The Indian Hockey Federation has okayed the proposal and it is on the tournament calendar." For this, the company is happy to pay Rs 3.5 lakh.

The next stop on the sports business front is: TV and video. Dev Features bought television rights from the West Indies Cricket Board to telecast highlights of the India-West Indies cricket series—the first time matches in the West Indies were telecast in India. The company lost Rs 1 crore, but Kapil says: "It was worth the effort and a great achievement."

PMG has forayed into the mushrooming home video market to produce a two-part series called the 'Best of Sharjah'—featuring the top four matches—to be simultaneously released in India, Pakistan, Sharjah and England.

The sports promotion business currently has a turnover of around Rs 10 crore but has the potential to blossom into a serious money-maker. Meanwhile, the professional achievement of Indian sportsmen seems to be increasingly recorded on financial score-boards rather than the ones on the actual playing fields.

—SURAJEET DAS GUPTA with SALIL TRIPATHI

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

GARWARE SHIPPING CORPORATION LTD.

Registered Office: Express Towers, 5th Floor,
Nariman Point, Bombay 400 021.

Chairman's Speech
Twelfth Annual General Meeting

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I have great pleasure in extending to you a warm and cordial welcome to this Twelfth Annual General Meeting of the Company.

During the year, the founder of the Garware Group and Chairman of the Company, Padma Bhushan Dr. B.D. Garware, tendered his resignation from the Board of Directors of the Company. Dr. B.D. Garware has been a guiding force behind the Company, and it is on account of his wise counsel and guidance that the Company has grown to its present stature.

The Annual Report, together with the audited statement of accounts and Directors' report which has been with you for sometime now, pertains to the working of the Company for the year ended 31st March, 1989. With your permission I would like to take them as read.

The previous year's period of operation was for 18 months and, therefore, the working results for the year under review are not comparable with those for the previous period. The Company earned a Gross Profit of Rs. 7.01 crores (subject to interest and depreciation) for the year ended 31st March, 1989 as against Rs. 10.73 crores for the previous period of 18 months. The freight market the world over has shown a firm trend during the year under review, and the overall scenario for the industry appears to be encouraging.

The Company's vessels operated satisfactorily during the year, and your Board thought it appropriate to expand the activity by acquisition of more vessels. Accordingly, necessary approvals were obtained from Directorate General of Shipping to acquire three general cargo vessels.

Shri Ashok Garware

I am happy to inform you that the Company has already acquired two vessels. The first vessel was renamed 'm.v. Raigad' and has been given on time charter. The second vessel, re-named as 'm.v. Pratapgad' is presently being repositioned to the S.E. Asian region. The third vessel will be acquired shortly.

The Company's Rights Convertible Debenture Issue is open, and I am pleased to inform you that it has received good response, which shows the confidence reposed by the shareholders in the Company.

The Government of India has announced certain reliefs to the shipping industry under the Income-Tax Act. It is a welcome step towards the growth of the industry. However, the long awaited request of the shipping industry for recognition as a deemed foreign exchange earner/saver is still to be granted.

The charter hire contract with ONGC for five off-shore supply vessels expired during the year under review. The Company's supply vessels continue to be used by ONGC, for off-shore services, and a contract for their operation is being worked out with ONGC, and the Ministries of Petroleum and Surface Transport, through the Indian National Shipowners' Association.

You will be happy to note that the performance of the Company during the current year is encouraging. The Company has earned Rs. 4.68 crores on charter hire during the first five months of the current year against Rs. 4.00 crores during the corresponding period in the previous year.

I would like to express my sincere gratitude to the Company's bankers – State Bank of India, Bank of India, Indian Overseas Bank – officials of Oil and Natural Gas Commission, Oil India Limited, The Shipping Credit & Investment Company of India Limited, Directorate General of Shipping, Ministries of Finance, Petroleum and Transport, for their continued and active support.

Before I conclude, I wish to place on record my deep appreciation of the whole-hearted support and valuable guidance given by my colleagues on the Board. I would also like to express my appreciation of the conscientious work and contribution made by the Company's Executive Director, Mr. A.P. Inamdar, supported by the very able team of executives of the Company, and of the services rendered by the Company's officers and staff, both on-shore and afloat.

Thank you,

ASHOK GARWARE
(Chairman)

Bombay
29th September, 1989.

Note. This does not purport to be a record of the proceedings of the meeting

Concept

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Photographs by BHAWAN SINGH

In Panchvati; abduction of Sita; Bali-Sugreev battle: illustrations from the manuscript

PERSIAN RAMAYAN

Secular Treasure

An antique religious tract surfaces in Delhi

WHILE Hindus and Muslims were crossing swords over the Ram Janmabhoomi-Babri Masjid controversy, a south Delhi resident, Chiranjit Lal Sehgal, 64, provided some secular relief by disclosing that his family possessed a 16th century Ramayan written in poetic Persian. Interestingly, it has pictures displaying Ram, Sita and Ravan attired in Muslim clothes.

Sehgal, a retired employee of the Delhi State Co-operative Bank, was casually discussing the book at a local temple and was overheard by a PTI reporter. He released it as a small news-item that was later telecast by Doordarshan. And Sehgal woke up to its valuable nature.

The handwritten manuscript is embellished with 13 illustrations of familiar scenes: the Sita swayamvar, the Bali and Sugreev confrontation, Luv-Kush fighting Lakshman and the abduction of Sita by the ten-headed Ravan, looking every inch a Mughal, complete with a beard.

Sehgal claims the volume was written by Abul Fazal, the famed poet in Akbar's court. He says: "My ancestors worked in Emperor Akbar's court, defending his territory against invaders at Darakhaiber Pass between India and Kabul. They received this precious, original manuscript as a reward." Sehgal, who inherited it from his father when he died in 1974, has a letter written by his father saying the book has been passed down the last 12 generations.

Sehgal with book: prized heirloom

The antiquity department of the Archaeological Survey of India (ASI), which examined the book, found it to be about 200 years old. The ASI, however, is not sure it can be attributed to Akbar's days. After conducting tests on the state of the manuscript, the ASI has registered the Persian Ramayan under the Antiquity and Art and Treasures Act. Says L.K. Srinivasan, director, antiquity, ASI: "It is an important document from the literary point of view."

Meanwhile, Sehgal has safely tucked it away in a locker, and wants to get the manuscript, written in old Persian script—zind parzind—translated into Hindi and English, before passing it on to the National Archives which has the facilities to preserve it. The pages of the book are fraying at the sides, but the paintings—with gold dust, mother of pearl, nectar of flowers and fruit juices—are still as good as new.

People queue up outside Sehgal's house, some curious to see the Persian Ramayan and some wanting to buy it. But, Sehgal is reluctant to part with the book. Explains he: "Though I am getting a lot of very tempting offers—some up to Rs 5 lakh—I don't want to invite the curse of my ancestors by selling this religious document. We lost everything during Partition but brought this book with us from Pakistan."

—HARINDER BAWEJA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The new multi-point light switch of the Premier Padmini.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Everything about the new Padmini is quite spectacular. You must sit inside to fully appreciate the finer points.

Like the elegant back-lit LED dashboard. The extra-soft two-spoke steering wheel. The three-speed wipers. The handbrake indicator light. The quartz clock. The velour upholstery. The perfectly fitted air-conditioner. And, of course, the fuel efficiency.

Driving the Padmini is now an even greater pleasure.

The Premier Padmini is moving up in life.

We've upgraded all our Padmini models. All models can accommodate air-conditioners. Every car now comes with a special anti-theft lock-cum-ignition switch, a back-lit instrument cluster, hazard warning and reversing lights and plush new upholstery. Check out the new Premier Padmini, you will be delighted with what you see.

PREMIER PADMINI

The Premier Automobiles Ltd.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

BENGAL PAINTERS

A Brush with Bounty

Recognition, though late in the day, has given star status to the painters of Calcutta and a kiss of life to the city's art market. An exciting renaissance is on.

SUDDENLY, it's Oh, Calcutta!—for art. It was slow, the transformation from wall flower of the art scene to belle of the ball. But Calcutta painters now have heads turning. Gallerywallahs from Delhi and Bombay come flocking there with long lists and exhibition dates. Collectors from other cities come and go, talking about Ganesh Pyne in hushed, reverent tones.

Midas has at long last visited Calcutta's almost-comatose art market—which has come alive with spanking new art galleries and doing brisk business. Last month, 45 minutes after the exhibition of Bikash Bhattacharjee's pastel drawings of women began, Gallerie 88 (which opened last summer) had sold his 14 works.

The city's annual art turnover—valued at just a few lakhs a few years ago—has now shot to over Rs 1 crore, according to water colour maestro Shyamal Datta Ray. Last month Rekha Mody, who owns Genesis Gallery in Calcutta, opened a new gallery in New Delhi, Habiart, which will highlight Bengal painters. And in November this year, Chanakya, a Delhi gallery will mount a big exhibition of painters from the state.

Calcutta is the new vogue-city of the business of art. But far more important is the fact that something exciting is happening to art in the city which will soon turn 300. Clearly, there is a renaissance on. "The best work is being done here," says M.F. Husain. "The Calcutta painters have a feeling for human drama. Painters from cities like Bombay and Baroda are pseudo. Much of their narrative is in the Hockney style and it looks borrowed, whereas these painters give you their own, felt experience."

It was, in fact, the peripatetic Husain who had first gushed in print about Calcutta and the painter-son the city is most proud of: Ganesh Pyne. Some years ago Husain put the shy, hermit-like painter on top of his list of the 10 best artists in the country. Pyne, with his masterful and highly structured renderings of myths and fantasies, and Bhattacharjee with his near-perfect brush strokes and idiosyncratic eye, are the two stars.

But there are other painters too who have made significant contributions to the Calcutta renaissance: Shyamal Datta Ray, Paritosh Sen, Amitabh Banerjee, Sunil Das, Ganesh Haloi, Veena Bhargav, to name just a few. Fresh breezes of inspiration are also coming from a revivified Santiniketan with stalwarts like Jogen Choudhury, Suhas Roy, Lalu Prasad Shaw, Somnath

Photographs by SAIBAL DAS

Painting by Pyne: still the favourite of collectors

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

...R. Khejriwal in his gallery: popularising Bengal art

...here. Moreover, there is a gal-...y of over 400 artists—...which includes a host of young ...ters like Pradeep Moitra, ...ava Basak, Samir Aich, ...shree Chakravorty, ...Chal Majumdar, who are ...ly being critically ac-...med. "The new lot is dyna-...," says Paritosh Sen, the ...ence grise of painters.

But the recognition—in-...ing star-status for some—...gh welcome, comes a bit ...e in the day. "We worked ...ly and for a long time ...ding to our beliefs. The Delhi-based ...ts considered us backward at that ...," says a somewhat cynical Bhatta-...jee. Bhattacharjee is today "booked" ...the coming year: barely does he put ...t to canvas than buyers place their ...ers. But it was not always so. For 30 ...g years he had to struggle while paint-...in other parts of the country ...ished.

Pyne's does only about five or six ...era paintings a year, but industri-...s almost knock each other over to get ...latest Pyne. Collectors from Switzer-...d and the US have also gravitated to ...narrow, little green and pink house on ...raj Street where Pyne lives. But he too ...ed in relative anonymity for years. ...Datta Ray—before they became, as ...says, "glamorous like movie stars". ...Ray's studio is empty: his works are ...sold, in museums, or now in Bom-...for a show at the Chemould.

Why Calcutta? Why now? One of the ...s which sets most Cal-...a painters apart is their ...sive concern with the ...n condition. There are ...abstract painters. Expres-...ism has taken root in the ...al landscape, but it has ...indigenised and deals in-...ly with human values ...concerns. "The work of ...ath and Pyne may be ex-...ionist on the surface with ...that fantasy and imagery. ...it is saying something ...ely about the human ...," says Paritosh Sen. ...example Pyne paints ...s. But the ribs of the boat ...the human ribs."

Calcutta artists are proud ...they have never strayed ...human concerns. "The-...ically we have more social content. On the face of the paintings you might not see this because we interiorise it," says Amitabh Banerjee, painter and print-maker.

Perhaps this overriding concern with man and his problems has something to do with the city itself. "Calcutta is the only real city. The problems here are singularly our own: we live with them and solve them in an Indian, Bengali way," says actor Victor Banerjee who started the Calcutta Art Gallery in 1980 when existing commercial art galleries closed down. The city for him is the vanguard of any evolution of art. Adds Husain: "Calcutta itself is such a place. The Calcutta painters have so much turmoil, so much pain. You can smell the stink, the human misery here."

> "We worked slowly and according to our beliefs. We were considered backward."
> BIKASH BHATTACHARJEE

> "Bikash and Pyne may be expressionist on the surface, but say something about the human condition."
> PARITOSH SEN

Another distinguishing feature of the Bengal painters is their resistance to fashionable trends. The winds of change coming in from the West did blow through Bengal, but blew right out again. Counteracting them were equally strong breezes from the Far East: Rabindranath Tagore had brought many painters from China to Santiniketan.

"We are a little orthodox. We don't accept foreign influences without indigenising them," explains Datta Ray. "We have never been very strong for abstract or pop art. No fads, no fashions; art is a part of our lives."

What Calcutta painters also have going for them is the old Bengal School and other traditions of Bengali art. Ironically enough, it was the legacy of this very school—dominated by Abanindranath and Gajendranath Tagore, Nanda Lal Bose, Ram Kinkar among others—which erroneously branded Calcutta painters as old-fashioned country cousins with rather fey, native floweriness in comparison with the Progressive Artists Group from Bombay. Says Amitabh Banerjee: "We are coming back. Not quite to the Bengal School, but there is a smell of Bengal painting."

The other smells coming strongly are from the two paths according to Dr R. Khejriwal, an art collector who started the Chitrakoot Gallery a few years ago and has played a crucial role in popularising Bengal painters. Bengal, he

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The future of a self-reliant India is chemicals. And HOC is firmly a part of tomorrow.

The creativity of the Indian mind is at work at HOC. Scientists are working to expand the country's chemical base. They are developing better ways to harness wealth from waste. And they are looking far beyond today's methods of manufacturing chemicals for a more active and vibrant tomorrow.

What began as a humble endeavour to translate Jawaharlal's vision into reality, in the realm of chemicals, is today a multi-unit, multi-technology enterprise, comprising over 20 plants at Rasayani (Maharashtra), Cochin and Hyderabad. HOC manufactures vital chemicals to serve a growing spectrum of industries. Communication (Transport), Space, Dyes, Drugs and Pharmaceuticals, Fertilisers, Ply/Pulpboard, Pesticides, Plastics, Rubber, Paint, Laminates... The list goes on. Every effort is made to propel a nation on the firm path of progress.

The cornerstone of HOC's progress is its people. Dedicated. Dynamic. Committed. They are dedicated to innovation. And have a single objective: Producing chemicals to keep India growing and face the challenges of the 21st century.

PRODUCT RANGE

Tyre Industry
- Aniline • Cyclo Hexyl Amine
- Nitrobenzene • Para-Nitrochlorobenzene • Resorcinol

Space Research
- Di-Nitrogen Tetroxide (N_2O_4)
- 3,3′ – Dinitro Diphenyl Sulphone
- HIFLON (PTFE)

Dyestuff Industry
- Aniline • Mono-Chlorobenzene
- Meta-Dinitrobenzene
- Dichlorobenzenes
- Nitrobenzene
- Meta-Nitrotoluene
- Ortho-Nitrotoluene
- Para-Nitrotoluene
- Ortho-Nitrochlorobenzene
- Para-Nitrochlorobenzene • Phenol

Drug Industry
- Acetanilide • Aniline
- Meta-Amino Phenol • Acetic Anhydride • Acetic Acid
- Acetone • Mono-Chlorobenzene
- Dichlorobenzenes
- Formaldehyde
- Meta-Nitrochlorobenzene
- Para-Nitrochlorobenzene
- Para-Nitrotoluene • Phenol

Pesticide Industry
- Meta-Amino Phenol
- Butyne-1, 4 Diol
- Mono-Chlorobenzene
- Ortho-Nitrochlorobenzene
- Para-Nitrochlorobenzene
- Meta-Nitrotoluene • Phenol

Plastic/Resin/Paint Industry
- Acetone • 3,3′ Diamino Diphenyl Sulphone
- Formaldehyde
- HIFLON (PTFE) • Phenol

General Chemicals
- Hydrogen • Concentrated Nitric Acid 98% • Oleum
- Oleum 24% • Oleum 65%
- Sulphuric Acid 98%

By-products
- Acetic Acid (Dilute)
- Carbon Dioxide
- 3,3′ – Dinitro Diphenyl Su
- Hydrochloric Acid • Iron S
- Phenyl Cyclo Hexyl Amine
- Spent Sulphuric Acid 70%
- Sulphite Sludge
- Sulphur Sludge

JYESHTA-HOC-26/89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

HOUSTAN ORGANIC CHEMICALS LIMITED
(A Government of India Enterprise)
Dist. Raigad, Maharashtra 410 207.

Pioneering Progress Through Chemicals

"...if I may repeat, our policy must inevitably be one of raising production and increasing employment as rapidly as possible. In doing that, it is essential that the Public Sector should grow as rapidly as possible".

– Jawaharlal Nehru

जवाहरलाल नेहरू जन्मशती
JAWAHARLAL NEHRU CENTENARY
1889 1989

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

explains, has had three waves: Kalighat path; Jamini Roy and the Bankura path; and the Bengal School which was influenced by miniatures and Chinese painting. "Present-day art is an amalgam of these and the western. From here they moved on to what they want to say."

Water colours, a medium which has always been a forte of the Bengal painters and especially of the Bengal School, is gaining currency again—it is used by maestros like Datta Ray to debutants like Pradeep Moitra. Says Datta Ray: "We now use water colours compositionally. Earlier, artists were influenced by Europe and England and they used to do landscapes and sketches."

The '70s was the lost decade. Serious work went on quietly. But Bengal went through a post-Naxal blues which affected all spheres of the arts, believes Paritosh Sen. Adds Bhattacharjee: "After Naxalism there was demoralisation, a cut-off." Khejriwal, however, believes that the turning point was the '80s when the painters lost hope and realised that politics would not change anything. "Change they realised would have to come from elsewhere. So they stopped painting all the cripples and beggars."

Datta Ray: significant contribution

There is another change in the Bengal landscape. Slowly, and a bit hesitantly, the spirit of Tagore—the painter, not the poet—seems to be hovering over some of the younger artists. Those strangely luminiscent forms emerging from other worlds are beginning to be seen again. Bengal painting, then, has had its kiss of life. Like the forms emerging from semi-darkness that characterise Tagore's works, Bengal painters are coming out of the shadows.

—MADHU JAIN in Calcutta

DELHI

On the Art Map

DELHI has become India's gallery-city. At last count there were 17 art galleries; about twice as many as last year. In October alone, six opened their doors to swanky designer or rustic-chic interiors.

The list is long—the Gallery Espace flagged off by Renu Modi and Rashda Siddiqui with an autobiographical show of M.F. Husain; the Centre for Contemporary Arts (CCA), which opened last month with Krishen Khanna's Bandwallahs; Habiart, a joint venture by HUDCO and Rekha Mody opened last fortnight; and the exquisite Display Gallery, opened by Hema Bawa. There's also Dolly Narang's quaint Village Gallery in Hauz Khas Village. And Ashok and Manju Batra have transformed their home into a storehouse of paintings shown "by appointment". With a growing middle class and a multiplying tribe of millionaires, there's certainly more wall space in India now.

There's money too. In the new age of art auctions, the law of supply and demand is spilling into the world of art. And the

Photographs by PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

Dolly Narang at the Village Gallery

painter is suddenly persona most grata. But money is not the only reason: a leg up the social ladder is. Says Khanna: "People who've made lots of money now want entree into interesting social circles." The fever infects all groups: real estate dealers, industrialist's wives, engineers. Have wall, will exhibit, in other words.

There is also renewed interest abroad in contemporary Indian art.

Renu Modi, Siddiqui at Gallery Espace

Says CCA's Sadhvi Khullar, 21: "Galleries in Europe and America are showing a lot of interest in our artists." Most of the paintings in the Village Gallery's show of self-portraits were snapped up by foreigners.

The Government too is promoting promising artists. The CMC Gallery has held significant shows in the past two years and now HUDCO has jumped onto the art bandwagon. Foreign governments are also exhibiting Indian painters. Indian Eclectics, an exhibition of 16 young painters, was put up by the French Government and Sanskriti Pratishthan last month. Three have been chosen to work in Paris.

Says Jatin Das: "India has become an exhibitionist country.... Today they are not even out of art schools and they want to hold one-man shows."

Is this a freak boom? Roshan Elkazi, who runs Art Heritage, is happy about the crop of galleries, but hopes "they'll have staying power". Some hope to make their galleries more than just walls to hang paintings on. Display Gallery plans to provide a meeting place for artists and Habiart and Village Gallery plan seminars and workshops.

All roads on the art map now lead to Delhi. But it might in the end prove to be too much of a good thing.

—MADHU JAIN

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Tinker TOYS PRESENTS

TINKER INVITES YOU AND YOUR CHILD TO HOLLYWOOD

5001 PRIZES

Hey Kids! It's funtime with Tinker Toys again. Win a fabulous trip for two to Hollywood. And Rs. 10,000 to spend there.
And that's not all. There are 5000 more prizes to be won. And winning them is so easy. Just fill in a simple quiz and a slogan. And start packing your bags.

FREE Pocket Puzzle Diary With Each TINKER TOY.

Tinker TOYS
IMAGINATION AT PLAY

Kidstuff, 206, Desein House, DLF Commercial Complex, Greater Kailash II, New Delhi 110 048. Tel: 6414212

Information/Contest forms freely available at all Toy Dealers.

HOLIDAY HOLLYWOOD GIFTS — NO.

- Return Tickets To Hollywood And Rs 10,000 Spending Money (1)
- "Nepal Nepal" Package (1)
- Best Complete Music System (1)
- Best Portable Stereo Cassette Recorder (1)
- Electronic Video Games (2)
- Hand Held Games (2)
- Hobby Project & Science Experiments (5)
- (5)

- Colliers Dictionary (5)
- Child Horizons Encyclopedia (5)
- Allwyn & Titan Sports Watches (10)
- Hammond's Ambassador World Atlas (5)
- Cartoon Video Cassettes (100)
- Exciting Books (100)
- Magnasound Audio Cassettes (100)
- Tinker Holiday Hollywood Puzzles (2259)
- Tinker Mini Jigsaws (1400)

HERALD-KS-006/89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

MEDICINE

The Wonder Beam

The first contact ND-YAG laser arrives in India

IT is a super-versatile surgical tool. Ophthalmologists use it to weld detached retinas. Neurosurgeons use its intense heat to vaporise tumours on the brain. Dermatologists use it to bleach unsightly blotches on the skin. And oncologists use it to kill cancerous cells.

Yet in India, the laser has been out of reach of specialists in other areas like cardiology. Now that may be changing with the arrival of the first contact ND-YAG (Neodymium-Yttrium Aluminium Garnet) laser. Last month, the dazzling state-of-the-art device was introduced to Indian surgeons at the C.D. Reddy Hospital in Hyderabad by Dr M.Y. Sankar of the University of Cincinnati Medical Centre in the US. Says Sankar, one of a three-man international team which developed the probes and scalpels, for the laser: "It is a multi-disciplinary and multi-speciality machine."

That's hardly an exaggeration, considering the range of uses to which the ND-YAG laser can be put. But the operation of the laser is remarkably simple. Like a magnifying glass, it converts light into heat at the spot where the beam comes in contact with tissue.

Surgeons remove cancerous tumour with the laser; and Dr Sankar: pathbreaker

The laser cuts tissues, seals off blood vessels, vaporises tumours, kills cancerous cells.

But there the comparison ends. For the ND-YAG laser is an amazingly sophisticated tool, permitting the surgeon to control the depth of penetration of tissue by varying the wavelength of light used and the power. And while it cuts tissue during operations, it also seals off blood vessels so that bleeding is reduced.

The earliest medical laser—the carbon dioxide laser—was a comparatively crude affair, used mainly for treating surface lesions. With a handpiece that enabled focusing, it became a handy aid for ophthalmologists. But the use of lasers as surgical scalpels had to await the development of a more sophisticated laser—the Auth knife. This too had drawbacks though—the beam was diffuse, and it caused needless damage to tissue surrounding the operated part.

The contact ND-YAG laser is far more advanced than earlier carbon dioxide or argon lasers. While it cuts as well as the earlier generation of carbon dioxide lasers, it produces far less smoke, so saving surgeons the bother of frequently venting the area being operated. More important, penetration is deeper and lateral tissue damage minimal. And it can both cut and weld tissue. Says Sankar: "All that the surgeon must do is to decide the actual density of the beam and the time for which it should be trained at the target."

The laser's use is not confined to the body surface. Internal organs too can be operated—using endoscopic instruments. These are basically optical fibres which deliver the laser beam to practically any part of the body. For instance, to operate on the stomach, a tube of optical fibres is pushed in through the mouth. The surgeon can see the internal anatomy through another system of optical fibres and after aiming the laser, operate.

For the patient, laser surgery offers several advantages over conventional surgery. It is less traumatic and involves little loss of blood. So, hospital stay is cut down drastically. Still, Sankar cautions: "The wonder-beam is not a cure-all."

It also comes expensive. Together with the scalpels and probes, the laser machine costs about Rs 25 lakh, so putting it out of reach of almost all surgeons and most hospitals. One way of cutting investment costs, Sankar suggests, is to set up exclusive laser surgery centres which can be used by different specialists. Dr C.D. Reddy, chairman of CDR Hospitals, concurs: "Hi-tech systems cannot be bought by individual surgeons but corporate set-ups can make it available to a pool of specialists."

But purchasing a laser machine is not the end of the story. A specialist takes about six weeks to get accustomed to working with the new machine. Nurses too have to be trained in its use and biomedical engineers taught to maintain it. For while the laser is a wonderful healer, it can also wreak deadly damage in untrained hands.

—AMARNATH K. MENON

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Beautiful ideas for a beautiful home!

Classic workmanship. That tells the story of expertise handed down through generations to inspire you to decorate, furnish, and dress-up at your imaginative and appealing best!

NAA/D/UPEC-89

GANGOTRI

At: New Delhi, Bombay, Calcutta, Bangalore, Hyderabad, Nagpur, Bhopal, Allahabad, Agra, Lucknow & Kanpur.

UPEC

U.P. EXPORT CORPORATION LTD.

(A Govt. of U.P. Undertaking)

B-27, Sarvodaya Nagar, Kanpur-208 005 (India)

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

ON JANUARY 18th, 1986, THE SPACE SHUTTLE COLUMBIA LANDED PERFECTLY ON TYRES WITH TECHNOLOGY LIGHT YEARS AHEAD OF ANY AIRCRAFT TYRE TECHNOLOGY.

Now MRF backed by the same B.F. Goodrich technology brings you space-age radials. Slide into the driver's seat. Start the car. Hit the road. And let MRF ZIGMA take over...

Accelerate: You'll discover that taking off was never so smooth.

Manoeuvre: The provides a new Drive: Feel the high grip.
Brake: The tough

Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

ials. Slide
he road.

off was

noeuvre: The unique 'Z'oid tread pattern nchels a new force in road-hugging.
ue: Feel the broad tyre base hold the road in ght grip.
ot: The tough, wide tyre base, and the sensational raised black-lettering announce your arrival – in style!

MRF ZIGMA: It's an out-of-the-world driving experience.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"I was impressed when my doctor said Keo-Karpin Hair Vitalizer really stops hair loss.

But I was convinced when I used it."

"My doctor told me Keo-Karpin Hair Vitalizer* is a unique scientific formula based on extensive research. He also told me it provides all the essential proteins, co-enzymes and vitamins for strengthening hair roots.

All I know is that it has certainly stopped my hair from falling and checked dandruff."

Here's an excerpt from the research report :

"66.66% gave excellent and 33.33% gave good results with complete disappearance of dandruff in all cases and nearly cent per cent stoppage of fall of hair... So, success rate with Keo-Karpin Hair Vitalizer may be stated to be cent per cent."

Indian Medical Gazette 118, 223 (1984)

The proven scientific way to prevent hair loss and dandruff.

* It is not a toilet preparation.

Dey's® Dey's Medical. Care you can trust.

TSA-C/DMHV/189

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

BY K. NATWAR SINGH

Nehru's Life and Letters

ON November 14, 1989, India and the world will pay homage to Jawaharlal Nehru. How do his life and work stand up to critical scrutiny 25 years after his death? Over the past year I have been asking myself this question. Let me confess that I am partial to Nehru. My generation owes him its intellectual, political and moral awakening. That is why I am sickened by the torrent of empty words that has all but drowned the majesty of his life and achievement. Nehru's balance sheet is impressive indeed.

He was a great man. How do I define greatness? My criteria is—did the individual change the world for the better or not? Nehru passes this test with distinction. If we leave out saints, holy men and Gandhiji, then Nehru is among the three greatest Indians of all time. The other two, Ashok and Akbar were emperors. They lived in less turbulent times. Creating a democracy and presiding over it with compassion and courage, foresight and wisdom was infinitely more demanding than being emperor in the 3rd century B.C. or 16th century A.D. Hence, Nehru's achievement is greater because his task was tougher.

Nehru belongs to that very small band of sagacious and incorruptible men who have founded nations. Woe betide those who destroy his vision of India—civilised, democratic, secular, strong, united.

Recently four of Pandit Nehru's books have been re-issued: An Autobiography, Glimpses of World History and the Discovery of India are well known. The fourth, A Bunch of Old Letters, is not often mentioned. It deserves to be. It was first published in 1958. Nehru in his foreword wrote: "It was my intention to first publish only Mahatma Gandhi's letters to me. Gradually others were added and even some letters written by me...." Of the 368 letters, 105 are from Mahatma Gandhi. The rest are from Motilal Nehru, Rabindranath Tagore, M.A. Jinnah, Abul Kalam Azad, Vallabhbhai Patel, Sarojini Naidu, Harold Laski, Bertrand Russell, Mohamed Iqbal, Edward Thompson, Stafford Cripps, Subhas Chandra Bose, Madam Sun-Yat-Sen, Gobind Ballabh Pant and many other prominent persons. I have selected letters from only three out of this eminent list: Mahatma Gandhi, Subhas Chandra Bose and George Bernard Shaw.

Gandhiji to Nehru on October 5, 1945: "The first thing I want to write about is the difference of outlook between us. If the difference is fundamental, then I feel the public should also be made aware of it. It would be detrimental to our work for Swaraj to keep them in the dark. I have said that I still stand by the system of government envisaged in Hind Swaraj." Nehru replied on October 9, 1945: "It is many years ago since I read Hind Swaraj and I have only a vague picture in my mind. But even when I read it 20 or more years ago it seemed to me completely unreal ....the Congress has never considered that picture, much less adopted it." Observe the level of the dialogue—it is centred on issues, programmes, principles. Nothing personal or petty.

Nehru with Mahatma Gandhi

The letters deal with sombre and grave matters. Nehru's lighter side is nowhere in sight.

Two letters exchanged between Subhas Bose and Nehru take 34 pages. Bose made a blistering attack on Nehru's ideas and attitudes on March 28, 1939. Nehru met all Subhas Babu's arguments. He ended his reply thus: "Are we all such integrated human beings that we can define ourselves precisely in a word or phrase.... But I am a dull subject to discuss, especially at the tail end of an inordinately long letter. Let us leave it at this that I am an unsatisfactory human being who is dissatisfied with himself and the world, and whom the petty world he lives in does not particularly like." What disarming self-deprecation.

On September 4, 1948, prime minister Nehru wrote what amounts to a fan letter to George Bernard Shaw: "Forty years ago, when I was 18 and an undergraduate at Cambridge, I heard you address a meeting there. I have not seen you again since then, nor have I ever written to you. But like many of my generation, we have grown up in company with your writings and books. I suppose a part of myself, such as I am today, has been moulded by that reading. I do not know if that would do you any credit." Nehru asked to see Shaw, while he was in London for the 1948 CHOGM. Shaw's reply reached Nehru after he left London. It caught him in Paris. Nehru wrote to Shaw from Paris: "It is a matter of deep regret to me that I missed this opportunity of paying my respects to you." The two finally met in 1949. A year later, Shaw died.

These letters deal with sombre and grave matters. Nehru's lighter side is nowhere in evidence here. For that one should turn to Verrrier Elwin's autobiography. Elwin was an unusual Englishman who made India his home after coming down from Oxford in the late '20s. Here is a gem from Elwin's book: "I had just published India's North-East Frontier in the 19th Century and my friends insisted I present a copy to Mr Nehru.... On the following day I presented it to him. He turned over a few pages, grunted a little, looked at me and said: 'What do you think of Lolita?'"

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

AGROTECH SEES THE MIRACLE OF VANASPATI, POWER AND CATTLEFEED IN A GRAIN OF RICE.

INVEST IN IT.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Public Issue of 83,20,000 equity shares of Rs.10 each for cash at par.

THE COMPANY

From the rich, fertile heartland of India comes an investment opportunity of tremendous potential. Agrotech India Limited. A venture of the Punjab Agro Industries Corporation (PAIC) – the promoters of such prestigious ventures as PEPSI and NEWSPRINT. And co-promoted by the eminent industrialist of the Dhillon Group of Industries, Shri Kewal Dhillon.

THE PROJECT

With one of India's first paddy-processing complexes, Agrotech ushers in a unique concept in the field of agro industry: total by-product utilization. Converting a humble grain of paddy rice into high-demand vanaspati, power, cattlefeed and premium rice. And Agrotech is already on stream.

3 units, consisting of the 20-tonnes-per-hour rice mill, the plant for rice bran oil to make vanaspati, and the cattlefeed plant have already been implemented in a record time, well ahead of schedule. Generating a turnover of over Rs.400 lacs already. The units for power generation and manufacture of vanaspati are expected to commence production by March, 1990.

THE POTENTIAL

By March 1991, Agrotech will reach full capacity utilization. With an expected turnover of over Rs.100 crores. By producing products in great demand.

RICE

The mainstay of nation's diet. Very soon, Agrotech will feed 1.92 lac tonnes of its own premium quality rice into the domestic and international markets every year.

VANASPATI

By 1991-92, against the projected demand of 13.5 lac tonnes per annum in the North alone, the installed capacity (including the Agrotech plant's) will be only 7.7 lac tonnes. Conclusion: a ready market.

CATTLEFEED

30,000 tonnes per annum of high-nutrition cattlefeed that is far superior to the existing wheat-straw and rice-straw mixtures. And is in great demand.

AND POWER

1 MW of power for captive consumption to be generated from waste rice husk. Resulting in a regular supply of power at a lower cost.

Agrotech. Investing in paddy. And reaping benefits from rice. And vanaspati. And cattlefeed. And power.

Invest in the company with a vision beyond the ordinary.

Invest in Agrotech.

Issue Opens:
Indian Public : 7th Nov'89.
Non-Resident Indians : 4th Nov'89

ISSUE HIGHLIGHTS

- Production commenced ahead of schedule and turnover of over Rs.400 lacs already achieved.
- Preferential allotments to UTI, SBI Mutual Fund and Canbank Mutual Fund in the public issue.
- One of India's first integrated paddy-processing complexes.
- Ready market for Co's products – rice, vanaspati and cattlefeed.
- Export potential for Co's high quality rice and cattlefeed.
- 80CC, 80M, 80L and Wealth Tax benefits.
- Listing on the Ahmedabad, Bombay, Calcutta, Delhi and Ludhiana stock exchanges.

MANAGERS TO THE ISSUE

SBI CAPITAL MARKETS LTD. New Delhi. · Industrial Finance Corporation of India. New Delhi. · The Industrial Credit and Investment Corporation of India Limited New Delhi. · CANBANK Financial Services Ltd. New Delhi. · PNB CAPITAL SERVICES LIMITED New Delhi.

CHAMPALAL, INVESTMENT & FINANCIAL CONSULTANCY LIMITED · Hongkong Bank THE HONGKONG AND SHANGHAI BANKING CORPORATION New Delhi. · State Bank of Patiala New Delhi. · Punjab & Sind Bank New Delhi.

ADVISORS TO THE ISSUE: Arora Financial Consultants Pvt. Ltd. Ludhiana.

AGROTECH

AGRO TECH INDIA LTD.

Regd. Office: Dhillon Complex, Manimajra, Chandigarh – 160 101.

• RICE • TO • RICHES •

Mudra:D:ATIL:7370

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

INDIAN WRITING

Finding a Firm Niche

Indian books flood the market

SUDDENLY, the Indian writer appears to have come into his own. Almost overnight Indian bookstores have acquired an Indian look. No longer are the display windows brimming with the same old Forsters, Jhabvalas, and Kayes. There is now a new breed of Indian novelists, biographers, political commentators and poets being increasingly picked up by prestigious imprints like Penguin, Faber, Chatto and Windus, and Oxford.

And though they may not have quite stormed the international literary scene—V.S. Naipaul and Salman Rushdie, if you can call them Indian, being the only real giants—they are fetching adequate literary notice, and being published with a hype and quality hitherto only associated with the West. Says Khushwant Singh about Vikram Seth, Allan Sealy and Amitav Ghosh; "They're much better than the old guard, to which I belong. They handle the language a damn sight better."

But it's not only this talented threesome; with obvious literary proclivities, that is finding the fancy foreign jackets. Indians from all walks of life are giving it a go. As David Davidar, editor-publisher of Penguin India, says: "I'm receiving manuscripts from every kind of person across the compass." And though he may be rejecting "75 per cent" of those that he receives, and others abroad junking even more, there is no denying the numbers that are being accepted, being published and being sold. Consequently, the notion of the bestseller in India has also changed: from 2,500-3,000 to 5,000-10,000. Poet Adil Jussawala sums up this new movement when he says: "Many drawers in offices will probably have manuscripts ready to be published."

It was Rushdie's Midnight's Children that pushed ajar the door that led into the propah world of English literature. He demonstrated it was possible for Indians to write English after their own idiom and be taken seriously. He also demonstrated that it was possible for such books to sell. Midnight's Children was an unqualified bestseller, as was Satanic Verses. Vikram Seth did very well too: his Pushkin-inspired The Golden Gate, sold over 50,000 copies in the US and Britain, and about 10,000 in India.

Today, the door Rushdie stepped in through has been rammed wide open. International imprints are looking seriously at India. Penguin has set up shop and revolutionised the way paperbacks are perceived. Others like Fontana and Picador have worked out special arrangements with publishers like Rupa. Media interest has risen dramatically: no self-respecting newspaper devotes less than a page every week to reviews. A new book is a literary event, with interviews, extracts and profiles. The Economic Times week-end section has regular columns devoted to publishing. Says an editor: "Books page is now the staple."

It is because there are writers and readers to service it. The fiction band-

The door Rushdie edged in through has now been rammed wide open. Today, more Indians are writing and are being accepted.

wagon in particular is overloaded, with both the young and the old trying their hand at it. There's Shashi Tharoor, the Geneva-based UN official who's just put out The Great Indian Novel, a contemporary Mahabharata. Political commentator S. Nihal Singh has written a novel, The Ambassador's Journey, to be published by Arnold Heinemann. Pepita Noble-Seth has been commissioned for a novel set in Kerala by Penguin-India. Scientist Jayant Narlikar last year published a sci-fi, Return of Vaman. And Proctor and Gamble's Managing Director Gurcharan Das' novel, A Fine Family, is scheduled for release in January. The former editor of Business India and Debonair, Dilip Thakore, has written a corporate novel. Meantime, Shobha De's Socialite Evenings has been selling well. Explains Jussawala: "All journalism is ephemeral: one sometimes wants to leave behind books which are more substantial."

The bedrock for this onrush of publishing activity was set in the mid-'80s by Amitav Ghosh (Circle of Reason and Shadowlines), Vikram Seth (The Golden Gate), Allan Sealy (Trotternama), and then last year, Upamanyu Chatterjee (English, August: An Indian Story). Picked up by major imprints abroad, and then critically lauded, they awakened an edged v been Today,

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

vriting
epted.

aded, with rying their aroor, the o's just put contempo-commen-en a novel,
o be pub-
nn. Pepita ioned for a uin-India. year pub-man. And ging Direc-
ine Family, uary. The and Debo-en a corpo-
a De's Solling well.
rnalism is wants to are more sh of pub-id-'80s by eason and

The Golden ama), and Chatterjee
y). Picked and then kened an

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

A piece of cake really.

At HDFC getting a Home Loan is just that. Having helped house over a quarter of a million families in the last 11 years. HDFC's processes are constantly simplified to make loan approvals as smooth and easy as possible.

You just write in or call on us. Send us the application, we process it and revert with our decision. Simple isn't it?

But then you won't believe it till you experience it. So why don't you write in or call on us today.

H·D·F·C

HOUSING DEVELOPMENT FINANCE CORPORATION LIMITED

Regd. Office: Ramon House, 169, Backbay Reclamation, Bombay 400 020. Phone: 220282, 220265,220908, 231054, 231146 Telex: HDFC-011-6762 Gram: HOUSCORP
Branches: Ahmedabad • Bangalore • Bhubaneswar • Bombay (Parel) • Calcutta • Chandigarh • Cochin • Coimbatore • Guwahati • Hyderabad • Indore • Jaipur • Lucknow • Madras • Nasik • New Delhi • Pune • Trivandrum • Vadodara • Vashi (New Bombay)

We know the way home.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

ULKA 12207-B

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

NO DETAIL TOO SMALL

At Emirates we believe a large part of our work lies in paying great attention to what might seem small details.

Making sure our delectable food is impeccably presented, and that our flights are at agreeable times.

EVEN

Precisely trained, our multi-lingual staff are as charming and courteous on the ground, as they are in the air.

Because we care for your

TIME

comfort, our aircraft are ordered with spacious seats and legrests, and sizeable overhead storage bins. Surprising how a little extra space helps shorten a long trip.

Wherever we fly there's always the same understanding service, wide choice of drinks, and colourful international cuisine. So it's easy to unwind and feel completely at home.

FLIES

Even children have the time of their lives on Emirates — with soft toys, books and colouring kits. We never forget they are our time-travellers of the future!

ON

Small details maybe, but they're the reason why such large numbers of people choose to fly Emirates — time and time again.

The International Airline of the United Arab Emirates.
Offices: Bombay: Mittal Chambers, Office No. 3, Ground Floor, 228, Nariman Point, Bombay 400 021. Tel: 2871650/2871651 2871652. Delhi: Kanchanjunga Building, 18, Barakhamba Road, New Delhi 110 001 Tel: 3324665/3324803/3324824.

Emirates

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

enormous interest in the Indian writer. The fillip they gave was evident in the fact that the older writers too delivered more accomplished works in this period. Both Anita Desai (Clear Light of Day, In Custody, Baumgartner's Bombay) and Nayantara Sahgal (Rich Like Us, Plans for Departure, Mistaken Identity) matured, while others like Shashi Deshpande (That Long Silence) found an audience.

Meantime, immigrant Indians were flowering abroad. In the US, Bharati Mukherjee stunned with The Middleman and Other Stories and followed it up with a lesser work, Jasmine. From Chicago, Boman Desai wrote a Tristram Shandy-like The Memory of Elephants. In Tokyo, Meira Chand is an established seller with four novels out already. In Canada, Rohinton Mistry has impressed with Tales from Firozsha Bagh, while in the UK, Farrokh Dhondy is finishing Dying Egypt Dying. Says Nissim Ezekiel: "Only a decade ago you could name Indian authors on your fingertips: Raja Rao, Mulk Raj Anand, R.K. Narayan. This has changed." But Ezekiel also puts the new writer in perspective, saying: "All the new writers are not novelists; some write novels."

In a sense, the publishing revolution was waiting to happen. With a burgeoning middle class, fluent in English, it was only a matter of time before the market began to move. Penguin's entry into India in 1985 was a turning point. Says Ansari: "Its arrival has been a tremendous boom—I couldn't have written in vacuum and peddled my manuscript." But Rajeet Mukherjee, formerly of Orient Longman, cautions: "Penguin has given an impetus, but its greatest failing is its inability to discover any significant talent."

That is a critical charge several make, but it hasn't hampered growth. Says Oxford Senior Editor Rukun Advani: "There is definitely a boom." And, interestingly, it is not restricted to fiction. Despite its forbidding price, M.J. Akbar's Nehru: The Making of India has sold as many as 18,000-odd hardback copies globally. In India, S. Gopal's biography of Radhakrishnan and G. Venkataraman's biography of C.V. Raman have done well. Other non-fiction titles like India's Struggle for Independence, Sri Lanka: The Fractured Island by Mohan Raman, The Earth Mother by Pupul Jayakar from Penguin and refurbished Oxford titles like Corbett's man-eater series, Sudhir Kakar's The Inner World and Stanley Wolpert's Jinnah, underscore the fact that more and more Indians are interested in reading about India.

The interest in the Indian writer started after major imprints abroad picked up works of Ghosh, Seth, Sealy and Chatterjee.

Pricing has played a crucial role in this boom. With the dollar and pound waging strong, books produced in India have become a vastly more attractive proposition. Says Zamir Ansari, marketing chief of Penguin Overseas and India: "The Indian reader is both quality and price conscious." The ideal pricing most people in the trade feel is between Rs 45 and Rs 60. And that is the price Penguin is mostly providing at. Smaller publishers too are in the arena. In fact, Ravi Dayal, formerly of Oxford University Press, has been able to successfully carry out an interesting venture. He is publishing single-handedly, high quality hardbacks at paperback prices, from Rs 45 to Rs 90. Kali for Women is producing essentially feminist titles, while Seagull Books in Calcutta focuses on the arts. High quality coffee-tables too are being printed by Roli Books among others. That there is an "authentic movement" in the books business, as Mukherjee calls it, is borne out by the surprisingly good performance of H.M. Seerval's scholarly Legend and Reality and Ezekiel's Collected Poems. While Seervai's book fetched orders of over 1,000 in its first quarter, the Ezekiel hardback at Rs 225 had a print-run of 2,000, and is doing well. De's Socialite Evenings has a claimed print-run of 15,000. More impressively, last year English August sold 3,000 copies at a hardback price of about Rs 200. Most writers, like O.V. Vijayan and Chatterjee, in fact claim to be more than pleased with the sales of their books. So do publishers like Davidar, Dayal and Advani.

Of course, Advani laments the fact that writers are yet far from becoming objects of adoration and cult worship like sportsmen and film stars. Given time that too may come about, for literary activities have also received a boost. Book-signing sessions are packed affairs, and poetry and play readings attract audiences. There are those who feel there is also a slot for a magazine on the lines of The New York Times Review of Books.

But all is not optimistic. The fear that the bubble may burst is ever at hand. Says Ansari: "Really wonder how long this impetus will last—rising paper costs are making books prohibitive, and one hears there is another hike in the offing." The other fear is the depth of the wellsprings of Indian talent. Most publishers, and Khushwant Singh, feel that first-rate manuscripts, especially literary, will pose a problem in the future. The media coverage that books get is also seen as eccentric and inadequate. Says Dayal: "Bad books get wide coverage, good books get buried, most reviewers are unqualified to review."

These, however, seem to be merely teething problems of the book boom. Growing literacy, burgeoning awareness and increasingly talented writers are bound to iron them out. Indians, it is obvious, can no longer be denied the glory of the written, and the published, word.

—TARUN J. TEJPAL
with SALIL TRIPATHI in Bombay

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

A Significant Study

Indira Gandhi's biography is worth a perusal

INDIRA GANDHI: A personal and political biography
by INDER MALHOTRA
Hodder and Stoughton
Price: Rs 375; Pages: 363

BY any yardstick, Indira Gandhi is a fascinating subject for a biography. Born into the modern Indian equivalent of royalty, she had a lonely childhood, with her father totally wrapped up in the freedom struggle when he was not in jail. Her mother was a misfit in the imperious Nehru household and died young. Indira's own marriage was less than successful. Yet here was a woman who started shakily in her prime ministerial innings and went on to rout her opponents in the party. She displayed superb generalship in the Bangladesh war, but later imposed the Emergency on India. She doted on her younger son Sanjay and returned to power after many had written her off, and she died tragically.

Yet Indira was a very private person. There were few persons she trusted entirely and she felt the need to strike up postures as the occasion demanded. Underneath her confident exterior, she suffered from insecurity and a feeling of intellectual inadequacy brought into sharper focus by the towering and wide-ranging mind of her father. The latter she sought to make up by her insistence on meeting "intellectuals" on her trips abroad.

Indira Gandhi's biography has yet to be written for the simple reason that we are too near her often tempestuous times and the process of separating wheat from chaff in her case presents insuperable difficulties. Contradictions abound. Indira Gandhi was an intellectual mediocrity who, after initial bumbling, proved to be a master politician and a worthy successor of Chanakya in the practice of foreign policy.

There are two ways of writing a biography of Indira Gandhi: in the narrative style or conceptually, presenting her in her life and times against the background of Indian history and mores. Inder Malhotra has chosen the first option, underlining it by describing it as a personal and political biography.

There is much to commend the study. Malhotra had a ringside seat during Indira's days of power and ready access to her, before she dispensed with young journalists or political advisers, then known by the pejorative phrase 'kitchen cabinet'.

We are taken through her early days fluently although some of the explanatory details, unavoidable in a book meant for an international readership, are grating on the Indian reader. Later, we are plunged into the drama of her intra-party struggles, ending with the baneful influence of her son Sanjay.

The author tries to be fair to her. He acknowledges her paranoia and sense of insecurity, her constant dissimulation. He talks about her blind spot, Sanjay, and relates her dilatoriness in taking decisions after his untimely death to the grievous hurt she had to live with. But, in a somewhat unnecessary summing up of his assessment, the author writes: "I, for one, believed her though I knew that she was not a stickler for the truth and never hesitated to dissimulate whenever it suited her. Even so, I felt, as did many others, that having been expelled from Parliament for making false statements, among other things, she was unlikely to mislead the House a second time."

Indeed, one often feels that the demands of writing an objective biography often rebel against the author's unbounded admiration for the subject. More than once, he refers to her striking figure and turn-out. She was, of course, a handsome woman and dressed with taste, except on occasions when she wished to make a political point. But to describe her as pretty, as the author chooses to, is to do violence to the word.

One of the book's most enjoyable aspects are the nuggets of intimate details the author weaves into his narrative, revealing his unerring eye for what is newsworthy. And Malhotra's summing up of the Punjab problem is superb.

Perhaps it is in the nature of the narrative form the author has chosen that we often get the feeling that we are submerged in well-known political details, with the subject of the biography merely bobbing up from time to time. Here, of course, the conceptual form would have been more satisfying, with more attention to an analysis of the significance of the major events shaping her and being shaped by her.

With all that, the book is well worth a perusal. It is an invaluable personal account of a significant period of independent India's history and source material for the definitive biography of Indira Gandhi when it comes to be written.

—S. NIHAL SINGH

Indira with family: private person

EXCERPTS

Indira's marriage took place on March 26th, 1942....Sir Stafford Cripps was greatly amused when, at the dinner table, a nervous Indira pressed him: 'Do have some potato cripps, Sir Stafford.'

❖

There is nothing more to be said about Brahmachari, Dinesh Singh or Mathai. The only question is: what does all that has been said and pieced together amount to? Certainly not a confirmation of a succession of torrid romances on the part of Indira....The utter lack of 'that most wonderful thing in life, having a complete relationship with another human being', of which she had complained, was the price she had to pay for the absolute power she cherished no less.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"Now I can tell stainless steel quality when I see it!"

SAIL
SALEM STAINLESS

The mark of genuine stainless steel

A lot of the stainless steelware you get in the market today is less than what stainless steel should be. Less resistant to corrosion, less durable and hygienic. To help you select the right quality, the special logo 'SAIL SALEM STAINLESS' will now be etched on the metal of select stainless steelware. It's your guarantee that this stainless steel is truly non-corrosive, non-toxic and longlasting — exactly as you expect it to be.

STEEL AUTHORITY OF INDIA LIMITED
CENTRAL MARKETING ORGANISATION
Steelmakers to the Nation

Authorised logo users for selected products:

EASTERN REGION : Krishna Trading Company, 33, Brabourne Road, Calcutta-700 001 (Dinnersets, Kitchenware)

NORTHERN REGION : Punjab Stainless Steel Industries, B-61, Wazirpur Indl. Area, New Delhi 110052 (Export of Utensils); Ashok Manufacturing Co. Pvt. Ltd. 12, Scindia House, Connaught Circus, New Dèlhi 110001 (Kitchen Sinks & Wash Basins); Super Parts Ltd. 14/1, Mathura Road, Faridabad 121003, Haryana (LPG Stoves); Indo Steel Industries, 26, Bhogal Road, Bhogal, New Delhi 110014 (Water Filter & Thermoware).

WESTERN REGION : Kraftware (India) Pvt. Ltd. G-10-E, Laxmi Mills, Compound, Shakti Mills Lane Mahalaxmi, Bombay 400011 (Kitchenware); Panchsheel Engg. Works, 71 LB Shastri Marg, Bhandup (W), Bombay 400078 (Kitchenware), Phoenix Appliances, 405 Ashurwad Bldg. Ahmedabad Street, Bombay 400009 (Wash basins, Sinks); V.K. Surgicals, Industrial Estate, Polo Ground, Indore 452003 (Filters, Mugs & Plates); Jyoti Industries, Elecon House, Century Mills Passage Road, Worli, Bombay 400025 (Sinks, Wash Basins, Trays & Household appliances), India Metal Industries, Parekh Nagar, SV Road, Kandivli (W), Bombay 400067 (Utensils, Coolwares (Copper Bottom), Coolers, Boilers, Filters & Tiffin Boxes); Ashok Iron & Steel Fabricators, Mavdi Plot, Rajkot 360004 (Wick Stoves); Mamal Metal Industries, opp. R K Studio, Sion Trombay Road, Chembur, Bombay 400 071 (Utensils, Filters & Tiffin Boxes); Neelam Metal Industries, Village Walia, Vasai, Dist. Thane (Tableware, Filters & Tiffin Boxes)

SOUTHERN REGION : Hope (India), 8, Vasu Street, Behind Ega Theatre, Madras 600010 (Thermoware), Biswanath Metal & Alloys, 272, Mount Road, Madras 600018 (Dinner Sets, Kitchenware).

CONTAD 189

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Woolmark
(वूलमार्क)

PURE NEW WOOL

INTERNATIONAL SYMBOL OF PURE NEW WOOL

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Go for the Goods

EXTRAFINE PREMIUM LIMITED EDITION ENGLISH STYLE SUIT LENGTH

AJAX/OCM/SG/891

A Product of VXL India Ltd.
WE EXCEL

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Available at Mill's SUMANGAL showrooms and other leading stores

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

O C M
S O L I D
G O L D
• • • •
O C M
S O L I D
G O L D
• • • •
O C M
S O L I D
G O L D
• • • •
O C M
S O L I D
G O L D
• • • •
OCM
• • • •
S O L I D
G O L D

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SANJAY SAYANI

Parvati: pop princess

◆ Mehdi Hasan and Parvati Khan at a show together. Sounds fine. Both the names evoke an aura of ghazals. But Parvati Khan, 24, is certainly not doing what Hasan is. She is crooning, she is rocking, she is popping. And she has a legion of fans lapping it all up. At a recent joint performance in Lucknow, around one lakh fans clamoured for her desi pop, while ghazal king Hasan was relegated to the sidelights. The cassette she released that day, Dil Diwana Ho Gaya, has already sold out two editions, and Weston is now releasing the third. The Bombay singer is storming other places too. She's shooting for a pop show on Doordarshan's 9 p.m. Sunday slot. And is confident of conquering the medium. "I am looking for a real hungama on television," she exults. Well, that ought to take care of Sunday evening tedium.

◆ The Vishwamitras come easy; it is the Menakas that are hard to find. First it was N.T. Rama Rao conducting a high and low search for his special temptress, finally settling on Meenakshi Seshadhri. Then it was Desari Narayan Rao's turn. In a seeming wink of an eyelid, he picked Mukesh Khanna to play the rishi in his mythological. But again, Menaka proved elusive. Now, the choice has been made. Bhanupriya has beaten out the other frontrunner, Sridevi, and is preparing to seduce Khanna. But the sexy siren from the Telugu screen, with about 70 films to her credit, including eight in Hindi, has other ambitions too in mind. Says she: "I want to do an award-winning role. It will give me fulfilment." That must be the rishi rubbing off on her.

◆ There's magic in his music; the twang of success on his fingers. And at an active 69, he's employing the two to focus on the menace of drugs. But for Ravi Shankar, more novel than the theme is the form. The maestro premiered Ghanashyam, a musical theatre—a combination of mime, opera and ballet—to high acclaim at London's glamorous South Bank last fortnight. The central character is Ghanashyam, a kathak dancer (played by Durga Lal) who gets addicted to drugs. It's drawing large audiences in the UK and is set to travel to the US and other European countries. Says Shankar: "I am overwhelmed by the response of the people of Britain." Even after four decades of rave accolades?

Bhanupriya: rishi rites

Durga Lal: dancing against drugs

SALLY ERE

◆ It's time the lady was given a break. But then she does have a knack for inviting innuendo. Comes Viv Richards cricketing and the press begins to hum Neena Gupta's name. Now the news that she's going to appear in a new television serial Bhooth Nath (ghost-husband) has got fourth estate gossip-mongers going again. Based on the classic by Babu Devakinandan Khatri, the serial features Ashok Kumar, Navin Nischol and Natasha Sinha. The husband who is not there is Benjamin Gilani. Asked if she took the role to cock a snook at the press, Neena said: "I don't hate anyone. I'm just happy being off the press." But all this seems like the best way of being in it.

DHANAJAYA

Neena: ghost space

◆ So now it all begins to add up. If he was unabashedly pro-Congress(I), it was simply because that was where he was headed. But M.J. Akbar, 38, the dynamic editor of The Telegraph, insists it's the central passion of his life—the question of communalism—that has driven him to contest from the Kishanganj Lok Sabha constituency in Bihar. The choice of rival seems to bear this out: pitted against him is Syed Shahabuddin. It's the siege within that has moved to the stage without. Says Akbar: "Just as we watched a paradise called Sri Lanka descend into hell, we could, if we're not careful, see the Shahabuddins and Thackerays drag our country into a swamp of communal hatred." But Akbar is hoping "my pen survives my job". It better, he may just need it.

Akbar: new role

PRAMOD PUSHKARN

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THERE is no experience as educative as travelling around the country during a general election. In that rare moment, one is truly in touch with the soul of India, experiencing the greatness of a democracy suddenly coming alive. Each election, I make it a point to spend a few days in the field to taste the flavour of the campaigning. This time too I came away with the same feeling of exhilaration as in the past.

It is a time when the normal equations are turned inside out. It is a time when villagers abuse the most powerful in the land without fear; it is a time when political giants are reduced to begging for a new lease of life from the poorest of the land. It is a moment, however fleeting, for the ordinary citizen to play God. It is when I watch the bedraggled Indian voter preparing to cast his vote that I get the true feeling of Mèra Bharat Mahan, that laudable sentiment which has been so trivialised by crass commercialism.

Indian elections must rank as one of the greatest shows on earth. The catchy songs, the ingenious slogans, the high-tech video raths, the imaginative graffiti and scores of other new gimmicks all add up to make India not only the world's largest democracy but also the most boisterous one. To capture all this colour, it was decided to devote the entire magazine to the elections. For this special issue, a team of 18 correspondents and editors tracked campaigning over 30,000 km while seven photographers shot a total of 10,000 frames. Along with drawing a picture from the heat and dust of the election, INDIA TODAY took a look at some hard figures with its regular election forecast put together by psephology partners, Prannoy Roy and MARG, who have successfully forecast the previous two general elections. As campaigning started late this time, it was felt appropriate to conduct the opinion poll at a later date; this has resulted in the issue being delayed by a few days.

ELECTIONS are a time when politicians are most accessible to the press. Unfortunately, this is not the case with the prime minister whose praetorian guard has kept the independent media removed from his campaign trail. Requests to travel with him, to judge first-hand the appeal of a man who puts himself up to lead the country once again, have been turned down. There has been a tendency among those who rule to underestimate the power of the printed word. The cynicism which exists in urban India about the press has not yet percolated down to the masses, who illiterate though they may be, are not ignorant. There is always someone to tell them what's said in the papers. Ask any villager how he knows about corruption and there is a stock answer: it was printed in the papers. This election will decide many important issues and one among them will be whether the pen is mightier than Doordarshan, that abomination of disinformation, which has been inflicted on the Indian people.

CONTENTS

ELECTION SPECIAL

Opinion Poll 2
Election Notes 6
Moment of Truth 22
Rajiv's Campaign Trail 26
V.P. Singh's Campaign Trail 32
The States 40
Mediawatch 152
The Manifestos 157
Election Media 161
Election Graffiti 165
Star Campaigners 166
Election Debuts 170
Election Caravans 178
Families in Elections 182
Criminals in Elections 195
Election Eye-catchers 200

Cover photographs by RAGHU RAI

Copyright 1987 Living Media India Ltd. All rights reserved throughout the world. Reproduction in any manner is prohibited. Published by Aroon Purie for Living Media India Ltd. New Delhi and printed at Thomson Press India Ltd, Faridabad Haryana.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

A Vote for Change

The results of the poll indicate that the Congress(I) will fall well below the required majority, and there is a clear possibility of a hung Parliament.

CONGRESS(I) STRENGTH IN LOK SABHA

	126 Seats THE NORTH	132 Seats THE SOUTH	128 Seats THE EAST	143 Seats THE WEST	Total Congress(I) Seats	Total Lok Sabha Seats	% of Seats
1989 FORECAST	28	80	24	63	195	529*	36.9
1984	114	71	96	134	415	542	76.6
1980	80	95	60	118	353	527	66.98
1977	3	94	23	34	154	542	28.41

*Excluding Assam (14 seats) where elections are not being held.

Tables by RAJEEV MADAN

INDIA TODAY commissioned MARG (Marketing and Research Group) to conduct a poll in 37 Lok Sabha constituencies. The constituencies were selected by well-known psephologist Prannoy Roy to ensure that they accurately reflect the national mood in the country's various swing zones. This was done by taking into account the electoral swings in the past.

More than 200 MARG interviewers covered 250 locations and interviewed 10,710 voters between November 12 and 16. Of these, 8,224 (77 per cent) were rural voters. The respondents were asked which party they would vote for if an election were held tomorrow. They were given ballot papers which listed the names of the major parties contesting in that particular constituency. The party symbols were given alongside. The electors were asked to mark their choice and place the ballot paper in a portable ballot box (7.2 per cent of the respondents refused to mark the ballot paper, while 5.4 per cent indicated no preference). This exercise was managed by Jyoti Singh and Sumita Venkatraman of MARG.

The results of the MARG poll were fed into a computer by Prannoy Roy. The computer calculated the current swing in each of the 37 constituencies. These swings were then projected onto each constituency in the respective swing zones to calculate the number of seats likely to be won by the ruling party. In this exercise, research assistance was provided by Namrata Harish.

The poll indicated a considerable amount of 'churn' still in existence in various states which may alter the final outcome. The poll findings have been reported by Prannoy Roy and MARG.

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

IF the general elections had been held between November 12 and 16, when the opinion poll was conducted, the strength of the Congress(I) in the Lok Sabha would have been slashed by more than half—from 415 seats to about 195—well below the 265 needed for a majority. The poll was a snapshot taken at a time of great flux in voting intentions. With around 200 seats, the Congress(I) would remain the largest single party but the combined tally of the National Front could be about the same. Based on these figures, a hung Parliament seems to be an inevitable outcome with the next government needing the support of either the BJP or the CPI-M (or both) to form a government. There is, of course, another possible scenario—the engineering of large-scale defections.

A small percentage swing in votes before polling day will be crucial. Even a one per cent swing can affect 15 to 20 seats.

Out of the ruling party's loss of 220 seats in the INDIA TODAY-MARG poll, the loss of as many as 160 seats would be because of the 8 to 9 per cent swing away from the ruling party. But the other 60-odd seats have been garnered as a 'bonus' by the Opposition as the result

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

KEY FACTORS AFFECTING THE ELECTION

FOR CONGRESS(I) — FOR OPPOSITION

CORRUPTION: This has always been an issue, but so far has not affected voting decisions. Now, for the first time, it is a voting issue as V.P. Singh has succeeded in projecting one side as more capable of controlling corruption.

OPPOSITION UNITY: The biggest factor that may still result in a late swing against the Opposition come polling day is that around two-thirds of the electorate is strongly convinced that if the Opposition does form a government, it would collapse sooner or later.

PANCHAYATI RAJ: The Panchayati Raj issue is a winner for the Congress-I (over 65 per cent are in favour of the bill).

However, a fair proportion of the rural voters are still unaware of the scheme and because of the limited time available, the Congress(I) has been unable to exploit it to the full.

PRICES: The recent increase in prices of essential commodities has contributed to the overall negative mood in the electorate towards the Congress(I). However, the Opposition has not been able to convince the voter that it can handle the problem any better than the ruling party.

COMMUNALISM: It is being most vigorously—though at times surreptitiously—exploited by all parties. This is the issue that is causing the greatest 'churn' and could easily result in a last-minute change in voter preference.

CONG(I): STRENGTHS & WEAKNESSES

(Support from different sections above & below the average Cong(I) vote)

The Congress(I) would lose 160 seats due to the 8 to 9 per cent swing away from it; the Opposition would garner another 60 for being united.

representing a united front (the overall index of opposition unity (IOU) is likely to be around 85 per cent versus 74 per cent in 1984 and the all-time high of 90 per cent in 1971. The benefits of unity are most prominent in the north—where disunity was the greatest in 1984. In the south, where the Opposition was already united in 1984, it is unlikely to make gains on this account. If anything, there is less opposition unity in the south this time with many multi-cornered fights in Karnataka.

An analysis of the last five general elections shows that the Congress has benefited greatly from opposition disunity. Had the Opposition been united to the same level as in 1977 (an IOU level of 70), the Congress would have lost the 1977 and the 1980 general elections. In 1977, for instance, the Congress would have won just 118 seats if the Opposition had been united—as opposed to the 283 it won. Had the Opposition been united the Congress would have been out of power for 11 out of the last 22 years.

The sharp slump in the Congress(I)'s popularity is not spread evenly. It seems to be heading for substantial gains in Andhra Pradesh and is unlikely to lose many seats elsewhere in the south.

But it is in the 'Hindi belt', which the Congress(I) swept in 1984, that it is likely to face major reverses. In Rajasthan and Madhya Pradesh the prospects for the Congress(I) are bleak. It is from these states that the BJP is likely to be resurrected in the next Lok Sabha.

In Bihar and Uttar Pradesh too, there is likely to be a sharp drop in support for the Congress(I). The increase in the strength of the Opposition in the Hindi belt can perhaps be explained by the emergence—for the first time since Independence—of an Opposition leader from the northern belt (V.P. Singh) who is seen as an alternative prime minister.

The key issue on which the Congress(I) has lost support is corruption. While corruption has always been an important factor in the voters' mind, it has so far not been an issue affecting their voting behaviour; all parties have been regarded as equally corrupt. This time, the voter clearly sees one side—and particularly one leader, V.P. Singh—as more capable of controlling corruption.

As for the Opposition, the one factor that will haunt their prospects right up to polling day is the widespread belief that if they were to form a government, it would eventually collapse. This belief could result in floating or undecided voters veering to the Congress(I) on election day. Significantly, if even 1 per cent of the votes switch before polling day, about 15 to 20 seats are likely to change hands. A change in voting preferences between this poll and election day, as well as inherent sampling errors, could quite easily be around 3 per cent. This would alter the result by 45 to 60 seats in either direction and could even produce a majority government.

Surprisingly, and despite the November 9 developments in Ayodhya, a much greater proportion of Muslims (10.4 per cent more than the average Congress(I) vote) support the ruling party. This is also true of the Congress(I) vote bank among the Scheduled Tribes and Scheduled Castes, among whom support for the Congress(I) is 9 per cent above the average. However, the newly enfranchised voters (18-21 year-olds) have not gravitated to the Congress(I) in such large numbers. In this group, the BJP and the Janata Dal have a clear advantage (3.5 per cent above their average support). In addition, this time the Congress(I) has lost its traditional advantage among women. The support for the Opposition is 2 per cent higher in the urban areas than in the rural areas.

The Indian electorate is voting for change. The poll suggests that over 60 per cent of the electorate wants a change. Rajiv has obviously miscalculated in renominating 80 per cent of sitting MPs, signalling continuity when the mood is for change. The 8 to 9 per cent of the voters who have moved away from the ruling party are evidently switching from party to party in search of an effective, and acceptable, alternative. With each election, the increasing volatility of the Indian voter is a warning to any new government—that it will be assessed more critically than ever before.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

If this poll is a good indicator of the final outcome, it is not clear who will form the next government. Decisive swings usually produce decisive results and clear majorities. This time, however, it is likely to produce weeks of political and constitutional uncertainty.

"According to the Constitution, a prime minister has to command the support of the Lok Sabha and not that of the party."
—President R. Venkataraman to INDIA TODAY after his selection as the presidential candidate in July 1987.

THE PRESIDENT

Crucial Role

FOR 75-year-old Ramaswamy Venkataraman the hour of reckoning may well be at hand. This fortnight, his actions are likely to decide the future course of Indian politics. As the prospects of a hung Parliament (where no party or group has a clear majority) increased last fortnight, all eyes were on Rashtrapati Bhawan. The last time it had been in such limelight was in July 1979 after President Sanjeeva Reddy's controversial decision to appoint Charan Singh prime minister. Charan Singh eventually became the first prime minister to quit office without facing Parliament even once.

Once again much will rest on the discretion of the President. This is because the Constitution is unclear about the powers of the country's first citizen. All it says is that the President will invite the leader who commands majority support in the Lok Sabha to form the Government.

This question has assumed significance because for the first time the alternative to the Congress(I) is not any single party, as for example in 1977, but the five-party National Front comprising the Janata Dal, Telugu Desam, DMK, AGP, and the Congress(S). In case both the Congress(I) and the National Front fail to get a majority, the President will be caught in a bind. This looks likely for the National Front is contesting only 347 seats, with the Janata Dal contesting 238. Those who could tilt the scales in a close result are the BJP (contesting 195) and the CPI-M (contesting 66). Large-scale defections are unlikely because of the anti-defection law, which prohibits party-hopping unless one-third of the party, or more, switches.

The scenarios that could emerge:

Scenario One: The National Front emerges as the single largest group and the Janata Dal gets more seats than the Congress(I). Then the President has no choice but to call the leader of the National Front or the Janata Dal to form the Government.

Scenario Two: The Congress(I) does not get absolute majority, but emerges as the single largest party, geting more seats than the Janata Dal but less than the National Front. This can pose a tricky problem as there are conflicting precedents. The President can still invite the leader of the Congress(I) to form the Government. It was done by Sanjeeva Reddy in 1979 when he called Y.B. Chavan, leader of the second largest party, after the collapse of the Janata Party majority. In the case of Haryana, Governor G.D. Tapase chose to invite Bhajan Lal, leader of the Congress(I) Legislature Party, to form the Government because the Congress(I) won 36 seats in the house of 90 whereas the Lok Dal had 31. He ignored the claim of the Lok Dal-BJP front, which had not only fought the election together but also won one seat more than the Congress(I). Tapase refused to recognise the Lok Dal-BJP combine as one political group. But political fronts have been recognised as one group too. For example, in Karnataka in the 1983 assembly elections, the Congress(I) won 81 seats emerging as the single largest party. But it was the Janata Party-Kranti Ranga group, with 95 of the 224 seats, which was invited to form the Government. The Janata Party's own tally was only 63.

Scenario Three: If very few seats separate the Front and the Congress(I)—say, National Front 220 and Congress(I) 210—then the President's discretion will again come into play. He will have to decide which party is in a position to provide a stable government. It is likely he may receive representations from the BJP (say with 50 seats) that it would support the Janata Dal taking the Front's total to 270, and from the CPI(M) and others (with 60 members or so) that they would support the Congress(I). It was such a situation, presenting several options, that faced Sanjeeva Reddy in 1979, with the Congress party first supporting Charan Singh, then withdrawing the support, and later some MPs pledging support to Jagjivan Ram.

So Venkataraman has his work cut out for him. To his credit, so far no controversy has marred his track record. He is a stickler for rules and keeps his options close to his chest. And surely, he has been thinking about all these likely scenarios. Some of them came up for discussion during his recent meeting with BJP President L.K. Advani. The BJP chief did some groundwork for a possible opposition coalition by quoting to the President the examples of the front governments in West Bengal and Kerala. Earlier Union ministers P. Chidambaram and P. Shiv Shanker had also met the President and sought to extract his opinion on how he would deal with a situation where no party has a majority. So far the President has been giving each group a patient hearing. But soon he may be called upon to decide who rules India and when he does that he will have the burden not just of being fair but also of being seen to be fair.

—PRABHU CHAWLA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

POLITICAL VACUUM

Political parties are becoming increasingly irrelevant ("The Promise That Failed", November 15). Parties are supposed to be a collection of individuals with a common ideology and conviction. But our political parties have become platforms for petty-minded people working for personal gain. What India needs today is a leader with the vision and charisma of Nehru and the conviction and dedication of the Mahatma.

Bangalore — BALACHANDRA DESHPANDE

FINE ANALYSIS

■ The analysis of the poll prospects and the issues involved in the coming general elections was superb ("Clear choices", November 15). Of particular importance was the observation: "No matter what the campaign rhetoric and ad campaigns, unless they match reality on the ground, the Indian voter has repeatedly cast his lot against corruption, against the mismanagement of his mandate, for stability, and does not hesitate to take a chance on a new face." It is clear that the next elections will determine the future of the country.

Delhi — V. SAGAR

■ In the last five years, the nation has witnessed the reduction of Parliament to a state that reminds one of the famous lines from Julius Caesar: "O, what a fall was there my countrymen; then I, and you and all of us fell down." The voters have to ensure that such a situation does not arise again.

Sonepat — K. GOPAKUMAR MENON

■ Communal elements are on the rampage and caste and religion will certainly play a vital role in these elections, thereby weakening the secular tenets of our country further.

Delhi — PUNAM RIJHWANI

COMMUNAL CAULDRON

It is evident from your report on communalism ("Dangerous Dimensions", October 31) that if the Centre does not stop backing the minorities, the country will become another Lebanon.

Bhopal — RAJEEV AGARKAR

■ On the one hand, the Indian Constitution guarantees secularism. On the other, the Government gives privileges to certain groups on the basis of religion or caste. I fail to see the logic in it.

Hazaribag — AJAY KUMAR UPADHYAY

■ The term secularism, like socialism, has lost its original meaning in our country because of the doublespeak our politicians indulge in.

Kodaikanal — M.K. SUBRAMANIAM

■ It is unfortunate that in a communally-sensitive country such as ours, trouble-makers have created an atmosphere of hatred and rivalry over the Ram Janmabhoomi-Babri Masjid issue. It is time fundamentalist forces were thwarted. Peace and goodwill must reign supreme.

Meerut — SHASHANK SHEKHAR

■ Though your article attacked the BJP-RSS-VHP for their communal postures, Nayab Imam, Syed Shahabuddin, Haji Mastan and Sulaiman Sait have escaped the sharp edge of your sword. And you have distorted the issue by making communal violence out to be a 'majority' phenomenon.

New Delhi — APOORV PANDEY

■ It seems to have become the fashion to club anything connected with Hindu causes as communal and to pamper the minorities even when they indulge in anti-national activities.

Srirangam — L. NARASIMHAMURTHY

■ The analysis of the escalating communal violence came at the appropriate moment. It is time political parties realised the grave consequences of appeasing communities with the aim of getting votes. They should be aware of the repercussions of their attitude. Only then can they prevent history from repeating itself.

Chandigarh — DEEPIKA GURDEV

APOSTLE OF PEACE

By selecting the Dalai Lama for this year's Nobel Peace Prize ("Politics of Peace", October 31), the Nobel committee has honoured him as an embodiment of dedication and tolerance. With the Dalai Lama himself having been forced to live in exile in India, the task of keeping the focus on the suffering of six million Tibetans has been daunting. But with quiet dignity and perseverance, he has enlisted world sympathy and support.

Kurnool — P. SIVA RAM PRASAD

■ The Dalai Lama has been working tirelessly for a peaceful solution of Tibet. The award has aroused fresh hopes for him and his people.

Trivandrum — A. JACOB SAHAYAM

■ The Dalai Lama's speeches and writings show his deep concern for bringing about and consolidating world peace and for shaping "the whole world into one family, a family which doesn't have internal frictions".

Faridabad — B.N. KOHLI

■ The Dalai Lama has followed the path of ahimsa shown by Buddha and Gandhiji.

Bangalore — C.R. NAIDU

TOTAL PACKAGE

In your report ("New Look", October 15), it has been mentioned that Karishma Advertising is an agency that deals in recruitment ads. Karishma Advertising creates and executes advertising and promotion plans on a national scale for major advertisers. Recruitment advertisements happen to be a very small part of the total package we offer our clients.

Bombay — NOSHIR DESAI
general manager, Karishma Advertising Ltd.

DAMAGING DISCLOSURES

Now that N. Ram has had a showdown with G. Kasturi, ("Controversy and Cover-up", October 31), Ram should investigate who exerted pressure on the editor to stop publication of the remaining part of the Bofors report in The Hindu, which later appeared in certain dailies.

Bangalore — K.A. KALPANA

■ Continuing exposes by Ram on the Bofors Howitzer deal have shown his dedication to his profession.

London — S. NADARAJAH

■ The controversy about the Howitzer deal has cast serious aspersions on the Rajiv Government. With elections round the corner, this is going to be used extensively by the Opposition during its campaign.

Rohtak — RAKESH BHARADWAJ

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

DELAY DRAMA

☐ AFTER the well-publicised drama over V.P. Singh's delayed flight, Indian Airlines passengers are a jittery lot these days. Especially when they spot an opposition leader waiting to catch the same flight. So, it was hardly surprising that passengers at the Delhi airport, who had already boarded a Bombay-bound flight, suspected that the presence of BJP President L.K. Advani had something to do with the announcement that clearance for take-off had not been given.

When the delay stretched to over an hour, the agitated passengers approached Advani and requested him to personally ask the pilot what the problem was. An amused Advani reached the cockpit and was told that the delay was not because of him, but because of Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi. Rajiv was scheduled to take off on an election tour, and all flights had been put on hold till he left. That enraged the passengers further. It is fortunate that the former Indian Airlines pilot wasn't around to hear the reactions when the plane finally took off; a cheer broke out and a group of them shouted in chorus: "The PM is finally off to Italy."

HIGH-VOLTAGE RHETORIC

☐ IN the heat of electioneering, Haryana's villagers seem to have little use for logic, which allows Devi Lal to get away with the most absurd of statements.

At one meeting in rural Haryana, the chief minister was waxing eloquent on a locally emotive issue—supply of water for irrigation to farmers. Striking a dramatic pose, he declared with a straight face: "This government at the Centre is so corrupt that even the water which you get in your fields, is supplied after electricity has been taken out of it." He added: "When I acquire power at the Centre, I will make sure that you get 'electrified' water supply. And then see, the crop yield will double." The grizzled farmers nodded wisely.

POLL TALK

Plaque on the US President's desk:
The buck stops here.
Plaque on Rajiv Gandhi's desk:
The bucks stop here.

Joke doing the rounds in Bangalore

- The situation is so negative yaar. Almost everything in the country is negative yaar.

Congress(I)'s publicity convener, VISHWAJIT PRITHVIJIT SINGH, on why his party's election propaganda is so negative

- I'm fighting against feudal lordship in Amethi and slum leadership in Delhi.

KANSHI RAM, leader of the Bahujan Samaj Party

- It is a black zero with a spot in the centre.

RAJIV GANDHI on the Janata Dal election symbol

- We have noted that he, Rajmohan Gandhi, is contesting from Amethi.

ANAND SHARMA, official spokesman of the Congress(I), at a briefing

A HILARIOUS COINCIDENCE

☐ THE daily press briefings by the ruling party's official spokesman, Anand Sharma, are the hottest act in town. However, the fact that Sharma is new to the role is only too apparent. The result: Sharma's embarrassment over having to amend his statements on the Bofors revelations is often compounded by other faux pas, often inadvertent but telling enough.

One example: after being quizzed by journalists over constituency number 420 in the party list, a puzzled Sharma started going through the list. Even he found it difficult to suppress a grin when he came to the name of the candidate—constituency number 420 is the constituency of Z.R. Ansari, Union minister for environment, who is currently in the news for allegedly molesting a girl in his office. The coincidence was striking—and all Sharma could manage was a weak defence: "Don't read too much into coincidences."

GROUNDED AMBITIONS

☐ ELECTION Commission rules can be a pain. Two political stalwarts who will testify to that are Home Minister Buta Singh and Rajasthan Chief Minister Shiv Charan Mathur. Originally, Vayudoot was meant to add Sirohi to its map—to provide convenient access to two key constituencies: Singh's Jalore and Mathur's Bhilwara.

The airstrip was hurriedly readied for inauguration in December. But Rajiv's call for an early poll nipped the flight plan in the bud. Election Commission rules are that no politician can inaugurate airports once elections are announced. Mathur and Singh now have to travel at least 200 km along dusty tracks to reach their constituencies.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Sarayu Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Unbridled aggression...

Exquisite grace...

Delicate touch...

Sheer power...

The speed of skiing...

The Swedish revolution...

The African antelopes...

WILLS BOOK OF EXCELLENCE

SPORTS PHOTOGRAPHY 1

Magic lenses recapture the milestones and legends of sport

Relive sports' greatest moments. Captured by the world's top photographers. Pictorial gems from Patrick Eagar, Sports Illustrated and others. Over 200 captivating photographs in colour and black & white. Any sports collection is incomplete without it.

"...an excellent concept in sports literature."

— Carl Lewis

Written by Ashok Kamath. Published by Orient Longman. Price Rs 150. Available at all leading book stores.

WILLS

Promoting excellence in sport

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

When IFFCO needed...

... to set up a massive, Rs. 665 crore-gas based fertilizer plant...

... to produce 1350 MTD of Ammonia & 1220 MTD of Urea, using Snamprogetti & Halder Topsoe technology...

... they required a state-of-the-art Distributed Process Control system, that had proven itself in Indian conditions...

... that could optimize plant efficiency, minimize energy consumption and have an on-line training simulator...

... to achieve over 100% capacity utilization in the very first year of operation...

...all to save over 100 million need for fert

TAYLOR·UNEQUALLED EXPERIENCE

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

When IFFCO required process control for one of India's largest fertilizer plants, they banked on the resources of Taylor India, for two reasons—proven expertise and unequalled experience.

Expertise—to successfully adapt the latest international technology, to the most trying Indian conditions. Using technology that stems out of its association with Combustion Engineering, USA (one of the world leaders in Process Control.)

And Experience—of 25 successful years in the Indian Process Control industry, right from its inception. Satisfying every need. Every demand. Which is why, Taylor offers the most comprehensive range of 4,500 products in Pneumatic, Analog, Electronic and Digital Microprocessor based systems.

Thus, whatever your process control need, Taylor India can help design it, equip it, build it, operate it and maintain it at peak efficiency.

Perhaps that's why, Taylor's clients include KRIBHCO, SPIC, IndoGulf Fertilizers, GSFC, ICI, GNFC, Nagarjuna Fertilizers and of course IFFCO! In fact over the past 25 years nearly all fertilizer companies in the country have featured in Taylor's exhaustive client list. Maybe that's why, when it comes to process control, the Indian industry banks on the expertise and experience of only one name...Taylor.

...all to satisfy over 100 million farmers' need for fertilizers...

...Only Taylor had 25 years of trusted expertise to take on the task.

PROCESS CONTROL

TAYLOR INDIA

WE MAKE INDUSTRY HAPPEN

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Living with a velvet touch

Luxurious living that's as smooth as velvet.
Rooms lined with velvet. Lined with the luxury of Velvet Touch, the unique wall finish that glows with the lustre and delicate sheen of the perfect pearl. In 23 elegant shades plus 6 soft whites with just a hint of colour to give you the perfect finishing touch that your lifestyle demands. The Velvet Touch!

ICI Dulux

Velvet Touch

For those who have everything, something more.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

POLL WOES

☐ BEHIND every successful man there is a woman. Or so it is said. But Narayan Choubey, CPI leader from West Bengal, would probably beg to disagree. Choubey has retained the Midnapore seat since 1980 but was denied the ticket this time because his wife Gauri had defected to the Congress(I) and had been given a ticket. Politically, he has to campaign against his wife. But her electoral loss will add to his woes; Gauri quit her government job for politics, depriving the five-member family of their regular income.

RESTRAINED ADVERTISING

☐ IN contrast to the secrecy that had shrouded the Congress(I)'s rather sensational advertising campaign, the National Front went about its media publicity without too much fuss and fanfare.

Last fortnight, at its New Delhi headquarters, as visitors, including journalists, kept dropping in unchecked, members of the front's co-ordinating committee were being shown a series of artworks by a local advertising agency.

To portray rising violence, the agency had a poster splattered with blood, with places like Indore, Badaun and Bhagalpur marked on it. The Telugu Desam's P. Upendra, a committee member, noticing that Sri Lanka was mentioned, told the agency executives: "Knock that out. We have enough internal violence. Why do you want to add foreign violence too?" The members also objected to using the word loot-maar as the headline of the main poster. Their suggestion: make it more subtle. The result: the National Front's advertising campaign is a portrait of restraint compared to the ruling party's.

ROYAL REBUFF

☐ THE higher you are, the harder the fall. That was the rude message awaiting Mahmood Pardiwala when he lumbered up to file his nomination papers in Surat. Pardiwala had planned to arrive at the nomination centre in regal style, seated on a gaily-caparisoned elephant and accompanied by cheering supporters. But when the royal procession reached the collector's office, Pardiwala faced an elephantine problem; his name didn't figure on the voters' list. Tusk, tusk.

POLL TALK

- What's common to the symbols of the Congress(I) and Janata Dal? Both need to be greased to get them working.

Election joke in Bombay

- "Tum meri Dilli ki seeti baja do, main yahan se Mathura ki seeti bajwa doonga" (If you give me a green signal to Parliament, I will give a green signal to a train to Mathura).

RAJESH PILOT, surface transport minister, to the electorate of Bharatpur

- Ek jalebi, do samosa; Jakhar tera kya bharosa.

Opposition slogan in Sikar

LACK OF RESOURCES

☐ SWITCHING political horses for electoral gain is all very well. But only if one has mastered the art. Former Andhra Pradesh Assembly Speaker G. Narayan Rao, who quit the Telugu Desam last month, obviously hasn't.

When he sought a Congress(I) ticket to fight from his electoral citadel—the Maharajgunj constituency—his chief lobbyist, Industry Minister J. Vengal Rao, came to his aid. Narayan Rao was awarded the ticket. But that's when his troubles began. As Speaker of the Andhra Pradesh Assembly, he had been responsible for slinging a number of Pradesh Youth Congress(I) members in jail when they had stormed the Assembly in protest against anti-Rajiv remarks.

High command or no high command, the youth leaders were in no mood to forgive or forget. Narayan Rao returned to Hyderabad with the party ticket in his pocket only to face a hunger strike by crowds of Youth Congress workers demanding the withdrawal of his nomination.

To add to his woes, state Youth Congress(I) President P. Sudhir Kumar also has a powerful lobbyist at the Centre—his father, Human Resource Minister P. Shiv Shanker. Narayan Rao may have set the record for the shortest nomination period; his ticket was withdrawn and given to a little known city Corporator, D. Mukesh, instead. Moral of the story: human resources count for more than industry.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

HOW TO KEEP SMILING WITH YOUR FEET UP.

Now that's a situation none of us would like to get into. But then, one can never tell, can one? A minor accident in a careless moment. Or a major ailment one never dreamt of.

These are contingencies you can easily prepare for. With Mediclaim from New India. A Hospitalisation and Domiciliary Hospitalisation Benefit Policy that offers you and your family a range of medical benefits. Including cover for hospitalisation at home, under special circumstances. For a premium as low as Rs.200 per annum (at the minimum). It also offers you a family discount and a tax rebate.

Show how much you love and care for your family. Get New India's Mediclaim Policy. It offers you so much for so little!

Premium per annum	Hospitalisation	Domiciliary Hospitalisation
Rs	Rs	Rs
200	10,500	3,100
250	17,600	—
350	25,500	—
600*	37,750	5,250
840*	52,750	7,400
1300*	82,500	11,500

Age limit: 5-70 years. * Personal Accident cover available on payment of additional premium.

NEW INDIA ASSURANCE
A subsidiary of the General Insurance Corpn. of India
1919 1989
BORN TO LEAD

MEDICLAIM

CONTOUR ADS-NIA-160D/89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Steel. The sinew of India's future. The muscle force which propels India ahead. The power behind a number of industries.

Helping keep the vital communication link in India's leading steel plants is Tata Telecom.

The Rourkela Steel Plant in Orissa. The Bhilai Steel Plant in Madhya Pradesh. The Durgapur Steel Plant in Bengal. Tata Steel Plant in Jamshedpur... Tata Telecom is at work in some of the country's biggest steel plants.

Deeply engaged in its role of providing vital communication support in day-to-day operations. Thereby boosting productivity.

This is not all.

Elsewhere, Tata Telecom is upgrading communication systems for core sectors like banking, hotels, railways, business and industry. Plus the all-important area of defence.

Indeed the commitment of Tata Telecom to the nation's communications needs is total. Reflected in the quality of products and the customer-support it offers:

Digital EPABXs manufactured with technical assistance from Oki of Japan, the world leaders in the fields of telecommunication and information processing.

Tata Telecom has its sights set on tomorrow. And is geared to harness the communication technologies of the future.

A future that's going to be exciting. Because Tata Telecom is committed to take you there.

Tata Telecom. A commitment to serve the India of tomorrow.

For more information on Tata Telecom Digital EPABX Systems, contact:

A-78/4/6, Gandhinagar Electronics Estate,
Gandhinagar 382 015.
Tel: 21773, 21774. Tlx: 0120-3231 TTLG-IN.

DIGITAL EPABX SYSTEMS
FROM

TATA
TELECOM

TECHNOLOGY FOR THE FUTURE WORLD

Karishma/TT/84/2418

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

RED ART

☐ IF the voting age had been lowered to include schoolchildren, the CPI(M) would almost certainly have lost the elections in Calcutta. For several months, the city has been enthusiastically involved in a 'Cleaner Calcutta' campaign. The most enthusiastic have been schoolchildren. The students of some public schools sacrificed their Puja holidays to painstakingly draw artistic murals on the boundary walls of their schools. But by the time classes reopened, they were in for a rude shock; elections had been announced and CPI(M) workers had plastered the walls with election graffiti. For the disgusted students, it has been an educational experience—in the art of politics.

CLEAN KARANTH

☐ A new chapter was added to electoral history by Dhareshwar, an independent candidate for the Karwar Lok Sabha constituency in Karnataka. He asked the returning officer to disqualify another independent candidate, Kannada litterateur Dr Shivarama Karanth. Reason: Karanth has penned an autobiography titled The Ten Faces of a Mad Mind. Dhareshwar argued that this proved the author was a self-confessed lunatic. His plea was dismissed as frivolous.

POLL TALK

● If a movie were made on Rajiv, what would it be titled?
Gone with the Win. Joke in Delhi Press Club

● Devi Lal jab lift seh chhat par aata hai toh aisa lagta hai ki apne kabar seh nikal kar phir kabar mein ja raha hoh (When Devi Lal emerges on his lift, it seems he is as if emerging from his grave and returning to it). BHAJAN LAL

● They now talk of Ram Rajya after running Dhan Rajya (rule of money) for five years.
V.P. SINGH in election speech

● I have no personal ill-will towards Rajiv Gandhi, only a great objection to his deeds.
RAJMOHAN GANDHI

● Ek do teen, char panch che saat aath
nau das gyara, bara tera, too hai mere pyare vatan ki bahaar, aa jaa Congress(I) sarkar.
Congress(I) campaign song set to the tune of Ek Do Teen

● Earlier it was the great Mahatma Gandhi and now there is Rajiv Gandhi. Sardar Patel has been replaced by Sardar Buta. Earlier there was Maulana Azad and now they have Ghulam Nabi Azad. Lala Lajpat Rai, poor chap, has been replaced by Lala Kalpnath Rai. DEVI LAL

● I am the wheel of time, all consuming time, out to destroy the Congress(I) in Orissa. The all powerful kaal chakra will kill the corrupt Congress(I) Government. BIJU PATNAIK

● Lok-shakti ki yahi pukar, Rajiv Gandhi phir ek baar. Congress(I) slogan

GIANT JELLY

☐ PROSPECTIVE giant-killers can be reduced to nervous wrecks when confronted with the giant in question. One example: Sreepathi Rajeswar, Telugu Desam candidate in Sanathnagar, Hyderabad. Rajeswar was a minister in the state Government. Yet, while filling his nomination form, he was reduced to quivering jelly, making mistakes even a political tyro would have avoided. The reason: right behind him was his electoral rival, APCC(I) President Dr M. Chenna Reddy. Admitted Rajeswar somewhat sheepishly: "Doctor saheb's presence made me feel nervous."

A STAR TURN

☐ AS film plots go, this one must rank as a classic. The Gujarat film industry is in financial doldrums. Enter film actress Snehlata. She announces that she has filed her papers as an independent from Saurashtra's Surendranagar and Bhavnagar constituencies.

Congress(I) leaders panic because Snehlata is almost a goddess in rural Saurashtra. They plead with her to withdraw. Snehlata obliges on one condition: a commitment to tackle the problems of the Gujarati film industry. That is called star presence-of-mind.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

POWER

Generating Power to serve collieries and major industries in the West Bengal coal belt

This is Yule !

And So is this !

DISHERGARH POWER SUPPLY CO. LTD. — an associate of the Yule Group. Supplying power to the Asansol-Raniganj belt, for over 76 years. Operating in an area of 618 sq.kms. With an excellent track record of maintaining a consistently high plant load factor and prompt response to consumer needs.

A new era of licensee consumer tie-ups has been pioneered with Eastern Coalfields Limited, to provide additional power to the coal sectors.

All this and more makes Yule a multidimensional 125 year old national enterprise. Geared to meet the changing scenario of the Indian Industry.

Many Technologies – One Name

ELECTRICAL

DIGITALS

LUBRICANTS

BELTING

ENGINEERING

TEA

125 YEARS
Y
YULE

ANDREW YULE & CO., LTD.
(A GOVT. OF INDIA ENTERPRISE)
'Yule House'
8, Clive Row, Calcutta - 700 001

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Is your her an Edmund Hillary, a Mithu
a Jane Fond

HERO HAWK

The Racer's Edge!

If you have the drive and fire to win, here's the fastest racer for you. With the speed and swiftness of a Hawk. The power of imported falcon gears — in single, 5 or 10 speeds.

And the body of a top-class athlete for sure victory!

HERO Ranger

The lure of adventure!

If you dare to go where no other bike has been before, India's only all-terrain bike is for you. Equipped with balloon tyres, to smoothen the roughest terrain.

A straight handlebar for perfect balance against the fury of the wind. Die-cast brakes to stop you on the steepest incline...

Go discover places!

HERO HANSA

Pure cycling pleasure!

For fun lovers, there's Hero Hansa — light, breezy, romantic! A real good-looker!

This star performer offers you the sheer comfort of a deluxe saddle. A well-designed chain cover. And a choice of exciting colours.

Now go for the fun that cycling was meant to be.

HERO HANSA (Ladies' bike)

She's a winner!

She's fleet-footed and graceful. Lightweight yet sturdy. She's the winning champion who's India's pride.

The Hero Hansa offers you the sheer luxury of soft finger grips. A deluxe saddle.

And effortless performance, no matter what the track!

Hero gives you the largest range of cycles in India including the Hero Jet and Hero Royal — two of India's toughest bikes. In our range of bikes, each one is a hero. To find out more about our range, contact your nearest dealer for a free catalogue. And just in case you want to gift a friend a Hero, remember Hero offers cycles in special presentation packages.

Over 10,000 Hero Cycles are sold every day.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Carl Lewis, Chakraborty, a Shiny Abraham, a Superman?

ANSA (Ladies' bike)

ed and ight yet sturdy champion
e. offers you the t finger grips.

erformance, no
track!

HERO FITKIT

Oh what a body!

She's fit, active and shapely. And she'll show you the keep-fit way. With no diet restrictions. Because Hero Fitkit (Hero's exercise bike) offers you 10 muscles to work on, with a free-pedalling wheel. A height-adjustable seat and handle bar... for the Jane Fonda look!

Skipper

For super adventure!

Kids, get ready for the thrills. Here comes your super hero — the Hero Skipper.

It'll take you to the world of adventure and fun. And grow as you grow, with its height-adjustable seat. Now take home your own super hero.

Rough Rider

The tough one!

For tough kids there's a hero too. Strong, tough and hard to beat.

With the body of an ace-champion — an all-steel welded frame. Balloon tyres for a strong grip on every terrain. And the perfect handlebar for better balance.

No.1 World-wide
1 HERO BICYCLES

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

HTA 6503

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

WHEN YOU GROW UP WITH THE BEST YOU STAY WITH IT.

Lal Imli Dhariwal. Suitings that have remained classics through the years.

Yet, contemporary too! Keeping with to-day's fashion trends they offer you a range to choose from. Tweeds, Worsteds, Blazer Material, Woollies, Blankets, Cosy Shawls, Knitting Yarn. And more.

Lal Imli Dhariwal. Always in style. Never out of fashion.

THE ORIGINAL DRESS CIRCLE!

Lal Imli Dhariwal

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

NO, RAJIV

☐ RAJIV'S image as a vote-catcher has certainly taken a severe battering since the last elections. Nothing symbolises that more than the privately-expressed fear among the stronger ruling party candidates that Rajiv may visit their constituencies and thereby undermine their electoral chances.

Even in Delhi, the trend is discernible. The plethora of Congress(I) posters that have sprouted in the city, are mostly of individual candidates like Hari Krishan Lal Bhagat, Jagdish Tytler and even Mohini Giri. Posters of Rajiv are few and far between.

One prominent royal family candidate from Rajasthan summed up the general mood. "If Rajiv stays away from my constituency, I will win hands down. If he comes here, I could be in royal trouble," he quipped.

COLD DISCOMFORT

☐ THE polling station at Hikkim in Himachal Pradesh is unpopular among counting officers. It is situated at a staggering 15,000 ft above sea level, making it the highest polling station for the coming elections. Located in the middle of the world's highest cold desert in Spiti, the area has other problems of electoral accessibility. The Election Commission had to set up a polling station for the Kangra constituency in the village of Bir, 75 km away, after they discovered that the population migrates there during the winter months. Another problem polling station is Paddar, a remote village in the Dadra-Kawar area of Shimla. Polling officials have to trek 50-odd km to get there and also hire mules to transport election material.

But officials still rank Hikkim as the least popular. The reason: the arduous journey is hardly worth the effort. Hikkim's total population is just 52. And those eligible to vote, even less.

DOOR SE DARSHAN

☐ K.K. TEWARY, the irrepressible Union minister of state for information and broadcasting, has been given a resounding slap in the face—by the people of his Buxar constituency in Bihar. Tewary's bombast may be good material for the press, but it cuts little ice in Buxar.

Everywhere he goes, he faces abuse and derision. But his most humiliating moment was when his car was stopped by a roadside crowd. Tewary emerged smiling and with folded hands, but was completely taken aback when one member of the crowd stepped forward and gave him a hard slap. Taking the cue, the crowd advanced menacingly and Tewary was forced to beat a retreat. But he learnt one hard lesson: the man who slapped him had been thrown out of the minister's residence in Delhi, when he had gone to meet Tewary.

CAMPAIGN CALL

☐ IN numbers, they form an alluring enough vote bank. An estimated 1.8 million of them spread over 12 of the largest states in the country. They are, however, a different breed—prostitutes inhabiting the red light areas in the major cities. During election time, politicians will not touch them with the proverbial barge pole. But that hasn't deterred Khaitri Lal Bhola, president of the Akhil Bharatiya Uddhar Sabha. Bhola is currently spearheading a rather riotous campaign to have a representative of the country's call girl community in the Rajya Sabha. Prostitutes, he argues, have nobody other than the Government to turn to for aid. Hence the need for a representative in Parliament. In other words, a sitting member.

POLL TALK

- Nehru topi wala, chehra bhola bhala, naani yaad aane lagi hai, kursi ab jaane lagi hai. Janata Dal campaign cassette set to the tune of Oye, Oye

- People will no longer accept a prime minister who is preceded by battalions and followed by Italians.
  CHATURANAN MISHRA, CPI member of the Rajya Sabha, at Hazaribagh

- I am a one-man employment agency and I have given employment to thousands of people from my constituency.
  TAPESHWAR SINGH, Congress(I) candidate from Vikramganj

- They take the name of Ram and Sita, but they treated me worse than Draupadi; they tried to strip me of my standing as a social worker.
  MOHINI GIRI, Congress(I) candidate from New Delhi, on the BJP's criticism of her candidacy

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

COIN CONTEST

☐ THE trend of weighing candidates in coins seems to have become an established practice in the elections. And it is no small change either. Specially for candidates who are on the weighty side. While slim-look politicians like Jagdish Tytler lose out in the coin game, heavyweights like Devi Lal are having a field day, not just coining slogans but counting coins as well.

By his own admission, Devi Lal collects up to Rs 2 lakh daily at election meetings. A bulky 105 kg, Devi Lal's weight totals Rs 12,800 against coins. But for Devi Lal, the richest joke is that his arch rival Bhajan Lal, gets a mere Rs 6,800 for his 85 kilos. That's one-upmanship.

MAHABHARAT MESSAGE

☐ JOURNALISTS covering the 1989 elections have something to be thankful for; they can look forward to waking up late on Sunday mornings. The reason is of course the Mahabharat epic on Doordarshan. By now, politicians on the campaign trail have discovered, much to their dismay, that hardly anybody turns up for Sunday morning public meetings. Om Prakash Chautala learnt that lesson as well. The Haryana leader had to postpone his 9 a.m. meeting at Dighal by two hours.

But now, Chautala is using the reason to score electoral points. His Sunday morning campaign starts with the words: "I have deliberately come late because Mahabharat is the only worthwhile programme on Rajiv's Doordarshan." He then adds: "The serial begins with the chakra which is also our election symbol. In Mahabharat, Lord Krishna was born first and the Sudershan chakra given to him later. In today's Mahabharat, you all already have the chakra and Krishna will be born on November 22."

STRETCHER CASE

☐ TO call her the sitting Congress (I) MP from Raigarh is something of a misnomer. Pushpa Singh is currently campaigning from a stretcher. Singh, 40, fell sick after she had filed her nomination. But constituents are not surprised. Politics is the bug in her blood. A member of the Lok Sabha since 1980, she is not the type to take things lying down. Singh obviously wants to prove that when it comes to campaigning, she doesn't have a laid-back style.

POLL TALK

- Asli Gandhi aur naqli Gandhi (real Gandhi versus fake Gandhi).
  The Opposition's slogan in Amethi

- You have often sold your vote for money and liquor. If you can't resist, then accept their money and drink their liquor, but vote for the BSP.
  KANSHI RAM during Delhi campaign

- My wife is like Sita who has been abducted by the Ravanas of Congress(I).
  Sikkim Chief Minister NAR BAHADUR BHANDARI, whose wife is contesting on Congress(I) ticket

- I have been sent here by Rajiv Gandhi and you ought to support me. After all, even in Mahabharat, people obeyed Dhritarashtra though they felt he was wrong.
  M.J. AKBAR to ruling partymen in Kishanganj protesting against the imposition of an "outsider"

- Through the year you kill cobras. But on the day of Nagpanchami, you feed them with milk. Please don't repeat that on voting day.
  AJIT SINGH, Janata Dal leader

FOR THE RECORD

☐ THE relatively obscure Bhiwani constituency in Haryana could soon find itself a place in the Guiness Book of Records. Bhiwani will have the dubious honour of accounting for the largest sized ballot paper in this election. The reason: it has a record 122 candidates in the fray.

The Haryana election department had to ask other states for unused symbols they could borrow, since six candidates in Bhiwani did not have symbols.

Why Bhiwani should attract such a large crowd of electoral aspirants remains something of a mystery. The only two prominent candidates are the former Haryana chief minister, Bansi Lal, and the state Transport Minister, Dharamvir Singh.

The number of candidates has stretched electoral officials to the limit, not to mention the ballot paper itself. Consisting of eight panels, it will be approximately 34 inches long and 27 inches wide; the size of a newspaper broadsheet. Not surprisingly, extra large ballot boxes have been ordered.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Featured here is part of the Louis Philippe collection in blues.

Louis Philippe. The only shirt with international features:

Exclusive fabric specially designed for Louis Philippe.

Perfect matching of every part for flawless elegance.

Neat, twin-needled sideseams.

French seaming for underarm comfort.

A fused, two-piece collar for a perfect fit.

And buttoned-down sleeve guards to prevent the sleeves from gaping open.

CHAITRA-KMCL 31 B

Louis Philippe
SIGNED DESIGNERWEAR

ALSO FROM THE MAKERS OF LOUIS PHILIPPE, THE Elysée RANGE OF SHIRTS AND TROUSERS.

Louis Philippe and Elysée are designer labels of The British Van Heusen Co., U.K. brought to you by Madura Coats Ltd.

Louis Philippe Exclusive Showrooms at: BANGALORE: Davidoss Building, Commercial Street; BOMBAY: India House No.2, Kemps Corner; CALCUTTA: 3B, Upper Wood Street; COCHIN: North End, M.G. Road; NEW DELHI: D-41, South Extension I; MADRAS: Rahi Sevilar Hall, Opp. Anna Flyover.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Moment of

Rajiv is trying desperately to convey that only he and his party can save the nation from disintegrating.

IN the next fortnight the political die will be cast. Shaped and moulded by the hands of India's artisans, peasants, professionals, businessmen, traders, labourers. Collectively, these disparate and antithetical forces will erect, through the ballot box, an edifice that will hold the nation's destiny in its fold for the next five years. It will consist of a leader and thousands of people's representatives. Its shape, barely a fortnight since the general election campaign began, is already vaguely discernible.

With 10 days left for the elections, the Congress(I)—notwithstanding the fact that it has deep roots in India's history, a solid base of workers, capable leaders and enormous financial clout—is increasingly looking like a party without a leader and without a slogan. A party floundering, even if temporarily, while the Opposition, against which the most effective campaign was its disunity, gains perception as being more united than the Congress(I). All the key elements of the Congress(I) campaign—communal strategy, its manifesto, advertising and slogans, selection of candidates—seem to be boomeranging.

Never has Rajiv Gandhi looked so alone, so lonely. His very political survival at stake, he dashes about from state to state at a pace almost beyond human endurance in a desperate attempt to convey the message that only he and his party can save the nation from disintegrating and that the Opposition is a worthless agglomeration of opportunists responsible for voting down key welfare measures such as the Panchayati Raj bill.

But what is becoming evident, especially in the Hindi heartland which holds the key to the portals of power in New Delhi, is that he is just not getting through to the people. He is cold and unconvincing. He has lost his charismatic touch. His very voice, as it were. The Opposition has succeeded in carrying out a strategy it had publicly trumpeted months ago—making Rajiv Gandhi the prime target. And he has no credible rebuttal or answer to the scathing and convincingly-orchestrated attacks being mounted on him in every corner of the country.

In contrast, Janata Dal's Vishwanath Pratap Singh, has proven to be a formidable campaigner. His earthy metaphors, laced with caustic sarcasm, strike an intimate and emotional chord wherever he goes. Both campaigns are in a sense negative—pulling down Rajiv, or projecting the Opposition as scorpions and fighting roosters. But the attractiveness of V.P. Singh's campaign is his uncanny ability to convert national issues into local issues and ram them home into the hearts and minds of the poorest and the illiterate with an idiomatic sledgehammer. The prevailing wisdom among Rajiv's coterie was that issues like Bofors and the misuse of Doordarshan were of no interest to India's illiterate masses and were the concern only of urban intellectuals and professional Rajiv-baiters.

How totally untrue and misleading this line of reasoning is, is demonstrable in any rustic corner of this land. When V.P. Singh asks at any street corner in the heartlands of rural India, "Bofors ka dalaal kaun hai?" (Who is the tout of Bofors?), the immediate response is, "Rajiv Gandhi!". When he says that the excise that the villager pays on the price of a match-box to the central kitty, instead of being invested in development works to benefit the

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

st. Shaped and asants, profesectively, these ugh the ballot
n its fold for the thousands of night since the
ely discernible.
s(I)—notwith-
history, a solid ancial clout—er and without rily, while the npaign was its ted than the ) campaign—
and slogans,
ng.
nely. His very ate to state at a vate attempt to can save the is a worthless
ing down key ll.
in the Hindi power in New ople. He is cold ouch. His very carrying out a making Rajiv le rebuttal or trated attacks
untry.
p Singh, has
y metaphors, nd emotional
e in a sense Opposition as veness of V.P.
vert national he hearts and an idiomatic Rajiv's coterie rshan were of concern only ers.
easoning is, is en V.P. Singh India, "Bofors
mmediate re-xcise that the central kitty,
o benefit the

nt of Truth

common man, is canalised into Swiss bank accounts, the crowds respond thunderously. When an Arif Mohammad Khan or an Arun Nehru lampoons the misuse of Doordarshan and the Government's attempts to muzzle the press, the crowds jeer at "Rajivdarshan", and cry "shame". When opposition leaders talk about re-investing more money for rural development, denounce the price rise and excoriate Rajiv's panchayati raj schemes as gimmicks, the crowds give enthusiastic approbation.

And in this area the Opposition enjoys another clear advantage, because while no amount of mudslinging by the ruling party has stuck to V.P. Singh—and this is obvious because personal attacks on Singh and even references to the St. Kitt's bank account controversy are conspicuous by their absence from the Congress(I) campaign—waves of voters, even in the Hindi heartland have begun to identify Rajiv with corruption and cover-up. Singh has a cogent and carefully calibrated attack. Rajiv's tragedy is he has few answers. Screaming Panchayati Raj and comparing the Anandpur Sahib resolution—of which few voters have even heard in the Hindi heartland—to the Opposition's manifesto, appears to be a boring and abstruse exercise that confuses Rajiv's audiences.

Obviously, the Opposition has been able to use V.P. Singh better than the Congress(I) has been able to use Rajiv. The inevitable electoral arithmetic—which had always stared the Opposition in the face but which it was unable to exploit to its advantage in the past—is that even during massive Congress(I) victories more than 50 per cent of the vote had always been anti-Congress(I), but was scattered among various contending candidates. For example, during the 1984 landslide in which the Congress(I) secured 415 Lok Sabha seats, opposition candidates still received 51.5 per cent of the total votes cast. This time, the Opposition gained a head-start by being able to field common candidates for more than 400 seats.

IN addition, while the Congress(I) has but one star campaigner—Rajiv Gandhi, who is bearing the entire burden of the Opposition onslaught as he criss-crosses the country—the Opposition has a galaxy of senior leaders who are seasoned campaigners and can effectively canvass in their own states. So, while the south has been left to Ramakrishna Hegde, N.T. Rama Rao and Karunanidhi, the north has been split between Bhairon Singh Shekhawat, Devi Lal, Atal Bihari Vajpayee, Lal Krishan Advani and Chandra Shekhar. This has left V.P. Singh to carpet-bomb Uttar Pradesh and Bihar which send a total of 139 members—about 25 per cent of the Lok Sabha—to Parliament.

It is not as if the Opposition has suddenly turned into a paradigm of cohesiveness and democratic virtue. It still retains its contradictions and groupism. For example, while most of it is reconciled to V.P. Singh becoming prime minister in case of victory, a Janata Dal faction led by Chandra Shekhar and Om Prakash Chautala, Devi Lal's son, make it a point to publicly project Devi Lal as prime minister. And the possibility of a fratricidal struggle breaking out after the elections is cause for trepidation about the stability of a government led by the VP. Singh's strategy is completely single-minded: strike at Rajiv and thereby demolish the Congress(I).

Photographs by RAGHU RAI

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

National Front. And a question mark still remains on what will become of the National Front when pulled in different directions by the BJP and the left parties.

But for now, in the campaign's last lap, the Opposition is out-gunning and out-marshalling the Congress(I):

► On the communal issue the ruling party has floundered and could become the victim of an unprecedented Muslim and Hindu backlash. Having played the appeasement game through tactics such as the Muslim Women's Bill and the various Urdu bills, to the annoyance of hardcore Hindus, the ruling party tried out a Hindu card by tacitly supporting the Vishwa Hindu Parishad's (VHP) Ram Shila campaign in Ayodhya. In fact Rajiv began his election campaign from Faizabad next door, by promising to usher in Ram Rajya. This last minute strategy is unlikely to benefit the Congress(I) wholly because the BJP is already taking credit for making the Government buckle under its pressure. And whatever gains the Congress(I) may have made among Hindus could be offset by the widespread resentment that has been created among Muslims already smarting under communal violence in Uttar Pradesh and Bihar. Delhi's Imam Bukhari has now asked Muslims to back the Janata Dal.

V.P. Singh, significantly, began his campaign in Bhagalpur, the venue of massive anti-Muslim violence. The Opposition seems to have succeeded in manipulating both Hindus and Muslims. V.P. Singh, by opposing the VHP, ensured that Muslims don't shy off the Janata Dal, and the BJP, by supporting the VHP, kept its Hindu appeal intact.

► The once fractious opposition's gathering momentum was in evidence not only in the way it reached seat adjustments in 85 per cent of the Hindi heartland within 10 days of Rajiv's springing the early election surprise, but also in that it was able to release its manifesto one week before the ruling party could.

► For a party which has ruled the country for over 40 years releasing a Congress(I) manifesto should have been the least of its problems. After several days of delay and uncertainty during which not even the party spokesman had any credible explanation, the prime minister finally arrived at the AICC(I) office in Delhi outside which 200 journalists were waiting under a cramped shamiana. First he refused to answer questions on any other subject except the manifesto of which only a handful of copies were available. "But why can't we get more copies?" reporters asked. "I am sorry, you see, the photocopying machines broke down," was the reply.

This was symbolic of the mounting problems of the Congress(I) which had clearly become the victim of rampant mismanagement that would surely be carried over into the campaign. Until the manifesto was released to the press, even state chief ministers were not given copies of it. The effect of this was that while opposition leaders were hitting the hustings with force, state leaders were still in the dark about what message to project. Further confounding the confusion was the fact that no chief minister was given a clear-cut programme of the prime minister's visits to their state. Some of them are being woken up at midnight to be told that Rajiv would be visiting their area the next morning. The result has been a failure to mobilise workers and the prime minister is being greeted by some of the smallest crowds he has ever seen in his political lifetime. So poor has been the response that the party has had to cancel over 40 meetings in Uttar Pradesh, Bihar and Gujarat.

► While the Opposition's campaign is largely decentralised and frill-free, the Congress(I)'s strategy suffers from overcentralisation. Moreover, the advertising gimmicks have begun to backfire. Slogans like Mera Bharat Mahaan are turning into a propagandistic Frankenstein for Rajiv Gandhi. In every corner of the country, they are being parodied, sometimes with shocking vulgarity. Even the scorpions and cock-fighting advertising

The publicity overkill and the advertising gimmicks have begun to backfire on the Congress(I).

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

campaign, personally approved by Rajiv Gandhi against the wishes of some close advisers, has created controversy and criticism even within his own party and provided welcome grist to the mills of an effective counter-advertising campaign in the many newspapers that carry the Congress(I) ads, making a mockery of the ruling party's Rs 27-crore ad blitz.

Notwithstanding the publicly expressed doubts about the Opposition's ability to continue to hang together, it still enjoys an upper hand in another crucial area—selection of candidates. Fielding new candidates, it has an aura of freshness, while the Congress(I) baggage still consists mostly of tired old faces.

Ultimately, the management of the campaign has created demoralisation and resentment in the party. A coterie of political associates, personal friends, close advisers, and an assortment of young Rajya Sabha members have been put in command to issue instructions to chief ministers and PCC(I) chiefs. And increasingly, these senior state leaders have refused to make themselves available to these political managers whom they describe scathingly as upstarts.

IN the process, the prime minister is becoming the main casualty. His image has been trivialised. A person who was sought by all Congressmen suddenly appears to have become a liability. Campaign posters bearing Rajiv's portraits are no longer in demand. Candidates are simply refusing to put them up in their constituencies. And while he is under vicious attack from all Opposition leaders, his own partymen, concentrating on local issues, simply refuse to invoke Rajiv's name or to defend him.

The Congress(I) party always fares well in elections when it has a decidedly charismatic leader. The greater the charisma, the more dedicated the grassroots workers. Today, the most ominous signal for the party is the collapse of its top leadership. Rajiv is no longer seen as a vote-catcher. And the party has no alternative leadership. And for this the blame rests squarely with the party. In promoting and building Rajiv's personality cult, the party was falling into the trap of the Opposition. Admittedly those cults existed in the past—Nehru, Mrs Gandhi. But neither leader was ever personally tainted by such serious corruption charges and no prime minister of India has been the object of such widespread scurrilous lampooning as Rajiv.

So even as Rajiv assumed the role of the party's top campaigner, the Opposition increased the intensity of its attack on him. The strategy was clear: demolish Rajiv and the party may crumble like a house of cards. The Opposition is convinced that once the ruling party's star campaigner is finished, lesser-level state leaders will begin to cower, protect their own turfs, and not participate wholeheartedly in the national campaign.

When President Zail Singh chose to appoint Rajiv as prime minister in 1984 even before the party had formally elected him, Singh said he had done so, not because he believed in dynastic succession but to prevent the Congress(I)'s disintegration. Today the wheel seems to be coming full circle with the possibility not only of the party's collapse but also of the end of the dynasty.

And because the National Front is contesting only 350 Lok Sabha seats, leaving others to allied satellite parties, the stage could also be set for a new era in Indian politics—the disappearance of brute majorities and the advent of coalition governments. And the difference this time is that a country overdosed in the political paranoia of the who-after-Nehru?-who-after-Indira syndrome does not panic any more at the prospect of change. The voter's attitude may well be, after-Rajiv-whoever. The voter is increasingly realising that for all its awesome power, he is stronger than the Government, that if he can change it, then he can also make the one he chooses bend to his will and perform in his interests. These are signs of a maturing of democracy.

—INDERJIT BADHWAR and PRABHU CHAWLA

The notion that issues such as Bofors were of no interest to the masses has been proven false.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Party functionaries welcoming Rajiv: putting up a brave front

Frantic Pace

Rajiv's campaign has a blistering pace, but a tired, mechanical air. In place of the old fervour, there is the weariness of a tiresome task to be got over with. And the crowds, sensing the change, no longer respond as before.

TOOFAN mein, andhi mein, vishwas Rajiv Gandhi mein (Be it a hurricane, be it a storm, our faith in Rajiv Gandhi remains true to form). The slogan is plastered on just about every hut, wall and storefront in the prime minister's constituency of Amethi. But the man who came to file his nomination papers from what is supposed to be his pocket borough, far from resembling a storm, does not even come close to having the intensity of a teacup tempest.

And as election fever has spread across the land, the lack of fervour and glitz that marked Rajiv's nomination ceremony seems also to pervade his mostly airborne campaign as he jets from city to city and helicopters from mofussil town to mofussil town in search of that bewitching aura that had made him the star attraction, the darling of India's millions in 1984.

Today, far from being his usual bewitching self, he appears bothered and bewildered. In 1984, his nomination day was a day of celebration in Amethi where he had been surrounded by huge, chanting crowds in a mood of festive expectation, the assassination of his mother notwithstanding. In 1989, nomination day, the crowd was inconsequential. Rajiv looked at times nervous, at times deeply brooding. Perhaps because of incessant travel. Perhaps because of lack of sleep. But his demeanour did not go unnoticed by those close at hand. And it seems to have infected his campaign.

Even the chopper pilots who ferry him from one stumping ground to another have noticed the change. A pilot himself, Rajiv has always loved to make small talk with the VIP Air Force officers who fly him. They describe him as aloof and withdrawn.

For the happy warrior of yesteryear, just rearing to go and punching the time-clock to perfection and uttering the new-fangled 21st century phrases that razzle-dazzled audiences across the land, and even made them laugh, this election seems to have become a chore. Something he just has to do. Something he must get out of the way.

He is late everywhere. The smile begins to fade almost as suddenly as it appears. The jokes fall flat. His waves to the crowd do not seem to make waves anymore. He's like a Gogia Pasha who has lost his magic wand. Those rabbits just refuse to pop out of the top hat. The campaign rhetoric lacks conviction, is flat and alarmingly contradictory at times, the timing of the delivery faulty, the body language unconvincing.

On the first day of his first official campaign trip to Amethi, the town looks as if it has been wrapped in one gigantic Rajiv Gandhi poster. He is expected to address a rally at a school playground, about a kilometre away from the helipad where the prime ministerial Mi-8 is scheduled to land at noon. Rajiv is already a half-hour late and there is no word still of his arrival.

But there is something else missing in the town. There is simply no electricity. The political power generators appear to have burned out. Hundreds and hundreds of armed policemen and home guard personnel lounge around town, leaning on their cane sticks or seeking the shade of a tree. The residents do not seem particularly excited about the impending visit of the favourite son of the constituency.

Inside the meeting ground, a bored crowd of perhaps a little over 10,000 hangs around munching peanuts or sucking at beedis. From the VIP platform, some local leaders are screaming into the microphone and eulogising Rajiv and the Congress raj. One of them repeatedly

Photographs by RAGHU RAI

Rajiv addressing his first election meeting in Amethi: poor response

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

exhorts the crowds to scream zindabad loudly enough "so that your voice can reach the ears of Rajivji when he comes on to the platform". In the VIP arrival area at the rear of the dais, a dozen white-clad Yuva Dal volunteers, obviously hastily conducted for the show, are being taught how to salute, how to stand to attention by a local leader. One of them is assigned the task of standing guard at a makeshift VIP toilet constructed behind a tent-flap.

Reporters, who for some reason have been banned from travelling in groups or even in pools with the prime minister's party, make small talk with securitymen and local intelligence officials. One Intelligence Bureau man offers an explanation: "The crowds he has been getting are quite small. Perhaps the prime minister's advisers don't want you to see this in place after place." He recalls that in 1984 and 1985 and even during subsequent visits to Amethi by the prime minister the crowds were ten times the size of the present one. "But can't you ensure a larger turnout?" he is asked. He smiles: "Kabhi to unko asliyat apne aap azmaane do" (For a change, let them experience reality for themselves).

The Mera Bharat Mahaan slogan, this time plastered on the foundation of the platform, is the subject of wicked jokes. Even as he is waiting for Rajiv to appear, Abhay Singh, a young shopkeeper attending the rally, repeats what is a popular takeoff on the slogan using an ad campaign for condoms as a metaphorical description of how India, in his view, has been cheapened: Khareedne me aasaan, rakhne me aasaan, istemaal karne me aasaan. Pehle chaar aane me teen milte the, aaj kal muft mil rahe hain, Mera Bharat Mahaan (Easy to buy, easy to keep, easy to use, it used to cost 25 paise for three, nowadays you get it free, Mera Bharat Mahaan).

And this shocking irreverence, of all places in Amethi, and that barely five minutes before the prime minister is to arrive. The thin crowd, that later swells by a couple of thousands as political workers start hustling more people in, is not the only thing worrisome to local Congressmen. What has caught everybody's attention, and even veteran policemen express total surprise about, is that the route from the helicopter pad to the meeting ground is virtually empty. Where, in the past, thousands of spectators had lined up behind the barricades on either side of the street to cheer from behind police lineups, the route is deserted.

Rajiv is one hour late. But when he arrives the ritual is the same as everywhere else. Getting out of his bullet-proof car with Sonia in tow. The garlands. The Sewa Dal white-shirts screaming Rajiv Gandhi Zindabad until they get hoarse. Rajiv looks tense, tired. So does Sonia. But daughter Priyanka following them is a picture of innocence, curiousness, a fresh breeze of uncorrupted youthfulness in an atmosphere that otherwise is staged and repetitious. Rajiv, much in the fashion of his grandfather charging up the ramp of an awaiting Dakota—an image popularised by Films Division documentaries—charges up the stairs leading to the top of the speaker's platform.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Sonia, pulling her red-and-black sari pallav closely about her face, sits on his left. Priyanka stands in the background. Uttar Pradesh Chief Minister Narayan Datt Tiwari, who seems to have gained weight and wears John Lennon-type dark glasses, looks from a distance like a bespectacled puffin. From close up, you can see deep, puffy bags underneath Rajiv's eyes. He seems anxious. Blinks his eyes repeatedly, purses his lips, pats his ruffled hair into place and the movement of his jaw muscles is clearly discernible as he grits his teeth before rising to speak.

The crowd, with huge enclosures still unoccupied in front, is barely enthused. Except for some zindabads from a few cheer-leaders in the front right enclosures, there is no spontaneous sloganeering. He tells the Amethiites how he has changed and developed the area during the last few years. He reminds the audience of his mother "Indiraji's balidaan," and how the Congress(I) had pulled the country out of the "darkness" following her assassination.

Then he talks about Punjab. Separatism there, he points out, is finished, and the Government "has achieved success against terrorism and will keep fighting against it". "Zindabad," shout the cheer-leaders seated in the front. An official tries to hush them. But Rajiv, looking in their direction says, "Bolne do, bolne do" (Let them cheer. Let them cheer).

Then he pulls out what is supposed to be the trump card of his speech—a copy of the National Front's election manifesto and waves it before the audience as if he is giving them access to a secret document. "There is no word in this manifesto about terrorism," he bellows. "Doesn't the Opposition recognise the existence of terrorism or are they afraid to speak out?"

He brought the campaign to Madras' Marina Beach, the venue from which the National Front was launched a year ago, a little more colourfully than in Amethi. The tricolour and AIADMK black-and-red flags flutter in the sea breeze. Black barricades form a vivid contrast to the expanse of silver sand. Facing the 20-feet-high bullet-proof stage are larger-than-life cut-outs illuminated with multi-coloured electric bulbs.

Rajiv, who used to conduct his pre-election rallies across the country as a many-costumed, many-turbaned thing, arrives at the scene at 7.05 p.m. minus fancy dress. He is not wearing a dhoti-jiba and angavastram around the neck, the costume he chooses for his Tamil Nadu tours, but his usual spotless white kurta-pyjama. At least a dozen rainbow-coloured brocades are presented to him. Following him is the general secretary of the AIADMK, Jayalalitha, in her black-and-pink Mysore silk saree. Rajiv climbs the stairs to the stage briskly and waves to the crowd. He first bares his palm, the symbol of his party, and then holds aloft his index and middle fingers spread into a 'V', as M.G. Ramachandran used to. A crowd of 50,000 cheers.

RAJIV starts off in Tamil: "Sahodara Sahodarigale" (brothers and sisters) and "Vanakkam" (greetings).

He immediately switches to English. First, he tries to strike a sentimental chord by recalling his earlier stage appearances with MGR, and MGR's friendship with his mother, Indira. But he fails to be evocative or to create an emotional response. He talks about the party's welfare measures like the Jawahar Rozgar Yojana, and the perspective plan for women, which his government contemplated but could not, he admits, implement to his satisfaction.

"Out of Rs 100 allocated to an anti-poverty project, I know that only Rs 15 reaches the people," he says. "The remainder is gobbled up by middlemen, power brokers, contractors and the corrupt." This is because, he explains, too much power is concentrated in Delhi and the state capitals. He then comes to his punch line: if the Opposition had not defeated the Panchayati Raj bill, a system would have been established in which the welfare money would go directly to the people. "We cannot accept the verdict of 83 people. Let 83 crore people decide on the issue."

He then launches into a diatribe against the Anandpur Sahib Resolution of 1978 seeking greater autonomy for Punjab. "This resolution," he says, "tried to weaken Delhi and the opposition manifesto is attempting to do the same thing." Then comes the central contradiction. While he is promising Panchayati Raj and the resultant decentralisation of powers as the great panacea for the nation, he contemptuously dismisses the Opposition's demands for decentralisation more or less as an agenda for secessionism.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The argument is repeated in speech after speech, at venue after venue. In Amethi, Rajiv says: "Dilli ki shakti khatm ho jayegi" (The Centre will lose its power), "aur yeh shakti rajyon me chali jayegi" (and this power will go to the states). "Aur jo garib pradesh hain, jaise Uttar Pradesh garib pradesh hai, bhugtenge" (and the poorer states like Uttar Pradesh will suffer).

It seems to matter not a whit to him that he is in a single speech demolishing his own arguments for Panchayati Raj—the need to decentralise decision-making in order to make local governments more autonomous and give, as the Congress(I) slogan says, "power to the people".

Even in Amethi, the general response to his criticism about anti-poverty funds being siphoned off by middlemen is one of disdain. As Rajesh Gupta, who attended the rally, later remarked: "But after all it is his government. He has been in power. It was up to him to have

SHEKHAR GUPTA

(Clockwise from top) Rajiv's helicopter; arrival route; securitymen relaxing; posters being put up: unenthusiastic air

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

prevented this. He seems to be making excuses."

By itself, Rajiv's attack on dalali is not an entirely misplaced concern, and if delivered with appropriate aggressiveness, should serve to produce the appropriate effect. That it backfires is because the gestures, the body language, seem out of gear. For when Rajiv says, "Hum jante hain, garibi hatane ka paisa aap ko bheja jaata hai voh poori tarah se aap tak nahin pahunch paata. Hum yeh bhi jaante hain ki beech mein bhi aise log hain jo kha jate hain." (We know how middlemen steal money appropriated for anti-poverty measures), he actually smiles. A mischievous smile that suggests a conspiratorial awareness rather than indignant outrage. It doesn't work. If anything, it bares an if.

Nor do the jokes. In Tamil Nadu, for example, with the AIADMK's Jayalalitha standing next to him, he quipped: "I suppose there was a little bit of controversy about the legacy of MGR." The Jayalalitha diehards in the audience, in whose minds no such controversy exists, did not find it amusing. In Chail, near Allahabad, where he arrived late and was greeted by about 5,000 people, a thin attendance compared to 1984 when 50,000 people had turned up, he said: "Main maafi chahta hoon late hone ke liye, magar kabhi kabhi helicopter bhi rasta bhool jaate hain" (Sorry for being late, but sometimes even helicopters lose their way). This could hardly be expected to produce much cheer among a crowd that had been waiting since 4:30 p.m.

Rajiv leaving the dais: tearing hurry

His helicopter schedule—18 Mi-8's, many of them painted blue and white are on standby all over the country—often serves to make mincemeat of his campaign. Because the choppers must take off before sunset from the local helipad to the airport from where Rajiv will board his executive jet to fly off to another state for the campaign, the later he gets, and the later the meetings get, the more everything is played out in comic fast forward.

In Chail, for example, while waiting for Rajiv to arrive, N.D. Tiwari starts making a speech to keep the audience from straying. Halfway through his speech, because he has heard the hum of the chopper, he stops and begins scanning the horizon. Spotting the aircraft, he tells the audience Rajiv has arrived. The speech is not resumed. As evening shadows lengthen, Rajiv is on the platform with his usual speech. Hurrying through it—he has a helicopter to catch before nightfall—he begins introducing the local candidates, starting with Kamala Bahuguna. "But where's Kamla Bahugunaji?" he asks. She is not even on the stage, but seated down below.

He has arrived in Chail from Rewa in Madhya Pradesh. The helicopter will now take him to Allahabad from where he will jet to Bhubaneswar from where, after night meetings, he will jet to Hyderabad, arriving at 3.30 a.m. Madhya Pradesh, Uttar Pradesh, Orissa, Andhra Pradesh, all within 12 hours. The plan is to address 168 meetings in 20 days.

Rajiv's travels follow a plan drawn by Mani Shankar Aiyar. Aiyar sat with his computer and took almost three days finalising the itinerary. The seats were divided into three categories: A (sure), B (marginal) and C (lost) category. The schedule was drawn in such a way that the prime minister would spend more time in B category seats which fell in Karnataka, Andhra Pradesh, Bihar and Uttar Pradesh. The meeting venues were chosen in such a way that the electorate from at least three parliament constituencies could be mobilised for each meeting.

To those who argue that this grasshopper electioneering, this desultory campaign, prevents the prime minister from making a comprehensive impact in concentrated regions and states, the prime minister's aides respond that the impression to be created is that at any given time, the prime minister is everywhere in the country. The prime minister should be ubiquitous.

But the way things seem to be going right now, the prime minister is not being made ubiquitous but superfluous.

—INDERJIT BADHWAR

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

vhite are y—often his cam-ust take elipad to ill board her state gets, and he more omic fast

e waiting ri starts audience ugh his e hum of ns scan-aircraft,
arrived,
evening
the plat-
Hurrying to catch roducing with Ka-
's Kamla
t even on low.
Rewa in pter will m where n where,
to Hyder-
Madhya
, Andhra
he plan is days.
n drawn sat with hree days eats were (sure), B
ory. The way that end more ch fell in Bihar and ues were electorate
t constitfor each his grassdesultory minister impact in ates, the that the at at any is every-me minis-

be going er is not erfluous.
BADHWAR

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Singh's white Contessa: the juggernaut

V.P. SINGH

Making Waves

The Janata Dal leader has been cutting a tireless electoral swathe through the Hindi heartland to ensure Rajiv's defeat. The peoples' response has been electrifying.

ASHWAMEDHA and Rajasuya were the ancient Indian practices of conquest. A king extending his domain would follow a white horse that had been unleashed to roam in hostile territory. Wherever the horse ran unchallenged, its master would claim the terrain as undisputedly his. And wherever it was stopped—war!

From eastern Uttar Pradesh, where Vishwanath Pratap Singh launched his formal election campaign last fortnight, he is creating a latter-day version of this epic ritual to the horror and consternation of the political monarchs of the ruling party. The steed is a white Contessa with a driver at the helm and Singh is the passenger in the front seat, speeding bumpily down serrated and pot-holed rural dustways and hurling gauntlets with such daredevil abandon that even the ranks of Congressmen, can scarce forbear to cheer. Many of them, in fact, are joining him.

It is an electoral phenomenon that is palpably electrifying the countryside. Singh arrives in Fatehpur, his new constituency, on November 7 to start his campaign. On that very day the 500-strong Brahmin Samaj, the backbone of the town's Congress(I) machine deserts his opponent Hari Shastri, the two-term incumbent, and openly pledges support to Singh. The Congress(I) headquarters wears a deserted look with Shastri making at best a faint-hearted effort to try and stop the challenger. In Ghatampur, an hour down the road, a reception committee has waited three hours under the blazing sun for him to arrive. The committee members are all Congressmen who have deserted their party the same day.

"Is this what is called a wave?" Singh is asked. "See for yourself," he smiles, adding: "Forget the numbers, try and get a feel of their pulse, see their eyes, their eyes will tell you." "But you only began campaigning two days ago? How has this happened?" "Wrong. I began campaigning two-and-a-half years ago. And I saw it then. Maybe you didn't see it." "What did you see?" "That the simplest, the poorest man responds to national issues and wants to protect the dignity of the nation." "You mean he understands issues like Bofors and reacts to them?" "Let me let you test this."

The Contessa grinds to a halt in a pall of dust at an intersection near Moosanagar. A dozen young farmers, who have heard that Singh would be passing that way, and have been waiting under a neem tree, rush to the car. Their eyes: adulatory, frenzied, blazing like meteors. They begin chanting: "Raja nahin fakir hai, desh ki taqdeer hai." (Not a king, a hermit is he/With him rests the country's destiny.) Singh alights and motions them to silence. "There is a man here from Delhi," Singh tells them, "who wants to know if villagers know about Bofors. How many of you know about Bofors?" All raise their hands. "Bofors ka dalaal kaun hai?" (Who is the middleman for Bofors?) "Rajiv Gandhi!" they chorus contemptuously. The Contessa moves on.

There are no frills, gadgets, widgets. No fancy ad campaign. No advisers. No advance men. A threadbare organisation. Not even a motorcade, save for a jeep. No securitymen. Singh's campaign is his own, his speeches are his own, and public meetings are called often at less than a day's notice. But the crowds simply materialise as word gets out that he is on his way. At every street corner. At every hamlet. At every railroad crossing. At every intersection. A homespun slogan spells the character of the campaign aptly: "Na poster hain na parche hain, sirf V.P. Singh ke charche hain." (There are no posters nor pamphlets, there's only talk of V.P. Singh everywhere.)

Consider for example, his first arrival on November 7, at Fatehpur. The campaign headquarters, festooned with a single large banner carrying Singh's portrait and the party symbol—a chakra—is a three-storey building facing a slum area. The evening before, about a dozen youth, mostly inexperienced in politics, are busy organising things under the supervision of Singh's son, Ajeya, also a political novitiate. He is asked about plans, about strategy, about public meetings. He looks blank. "All I know so far," he says in a clipped Oxford accent, "is that he's expected by train tomorrow at 6.15 a.m. and then there's a workers' meeting at 9:30 after he freshens up at the circuit house." A big reception at the station? "We're not quite certain how many will show up."

The train arrives on schedule from Bhagalpur where he has spent the previous day, and a thousand people shouting "V.P. Singh zindabad", and "V.P. Singh sangharsh karo hum tumhare saath hain" (Struggle on V.P. Singh, we are with you) —the familiar battle cry of his early Jan Morcha days when he first started campaigning against corruption rent the air. And he is bedecked with garlands.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

At the campaign headquarters no more than a hundred workers await Singh inside a spacious hall. The air is of disorganisation, inefficiency. No one is certain of his programme. Outside on the adjoining streets there is a hint of casual curiosity. The motorcade— if it can be described as that— of two scooters, four Suzuki motorbikes, a jeep and the white Contessa, arrives an hour late and Singh, dressed in khadi kurta pyjama with a stain of bird-dropping visible on his left sleeve just below the shoulder, gets out smiling. He is mobbed.

Suddenly, as if they had been hiding in corners, there are people everywhere. Jumping, screaming. And it takes Singh 10 minutes to get to the podium barely 100 feet away. The hundred people inside the hall are now a thousand. The streets outside are now packed and people clamber onto the roof of the building to get a ringside seat shielded from the skylights. When he rises to speak, the aggressive, boisterous indiscipline of the crowd melts into a silence of concentrated attention.

It is a theme he will use repeatedly on the campaign trail but for a few variations in metaphors (see box). In substance it is little different from what he has been hammering home at rallies all across India for the last two-and-a-half years since his expulsion from the Congress(I)—the need to save the national honour compromised by Rajiv Gandhi, the desecration of national institutions, the Bofors revelations, high prices, lack of government accountability, the need to throw out Rajiv Gandhi. His expressions vary from barely controlled outrage to a scornful, teasing smile, especially when he launches an attack on Rajiv.

> Singh's campaign is his own, his speeches are his own. The crowds simply materialise as word gets out that he is on his way.

"During my political career," he says in a voice tinged with anger and sadness, "I've seen a lot of things being bartered, but never as in the last five years, have I seen the nation's very honour and self-respect being sold out." People shake their heads and the hall resounds to the clucking of a thousand tongues. And as the speech builds to a crescendo, punctuated by howls of approval as he finishes each point, the audience turns once again into a raucous mob. "Raja tum sangharsh karo. Ab to yeh spasht hai, Rajiv Gandhi bhrasht hai. Bhrashtachari nahin chalegi, nahin chalegi." (Struggle on Raja. Now it's known, Rajiv Gandhi is corrupt. Corruption won't do, won't do.) Out of almost nothing, a fired up and determined organisation is born, ready to storm the town.

Next? "Not really sure," says Ajeya Singh, who is closest to anything resembling a campaign manager for his father. "I think he has a luncheon with some friends and there's talk he'll visit the bar association." Two hours later, with no advance warning the Contessa arrives at

Photographs by RAGHU RAI

With Nehru in Akbarpur: frenzied welcome

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

V.P. SINGH'S SPEECH

Lively Rhetoric

Vishwanath Pratap Singh's speeches rarely extend beyond 20 minutes and are peppered with earthy metaphors and similes that unfailingly evoke visible and audible emotional responses. He conveys immediately that he is campaigning against Rajiv Gandhi, denounces him, and proceeds to demolish and to ridicule him. The piece de resistance:

"Dig the warm sands in the desert wastes of Rajasthan. Or the icy hard rocks of Siachen. You will see a few drops of the blood of a Jawan, the son of a kisan, mixed in it. Can Rajiv, this prime minister, take a fistful of that exalted soil, hold it to his forehead and say he has given his motherland what he owed it? If he cannot, should such a prime minister stay?"

"To turn against them was a matter of conscience. One day we will all be gone. Our dust will mingle with the dust of our janmabhoomi. And when the dust of this land asks me if I was true to her salt I should not have to bow my head in shame."

From patriotism the theme shifts quickly to high prices and unemployment. "Aaj naujawan bazaar mein khada hai apne mathe par likh kar bikau. Aur use kharidar nahin milta (Today the young man stands in the market with for sale written on his forehead. But he can't find a buyer). Today, everything is expensive. The only thing that is cheap is the blood of human beings. Chulhon ki aag bujh gayee par pet mein bhook ki aag jalti hai. Jab yeh aag dimag mein pahunchti hai to kranti paida karti hai. (The fire has gone out of the hearths but the fire of hunger burns in people's bellies. And when this fire reaches people's minds it generates a revolution)."

"I've never seen such a tired and defeated prime minister...A government's life is for five years. So this government is on its death-bed. Like a man on a cot taking in his last few breaths. So he does shaiyyadan, gaiyyadan, bachhiadan, sonadan, pushpdan (gives away a cot, a cow, a calf, gold, flowers as part of his last rites), Panchayati Raj, rozgar yojana etc etc." His likening of the Rajiv Government's election-eve sops to the largesse a dying man hands out to the Brahmins is a brilliant example of the art of communicating with rural masses which he is rapidly perfecting into a science.

"You all know that when a vehicle is brought for renewal of licence you check its steering and brakes. Today Rajiv sarkar has come to you to renew its licence for five more years. So check it out."

"Those fed up of unemployment raise your hands. (Thousands of hands wave in the air) So on the issue of unemployment, Rajiv ka licence?...(his voice rises to a questioning pitch when he says the word licence), and the crowd roars back, 'radd!' (cancelled). Those who are fed up of high prices raise your hands. (More hands are raised). So, on the issue of prices, Rajiv ka licence? ...(The audience thunders: 'radd!') On the matter of honesty, Rajiv ka licence? ...(The audience responds both hands flailing the air: 'radd! radd! radd!')

"Faisala ho gaya" (the verdict has been given), he announces and walks away to his waiting Contessa.

JOGINDER CHAWLA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Amid cheering supporters

the district court complex. He shakes hands with a lawyer. Then with a litigant. A crowd of no more than 10 people in tow. And then you see what is meant by a wave-maker. Within a half hour, the entire complex comes alive with "V.P. Singh zindabad" slogans as nearly 2,000 people pour in from, God alone knows, where. The stroll, starting out with intimate gestures such as people embracing him or tousling his patchy hair, turns into a march; the march into a rally that lasts two hours. And still a sense of deep intimacy remains.

THEN, at 8 p.m. that night, at three-hour notice, the first public rally—attended, as townsfolk attest, by the largest gathering that Fatehpur has ever witnessed. "This is not just an election for Fatehpur," Singh says, "but for the entire nation. Put a chakra outside each house and I'll assure you there will be no chakkar there by any Congressman. Let this be your Sudarshan chakra." And the crowd responds: "Janata Dal ka chakra chalega Congress ke panje par." (The Janata Dal wheel will crush the Congress(I) hand.)

He continues: "Remember I also have to go outside to fight, so I'm leaving victory here in your hands. You tell me, when I go out and people ask me about Fatehpur, what shall I tell them?" The crowd thunders: "Jeetengay, aap jeetenge, laakhon laakhon me jeetenge." (Victory will be yours, victory will be yours; by lakhs and lakhs victory will be yours.)

Next day he goes out. Between the 8th and 10th he will travel more than 2,000 km winding a tortuous route through east, central and west Uttar Pradesh. Then he'll head back east again. He can expect no more than three hours of sleep a night. Nor can he afford to catnap in the car, because as the word spreads, he is stopped anywhere and everywhere by sloganeering crowds, large and small, who often try and physically disgorge him from the car should he decline to step out to talk to them. His travel schedule was drawn up in a night as he and wife Sita sat over a map of the country. The basic idea was to cover at least 100 of the 129 constituencies in Bihar and Uttar Pradesh and then to concentrate on Rajasthan and Madhya Pradesh while avoiding wasteful trips to the south.

True to his reputation, even in the campaign, he is a loner, travelling with his driver or, when necessary, with a party candidate, a green gamcha—the party colour—wrapped loosely around his neck. There are no meals along the way. Only bananas and peanuts and water chestnuts. An occasional apple. To freshen his throat he sucks on a Pepsi lozenge or tucks a clove into his cheek. He arrives in Ghatampur two hours late. There's a public rally, planned only a day earlier, at a school ground.

Seeking roadside no-confidence vote against Rajiv: enthusiastic response

Only a few hundred people, including a dozen members of the reception committee, most of them Congressmen who had deserted their party to welcome him, are in waiting. One of them, taking a cue from the Mera Bharat Mahaan slogan, which has become a universal butt for scornful parody, is reading his own odious version of it: "Congress beimaan, aur rupaye dekh kar Rajiv ka dol gaya imaan. Congress mein hota hai goondon ka samman. Matdata ab nahin bikega, gundon ka shasan nahin chalega." (The Congress(I) is shady, and the lust of money has made Rajiv lose his integrity. In the Congress(I) the criminal wins praise; but no more will the vote be sold, and the reign of criminals we will erase.)

Singh's speech is almost an organic extension of this sentiment. And the crowd's response to him is as if he is converting believers. Again, the believers flock to him. It's like a pied-piper syndrome. He appears, starts speaking and the few hundreds swell to nearly 10,000. He talks about the HDW submarine deal, his aborted attempt at an inquiry. About Bofors. He does not have to explain the details for there appears to be perfect comprehension in the crowd. "What do people want?" he asks. "Ke sab ko izzat ke saath zindagi bitaane ka mauka mile. (That everyone should be allowed to live with self-respect.) But they don't allow you to. Even when you buy a box of matches you pay an excise tax on it that goes to the Centre so it can be used for the development of the country. But instead, the tax you pay is smuggled into Swiss banks."

Between Moosanagar and Gajner, about 100 km down the road from Fatehpur, two cars travelling in the opposite direction come to a grating halt right in front of the Contessa in a whirlwind of dust. As the dust clears a shadowy figure—much in the manner of Clint Eastwood, emerging guns drawn from the smoke and mist—materialises. A barrel of a man. Arun Nehru. Singh has entered Billaur, Nehru's constituency. He smiles a hello and plunks himself in the back seat of the Contessa and Singh offers him a banana.

"Yaar Vishwanath," Nehru says, "I've been here about four days and been to more than a hundred villages. It's amazing. What I'm seeing here is a greater intensity than even 1984. You can't even move here, there's so much enthusiasm." He is not exaggerating. For apart from the frenzied crowds that exhort Singh to fight, and beat their chests in support of him and erect human roadblocks to greet him in small bunches or at hastily organised rallies where even microphones are not present, there is but for one lonely jeep displaying the Congress(I) symbol, not a sign of any electoral activity by the ruling party for the remaining 150-km journey to Unnao.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Outside Sanchedi, Singh points towards a tree on the side of the road. "Look," he says. A Congress(I) flag hangs limply from a neem tree. He chuckles: "They could not find a house or building to put it up, so a tree is their last resort." Further down the road he motions once again towards a tree. Another Congress(I) flag? No. Singh says he wants to go behind the tree for a bladder stop. "Not here," says Nehru, "See the people waiting. They'll just grab you. Wait for some thick bushes." Barely out of the bushes and into the car and a group of 50 farmers converge on Singh and garland him with a string of one-rupee notes.

At Akbarpur, residents scream their welcome not only from the sidewalks but also from the rooftops. "Where are we?" asks Singh. "I think this is Chaubeypur," replies Nehru. Next, at Ruri, a rustic town Singh has never even heard of, the townsfolk in thousands appear to have gone mad. The moment the car enters it is literally mobbed by what looks like an entire city. One car mobbed by the entire town. They try and lift the car. The next 20 minutes are a tumult of arms and legs and voices shouting hoarse for Singh. As the car begins to inch forward to the formal meeting place thousands run alongside dancing and showering rose petals for the next 2 km.

> Singh stresses there's been an erosion of fundamental rights in the Rajiv regime and attempts to throttle the press.

Next, at Sheoli, it is sunset, and some 15,000 villagers have been waiting for five hours for Singh and Nehru. The speeches are sober and short. Singh and Nehru stress that there's been an erosion of the fundamental rights of people in the Rajiv regime, that there have been attempts to throttle the press and turn the official media into a propaganda machine to avoid accountability for corruption in high places.

An old man, a freedom fighter, rises to his feet from the multitude. "For those who have sinned, hell exists not in the next world but in this one. Rajiv has sinned. He must be punished. Usko yahin dand do (Punish him in this world)," he demands amid thunderous applause.

Back in the car Singh muses: "Perhaps we should create a new slogan about Moresco (a company involved in the Bofors pay-offs). How about "Rajiv Gandhi kaun hai? Moresco ka chor-esco! (Who is Rajiv Gandhi? The thief of Moresco.)" And he guffaws, the gold-filling in his right upper molars showing prominently.

Then on a more sober note, he muses: "When I had my last meeting with Rajiv after I resigned as defence minister, he asked me, 'Why are you taking this path? It can lead only to disaster.' I replied: 'You go your way. I've already chosen the disaster path.' Let's see whose path leads where."

Then he falls silent. Tucks another clove into his mouth and speeds off into the night.

—INDERJIT BADHWAR

Singh takes a break: confident

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

INTAC

The power of a new generation

Caterpillar fuel efficiency and low operating costs contribute to the wide use of these engines in genset applications around the world.

INTAC

DIESEL AND GAS ENGINES YOUR ASSURANCE OF CATERPILLAR DEPENDABILITY, DURABILITY AND ECONOMY

INTAC engines represent the last word in diesel engine technology. Continuing research by Caterpillar has led to the development of better fuel injection and combustion techniques, lowered emissions and improved fuel economy. The use of tough and durable construction materials increases engine life, reduces wear and tear and facilitates engine rebuilds again and again after extended use.

The INTAC range of diesel engines - from 144 kW (180 KVA) and up - will match your needs, ranging from gensets to workhorse applications in the petroleum, marine, earth moving and locomotive industries.

CAT PLUS - A worldwide commitment to product support. Extending the Caterpillar tradition of excellence in product support, Hindustan Powerplus dealers are committed to the level of product support that adds value to every INTAC engine.

INTAC engines and gensets powered by INTAC engines are now available through our dealer in your area.

For more details, please fill in the coupon and mail to:

GMM CO GENERAL MARKETING AND MANUFACTURING COMPANY LIMITED

Anil Pewekar
Divisional Manager (Engines)
Maker Bhavan No. 2, 2nd Floor,
New Marine Lines, BOMBAY-400 020.
Tel: 257411, 253921 Tlx. No : 011-5738/2315

TIL Limited

Ranabir Chaudhury
Engine Sales Manager
1, Taratolla Road, Garden Reach,
Calcutta-700 024.
Tel: 455771/5, 454962, 451861
Tlx. No: 021-8072/8101

Name: _____
Designation: _____
Company: _____
Nature of Industry: _____
Address: _____
_____
_____
Pin Code: _____
Tel: _____ Tlx: _____
(a) Please send me a detailed brochure.
(b) I would like your representative to call on me.
(c) Indicate your KVA requirement: 180, 225, 275, 320, 500, 590, 856 KVA.

ECONOMICAL POWER FROM INTAC

Caterpillar, CAT and CB are Trademarks of Caterpillar Inc., U.S.A.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Let United India take the worry out of those two words hovering in your mind.

"What if..."

...your ageing father suddenly develops a kidney condition

...executive stress takes its toll on your health, without any warning.

...your sporty, over-active son suffers a fracture.

This is not a list of things that could go wrong.

God forbid.

This is just to tell you: thousands of people all over the country are discovering Mediclaim — the simplest way to tackle rising medicare costs beyond your reach.

The reimbursement scheme gets you upto Rs.17,600 worth of hospitalisation expenses for just Rs.250.

Whether we like it or not, life has its ups and downs.

So on your way to work tomorrow, drop in at your nearest UI office. Surely, you'll agree...

It's better to be Mediclaim-safe than sorry.

MED-I-CLAIM

UNITED INDIA INSURANCE CO. LTD.

(A subsidiary of the General Insurance Corporation of India)

24 Whites Road, Madras 600 014

HTA 7350

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"No mosquitoes and cockroaches in my house...

I Finit them and Finish them!"

Finit Power. Efficient and effective. Penetrates every nook and corner of the house to kill every flying and crawling insect. Use Finit and be sure.

FINIT POWER
Always effective.

हिन्दुस्तान पेट्रोलियम

HINDUSTAN PETROLEUM CORPORATION LIMITED
(A GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ENTERPRISE)

CLARION/B/HP/62/254

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

UTTAR PRADESH

Advantage Opposition

V.P. Singh puts Congress(I) on defensive

IF the 1989 election campaign has become a political Mahabharat, the battle for Uttar Pradesh is growing into a chakravyuha, a deadly trap in which both contenders fight for glory, or survival. Ruling India without winning Uttar Pradesh is not a statistical impossibility even though the state contributes 85 seats (total electorate 7.94 crore), or nearly one-sixth of the Lok Sabha.

But it is a political absurdity. More so in the current context when the two major claimants for prime ministership, Rajiv Gandhi and V.P. Singh are wooing their Uttar Pradesh constituents in the most significant electoral battle of their lives. There is no dearth of maharathis. Others include: Chandra Shekhar, the Opposition's perennial dark horse for the prime ministership, other Janata Dal stars like Arun Nehru, Ajit Singh and Maneka Gandhi, Bahujan Samaj Party (BSP) supremo Kanshi Ram and of course, the Congress(I)'s Narayan Dutt Tiwari, who would like to be king but might probably end up being king-maker in the event of a split result.

On paper, Tiwari is contesting for the Vidhan Sabha where his party is waging a desperate campaign against the Opposition and its own inbuilt contradictions and dissensions to continue clinging to power. But as a series of political decisions, including the one to hold the Lok Sabha and Vidhan Sabha polls simultaneously in the state and the allocation of tickets subsequently showed, he had already emerged as the lynch-pin of the new Congress(I) syndicate, sometimes defying, sometimes manipulating and quite often advising the prime minister. Tiwari, it is obvious, looks at this election as the penultimate if not the last step in his pilgrimage to the portals of high power in the capital.

With so much at stake, it is no surprise that the state has seen some of the most bitter, intense and purposeful campaigning so far, beginning slowly but picking up rapidly as the fortnight progressed. And by the end of the first round it seemed the Opposition had taken a lead which the Congress(I) could find hard to narrow decisively in the last round with the pace and the pulses quickening.

Both eastern and central Uttar Pradesh are responding with visible aplomb to V.P. Singh's electoral entreaties. And in the Jat-dominated western Uttar Pradesh, Ajit Singh should be able to reclaim his late father Charan Singh's legacy. The worry showed in the Congress(I) camp where campaign managers talked darkly of "some reverses" in the Lok Sabha while promising "an easy majority in the Vidhan Sabha because of predominantly three-cornered contests". Said a somewhat philosophical Tiwari: "Considering the circumstances, we are doing reasonably well." In a similar vein, added state Congress(I) chief Balram Singh Yadav: "This election is a lot different from 1984.

- Bhaiyya ka, bhaujai ka
Vote Congress(I) ka.
(The brother's vote, and the sister-in-law's, is for the Congress(I).)
Congress(I) slogan

- Na yehan koyee Janata Dal hai,
Na yehan koyee DS-4,
Rajiv Gandhi key panjey se,
Harenge sab daku chor.
(There is no Janata Dal here,
Nor any DS-4,
Rajiv Gandhi's claw
Will render every charlatan null.)
Congress(I) slogan

- Aap picchley paanch varshon se kahan the? Aapke intezar mein main sookha ja raha hoon.
(Where were you for five years? I have been languishing, waiting for you.)
signboard hung from a huge cutout of a shoe in Kanpur streets welcoming Congress(I) candidate for Sasmau constituency

RAGHU RAI

AMETHI

Duel of the Gandhis

The Mahatma's grandson takes on Nehru's

THE voter in Amethi has a problem. For the past elections the choice had been clear: a scion of the nation's number one political family. Now he has to choose between Asli Gandhi (real Gandhi) and Apna Gandhi (our own Gandhi).

No two men with the same last name could be so different, in personality or political style. There is Rajiv Gandhi, whose family first picked Amethi as the safest of safe pocket boroughs, a forgotten island of poverty. As soon as Amethi adopted the Gandhis, its face changed. Factories, roads, tubewells, and largesses all came in. All Rajiv is asking for today is a tribute from his constituents for all this.

He is asking for it through three rounds of personal campaign, through loudspeakers on over 200 jeeps (160 brand-new), through 10 video raths, and through the baritone voice of his late mother played from hundreds of loudspeakers to the accompaniment of canned cheers. Rajiv's close friend and confidant, Satish Sharma, has been running the campaign full-time.

Six kilometres outside Amethi, at

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

JOGINDER CHAWLA

Rajiv arrives in Amethi; Sonia campaigns; and (below) Rajmohan's personal contact trail: differing styles

Kushitali village, the Rajiv bandwagon arrives: a brand new Mahindra jeep fitted with a French Peugeot engine, three Crown TV sets with Hitachi kits, a Japanese Funai video cassette player, a Sony record player, all run by a Shriram-Honda generator. On three screens, Mrs Gandhi speaks about Rajiv's childhood. Cut to her funeral, Rajiv and Sonia with tear-stained cheeks. The smoke yields to the wide, blue sea. A seagull rises in the mist. Cut to Rajiv wiping the tears from a little girl's eyes. The seagull again.

Cut, on the campaign screen, to Kasara village. It's twilight and Rajmohan Gandhi reclines on a cot along with his diminutive wife Usha, in the Harijan quarter of the village. He bends often to stop people from touching his feet. A few goats loiter around. "Who was Mahatma Gandhi?" he asks softly, under the glow of a crescent moon. "A great man. He ruled the country," says a villager. "No, no. He gave us freedom but did not rule the country. I'm not even a thousandth fraction of him. But I'm his grandson," he introduces himself. At Ishwarpur, 8 kilometres down the road, at a meeting held in the glare of the headlights of two of his campaign jeeps, he tells people to vote out the jagirdari (feudal rule) for a sajhedari (partnership).

His campaign headquarters is a shanty room in Saindham, a nondescript hotel. Bahujan Samaj Party chief Kanshi Ram, incidentally, stays in the adjoining room. "We have just 11 jeeps of which four are not working. But more should come in the next 48 hours," hopes Laxmi Jain, the gentle Gandhian economist who has just won the Magsaysay Award. Whatever real muscle or decibel power Rajmohan has, is provided by the supporters of Sanjay Singh, Amethi's assembly candidate. They are noisy, and openly boast expertise in booth-capturing, none of which suits Rajmohan. "We need resources, but not this Shivji ki baraat," says a supporter. The Janata Dal has rushed 10 more jeeps. But the hordes of Congress(I) vehicles make the battle look like a ruthless cavalry charging a gaggle of satyagrahis.

But the Congress(I) knows the wind blowing across Uttar Pradesh may not stop at Amethi's borders. It also faces an unexpected irritant in Kanshi Ram who could corner vital Harijan votes.

So, the Congress(I) is taking no chances. For the first time, Sonia herself is campaigning, staying at the Tatarpur Canal rest house near Jagdishpur. She traverses the dusty countryside, treading on uneven village paths despite her three-inch high heels, sticking bindis with the Congress(I) hand on the foreheads of women, pointing to the hand brooch on her red-and-white khadi sari. Her delivery in Hindi is near-perfect: "Please vote only for my husband and put your stamp on the panja." She told INDIA TODAY: "I have been working with these people for over eight years. So it's nothing new for me to campaign now." She doesn't seem to be enjoying the campaign but is more relaxed than she seems on more formal occasions.

Yet, the very fact of her unprecedented involvement in the campaign shows the degree of concern in the Rajiv camp. Surely, whatever the outcome anywhere else, Amethi is one seat the Congress(I) will try the hardest to win, fighting to the last man, the last ballot.

—SHEKHAR GUPTA in Amethi

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

But by the voting day we will be clearly ahead."

If the Congress(I) spokesmen talk in euphemisms and escapist platitudes, the opposition leaders ooze confidence. After a day's intense campaigning atop his green Maruti gypsy in his dusty, backward, Brahmin-dominated Bilhaur constituency last week, Arun Nehru relaxed on a lavishly cushioned king-size bed in one of his admirer's houses. "A wave does not respect reputation, caste, religion, stature, nothing," he said, rising on his haunches. With eyes gleaming, he adds: "Aaisi dhulai hogi Congress kee, pitayee hogee.(The Congress will be beaten to pulp)...They are finished. Finito"—stressing the Italian Finito with transparent allusions.

As INDIA TODAY correspondents travelled through the state during the first round of the campaign, it became obvious there were good reasons for the Opposition's confidence. Nowhere is the Congress(I) trying to answer any of the charges made against it by the Opposition. It is promising development and stability. The result is a curious cacophony of campaign voices where the two sides articulate their views and promises on entirely different wavelengths. And at least for the moment the people seem more receptive to the Opposition and its refrain on price rise and corruption. Further, it is locked in straight contests for 78 of the 85 Lok Sabha seats with only parties like the BSP threatening to divide the votes.

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

The situation is not so encouraging for the Opposition in the Vidhan Sabha as the Janata Dal and BJP could not work out an understanding. The Congress(I) has been given the gift of triangular fights for nearly 350 of the 425 seats.

Given the significance of the state it was hardly surprising that Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi opened his party's 1989 campaign from Uttar Pradesh—in fact, from Faizabad, the somewhat dubiously exalted city of Ram Janmabhoomi-Babri Masjid fame. After promising to usher in a Ram Rajya he made the state a frequent stop on his itinerary as he criss-crossed the country. Tiwari too was pulling out all the stops, hopping from one constituency to another in his French-made Dauphin helicopter, returning to Lucknow only late in the nights, often sleeping at the VIP lounge in the airport.

IN contrast, barring constituencies like Bilhaur (Arun Nehru), Bahraich (Arif Mohammed Khan), Ballia (Chandra Shekhar) and Pilibhit (Maneka Gandhi), the Janata Dal campaign began late, in a slovenly manner. But on November 7, V.P. Singh finally landed by train at Fatehpur, his constituency and it all began to change.

But even if V.P. Singh is able to generate a wave it will have to be a mighty strong one to be able to blow aside the Congress(I)'s inherent electoral advantages: infrastructure, resources, reach, vote banks among the Harijans, minorities and women and the promise of stability. The Congress(I) campaign depends on high-decibel electronics and swankily printed posters while the Janata Dal counters it with the word of mouth. Glamorous constituencies are a case apart but even one look at the Congress(I) and the Janata Dal offices which are situated close to each other in Badaun in western Uttar Pradesh—where former chief minister Ram Naresh Yadav fights Devi Lal's alter ego Sharad Yadav—shows the difference. The Congress(I) office with ostentatious lighting, bright slogans and fancy decoration looks like a marriage pandal. The Janata Dal office has a sombre appearance with a few party flags fluttering at the gate and bands of workers resting on hessian cots. The Janata Dal campaigners say they are conserving their scarce resources for the last, decisive round of the campaign when they will throw everything in, posters, banners, audio and video cassettes et al.

While the Congress(I) organisation went through the campaign motions with the precision of a well-oiled machine and the Opposition conserved resources for the final push, the most surprising element was the reluctance on the part of several key ruling party candidates to get down to the brasstacks. Last fortnight

FATEHPUR

The Amethi Syndrome

For voters V.P. Singh is a potential prime minister

EVEN the most seasoned campaigner could not have chosen a more suitable pulpit. In the village of Gogauli, 3 km off the Grand Trunk Road bissecting the Fatehpur Lok Sabha constituency, the portly Congress(I) candidate and Union Minister of State for Agriculture Hari Krishna Shastri stands atop a pucca chaupal addressing a hundred-odd villagers.

Shastri's back is to the cemented panchayat room which displays a television antenna. To his left is a large concrete-lined well and facing him is a gramin bank. Ask any villager. He knows all of these—the chaupal, the panchayat, the well and the bank—have been constructed because of Shastri.

"Hasn't he done a lot of work here?"

"Yes, particularly as the agriculture minister."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"So he is a good person?"

"Yes, and so soft-spoken also, but..."

"But what?"

"But Raja saab is contesting this time. The vote must go to him."

Shastri's motorcade—rather a modest one by Congress(I) standards—has turned back to the highway, to stop at the Bindki Road Chaudagra. The audience nods as Shastri stresses his contributions to the constituency. It even responds as he accuses V.P. Singh of deserting Allahabad within a year of winning from there.

But a quick survey of the audience there, and the same feeling surfaces: Shastri is a good man, but when it comes to the Raja saab, the considerations are entirely different. Says Vijay Mohan, 22, a factory hand: "We are voting for a prime minister. Other things don't matter."

There are many, in both Congress(I) and opposition camps, who think V.P. Singh could not have chosen a safer constituency. Poor and underdeveloped, it spreads right along the Ganga, flanked by the privileged Rae Bareli and Amethi on one side and the dacoit-infested Bundelkhand on the other. In terms of development, Fatehpur appears to be a town frozen in time—in dire need of a weighty representative for a turn in its fortunes.

There are other reasons too. The Thakurs, who form the bulk of Singh's support, constitute a sizeable 18 per cent of the electorate. More significant than numbers, however, is their influence at the village-level, as the most dominant caste. But just as Thakur loyalties bring in votes for Singh, they also bring in resentment from the oppressed, underprivileged communities.

V.P. Singh himself has opted for a non-casteist, soft-spoken image, but his Thakur storm-troopers show little moderation. And it is not uncommon to run into people from the backward classes complaining bitterly about that. V.P. Singh also carries the albatross of his estranged brother, Sant Bux Singh's record of inaction during the two terms served from the same constituency. But his supporters believe the current pro-V.P. Singh feeling will overshadow these factors.

There is also an element of controversy—about how V.P. Singh came to be confronted again by a son of Lal Bahadur Shastri within a year (he defeated Sunil Shastri in the '88 Allahabad by-election). It is well-known that the late prime minister treated V.P. Singh like his own son. And many say the Congress(I) has attempted for a second time to disturb his rather sanctimonious conscience. In the Allahabad campaign, V.P. Singh made no direct reference to Sunil Shastri and the compliment was returned. But Fatehpur is different.

V.P. Singh says he was keen to avoid fighting another Shastri. He had advised Shastri through Sunil, his younger brother, "a month and a half ago to change his constituency if he wanted to". But Shastri has a different version to narrate. Asserting that he never wanted to avoid fighting V.P. Singh, he says: "He is a liar, a very, very selfish, meek and ambitious person."

Shastri claims that on the contrary V.P. Singh had promised him on the steps of Parliament that he would not contest from Fatehpur. "There is no question of any family links entering this campaign," says Shastri emphatically, adding, "when my father won the 1965 war, V.P. Singh welcomed him by slashing his own thumb and putting the tilak on his forehead with his own blood. But today if Shastriji were alive, he would have fought against this man, V.P. Singh."

This is truly a no-holds-barred campaign and Shastri is fighting with his back to the wall. What makes matters worse for him is the fact that his party seems to have given up the seat. He also has to carry the burden of four of the five sitting MLAs, who have all been renominated despite at least three of them having dismal records. The only new face, Amar Singh in Bindki, is controversial for his role in the questionable deals in the cooperative bank of which he was chairman.

But Shastri is not giving up, and claims: "I am comfortably placed." V.P. Singh is contemptuous of the challenge: "I don't even have to come to Fatehpur again. The issue has already been decided." With the dice so heavily loaded against him, the Congress(I) candidate has at least one factor firmly in his favour: his rival's overconfidence.

—SHEKHAR GUPTA in Fatehpur

Photographs by JOGINDER CHAWLA

V.P. Singh talking to constituents; and Shastri (below) addressing a chaupal meeting: unequal contest

JOGINDER CHAWLA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

several of them wasted valuable time waiting for the shilanyas ceremony at Ayodhya to be over before beginning to campaign. At his pocket borough of Pratapgarh, Union Commerce Minister Dinesh Singh sat pretty with a well-manicured look untouched by the election dust and waiting for the shilanyas before jumping into the fray. "If the Government gives in to Hindu fundamentalists in Ayodhya we can all go and happily retire in Delhi and yet get elected," he said somewhat wishfully as the subsequent developments showed (see box). But the Raja of the adjoining principality of Kalakanker did not deny that he was facing heavy odds in a truly fratricidal electoral fight.

His rival is Abhey Pratap Singh, or Badey Raja as he is called in this feudal town. He is the elder son of Ajit Pratap Singh, forest minister in the Tiwari cabinet and an old Dinesh Singh supporter who left the Congress(I) in the nick of time to join the Janata Dal. So did his brother Arun who is contesting from an adjoining Vidhan Sabha constituency on a Janata Dal ticket. The embarrassed father has withdrawn into political recluse in Lucknow and Dinesh Singh misses him. Particularly so in a region where electoral fortunes are decided as much by popularity as by muscle power and where rivals often call each other by

AYODHYA

Communal Card

IT was an unusual victory celebration. As thousands streamed into the sanctum sanctorum of the curiously-shaped shrine, their heads bowed in reverence and eyes glazed by extreme religious fervour, the slogans they shouted were not just to extol the gods.

Take for instance, the favourite one: "Yeh to kewal jhanki hai, Kashi, Mathura baaki hai" (This is just the beginning, we still have to sort out Kashi and Mathura). And "Tel laga ke Dabur ka, naam mita do Babur ka" (Rub Dabur oil, wipe out Babur's name). Undoubtedly, a poor attempt at versification, but it reflected the mood on the morning of November 9 at the Ram Janmabhoomi-Babri Masjid shrine in Ayodhya.

Even though the authorities attempted to persuade the Vishwa Hindu Parishad (VHP) activists to lay the foundation stone 250 ft away from the shrine's entrance, they were ultimately allowed to lay it where they wanted to in the first place: in front of the main entrance, just 170 ft away. In a belated attempt to defend its position, the Government said the foundation stone had been laid on land declared indisputed by the Allahabad High Court. The Muslims said it was very much within the disputed area and the Hindu fundamentalists said they couldn't care less.

"The idols in the shrine shall not be moved by an inch. The new temple will take the place of the old one," said Jagdish Tangri, Punjab Shiv Sena president, ringed by six Sikh bodyguards from the Punjab Police. Also, while the VHP agreed to postpone construction of the temple till January 27, next year, there seemed no doubt that the devout would return to resume building the shrine.

Worried by the rising resentment among devout Hindus, the Government had capitulated totally. Yet with the BJP and other allied groups claiming victory, it was doubtful if the move would win any Hindu votes for the Congress(I). At the same time, it had alienated the Muslims and the subsequent days saw announcements by several key Muslim leaders to oppose the Congress(I).

Shilanyas* at Ayodhya (top); and Muslims protesting in Faizabad

At this point it was uncertain which way the Hindu vote would swing. Even V.P. Singh, who had rushed to Ayodhya on November 9, to "plead restraint" and to draw electoral mileage, was caught on the wrong foot. He was still in neighbouring Faizabad when the news came that the shilanyas had taken place peacefully. Now, if he criticised the move, it would upset the Hindus. If he didn't, it would leave the Muslims angry. Not surprisingly, he seemed visibly flustered at his news conference.

Hindu activists had chosen the right day for the shilanyas, when nearly a million pilgrims were present in Ayodhya for the panch-kosi parikrama mela, giving them ample muscle-power.

A mile away at the VHP camp, a guide at an exhibition explained to the pilgrims a pictorial representation of how Babur "demolished" the temple, killed the priests and built the mosque. At the shrine, 15 companies of paramilitary forces who manned the Maginot Line-like perimeter to guard it, had put up a banner "welcoming devotees to this sacrosanct birthplace of Lord Rama". And many of the devotees returned home with a pinch of the sacred soil dug out of the hole made for the foundation. It is abundantly clear where the sapling of communal discord will grow in the months to come.

—SHEKHAR GUPTA in Ayodhya

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Grasim Worsted Suiting

An exquisite
Terene/Wool
Worsted Suiting
collection.

GRASIM
GWALIOR
SUITING
IN A CLASS OF ITS OWN

A PRODUCT OF GRASIM INDUSTRIES LTD.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

UPTRON SL8109 TELEVISION CONSOLE IT'S TRULY SENSATIONAL!

Sleek.

Smart.

Sophisticated.

The Uptron SL8109 Television Console. Styled on the lines of tomorrow. With extra space for your VCR and tapes.

Feast your eyes on its stunning looks ... you'll know why black is beautiful.

Treat your ears to mind-blowing sound. Pouring out of its four-way speakers.

And rest assured, you're getting the greatest value.

UPTRON SL8109. Entertainment will now be measured by this unit.

SL 8109 Console-A TV and trolley unit

ULKA-D-UIL-731

UPTRON
TELEVISIONS

• COMPUTERS • SOFTWARE CONSULTANCY • COMMUNICATION SYSTEMS • COMPONENTS • CONTROL SYSTEMS • INDUSTRIAL ELECTRONICS • TELEVISIONS

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

To a Hero Honda owner, it's a one-litre road.

No, we're not stretching the facts. Just the fuel. One litre does get you a long way when you're on a Hero Honda CD 100. 80 km, to be precise.

No other bike can give you as much.

Fill it. Forget it.

Honda's technical leadership is evident in every aspect of the Hero Honda CD 100's exceptional 4-stroke engine. Complete fuel combustion ensures the phenomenal 80 km/litre* fuel-efficiency, easy maintenance, and a clean, pollution-free exhaust. For kilometre after kilometre of trouble-free service.

Our favourite performance figure, though, is the lakhs of happy owners. Who make the Hero Honda CD 100 India's largest-selling bike.

HERO HONDA

You've got a Good thing Going!

*At 40 kmph/130 kg.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

the epithet of "booth luteras (booth capturers)." Badey Raja himself talks in euphemisms: "Actually our boat is not so nice but its sails are getting the wind."

Unfortunately for the Congress(I), some of these winds have indeed wafted in from their own camp because of their tactical errors in announcing a simultaneous poll and retention of most of the old candidates. Initially the names of 25 of the 67 sitting MPs had been marked with red because they were unpopular and ineffective. At least seven of them had corruption charges against them. There were MPs like Pilibhit's Bhanu Pratap Singh, Nainital's Satendra Chandra Guria, Bareilly's Abida Ahmed, Almora's Harish Rawat, Shahjahanpur's Jitendra Prasad, Faizabad's Nirmal Khatri and Jhansi's Sujan Singh Bundela who had almost counted themselves out when the UPCC(I) election committee was meeting in Lucknow. All of them have been nominated and that too from their old constituencies.

The story is almost the same in the Vidhan Sabha also as far as ticket distribution is concerned. Only 56 of the sitting Congress(I) MLAs (supposed to have been close to the late chief minister Bir Bahadur Singh) including 20 rebels who are now contesting from the Janata Dal have been denied tickets out of a total of 268. The disaffection is palpable. At a key election meeting last fortnight, a very senior Congress(I) functionary de-

● Jahan koyee shasak na ho usey Rajiv ganarajya kehte hain,
Jo dharm bina ho shaasan usey secular rajya kehte hain,
Jahan pradhanmantri seedhey ghoos deta ho gram pradhanon ko,
Usey shisht bhasha mein panchayati raj kehte hain

(Where there is total anarchy, it is called Rajiv's democracy
Where there is no faith they call it secular raj.
And where the prime minister sends bribes directly to gram pradhans,
In polite language, they call it panchayati raj.) Opposition doggerel

HALDWANI

Tiwari's Bastion

THERE'S one assembly constituency in Uttar Pradesh where Narayan Dutt Tiwari isn't campaigning at all. Haldwani—his own constituency. That is the measure of the confidence the chief minister has in the outcome. Says he matter-of-factly: "The people of Haldwani will look after my interests."

Just as he has looked after theirs. Tiwari's husbanding of Haldwani stretches back to 1952 when he first tasted electoral victory on the Socialist Party ticket. He knows many of the local people by name. His opponents, the Janata Dal's Hukum Singh Kunwar and the BJP's Nand Kishore are pygmies in comparison.

But if Haldwani, or Nainital North as it is called, is a sure bet for the Congress(I), the same cannot be said of the Nainital Lok Sabha constituency. In the hill resort of Nainital itself, the sitting MP Satendra Chandra Guria literally faces an uphill task. The denial of the ticket to Union Defence Minister K.C. Pant has angered many. Says Ateeq Shamin, a farmer: "Had it been Tiwari himself, it would have been different. But most of us won't support his gudia (doll)", a snide reference to the ruling party candidate, Guria. The Pant factor could also affect the party's support among the Brahmins who make up 22.5 per cent of the 8.83 lakh voters. The reason: Pant is a lambi dhoti (long dhoti) or upper caste Brahmin while Tiwari is a choti dhoti (short dhoti) or lower caste Brahmin.

To complicate matters, Ramesh Rana, an influential Tharu (tribal) leader, is contesting. With 60,000 Tharus in Nainital, he could eat into the Congress(I) vote.

In the assembly constituencies too, it will be tough going. In Khatima, the DCC(I) general secretary and the sitting Congress(I) MLA are both rebel candidates while in Kashipur, the chairman of the municipality quit the Congress(I) and is contesting as an independent.

The bright point for the Congress(I) is the divided opposition—in both the Lok Sabha and the assembly contests. Also working in its favour are the goodies Tiwari has showered on Nainital, including 32 small and large industries with a total investment of Rs 800 crore. But Tiwari is still left fighting a ghost—Pant. Or perhaps two. The ruling party election posters carry a portrait of Tiwari. There is none of Rajiv Gandhi.

—DILIP AWASTHI

R.K. GUPTA

Tiwari with supporters during campaign: sitting pretty

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Tinker TOYS PRESENTS

The HOLIDAY HOLLYWOOD CONTEST

TINKER INVITES YOU AND YOUR CHILD TO HOLLYWOOD

5001 PRIZES

Hey Kids! It's funtime with Tinker Toys again. Win a fabulous trip for two to Hollywood. And Rs. 10,000 to spend there.
And that's not all. There are 5000 more prizes to be won. And winning them is so easy. Just fill in a simple quiz and a slogan. And start packing your bags.

FREE
Pocket Puzzle Diary With Each TINKER TOY.

Tinker TOYS
IMAGINATION AT PLAY

Kidstuff, 206, Desein House, DLF Commercial Complex,
Greater Kailash II, New Delhi 110 048. Tel: 6414212

Information/Contest forms freely available at all Toy Dealers.

HOLIDAY HOLLYWOOD GIFTS	NO.
• 2 Return Tickets To Hollywood And Rs. 10,000/- Spending Money	(1)
• 2 'Holiday Nepal' Packages	(1)
• Aiwa Complete Music System V 550	(1)
• Aiwa Double Stereo Cassette Recorder	(2)
• Electronic TV-Games	(2)
• Racing Cycles	(5)
• Young People's Science Encyclopedia	(5)

• Colliers Dictionary	(5)
• Child Horizons Encyclopedia	(5)
• Allwyn & Titan Sports Watches	(10)
• Hammond's Ambassador World Atlas	(5)
• Cartoon Video Cassettes	(100)
• Exciting Books	(100)
• Magnasound Audio Cassettes	(100)
• Tinker 'Holiday Hollywood' Puzzles	(2250)
• Tinker 'Mini' Jigsaws	(1400)

HERALD-KS-008/89

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

• Bhookhey ko, do aur do, char rotiyan
Vipaksh ko, do aur do, char jootiyan (For the hungry, two and two adds up to four rotis,
For the Opposition, two and two adds up to four shoes to fling at one another.) Congress(I) slogan in Kanpur

• Time is a factor against me. Do I campaign, or answer the charges? Do I bother about the so-called modesty of that Miss or Mrs Mukti Dutta, or my own political future and national interest? Z.R. ANSARI
Congress(I) candidate from Unnao, charged with attempt to rape Ms Dutta livered a stirring speech and then moments later told INDIA TODAY: "We are our own worst enemies. Maybe we should get defeated. It will do some good for the party."

Others point out the folly in not bringing in any young faces just when the party wanted to cash in on the new vote in the 18-21 age group. Tiwari, however, strongly defends the selection of candidates in which he played a key role: "We have fielded winning candidates. We will not be humbled anywhere in the state."

This is not to say that all has been hunky-dory with the Opposition. Between the BJP and the Janata Dal at least 80 rebels are in the field, eroding the Opposition's chances in the assembly poll. Says the state Janata Dal leader Mulayam Singh Yadav: "We have done the best we could in the given time. But once we win we can accommodate those partymen who could not be given tickets elsewhere."

This is counting one's chickens before they are hatched. But the Opposition is in that kind of a mood. The reality, however, is that while they have taken the lead in the Lok Sabha poll the Congress(I) may still exploit the confused scenario in the assembly poll. The Opposition's best hope is that the voter will not bother to put his stamp on one symbol for the Lok Sabha and on another for the Vidhan Sabha when he walks into the polling booth, the sanctum sanctorum of democracy.

—SHEKHAR GUPTA with DILIP AWASTHI

Maneka wooing rural voters: personal touch

PILIBHIT

Maneka's Challenge

MANEKA Gandhi is on an ebullient high in Pilibhit. She is racing through her election meetings—addressing over 100 in the span of a week—while her opponent, sitting Congress(I) MP, Bhanu Pratap Singh, has yet to make his presence felt.

The gutsy, high profile Gandhi bahu had flung herself into her campaign from day one. As one of her strategists points out: "If you begin your campaign early, you have enough time to visit the same places twice." And Maneka's innovative but inexpensive campaign is proving effective. Her supporters have painted slogans with geru (ochre) on every wall and mud hamlet. The slogans say: "Kranti ki aandhi, Maneka Gandhi." (The storm of the revolution, Maneka Gandhi). Some are even more dramatic: "Desh ke liye degi lahoo, Bharat ki bahadur bahu." (India's brave daughter-in-law will give her blood for the nation).

Accompanying that is an audio cassette of election songs. Sample: 'Drithrashtra ke hath mein sattaa, sabhi taraf andhiyara, humne dekha, dekh rahein hain, yahi hai unkaa naaraa'. (Drithrashtra holds the reins of power, there is darkness everywhere; we have seen, we are seeing, this is his slogan).

In another allusion from the Mahabharata, she narrates how Krishna used the Sudarshan Chakra to kill Shishupal. She tells the villagers: "The same 'chakra', which is my election symbol, is now available to you. Use it and kill the Shishupals running the country now." But she refrains from attacking Rajiv personally. Her crisp 15-minute speeches are models of poll oratory.

Here is the real Maneka: mature, confident, a tireless campaigner who knows exactly how to reach the rural heart. Her saris are in her party colours of green and saffron and her head is constantly covered; the perfect image of a demure but determined widow.

That carefully-tailored onslaught has virtually submerged her opponent. Bhanu Pratap Singh, in fact, was not expecting a ticket. In the initial party list, he had been nominated for the Vidhan Sabha seat of Bhojipura (Bareilly). The reason for that last-minute switch is perhaps because the constituency has 1.4 lakh Kurmi voters who may favour Singh, a Kurmi himself. But the majority of the 8.5 lakh electorate seems clearly under the spell of Maneka. As she herself predicts confidently: "Pilibhit is for me what Amethi is for Rajiv."

—DILIP AWASTHI

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

At South Indian Bank you are not just a face in a crowd.

The South Indian Bank believes in giving you personalised attention, personalised service. Its special schemes include the Vajra Nidhi Scheme, the Kalpaka Nidhi Scheme, the Jubilee Cash Certificates, and the new Home Loan Scheme. Today, if South

Indian Bank is known as the people's bank, it is because of its concern for the individual. You.

The South Indian Bank Ltd

Regd. Office: Trichur

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

MAA COMMUNICATIONS 924

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

When you buy VENUS water heaters you don't pay more.

You buy value for money.

You will value quality when you see it in VENUS water heaters.

Every part that goes into VENUS bears the stamp of quality because it is made in-house.

The exclusive safety features like fusible plug, pressure release and vacuum release valve are quality add-ons at no extra cost, built for trouble-free, long-haul service;

The catridge type element never comes into contact with water. So, no shock.

Country-wide dealer network

Manufactured and Marketed by :
STANDARD ELECTRIC APPLIANCES
H.O. & Factory :
Tuticorin, Tamil Nadu.
Branches at : Madras, Bangalore, Calcutta, Bombay, New Delhi.

In a rare call for service, you need not run after the dealer. Just one call is enough.

VENUS may be the only water heater which bears ISI mark in 10 of its models.

Choose from a quality range of 10, 15, 25, 35, 50, 70 and 100 litres capacity in vertical, horizontal and dwarf models.

Look up to the leader in quality.

IS:2082 ISI for 17 years

VENUS®
WATER HEATERS

Central Marketing Office :
S-2, Green Park Extension,
New Delhi 110 016.

ADWAVE/SEA/3906

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

KARNATAKA

Close Encounters

The Congress(I) is up against a fragmented opposition

Photographs by PRASHANT PANJIAR

Hegde on the campaign trail: tough going

A collage of confusing campaign issues churned in a deafening medley as Karnataka bestirred itself for the simultaneous Lok Sabha and assembly elections after months of political uncertainty, which was followed by a stint of President's Rule.

As the campaign entered its last phase, it was evident that this was an election that was being fought by key individual figures on the basis of their personal charisma. Issues that could turn the tide elsewhere—Bofors and the Panchayati Raj and Nagarpalika bills—have been submerged in the midst of this bitter clash of personalities.

What is of significance is that Karnataka presents a picture that the national Opposition would very much like to forget. While forging a one-to-one contest in most part of the country, the Opposition is fragmented as ever in the one state that has been its bastion for six years.

The Janata Dal headed by Ramakrishna Hegde and the Janata Party headed by his arch rival Deve Gowda, are contesting all of the 28 Lok Sabha seats and most of the 224 assembly seats. The BJP too is contesting six Lok Sabha seats and 120 assembly seats separately. The Janata Dal even failed to forge an understanding with the CPI which is contesting on its own for 15 assembly seats and a Lok Sabha seat. Thus against the backdrop of a broad nation-wide unity, the Opposition in Karnataka has ensured triangular, even quadrangular contests.

For Ramakrishna Hegde it is a back-to-the-wall fight. The aim: to refurbish his image as a leader of stature. The only way out is to lead the Janata Dal to victory. And to realise this mission, the former chief

● Besides hi-tech, the former chief minister Ramakrishna Hegde also invoked gods to give his campaign a cutting edge. Before he set off to campaign, he broke an auspicious coconut before his hi-tech rath Vaijayanta. But as the Dal cavalcade reached the outskirts of Bangalore, and a party worker suggested he visit the Gali Anjaneya (the wind god Hanuman) temple, an impatient Hegde said curtly, "I offer my prayers from here. Let's get on with it."

● In total contrast to Hegde's grumpy mood was his bete noir Deve Gowda. Cocky and cheerful, he often slapped his biceps, a picture of confidence. As his convoy raced towards Kanakapura, his constituency, his composure sagged only once—when his rath came across a funeral procession. But jollity was soon restored as supporters assured him that it was a good omen. Perking up, he often muttered, "I will show them what I am made of."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

minister had to keep away from the Lok Sabha elections.

For Hegde, however, sitting in his rath Vijayanta with wife Shakunthala and nephew Vinayak, it looked anything but easy. During the early rounds, Hegde found the crowds restive and heckling was frequent. Hegde himself confessed that while in 1985 he encountered euphoria, sympathy and admiration, he now encountered only disillusionment. The most hostile constituencies were on the outskirts of Bangalore, in Mandya, Mysore and Hassan where Deve Gowda's breakaway Janata Party has a considerable following.

But gradually, as he emerged from the shadow of Gowda's domain, Hegde saw some hope and light. In south Kanara district—home of Janardhan Poojary and Oscar Fernandes—a Congress(I) fortress, he found tremendous and spontaneous response. Said an ecstatic Hegde: "It has restored my confidence."

However, between Hegde and his dream stands the formidable Vokkaliga chieftain, Gowda, whose influence extends to 50 constituencies in south and central Karnataka. But by putting up candidates in all 224 segments, Gowda has demonstrated his single-minded devotion to wreck the Janata Dal.

In 1985, the undivided Janata Party won 139 seats polling 43.9 per cent of votes, while the Congress(I) won just 66 seats with 41.1 per cent votes. So if Gowda takes away even 2 per cent of the votes, the Janata Dal will be in trouble. "I will show them what I am capable of," Gowda said, sitting in his bandwagon called the Janata Vahini, which he stopped with a buzzer every time he saw a bunch of people.

B.K. SHARMA

GOWDA'S singular aim as he raced around the state last fortnight was to ensure at least 50 to 60 seats for his party so that he would be in a bargaining position with whoever emerges as the largest party. And he certainly looks in a position to accomplish that.

Although Karnataka has never entertained a third front—K.H. Patil and Devaraj Urs who broke away from the Congress, met with disastrous results in the late '70s—Gowda's strong communal appeal and the public disenchantment with the Janata Dal makes him a force to contend with.

This suits the Congress(I) in the state fine, though it is in no better shape. It was only when Rajiv Gandhi came around on his chopper-stop tours that the faction leaders in the Congress pantheon like Bangarappa, Gundu Rao and Veerappa Moily stood together. Such momentary camaraderie has never concealed the internecine squabbling indulged by the leaders even in the face of a possible victory.

The president of the state Congress(I), Veerendra Patil, was completely sidetracked by a cabal led by Union minister Margaret Alva in the selection of candidates. While a dazed Patil scampered from room to room in five-star hotels under police protection to escape irate ticket seekers, Gundu Rao and Jaffer Sharief succeeded in getting 30 nominations changed at the last moment. The result: the kidnapping of an official candidate, an attempted suicide, an attempted murder and scores of rebel candidates. Said Patil: "The list was entirely the party high command's business. I have nothing to do with it."

Patil had given up his Lok Sabha seat

GUNDU RAO

Back in Action

THE former Karnataka chief minister R. Gundu Rao should be able to make his much-delayed return to political centrestage by winning the South Bangalore constituency. This, however, may not be as easy as it theoretically seems, for a chunk of the 3.5 lakh-odd urbane Brahmin voters on whom he banks heavily might discard him mainly because of his brash and uncouth style of functioning. But as things have turned out, his opponent, the Janata Dal's Raghupathy, who was his colleague in the Youth Congress(I), also belongs to the lumpen school of politics, and was nominated against all caste and communal logic. In fact, it is BJP candidate Ramachandra Gowda who could queer the pitch for both of them.

Many years of political hermitage haven't affected his style—as chief minister he once dived into a pool to mark its inauguration—and Gundu Rao still goes around making promises of beautifying the city. He also takes pains to remind the voters that he does not make hollow promises. He chose Bangalore South as he wanted to take on Ramakrishna Hegde, but has had to settle for Hegde's confidant. "Hegde backed out for reasons I do not know," Rao says, exuding confidence.

But the one factor that could really upset his apple-cart is a low turn out, for the city seems to be in the grip of political ennui, with even Rajiv Gandhi's speech attracting only a sketchy crowd.

Rao with supporters

The faction-ridden Congress(I) may not get a great fillip from the emergence of Gundu Rao. But at least Rao is adding a lot of colour to the often tense and bitter political climate in the state.

—CHIDANAND RAJGHATTA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

for a ticket for the Chincholi assembly constituency, after an assurance that he would be projected as leader. Instead he found himself in a whirlpool of infighting and there was no indication that the other leaders in the party accepted him as the leader. Between bouts of tea drinking and recrimination, Patil was constantly on the phone monitoring who among his enemies in the party were sabotaging his chances. But in one rare spurt of cautious optimism, Patil ventured: "If we work together as a team, victory is ours."

The result of such misgivings is that the Congress(I) has little to tell the people other than to squeal about the Janata Dal's alleged maladministration. Hegde and Gowda, on the other hand, are approaching the electorate in a more positive frame of mind. Hegde has chosen to project the modest achievements of his six-year administration: Panchayati Raj, dole in the form of subsidised food, clothing and pensions and providing water and electricity to every village. It is not much, but what appears to impress voters is his humility. "Yes, we made mistakes. We fought among ourselves. But we still did a better job in six years than the Congress did in three decades," he says in his meetings. Says Doddarange Gowda, a farmer in Bidadi village: "It is true, they did some good things. But they should not have squabbled like cocks."

If Hegde is remorse personified, Gowda is full of earthy promises including a green revolution in a state which has a pathetic 20 per cent irrigation. He has also been talking of bringing about Kannada Swabhiman (self-respect), though little has happened in the state to harm this concept.

But what stands out is the studious avoidance by all major campaigners of national issues. Neither Bofors nor the Ayodhya dispute found a mention in any campaign speech. Corruption as an issue receded into the background. And surprisingly even Hegde did not try to take advantage of the communal situation. It was only when he reached Muslim-dominated localities that he touched briefly on the communal situation blaming the Congress(I) for a spate of riots. Otherwise it is an election dominated by local issues.

In fact, the election for the 28 Lok Sabha constituencies in the state has not generated as much interest as it should have, even Janata Dal leaders conceding that the Congress(I) will most probably walk away with most of the seats.

Deve Gowda, whose party has two key candidates in Bangalore North (Syed Shahabuddin) and Hassan (H.N. Nanje Gowda, the expelled Congress(I) (MP), makes no secret of the fact that he is unconcerned about the Lok Sabha results. Most of the resources from the Janata Dal and the Janata Party are being channelled into the assembly elections.

It's only the Congress(I) which is concentrating on the Lok Sabha poll. Of the 28 constituencies nation-wide which have always voted Congress MPs in all general elections, 11 are in Karnataka. Besides, several bigwigs of the party—B. Shankaranand, Oscar Fernandes, Janardhan Poojary, Jaffer Sharief and Gundu Rao—seek to return from the state. Says Rao: "Karnataka has never deserted the Congress—not even after the Emergency."

Karnataka has a history of swinging pendulum-like between electoral poles. In December 1984, the state voted for the Congress(I) in the Lok Sabha election and in a remarkable volte-face in March 1985 voted the Janata Party to the Assembly. There are enough reasons this time for the electorate to exhibit such political fine-tuning and differentiate between the needs and equations of a Lok Sabha and assembly poll.

—CHIDANAND RAJGHATTA

Deve Gowda atop his Vahini; Veerendra Patil

●If parts of the Representation of the Peoples Act 1951 are enforced, many leaders could get arrested or fined. The Chief Electoral Officer of Karnataka, A. Bharat, reminded parties of the stringent section 127A of the Act which states that all posters and handbills must bear the names and addresses of the printer and publisher. The printer must also obtain an identity certificate signed by the publisher and attested by two persons. More, the certificate copy must be sent along with each poster for approval.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

How to go on a money saving drive with an RPM meter

- Save fuel
- Extend engine life
- Reduce engine repairs

Engine RPM is the unfailing key to fuel economy and reduced engine wear and tear.

Determining the optimum RPM, (usually in the mid-range), when the engine develops maximum "TORQUE", isn't easy.

Too high an RPM and fuel economy reduces with increased wear and tear on the engine. Too low, and you're losing out on fuel economy again, while straining the engine.

So take the guess work out of gauging optimum RPM. Install the new electronic RPM meter — from PRICOL. Designed for 3 and 4 cylinder petrol engines, optimum RPM range for each vehicle is given with the meter.

Start saving money right away. Go on a money saving drive, with a Pricol electronic RPM meter.

Rs. 600/- Only.
Inclusive of Excise, CST & Octroi. Local Sales tax extra.

pricol

Premier Instruments and Controls Ltd.
Post Box No. 6331, 1087B, Avanashi Road, Coimbatore-641 037, India.
Phone: 0422 31521, 22, 23, 24 Grams: PRICOL Telex: 0855 376 PIL IN

Distributors: South: • T.V. Sundaram Iyengar & Sons Ltd., • Madras Auto Service • Sundaram Motors • India Motor Parts & Accessories Ltd. (IMPAL) North: • IMPAL (New Delhi, Jalandhar, Jaipur, Jodhpur & Kanpur) • Motor Sales Co. (Delhi & Kanpur) • Lakshmi Motor Co. (Delhi) • Daulat Motor Co. (Jaipur) West: • Central Automobiles (Bombay, Ahmedabad & Indore) East: • IMPAL (Calcutta, Patna, Cuttack, Gauhati & Dhanbad) • Goyal Auto Agencies (Gauhati).

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Attn: Executives, Businessmen, Professionals, Students

Stop underlining Start highlighting

With World class, Non-fading, Fluorescent Hi-liter Pens by Luxor

Once and for all, do away with all your messy underlining problems with one master stroke. With fluorescent hi-liter pens by Luxor. In five colours — yellow, green, pink, orange and blue. Highlight right, important facts and figures in memos, documents, business correspondence, text books, even on computer printouts. Pick one, or all five today!

Exciting writing

By Luxor®

Luxor Pen Co.,
229 Okhla Industrial Estate, Phase-III, New Delhi-20, Phones: 633318, 6835607, 6833372, Tlx: 031-75069 SIGN-IN, Fax: 011-635694, Ph: Bombay: 6730251, Calcutta: 250407

CLARION D 213 R

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

WHEN DO YOU WISH YOUR COURIER WAS DHL?

WHEN

YOUR PARENT COMPANY

IS SCREAMING AT YOU

BECAUSE

THEIR REPORT TO THE BOARD

IS BEHIND SCHEDULE

BECAUSE

THEY DIDN'T GET

YOUR FIGURES

BECAUSE

THE FLOPPY DISC

HADN'T ARRIVED

BECAUSE

YOUR COURIER WASN'T

DHL.

RAKA 2187 ISI 0

THAT'S WHEN.

BECAUSE DHL HAS MORE OFFICES WORLDWIDE THAN ANY OTHER COURIER, YOU'RE IN SAFE HANDS ALL THE WAY.

To contact us, please refer to your Telephone/Yellow Pages Directory.

DHL
WORLDWIDE EXPRESS®
DHL THE COURIER DIVISION OF AIRFREIGHT LIMITED.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ANDHRA PRADESH

Chinks in the Armour

The Telugu Desam faces a rejuvenated Congress(I)

IT is the same act of a continuing drama. Even the attire—saffron shirt and trousers—and the vehicle are familiar. For the fifth time in seven years, N.T. Rama Rao, 60, the creator of Telugu Desam Party and the destroyer of many age-old political equations was on the road again. Only this time his dream and rhetoric are not just of a new Andhra Pradesh but a new India.

For the chairman of the National Front and the chief minister of Andhra Pradesh, the task is awesome. He has to lead the Telugu Desam back to power in the state against a rejuvenated Congress(I) which he had decimated seven years ago, deliver to the confident national opposition 25-odd MPs and then serve as a catalyst for forging a Janata Dal-led coalition government in case of a opposition victory. A gigantic cut-out of Rama Rao that looms over the busiest intersection in New Delhi is symbolic of his aspirations.

The Telugu Desam campaign has the unmistakable imprint of the Rama Rao formula—blitzkrieg of film shorts and videos. Every cinema in the state has been given a 22-minute film on the Chaitanya Ratham and a 18-minute trailer of the unfinished Brahmarishi Viswamitra.

In the first film, Rama Rao's filmstar son Balakrishna—who is touring parts of the state that his father might not reach—is shown in front of a statue of Mahatma Gandhi talking political morality and clips of all major events in the party's history. The party also sold video cassettes of the film at Rs 60 a copy. Said Rama Rao's son-in-law and party politburo member N. Chandrababu Naidu: "The film is intended to be a reminder of the aims and

SHYAM TEKWANI

Rama Rao atop Chaitanya Ratham: on the road

● Life imitates art in the Andhra Pradesh elections. One of the most memorable scenes in Telugu film archives is in Sri Krishna Thulabharam. The attractive star, Jamuna, playing Satyabhama kicks Krishna who is kneeling at her feet. Krishna is played by N.T.Rama Rao. Now, she is hoping that she can repeat that scene in real life, albeit metaphorically. Jamuna is contesting the Rajahmundry Lok Sabha seat on a Congress(I) ticket and the fifty films she acted in with Rama Rao are added irony. But she has lost none of her histrionic talents. Says she: "The people wait till late at night to hear me list the broken promises of Rama Rao."

● Ghanshyam Gupta, independent candidate in the Adilabad Lok Sabha constituency, gave a goat, his symbol, to a group of young men to bring it along on his padayatra. The next day when he landed up for the campaign the goat was missing. The young men had decided that the goat could be put to better use. They had made a meal of it.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

objectives of the party and what it has achieved so far. It is a political message." Rama Rao did not forget to include a dessert in this hearty multi-course meal: song and dance sequences from Viswamitra.

The rabbit that Rama Rao has pulled out of his political hat, however, is the Prachara Ratham—a lorry with hoardings and cut-outs of him as Viswamitra and Balakrishna in the role of Harishchandra. The ratham—one for every district—takes along a troupe of folk artistes who entertain the villagers from a platform before the screening of the two films or playing the audio cassettes of songs and Rama Rao's speeches. The troupe also stages a satire Mr Clean. And to complete the invasion of the tinselworld, there are lesser known stars like Ravu Gopala Rao and Murali Mohan pleading with voters to stamp on the Telugu Desam's by-now famous symbol, the cycle.

Not surprisingly, the Congress(I) too decided to seek votes through the video. The party ordered cassettes of Gandipet Rahasyam (secrets of Gandipet, the party headquarters) a biting satire on Rama Rao made by Prabhakar Reddy. And cinema theatres are supplied with Indirama Charithram (the life of Indira Gandhi). But clearly, the Congress(I) was no match for the Telugu Desam's tinsel techniques.

What the Congress(I) lacked was an anchor like Rama Rao. It was hesitant to project the PCC(I) chief M. Chenna Reddy, whose reputation has been besmirched with corruption allegations. Instead, the party in the initial stages of the campaign projected Rajiv Gandhi as the great hope. But as the campaign progressed, the local bosses were asked to battle it out and Rajiv

Chenna Reddy on a padayatra

M. CHENNA REDDY

Street Smart

DEBARRED in 1969 from contesting polls by the Supreme Court—which found him guilty of corrupt electoral practices in an assembly poll—20 years later, Dr Marri Chenna Reddy finds himself at the helm of the Congress(I) campaign in Andhra Pradesh.

Obviously, the Congress(I) high command came to the conclusion that only a street-smart politician like Reddy—whose fund-raising abilities are legendary—could break N.T. Rama Rao's stranglehold over the people of the state. At 71, Reddy is a hardened combatant, who has faced many ups and downs in a lengthy political career. He was, in fact, pulled out of political wilderness in May this year, when he was given the task of containing the Telugu Desam. As president of the Andhra Pradesh Congress(I) Committee, Reddy now has his job cut out for him in the state which faces both Lok Sabha and assembly elections.

In the few months since his appointment, Reddy has undoubtedly galvanised the slumbering state unit of the party into action. His first act was to get the warring factions to forget their differences—at least temporarily. And he has relentlessly kept up the pressure on Rama Rao through measures like the mass signature campaign asking President R. Venkataraman to dismiss the state ministry for misrule and the 'jail bharo' agitation to protest the Telugu Desam's anti-people policies.

But Reddy did not get sufficient time to gear up his party for the elections. The preponement of the polls caught him unawares. Now instead of trying to improve the party's performance in the state, Reddy is busy ensuring that he does not lose from his own constituency.

On the basis of traditional poll arithmetic, Reddy had calculated that the Sanathnagar Assembly constituency in Hyderabad would be a safe seat. Though it lost the seat in the last assembly polls, in the 1986 Hyderabad corporation elections the Congress(I), bagged eight of the eleven divisions falling within Sanathnagar.

Perhaps, it has been a miscalculation on Reddy's part. For the Telugu Desam nominee—the portly state Housing Minister Sripathi Rajeswar, who also happens to be the founder-president of the All-India NTR Fans' Association—is no pushover. A Rama Rao loyalist—who specialises in touching the actor-politician's feet at the slightest pretext—Rajeswar has the chief minister's whole hearted support.

"Annagaru is the people's leader. I have always won with his blessings," says Rajeswar. His trump card is Reddy's past. "He has the distinction of being debarred from holding public office by the highest court in the land," he says. Reddy is rising to the challenge by launching an intensive door-to-door campaign. Says he: "Campaign styles have changed over the years. Money does not influence directly anymore, one must be humble before the voter."

The Reddy-Rajeswar showdown has turned the spotlight on Sanathnagar. The recent clash between their followers and the subsequent police firing shows that both men are in deadly earnest.

Even if Rajeswar loses, his party can claim a victory of sorts. For the man who set out to contain the Telugu Desam, had to struggle to ensure that he was not humbled in his own constituency.

—AMARNATH K. MENON

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE NO. 1 AUTO BELT. FOR A NUMBER OF REASONS.

1 ROBOTIC TECHNOLOGY

Powerflex Raw Edge Cogged Belt is the result of Robotic Technology. Ideal for any car, truck, tractor and all mopeds.

2 MADE BY THE NO. 1

Powerflex is from Fenner. The No. 1 in power transmission. Undisputed leader for 60 years.

3 LASTING VALUE FOR MONEY

Powerflex is a superior quality Cogged Belt designed and tested successfully for flawless performance. Minimum slippage for maximum fuel efficiency. And a life span close to 100,000 kms.

4 NO. 1 IN SALES

Powerflex is an original part in every new Maruti, Contessa, Premier 118 NE, Tata and Leyland truck and most of the technologically advanced mopeds. The international quality of Fenner Powerflex has made it India's first choice.

POWERFLEX
RAW EDGE COGGED BELT
DON'T DRIVE WITHOUT IT

everest/S89/453

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Are you forcing your child to smoke?

Every time you smoke, your loved ones are forced to breathe in the dangerous air you breathe out...

Cigarette smoke contains vaporised tar, nicotine, hydrogen cyanide, carbon monoxide, and over 200 other deadly chemicals. These poisons slowly destroy your family's health : corroding the lungs, weakening the heart, and bringing on heart attacks, paralytic strokes, and cancer of the throat, lungs, pancreas and bladder.

So stop smoking. After all, do you love your cigarettes more than your family? Go for a cancer check-up today, and follow it up once a year.

Cancer Insurance : a big helping hand

It's an unpleasant thought, but ... if cancer strikes, it could cripple you financially. The Indian Cancer Society can protect you with India's only Cancer Insurance Policy.

It covers you, your spouse and two dependent children upto Rs.50,000 - 75,000 for all cancer diagnosis and treatment costs. The premium is low : it works out to less than a rupee per day. Isn't that worth it? Write or phone for more details - and get insured today!

For appointments at our branches, contact:
- B-82, Defence Colony, New Delhi 110 024. Phone: 617628.
- 15-A, Sarat Bose Road, Calcutta 700 020.
- c/o.Madura Coats Ltd., 144, M.G. Road, Bangalore 560 001. Phone: 578121.
- 127, Angappa Street, Madras 600 001. Phone: 587678/589800.

INDIAN CANCER SOCIETY

National HQ., Lady Ratan Tata Medical & Research Centre, M. Karve Road, Cooperage, Bombay-400 021. Phone: 2029941/42

Early discovery, early recovery

Please donate generously. Donors are exempted from income tax for the entire amount gifted to the Society as per clause (II) sub-section (1) Sec. 35 and Sec. 80 G of the Income-Tax Act, 1961.

daCunha ICS 4 89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Gandhi revised his schedule so as to be in the state just twice between November 1 and the polling day.

The choice of film stars like Krishna and the heart-throb of yesteryears Jamuna as contestants was a clear indication that the party was desperately looking for crowd-pullers. Chenna Reddy was however optimistic: "Our chances are bright." His optimism is based on the fact that the Congress(I) gave an impressive performance in the mandal and zilla parishad elections cornering 41.60 per cent votes.

The Telugu Desam, like the Congress(I), had to contend with intense infighting as many of the new aspirants were brushed aside by Rama Rao in an eleventh hour manoeuvre. He knew that if sitting legislators were denied tickets they could whip up a rebellion within. For a man who held unquestioned sway over his party and the state, this was a come-down. After the lists were announced he expelled seven MLAs who dared contest as rebels.

ANOTHER factor for the optimism in Congress(I)—it got 41.81 per cent votes to Telugu Desam's 44.82 per cent in the 1984 Lok Sabha polls—is Rama Rao's wavering stand on the Naxalites and the fact that he has alienated government employees and the state deficit is an amazing Rs 600 crore. "We face a tough challenge this time and it is going to be a keen fight in several constituencies," admitted a Telugu Desam politburo member who however expects the party to get 25 seats in Lok Sabha elections and close to 180 out of 294 assembly seats. The Congress(I) on the other hand hopes to win 25 Lok Sabha seats and at least 140 assembly seats.

What is certain is that the Congress(I) is poised to improve on its 1984 performance of six seats in the new Lok Sabha and 50 seats in the Assembly. The Telugu Desam's confidence stems from the fact that there is a one-to-one fight in all the Lok Sabha constituencies except Hyderabad and some assembly seats where the Majilis-e-Ittehadul Muslimeen can tilt the balance—its symbol—either way.

Prachara Ratham: new techniques

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

Like the Telugu Desam the Congress(I) also made last-minute changes in its list resulting in a lot of confusion and in some of their official candidates not getting the symbol of the hand. The party also gave tickets to three MPs, six former ministers and three MLAs who resigned from the Telugu Desam. The last-minute VIP defector, G. Narayana Rao who was speaker of the Assembly was welcomed with a party ticket to the Maharajgunj Assembly constituency, but was withdrawn soon after, as the Youth Congress(I) staged a near-revolt. As Speaker, Rao had imprisoned Youth Congress(I) activists who had stormed the Assembly. Union Minister for Industries J. Vengala Rao who was instrumental in drawing out Narayana Rao and getting him a ticket had high hopes for his party. "There is a strong anti-Rama Rao wave in the state," he said.

There has not been euphoria visible among the electorate—at least not the upheaval that accompanied the Chaitanya Ratham in its earlier forays. There is however no reason why the saffron-clad occupant of the Chaitanya Ratham, should not take his appointed place on the throne, albeit with a smaller margin.

—AMARNATH K. MENON

● Ratnakumari, the Congress(I) candidate for the Vijayawada (East) assembly seat, scored a point much before the campaign started. The widow of V.M. Ranga Rao who was murdered last year, Ratnakumari, approached the courts for protection by the CRPF as she did not have faith in the state police, and her plea was granted. She is the only candidate who goes about campaigning with a CRPF security ring.

● N.T. Rama Rao's campaign is not just cacophony and glitzy video shows. His strong point is his histrionics including calculated expressions and voice modulations. During his speeches—he practises three- and five-minute versions—he borrows heavily from Andhra Pradesh's folklore and mythology like burrakatha and harikatha and uses colloquial words like koodu (grub) which are used by the masses. He is able to establish instant rapport with the audience. No wonder they call him the king of the roadshow.

● Rajiv Gandhi, born in India, educated in London, was not fit to be prime minister of the country, because he did not know about the Vedas and the Bhagvad Gita.

N.T. RAMA RAO at a press conference in Rajahmundry

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

When in Bangalore, stay with friends...

Your friends at

Holiday Inn®

28, Sankey Road, Bangalore-560 052.
Ph: 77931/79451, Telex: 0845-2354 MACH IN.
Cable: MACHARLES, Fax: 0812 77676.

For Instant Reservations contact our Sales Offices at:

Bombay: 3A, Stadium House, Block No. 2, V Nariman Point, Church Gate, Bombay 400 020. Tel: 2873165-66-67. Tlx: 011-2615 CTS IN, or Holiday Inn-Bombay, Balraj Sahani Marg, Juhu Beach, Bombay-400 049. Tel: 6204444/6206269. Tlx: 011-78404 HINN IN/011-78411 HOLI IN. Fax: (0091-22) 6204452. ● Madras: 209, Mowbrays Road, Alwarpet, Madras-600 018. Tel: 456914/455218/458115. ● New Delhi: Holiday Inn Connaught Plaza New Delhi, Barakhamba Avenue, Connaught Place, New Delhi-110 001. Tel: 3320101. Tlx: 031-61186 HIND IN. Fax: 3325335.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"In the highly competitive world of modern business, what is probably more difficult than reaching the top, is staying there. And in this respect, the role of an efficient, versatile computer support system cannot be over-emphasised.

So when I went about choosing a computer company I had certain parameters in mind. In the first place to prevent machine malfunction I needed a company that would use only the finest quality components.

But, since even the finest machines can break down, I needed a company committed to providing quality service. With a service team quick on the uptake.

Then, the company would have to have a national and not a territorial orientation. So that our branch offices, wherever they are, would get the same quality of service.

And of course, most importantly, I was looking for a company with the right kind of attitude towards customer satisfaction. A company that kept in touch. Was responsive to our needs.

PCL, when they started out with us, did have their share of problems. The high quality of service demanded by us kept them on their toes, and they did slip up initially a couple of times. On delivery schedules. On service.

But what really emerged in our relationship was a keenness on their part to listen. To learn. To understand our needs. And to provide professional solutions to our problems.

Today the relationship has matured. The problems have been ironed out. And I'm happy to say that on all the parameters I've talked about, PCL has come close to my expectations.

Nobody's perfect. It's the ones that strive towards perfection, that stand apart from the rest."

PCL

India's fastest growing computer company.

Pertech Computers Ltd.

Corporate Office : E-46/10, Okhla Phase-II, New Delhi-110 020.

Tel : 6847687, 6841864, 6846472, 6837379, 6832307.

erest/d89/PCL 222

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

"I didn't expect PCL to match our exacting service and support standards"

Venky Ramanan
Vice President, American Express Bank Ltd

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The new instrument cluster of the Premier Padmini.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Everything about the new Padmini is quite spectacular. You must sit inside to fully appreciate the finer points.

Like the elegant back-lit LED dashboard. The extra-soft two-spoke steering wheel. The three-speed wipers. The handbrake indicator light. The quartz clock. The velour upholstery. The perfectly fitted air-conditioner. And, of course, the fuel efficiency.

Driving the Padmini is now an even greater pleasure.

The Premier Padmini is moving up in life.

We've upgraded all our Padmini models. All models can accommodate air-conditioners. Every car now comes with a special anti-theft lock-cum-ignition switch, a back-lit instrument cluster, hazard warning and reversing lights and plush new upholstery. Check out the new Premier Padmini, you will be delighted with what you see.

PREMIER PADMINI

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

The Premier Automobiles Ltd.

PAL

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE RAINBOW SEAL THAT SAYS IT'S REAL.

On the back of every Citizen timepiece is a seal designed to protect you against shoddy imitations, some even bearing a so called "seal".

To tell the difference, simply hold the seal with the Citizen logo against the light. See how the surface reflects the many colours of the rainbow.

Only Citizen timepieces carry this distinctive seal. So be sure. Examine the seal. The rainbow reflection will show it's real.

CITIZEN

CITIZEN IS A REGISTERED TRADEMARK OF CITIZEN WATCH CO. JAPAN.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

(From left) Sinha, Rajiv and Mishra: troubled triumvirate

BIHAR

Paying the Price

The ruling party faces the prospect of being routed

ELECTIONEERING picked up late in Bihar. But in the end, that will make little difference to the outcome. Two weeks into the campaign, the electoral prospects for the Congress(I) in the state wore the look of grim despair. Nothing that the ruling party tried to do to turn the tide, seemed to come off.

Its poll rhetoric on the threat to the nation's intergrity and security failed to cut any ice. Congress(I) candidates—including Rajiv's propaganda chief, K.K. Tewary—were jeered, slapped and shouted down. And even opposition disunity, its rather poor choice of candidates and the so-called 'friendly contests' between opposition parties in around 20 of the 54 Lok Sabha constituencies, seemed to make little difference to the electorate.

But the most significant pointer was that Rajiv Gandhi, the party's biggest crowd-puller, failed to attract anything but the sparest crowds. The public indifference to Rajiv Gandhi's election campaign at Hajipur and Muzaffarpur was a dramatic—and telling—change. Last year, in the very same venues, he had drawn mammoth crowds. Last fortnight he seemed to be addressing vacant spaces and policemen.

There were other signs that the ruling party was in serious trouble. The party's other vote-catcher, BPCC(I) President Dr Jagannath Mishra, fared even worse. At his meetings in the heart of Mithila, Mishra's political backyard, he was greeted by young men waving black flags and expressing their derision of his poll promises.

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

Two Congress(I) MLAs in the Bihar Assembly quit the party. One got a Janata Dal nomination to contest from Munger, jeopardising another seat that the Congress(I) was sanguine about. Two rebel candidates in Kishanganj and in Khagaria added to the ruling party's discomfiture. Significantly, both the MLAs and a former MLA, Basant Singh of Dumrao, who left the Congress(I) and switched to the Opposition after the poll announcement, are Rajputs.

Happening as they did, so early into the campaign, those signs looked pretty ominous for the ruling party. Remarked Ashok Singh, an Aurangabad voter: "If Mishra is hooted in Mithila and the Congress(I) is uncertain about retaining strongholds like Aurangabad and Purnea, a rout is inevitable."

His words sound prophetic. The negative wave against the Congress(I) in Bihar is almost a physical thing. Everywhere, ruling party stalwarts seemed to be on the run. K.K. Tewary in Buxar, Krishna Sahi in Begusarai and L.P. Sahi in Muzaffarpur were all battling with their backs to the wall. The general anger over the stagnation in the state has finally spilled over and is finding strident electoral expression. At most meetings, Congress(I) candi-

• In Bihar where booth-capturing is common, parties are competing to form brigades to prevent booth-capturing. The Indian Peoples Front, a wing of the Vinod Mishra group of the CPI(ML)—contesting in 11 seats—has formed squads to escort voters to polling booths and resist booth-capturing. Lalu Prasad Yadav, Janata Dal candidate from Chapra, has formed the Green Brigade to cut noses of booth-capturers. And the NSUI, has announced that it would chop off the hair of any trouble-maker. Hair-raising.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

dates had no answers to the questions put forward to them by angry voters.

But if the ruling party faces the prospect of being demolished, it is a situation entirely of its own making. The years of neglect that have reduced Bihar to one of the most backward states in the country are now coming to roost. Jaleshwar Yadav of Chapra echoes the general mood when he says: "Things are getting from bad to worse. Why should we not want a change?"

The Congress(I) has re-nominated all but four sitting members, which, in electoral terms, could prove suicidal. Virtually half of the 54 Congress(I) candidates have been members of Parliament for two consecutive terms, with very little to show for it as far as the people are concerned.

Even Bihar's traditional electoral weapons—money and muscle power—have been blunted by the negative wave. One example: Tapeshwar Singh, the cooperative don and political financer, whose boasts of being a "one-man employment exchange" have boomeranged. Many of his loyal workers have turned against him. As one says: "We

BHAGALPUR

Grave Omen

LIKE the other 520-odd Lok Sabha constituencies in the country, Bhagalpur too goes to the polls this month. But unlike elsewhere, the electoral mood in the town is not festive. Campaigning is virtually absent, and hanging thick in the air is a pall of suspicion and gloom, the result of the ghastly communal killings that began on October 24 and have since then claimed more than 200 lives.

The electoral consequences of the Bhagalpur killings transcend the district boundaries. The Muslim psyche has been badly hurt everywhere and the anger is directed against the prime minister and the Congress(I).

Says Muhammad Shamshad, an embittered Central Government employee in Patna: "When the prime minister went to Bhagalpur on October 26, he promised to restore order in two days. What happened after that has left us seething in rage."

Such feelings are understandable. One of the worst carnages took place after the prime ministerial visit—in Chandeli, where about a hundred persons left in the protection of the police by army personnel were butchered after the army left. Looting and arson continued unabated and relief measures were grossly inadequate. Night curfew continued well into November and the submission of nomination papers, their scrutiny and the withdrawal of candidates took place while curfew was on—an unprecedented occurrence.

For the sitting Congress(I) MP, former chief minister Bhagwat Jha Azad, the battle ahead is daunting. Even in 1984, at the height of the sympathy wave, Azad won by only around 30,000 votes while Faiyaz Bhagalpuri, a little-known figure, polled a staggering 1,70,000 votes—mostly of Muslims. Now, with Muslims turning against the ruling party, Azad's prospects are bleak.

Muslim leaders in the ruling party are now feeling the full blast of their community's ire. Muhammad Hussain Azad, state health minister, faced a group of visitors who asked in anguish: "Should we join the BJP? At least, our lives and property can be saved then." In Patna, at a meeting of the Emarat-e-Sharia, speakers asked Muslim ministers in the state Government to step down.

The greatest beneficiary has been the Opposition—specifically, the communist parties. Says Mohammed Suhail of the Jamaat-e-Islamiya: "We have taken a conscious decision to support candidates of the communist parties wherever we can." The Urdu press has lavishly praised both the CPI and the CPI(M) for their secular stand on the issue of Ramshila puja and communal violence. The visit of V.P. Singh to Bhagalpur has also won the Janata Dal many supporters among the Muslims.

Against Azad, the Janata Dal has put up Chunchun Yadav who is expected to corner most of the backward caste votes and possibly much of the Hindu votes. He is taking care to ensure that. On November 5, the day of the chhat festival, he put pitchers full of milk at different places in the town for the benefit of worshippers of the sun god. Azad, on the other hand, is accused of patronising Muslim gangsters in the town.

Massacre victims: burning issue

With both Muslims and Hindus against him, Azad's only hope is that the elections won't be held at all. But the Government seems intent to prove that the situation in Bhagalpur is normal. Says Ajay Tripathi, a high court lawyer: "Anyone can challenge the election by saying that because of the curfew in the town, he was unable to file his nomination." Another reason is proferred by Shakeeluzamma, a deputy minister: "Fifty thousand Muslims are in relief camps and unlikely to exercise their franchise."

But Shakeeluzamma also voices the petrification in the ruling party when he says: "If they do come out on polling day, who knows what is going to happen." —UTTAM SENGUPTA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

KHODAY'S

DEMOCRAT

Soda

EXTRA SPECIAL

When it's time to celebrate

ULKA/K/223B/89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Joy. A letter arrived in the morning post. I'd been invited to a Film Maker's Workshop. World-wide. In New York. Panic. I had to leave the next day. I had no warm clothes. And New York in the winter. Second only to the North Pole. Then of course there was the cosmetic angle. I'd have to look smart as well. After all, I'd soon be in designer country, right? Well, I reached designer country. And all went well. Eventless, till the last evening. We were watching a Hitchcock classic. In the darkness. A soft voice whispered behind me, "Nice sweater." My heart stood still for a second. That wasn't an American drawl. I know an Indian voice when I hear one. We went out that evening. Alisha and I. And the next. "You know, it's your sweater that did it...", she said, her eyes twinkling. "Its colour ... its style..." New York in the winter. Second only to heaven.

K·N·I·T·W·E·A·R by Park Avenue by Raymond's

Style... it never goes out of fashion.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

LINTAS PA 108 2539

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Does a short run leave you exhausted? Do you have the energy to play with the kids after a day's work? Can you touch your toes?

No? Then you're in poor health, and it may be weight related.

The good news is you can do something about it. With a little help from British Health Products (BHP).

The nutritionally balanced way to weight correction.

British Health will offer, not 'miracle cures' or instant solutions, but products that are scientific, simple, proven.

And most of all, safe. These will be nutritional and dietary supplementation plans to help you attain the right weight through weight loss or gain, as necessary. There will also be a plan to help you maintain your weight.

British Health will also introduce other products for people whose busy lives leave them with very little time to look after their health.

These will be a range of products designed specifically for quick energy, for digestive disorders, for feminine problems, and others. The British Health range will also include everyday foods formulated in a nutritionally correct manner.

All made in association with Booker of the UK, which has a 40% equity stake in British Health Products.

In Europe, it runs a premier health food chain and manufactures some of the most popular health food brands.

British Health Products uses this vast experience and know-how, and brings you these best-selling healthcare products modified to suit Indian climates, culture and food habits.

Products that are made in a state-of-the-art plant, fully air-conditioned and dust-free. And made to stringent quality control standards that match international norms.

Starting with the weight correction range of products. Trimline, for weight reduction, Maxim, for weight gain and Balance for weight maintenance.

Can you reach the top of this page without panting for breath?

Introducing Booker, the worldwide healthcare people.

Booker is a UK-based company whose worldwide annual sales exceed £ 2 billion (Rs. 5,500 crores). In its home country, Booker is the market leader in health foods and nutritional supplements. In the US, it is one of the largest suppliers of nutritional aids.

For any information on these products and how you can obtain them by V.P.P. just post the coupon below.

Marketing Department, British Health Products (India) Ltd.,
15th Floor, Chiranjiv Tower, 43, Nehru Place, New Delhi-110 019

Yes! I want to know more about the weight correction range of products and how to obtain them by V.P.P.

Name _____ Age _____

Address _____

_____

_____

_____

Sex: M ☐ F ☐ Weight: _____ Height: _____

British Health Products. Helping you stay healthy.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

stuck our necks out to capture booths for him and we have been fighting court cases ever since. What has he done for us?"

Local issues have thus overshadowed national issues. And the Opposition is busy reaping the electoral harvest. The laughter that greets opposition digs at the prime minister is one obvious indication of this. Chandra Shekhar's favourite campaign sally, "Have you ever seen a braver prime minister who hides behind bullet proof vests and screens and exhorts unarmed persons to combat terrorists courageously?" is met with a sad shake of the head. The mood is sombre, but anger at the ruling party's failures and neglect bubbles just below the surface.

Even in Congress(I) strongholds, ruling party candidates—Chief Minister S.N. Sinha's daughter-in-law Shyama in Aurangabad and her mother Madhuri Singh in Purnea—are finding the going tough, although their rivals are relative lightweights. In Bihar's electoral context, that says a lot for which way the wind is gusting.

Further, the Bhagalpur communal massacre has caused a burning anger among the Muslims against the Congress(I) and Rajiv Gandhi (see box). With the ruling party's traditional vote banks in the state—the Harijans and other backward castes, the tribals, and now the Muslims—unmistakably alienated, it spells electoral doom for the Congress(I).

It is not that it will be all smooth sailing for the Opposition. BJP and Janata Dal leaders in the state have been accusing each other of violating the agreement on adjustment of seats. Consequently, what they term as 'friendly bouts' between them in half a dozen-odd constituencies, threaten to be not so friendly after all. A split in opposition votes in some key constituencies—like Dhanbad—can only work in favour of the Congress(I).

Even so, the negative wave against the ruling party has certainly made things easier for the Opposition, whose strategy has focused on wooing the Rajput and Yadav votes. Chandra Shekhar, for example, cannot possibly win without the support of the Yadavs. Whereas Laloo Prasad Yadav cannot win from Chapra without the Rajputs voting solidly for him. Both the candidates have therefore been campaigning for each other and issuing appeals.

But what is increasingly becoming a negative factor in the opposition campaign is the role of marginal parties like the Indian People's Front (IPF), the Janata Party, and the Jharkhand Mukti Morcha. In Chapra, the Janata Party candidate, Rajiv Ranjan Singh, is pouring money into his campaign. If he does manage to cut into sizeable Rajput votes, it could make an opposition victory tougher than is being predicted.

Similarly, the presence of the IPF in Patna could jeopardise the chances of the CPI candidate while the BJP candidate in Godda could suffer because of the Jharkhand Mukti Morcha candidate in the fray. None of these fringe parties stands to gain more than four or five seats, if everything goes their way. But they can upset the opposition apple cart in half a dozen constituencies.

The election boycott call by the Jharkhand Coordination Committee in the Chhotanagpur plateau failed to elicit much response. There are, however, serious threats of violence and vandalism, especially in parts of Singbhum, on polling day.

That has a significance of its own.

Photographs by VIJENDER TYAGI

Laloo Prasad (top); Raghunath Jha

- The Union Minister of State for Human Resources L.P. Sahi contesting from Muzaffarpur, has requested the Election Commission to advance the date of election from 26 November, a Sunday, to 24. His ostensible reason: Mahabharat.

- If K.K. Tewary is not talking much these days, there is enough reason. The veteran of vitriol and his entourage were chased by villagers of Phatouli. The union minister of state fell into a ditch. Will Buxar ditch him?

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The question of rigging and booth-capturing has become a major election issue in the state. The IPF has taken the lead in forming anti-booth-capturing squads and in holding conventions on electoral rigging. And other opposition parties, sensing victory in a fair poll, have quickly joined in.

When the Election Commission changed the location of nine polling booths in the Maharajganj constituency on the grounds that earlier booths were located far away from the villages, the Janata Dal promptly protested and took up the matter in New Delhi. Eventually, the party was assured that the changes would not be carried out.

In Aurangabad, the Janata Dal candidate, Ram Naresh Singh, released a list of police officers who had been posted in the constituency during the last Lok Sabha election, later transferred out, and again brought back on election-eve. This, the Janata Dal candidate charged, was a blatant attempt by the chief minister to ensure that his daughter-in-law wins.

The decision by the Government to deploy the Border Security Force in some 'sensitive' booths also came in for sharp criticism. "There is a method in this madness," charged Lok Dal(B) General Secretary Lakshmi Sahu. He pointed out that all the booths in which the ruling party had polled more than 89 per cent of the votes were left out of the 'sensitive' list while booths where the opposition parties had polled more than 70 per cent of the votes were included. The presence of armed security forces, Sahu alleged, kept away voters and facilitated rigging by the ruling party.

The opposition concern is understandable. In the current electoral climate in Bihar, the only way the ruling party can return to power is by rigging the election.

—UTTAM SENGUPTA

MAHARAJGANJ

No Contest

HIS first electoral stop is Chanchoura Bazaar. Around 200 people with a band in attendance stop the open jeep in which Chandra Shekhar is travelling. Shouts of "Veer Chandra Shekhar zindabad," resonate, as he is led to an impromptu dais. Two schoolchildren launch into a song eulogising the Janata Dal leader and how the area has flowered by his very presence.

All along the route, people rush to touch him and shake his hands. Women line the road to wave at him. Young boys touch his feet. There is a scramble to garland him.

The climactic scene is at Maharajganj. Here, the waiting crowd is almost hysterical. "Chandra Shekhar bhaiya mat ghabrana (Brother Chandra Shekhar, don't worry)," is the refrain, as people with flags and banners jostle and shout themselves hoarse. For someone who was being described as an 'outsider' in the constituency, all this is heady triumph.

Chandra Shekhar hails from Balia district in Uttar Pradesh, just across the Ganga. His decision to contest from both Balia and Maharajganj was initially interpreted as nervousness about his prospects in Balia. But he deftly turned the tables by making it clear that his decision to contest from Maharajganj was prompted by the challenge thrown by Bihar Chief Minister S.N. Sinha that he could never win from Bihar. "Chandra Shekharji has been specially invited to contest from here," chortles former Janata Dal MP, Ram Bahadur Singh, who was expected to contest from Maharajganj.

Denial of the party ticket to Ram Bahadur Singh had upset a large number of his supporters. But ruffled feathers have now been smoothened. And Ram Bahadur travels in the same jeep as Chandra Shekhar, a symbol of unity.

PRASHANT PANJIAR

Chandra Shekhar campaigning

In any event, Chandra Shekhar's image as an outsider counts for little considering that people are unanimous in their view that the sitting Congress(I) MP, Krishna Pratap Singh, is as much of an outsider. As Jaleshwar Yadav, an old man at Ekanwaar, says derisively: "The Congress(I) candidate is hardly known in the area. He has never met us since the last election." Bystanders quip that they have seen more of Chandra Shekhar in five years than their MP because he drove from Balia to Patna through this area.

Added to this is the presence of Dayanand Sahay, the Congress(I)'s Rajya Sabha member from Bihar, who is an old friend of the Janata Dal leader. Although Sahay denies he has left the Congress(I), his remark is telling: "What difference does it make? Congress(I) to doobi hui party hai." (The Congress(I) is a drowning party).

If Chandra Shekhar wins from both Balia and Maharajganj, as the indications are, he will have to retain the seat which gives him a higher percentage of votes. The move appears to have paid off in Maharajganj where speakers hysterically exhort people to ensure that Chandra Shekhar wins by the highest margin. "It is now a prestige issue with the people here," said a voter.

Maharajganj it seems will get a new maharaja. For the Janata Dal leader, the only electoral challenge is the margin he will eventually win by.

—UTTAM SENGUPTA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SIEMENS

Fair Exchange

In today's fast-paced world of data communications, an ideal transport system for value-added services and linkages of all types of terminals and computers is called for. Siemens unique packet switching technology provides a much-needed solution. It exploits existing line capacity by a uniformly high transmission rate and simultaneous shared use of the lines by a large number of subscribers. With text and data being exchanged at high-speed around the world, the lines of communication opened up by packet switching go to show that when it comes to using technology for human needs, Siemens, once again, has the last word.

High technology with a human face. Whether it is control and automation systems or railway signalling equipment, medical electronics, switchgear, switchboards, drives, motors or new dimensions in telecommunications, Siemens focusses technology on human problems, human needs. Its close association with Siemens AG, W. Germany, helps keep Siemens in India in the frontline of international technology. With 120 years of experience in the country, Siemens is committed to India's progress and shares its hopes for the future.

As technology changes the face of the future, Siemens will be one of the foremost companies helping India keep pace with the world.

Siemens Ltd.,
P.O. Box 6597, Bombay 400 018

Siemens. Where international technology meets human needs.

LINTAS SM 158 2720

CC-0. I

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

A SMALL ARGUMENT IN FAVOUR OF CHOOSING THE SAFER SCOOTER.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Think of yourself on a scooter. With your wife and little one.

And you're out on the road. There's speeding traffic to be careful of. Potholes to be avoided. And you're trying your best to ride safely.

What you need then, is a scooter that thinks like you do. Responds as you would like it to.

A scooter that's built with your safety in mind.

LML Vespa.

BETTER BALANCED FOR GREATER STABILITY.

What's the greatest security you need while riding all kinds of roads or taking turns? Stability, we think.

That's why each of our scooters, built around a unique aerodynamic chassis, is designed to be better balanced than most other scooters.

DESIGNED TO STOP. NOT SKID.

It happens so often. A cyclist dashes across the road, or the traffic light changes to red...and you have to brake suddenly.

At this critical moment, it's the double-action suspension and unique movable front brake back plate of the LML Vespa that act together to ensure that you stop safely. Without skidding.

POWERED TO STEER YOU THROUGH RISKY SITUATIONS.

LML Vespa also recognises how important it is for you to have the pick-up that's sometimes necessary to get you out of dangerous traffic situations.

So, every LML Vespa offers greater power than any other scooter in its category.

BUILT-IN DIRECTION INDICATORS FOR SAFER TURNING.

At turns, we have always believed, it is safest for you to have both your hands on the handlebar. That's why, even before the Government made them compulsory, we provided built-in indicators on both, the front and rear of our scooters.

Each, having a specially toughened plastic cover for extra long life.

STEADIER HEADLIGHT KEEPS YOU SAFER AT NIGHT.

When you're riding an LML Vespa at night there's a 12V magneto making sure that neither your headlight nor tail-light dim when you're slowing down, or while idling.

COME HOME SAFE ON YOUR LML VESPA.

The unbeatable NV. And the classic T-5. LML Vespa gives you a choice of scooters engineered by Piaggio of Italy.

To match international safety standards. And keep you all safe, wherever you are.

Isn't it amazing that, small as they are, our children help us make some of our biggest decisions?

LML
vespa

BUILT SAFER. BY DESIGN.

LML LIMITED

everest/d89/LML/213

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

This year, Boeing jetliners will carry more people than live in the world's 100 largest cities.

Boeing jetliners will carry the equivalent of 12% of the world's population this year.

That's more people than live in Tokyo. New York. London. Beijing. Mexico City. Paris. Bangkok. Rio. Sydney. Cairo. And nearly a hundred other major cities.

The actual number of passengers will be about 675 million.

That sounds, of course, like an unbelievably large number.

But when you consider that Boeing airplanes take off or land about a million times a month, an

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

unbelievably large number becomes largely believable.

Boeing. We don't just deliver a lot of airplanes. We deliver a lot of people.

BOEING

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

NIIT IN OIL?

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

NIIT innovations in consultancy—indispensable to leaders.

NIIT IN INNOVATIVE CONSULTANCY.

For Indian Oil Corporation, India's largest FORTUNE 500 company, NIIT CONSULTANCY has made a valuable difference. In both its refineries division and its pipeline operation. For the Top Management, NIIT has developed the performance monitoring system. In addition, NIIT's CRISPLAN methodology has helped identify critical areas for computerisation at IOC and worked out detailed plans.

NIIT's CRISPLAN methodology has evolved out of the rich experience of designing diverse IT solutions that support corporate strategies to give many organisations a distinct competitive advantage.

Leaders in various fields are gaining from this innovation at NIIT. Network—the No. 1 electronic typewriter company; Sundram Fasteners—the leader in fasteners; Samtel—the leading manufacturer of picture tubes; Bajaj—the leader in appliances.

NIIT Consultancy is just one of NIIT's many facets.

NIIT is also Corporate Training, Software and Computer Education.

NIIT

The power to look at Information Technology. From every perspective.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Contract NIIT 21341 A

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

WEST BENGAL

Left in Front

The Congress(I) and the BJP won't threaten the Left Front's supremacy

FOR the ruling CPI(M)-led Left Front the battle this time is ironically not against the Congress(I), but against the slumbering giant of communalism which the BJP is stirring awake with determined prods. This way it hopes to consolidate a part of the core Hindu vote. The BJP, which bagged only 0.9 per cent votes in the 1984 elections, hopes to increase its share of the votes to 5 per cent and has fielded 19 candidates. The CPI(M) has reason to take this brash adolescent seriously; essentially out of fear of what harm an established BJP could do in the state in future.

The BJP has been working with gusto and its efforts bore fruit last fortnight when the state Government allowed the Vishwa Hindu Parishad's (VHP) Ramshila processions and the Ram Yagna to be held in Calcutta. The BJP is now trying to capitalise on the situation, while the Left Front, predictably, has made the rise of Hindu fundamentalism a major issue in its campaign.

The Congress(I) meantime is running a weak, issue-less campaign. Even its half-hearted attempt to capitalise on actions like the reduction of the voting age to 18 have not worked. The reason: the Left Front Government had already given similar voting rights in the municipal elections. And the Congress(I) knows too well that panchayats in the state have been working admirably—of the 3,000-odd panchayats, hardly 600 are under the Congress(I)—and that attempts to accuse the Opposition of blocking the Nagarpalika and Pancha-

Basu addressing a rally; and (below) graffiti: no challengers

Photographs by SAIBAL DAS

- Rajiv Gandhi had promised to take India to the 21st century. He does not realise that India can get there without him. JYOTI BASU

- In the graffiti war, the stone-man is a popular theme. In Chetla, the Congress(I) caricatures Jyoti Basu as the 'stone man'. The CPI(M) in turn shows Rajiv Gandhi as the stone man, holding the brick titled 'foundation stone'. Well, stone-man versus foundation-stone-man.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

- Hathe niya Sten gun; Aamader Ghani Khan; Janagan sabhdhan. (People pay attention; here comes Ghani Khan; cradling a Sten gun).

  CPI(M) slogan used in Diamond Harbour

- Desh bhag birodh karo, haate chaap maro (Oppose the division of the country, vote for the hand).

  Congress(I) slogan in Calcutta

yati Raj bills might boomerang.

The confusion in the Congress(I) ranks was evident the moment the list was finalised. It was only at the last moment that the party decided to support the GNLF-backed candidate Inder Jit from Darjeeling. Confusion gave way to anger when Sachchidanand Shaw, who lost his deposit in the panchayat election, was given the ticket from Bolpur to contest against the formidable CPI(M) leader Somnath Chatterjee, and Mohammad Sorab, Vardhendu Naskar and Anwar Ali who had lost repeatedly were again favoured with tickets.

THE PCC(I) chief Ghani Khan Chaudhury worsened matters by declaring that no seat, not even his own, was safe in West Bengal. He later retracted this, but the truth of his words was soon evident. The sitting MP, Tarun Kanti Ghosh was heckled and his shirt torn by angry voters in Barasat, and Union Minister of State for Commerce Priya Ranjan Das Munshi was confronted by hostile crowds in Howrah.

Even in Calcutta where the party had performed admirably in 1984, winning four of the five constituencies, it is facing a determined new-look team put up by the Left Front. In the traditional Congress(I) stronghold, Calcutta North-West, Asoke Sen who had won the seat last time is contesting on a Janata Dal ticket backed by the Left Front. In Jadavpur, the firebrand Congress(I) MP, Mamta Banerjee, is facing unexpected resistance from an unknown English teacher from Jadavpur University, Malini Bhattacharya. And in neighbouring South Calcutta, Bholanath Sen, sitting MP, has his back to the wall against the CPI(M) central committee member and noted economist Dr Biplab Dasgupta. Adding to the woes of Congress(I) candidates is the fact that the high command has given them only Rs 50,000 of the promised Rs 2 lakh per constituency.

The CPI(M) is confident of increasing its present tally of 18 seats and cutting into the 48.16 per cent votes and 16 seats the Congress(I) won in 1984. The 1987 Assembly polls showed that the CPI(M) had already cemented much of the cracks in its mighty edifice in Bengal. And, but for an unlikely consolidation of Hindu votes by the BJP, the edifice should get a new coat of red paint.

—FARZAND AHMED

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

CONGRESS(I)

Gloomy Mood

IF the mood in the Congress(I) headquarters is any indication, the party seems to have given up the fight even before it has begun.

Like Calcutta's winter mist, gloom has descended on the party headquarters near Haji Mohammad Mohsin Square. A week into the campaign, there were just five disinterested staffers there—two of them watching football on television.

The lone senior functionary in the office, Vice-President Nandlal Banerjee, displayed forced optimism: "During our movements including the fill-the-jail campaign and the siege of Writers Building, we got spontaneous support from the people. They will not go against the Congress(I)."

And in the rented rooms in nearby Nizam Palace, Somen Mitra, MLA and confidant of PCC(I) chief Ghani Khan Chaudhury, was trying to convince Mahila Congress(I) leaders of the difficulty in getting enough campaign material. "By serious efforts we can overcome weaknesses," he said putting up a brave face.

It is true that the election announcement left the state unit little time to put together its tattered phalanx. Bogged down in groupism, there was no coordination among the district units. And after the list of candidates was finally announced, there were wails of protests. Even Ghani Khan Chaudhury did not bother to visit the party headquarters a week after campaigning started, as he was busy desperately guarding his fortress Malda. With neither a popular leader nor a sense of direction, the party looks like a rudderless ship.

—FARZAND AHMED

Chaudhury: dispirited leadership

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

LIVE LIFE KINGSIZE

O&M/102

FOUR SQUARE
KINGS

All the taste, all the way

STATUTORY WARNING : CIGARETTE SMOKING IS INJURIOUS TO HEALTH

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

From Tokyo to New York, London to Paris...

more people around the world are choosing YAMAHA.

They've come to appreciate Yamaha's engineering excellence, exceptional reliability and superb performance.

With styling imitated but never equalled, Yamaha is the world's standard by which others are judged.

For those who will not settle for second best there is only one choice : YAMAHA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

ADSTART/ESC.1080

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

RIDE THE INTERNATIONAL FAVOURITE

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

SHIRTS FROM THE FINEST QUALITY LONG STAPLE COTTON

Ambassador Cotton Classics. Shirts made from soft, luxurious cotton. With superior crease resistance. Styled impeccably. Stitched to perfection.

Now you won't buy your shirts anywhere else in the world.

AMBASSADOR COTTON CLASSICS

AVAILABLE IN SELECT BATA STORES AT DELHI, BOMBAY, CALCUTTA, MADRAS, BANGALORE, HYDERABAD, CHANDIGARH, SRINAGAR, JAMMU AND GANGTOK

JUST WHAT YOU'D EXPECT FROM US

Bata

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

MAHARASHTRA

Citadel Under Siege

Dissidence and the Shiv Sena could pose problems for the Congress(I)

WILL the Congress(I) pick up a majority of the 48 Lok Sabha seats in Maharashtra, the state regarded as the ruling party's last bastion? As the campaign for the Lok Sabha elections gathers momentum, that question is troubling many Congress(I) leaders. In spite of the Opposition's failure to reach seat adjustments in most of the constituencies, Congress(I) candidates are facing tough contests even in the party's traditional strongholds.

Aurangabad is a case in point. Located in the centre of the state, this prestigious constituency has all the major regions of Maharashtra along its borders. More than 30 per cent of its 11.8 lakh voters are Muslims and Dalits, a factor which has helped the Congress(I) retain its hold over the constituency.

But the Congress(I) can no longer take Aurangabad for granted. Two years

NAMAS BHOJANI

Pawar with Rajiv at Aurangabad: dwindling crowds

BOMBAY

Close Fight

FOR the ruling party, Bombay, the city of its birth, presents a grim scenario. Even Bombay Regional Congress(I) Committee chief Murli Deora acknowledges: "Compared to the 1984 elections, the Congress(I) is faced with a tougher fight now." Rightist Hindu parties are flexing their muscles as never before. The Shiv Sena, which controls the city's rich municipal corporation, and the BJP have come together to take on the Congress(I). "The BJP-Sena combination can sweep Bombay," exults BJP General Secretary Pramod Mahajan.

The prospects for the saffron flag are brightest in the sprawling Bombay North constituency. Here, the BJP's Ram Naik is locked in a three-cornered contest with the Janata Dal's Mrinal Gore and the Congress(I)'s Chandrakant Ghosalia. Ghosalia got the Congress(I) ticket after the sitting MP, Anoochand Shah, declined to contest the elections. Shah's reluctance is a pointer to the Congress(I)'s prospects in the forthcoming Lok Sabha polls.

The ruling party faces only one straight contest in the city—in the Bombay North-Central constituency, where the battle is between Sharad Dighe of the Congress(I) and Vidyadhar Gokhale of the Shiv Sena. The two-horse race promises to have a photo finish.

Ironically, the Congress(I)'s safest bet is its most reluctant candidate—the sitting MP from the Bombay North-West constituency, Hindi film star Sunil Dutt. Dutt's simplicity and sincerity have endeared him to voters. Fed up of Congress(I) realpolitik and preoccupied with his daughter-in-law's illness—she is undergoing cancer therapy in the US—he had at first firmly declined to stand for re-election. "I explained this to the Congress(I) high command. But my daughter-in-law told me, 'Dad, they need you out there. I will be all right.'

MAHENDRA PARIKH

Sunil Dutt with street kids: glamour and sincerity

That is why I am back here."

Deora is the other Congressman who is expected to sail through in the elections. He is faced with an array of opponents. But Deora has other worries—he is responsible for the performance of the party in the city. If the Congress(I) is lucky, it may just succeed in retaining half the Parliamentary seats in Bombay—thanks in no small measure to disunity in the Opposition.

—M. RAHMAN

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ANIL BHOJANI

Thackeray at joint Shiv Sena-BJP meeting: posing a serious threat ago, the Shiv Sena wrested control of the municipal corporation, and now it is giving the Congress(I) a run for its money in the Lok Sabha poll too.

The ruling party brought Rajiv Gandhi to Shivaji Maidan in Aurangabad to kick off its campaign. Rajiv was in the city last in December 1986, when he addressed a three-lakh-strong rally to mark Sharad Pawar's return to the Congress(I). He would have noticed the difference in the size of the gathering. Though it was enthusiastic, last fortnight's crowd was less than a third of the turn-out three years ago. Rajiv flew in in a helicopter and so missed seeing another startling portent—the road from the airport is awash with the saffron Sena flag.

The turn-outs at Sena chief Bal Thackeray's rallies are remarkable. Wherever he goes, thousands show up. He's become a charismatic leader and, extraordinarily, has begun to attract even Muslims, despite his militantly pro-Hindu stance.

Clearly, the Sena has stepped into the vacuum created by Pawar's return to the Congress(I), which left the Opposition without a statewide party or leader. In the Lok Sabha poll, the Sena is contesting only six seats, along with 33 seats by the BJP. Both parties are confident of sending representatives to the Lok Sabha this time. In 1984, the Opposition won only five seats, two of which were by Pawar's Congress(S). Now, even with the wily Pawar on the other side, the tally will definitely be much higher. "There is large-scale discontent among all communities and, as campaigning picks up, the vote will crystallise against the Congress," predicts Pannalal Surana, editor of the respected daily Marathwada. But the anti-Congress vote will be split, ruling out the possibility of the Opposition getting a majority of the seats.

The chief minister is well aware that the Congress(I) is facing one of the toughest Lok Sabha contests in Maharashtra. Even though he insists that the party will win comfortably, he also admits that in at least 16 constituencies, the going could be rough. And predictably, the problems for the Congress(I) do not emanate only from the growing influence of opposition parties like the Shiv Sena. Every district has its quota of disgruntled Congressmen busy helping the Opposition with money and material to defeat ruling party candidates. In fact, the intelligence wing of the state police has drawn up a list of 77 prominent Congress(I) leaders who pose a threat to party candidates in 23 of the 30 districts.

Some party leaders have risen in open revolt after being denied Lok Sabha tickets. Rajiv's decision to give tickets mainly to sitting MPs affected Pawar's followers the most. After intense lobbying, Pawar managed to squeeze in just four of his men.

Obviously, the party high command is still suspicious of Pawar's loyalty. The feeling is constantly stoked by rival leaders like MPCC(I) chief Pratibha Patil and former chief ministers Shivajirao Patil-Nilangekar and A.R. Antulay. As Thackeray observed gleefully: "Today there is a wide crack in the Congress(I)."

Clearly, even in a state regarded as the Congress(I)'s best bet, all is not hunky-dory for the ruling party. Pawar, a wily, resourceful politician, will have to muster all his legendary skills to ensure that the party retains its predominant position. For even three-cornered contests could spell doom for the Congress(I) if the dissension within the party gets out of hand. —M. RAHMAN

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

- The 1989 Oddball Award undoubtedly goes to Kalki Gaur of the 'Capitalist Populist Party' who has painted the walls of his south Bombay constituency with slogans like 'Hang CIA spy Morarji Desai' and 'Nationalise corrupt Marwari businesses'. Gaur is a Marwari businessman.

- The Congress (I) is losing its strongholds one after another. Wait for the assembly elections. We are going to win power.
  Shiv Sena chief BAL THACKERAY

- The favoured party is the Sena now.
  SALIM ALI, petrol pump attendant in Jaina

- I am not the policeman of this constituency.
  MURLI DEORA

- Mr Babasaheb Bhosale is a Trojan horse of the Janata Dal President Mr V.P. Singh.
  A.R. ANTULAY in Roha (Raigad)

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE SECOND MOST IMPORTANT DECISION YOU WILL HAVE TO MAKE TOGETHER.

KOHINOOR

PINK LUXURY CONDOMS

You've decided you belong together. Through the thick and thin of life. This is the time to take the second most important decision of your life. To give yourself a few years before children and growing responsibilities tie you down to the daily grind. For this you need a contraceptive method that suits you both.

A method that affords you all the pleasure and protection without unpleasant side effects, messy clinical examinations or the worry and tension of counting days and monitoring temperature. A method as simple, sure and safe as the condom.

Kohinoor Confidence

Millions of young couples plan their families and space their children with Kohinoor confidence. Kohinoor gives you the near natural feeling of total pleasure without interfering with the closeness you share. It's made of the finest latex and electronically tested to make it completely safe. By people who understand your need for privacy and protection. Ask for it by name. Kohinoor. And share the Kohinoor confidence.

Available in packs of tens and threes.

MAA COMMUNICATIONS 914B

Plan your family with Kohinoor confidence

A Product

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

A car for those who draw brilliant conc

Liabilities. The Contessa is a preference car, shared by a few select people, who believe in investing capital wisely. And defying equity. From the moment the doors shut, and the engine purrs to life, you realise why:

A surplus of space surrounds you. Enough to stretch, recline and relax in. Added is a surplus of luxury: soft, non-slip upholstery; colour-matched interiors; and an air-conditioned atmosphere.

Reserves of power lie coiled in the internationally acclaimed, fuel efficient, 1800 cc Isuzu engine. Naturally, once they get used to all this, most Contessa owners don't like loaning their cars (secured or unsecured). Which leaves them liable to being termed 'non-convertible to other forms of land-transport'. A bottomline they accept quite happily.

Accessories shown in the picture are not part of standard equipment.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

conclusions from a Balance Sheet.

Assets. Fixed assets: An 1800 cc Isuzu engine which gives Contessa owners the power to turn the white dashes on the road into a solid line. And 5 synchromeshed forward gears, including an overdrive gear, keep them cruising at an effortless 120 kmph.

Investment in construction is quite considerable too: Precision engineering reduces noise to a mere whisper. Added are refinements like an electronic ignition, electronic fuel pump, non-glare instruments, and a wood-grain finish dashboard.

Work-in-progress is made possible by a superb independent suspension that lets you read and write while being driven. And finally, for contingencies that may arise, power disc brakes halt you in your tracks — safely and smoothly. All adding up to the ultimate investment in a limousine.

A Limousine to every other car.

Contessa
Classic 1·8 GL

Contract H M 21437 D

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. Panini Kanya Maha Vidyalaya Collection. Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

How the glorious Suzuki charges its way to success...

Nippon Denro Ispat Introduces To Ind
For Two-Wheeler Bo

The Indian two-wheeler industry has often faced production road-blocks because of the irregular and scarce supply of international quality cold-rolled steel sheets.

It can now move full speed ahead: Nippon Denro Ispat Ltd. offers, for the first time in India, the assurance of quality cold-rolled steel on a regular basis.

Cold-rolled steel that comes in a wide range of widths (100 mm to 1250 mm); gauges (0.15 mm to 2.00 mm); grades (Ordinary, drawing, deep and extra-deep drawing); lengths (1000 mm to 4000 mm); and coils (3 MT to 10 MT).

Cold-rolled steel that conforms to the highest national and international standards : IS 513, DIN 1623, JIS G3141, etc.

Cold-rolled steel that's manufactured at a completely computer-controlled plant with the finest Japanese technology and equipment available : the rolling mill from Hitachi; know-how for operation and maintenance of the mill from Taiyo Steel.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Central Marketing Office: 'GUMAN' 6th Floor, 77 Residency Road, Sadar, Nagpur – 440 001; Phone: 25742, 25750. Telex: 0715-426 NDIL IN.

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

and how BAJAJ AUTO, KINETIC, LML & ESCORTS can now move full speed ahead.

Hi-Performance Cold-Rolled Steel Bodies And Components.

and technology for the continuous pickling and electrolytic cleaning line from Nippon Denro Mfg. Company.

Cold-rolled steel that compares with the world's best and is available regularly through an extensive distribution network.

Making sure that Indian two-wheeler companies can now run their business smoothly.

Just like their famous Japanese counterparts.

ISPAT

NIPPON DENRO ISPAT LTD.

Park Plaza (Ist Floor), 71, Park Street, Calcutta–700016

THE NEW BREED OF STEEL

0712-33194. Cable: 'NIPPON'

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Mudra:D:NDIL:73

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

More flashes of genius from Canon.

The Canon EOS series is simply bursting with vations that make truly creative photography er than ever before.

On the EOS 750, for example, there's a -in, pop-up flash that swings into action at the h of a button. With a low recycling time, it can ot sequentially, too — even in the dark.

Then there's the EOS 850. The lightest, t compact and simplest camera in the series, livers pictures you'll be proud of every time. can even clip on a tiny Speedlite 160E that provides just the right amount of automatically.

And no matter which EOS model you ose, you'll be sure of the following features:

Lens-integral EOS Autofocus enables you to focus with incredible speed and 100% accuracy. The motor is right there in the lens, so you can focus, shoot and capture those never-to-be-forgotten instants as they happen.

EOS Evaluative Metering System is another brilliant innovation. It automatically compares the light and contrast from six different zones and decides on the optimum exposure. Even back-lit or shadowy subjects come out with total clarity.

Intelligent Programme AE selects the perfect combination of shutter speed and aperture for both the shot you're taking and the lens you're using.

Depth of field AE allows you to decide the depth of your focus zone beforehand so everything within that zone will be in perfect focus no matter where you point the camera.

To discover just how brilliant the Canon EOS 750 and EOS 850 really are, simply clip the coupon and we'll send you a free colour brochure:

To: CANON HONGKONG TRADING COMPANY LTD.
Room 1101 Peninsula Centre, 67 Mody Road, Tsimshatsui East, Kowloon, Hong Kong

Name _____

Address _____

_____ Tel No. _____

Canon
EOS 750·850

N HONGKONG TRADING CO., LTD.
rized Service Facilities in India:
ta & Co. P.O. Box 492, 59-M Block, Con. Circus, New Delhi – 1. Phone: 3530008 K. Prabhakar 195, D.N. Road, 2nd Floor, Fort, Bombay 400 001. Phone: 263827/265394

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

GUJARAT

Nervous Pangs

The morale of the Congress(I) is low

AS the countdown to the ninth general elections begins, the ruling party in Gujarat is experiencing uncharacteristic pangs of nervousness.

In the 1980 elections, it won 25 of the 26 Lok Sabha seats, in 1984 it bagged 24, and in 1985, it netted a stunning 150 of the 182 assembly seats. Today, even the most optimistic Congress(I) member is hoping for no more than 15 seats. Explains PCC(I) General Secretary Nirupam Nanavati: "Those (the 1980 and 1984 victories) were Congress(I) hurricanes that swept voters off their feet. That hurricane is nowhere visible this time."

The reason for the low morale is not only the voters' disenchantment on national issues like the Bofors gun deal and the price rise. There are several local factors too. Primary is the state Government's inaction in the communal riots over the Ram Janmabhoomi-Babri Masjid issue that recently rocked north and central Gujarat.

Then, crucial farmers' bodies like the Bharatiya Kisan Sangh and the Khedut Samanvaya Samiti that spearheaded a number of recent agitations, are opposed to the party. To cap it all, the state Congress(I) is riven by infighting over the selection of candidates.

But Bofors is uppermost. Says BJP leader Ashok Bhatt: "Congress(I) leaders spend more time defending Rajiv Gandhi against the Bofors kickback charges than doing anything else."

Recently, Union Planning Minister Madhavsinh Solanki, in a speech to party workers demonstrating how the Bofors attack could be warded off, emphasised the gun's quality and the fact that Rajiv had got its price reduced. And referring to state Janata Dal chief Chimanbhai Patel—who had to step down following the Navnirman stir against his 'corrupt' government in 1974—Solanki roared: "Gandi savarni thi safal naa thaye" (A dirty broom cannot remove dust).

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

- Rajiv Gandhi dhoka hai, Maaro dhakka mauka hai. (Rajiv Gandhi is a fraudulent tout; this is the chance, kick him out.) Opposition slogan

- Rajiv tum taqdeer ho, kal ke Hindustan ki; Nehru ke armaan ki, Indira ke balidaan ki. (Rajiv you are India's destiny; you are Nehru's pride, the fruit of Indira's sacrifice.) Congress(I) slogan

Nevertheless, the ebullience in the opposition camp refuses to be dampened. One reason is the poll adjustments on all 26 seats between the Janata Dal and the BJP. Said state BJP chief S. Vaghela: "The Janata Dal's chakra will prove to be the Congress(I)'s kaalchakra and the BJP lotus will herald the emergence of a new nation."

There will be straight contests in 24 constituencies. In Vadodara and Bhavnagar, former IPS officer Jaspal Singh and Jaswant Singh Sarvaiya, once prospective Janata Dal candidates, are contesting as independents. Among those fighting their first Lok Sabha poll are former Union minister Yogendra Makwana from Patan and BJP chief Vaghela from Gandhinagar.

Though the mood in the Congress(I) is downbeat, its position is not so bleak in its traditional stronghold of south Gujarat and parts of central Gujarat. In the tribal belt of south Gujarat (four seats), it derives its strength from the clout of Chief Minister Amarsinh Chaudhary and his political mentor-turned-foe Jinabhai Darji who have temporarily sunk their differences. However, the party faces a tough fight in Surat where former AICC(I) joint general secretary C.D. Patel is pitted against former Surat mayor, Kashiram Rana of the BJP.

For the Opposition, lack of resources is a serious drawback. And the state Janata Dal is facing its share of factional bickerings—a result of the strained relations between Chimanbhai and party Secretary-General Pravinsinh Jadeja, leader of the Jan Morcha faction.

In the ultimate analysis, the apparent opposition edge over the visibly shaky Congress(I) may only signify a win of a dozen seats. But for the ruling party in Gujarat, even that will mean a big climb-down from the heady '80s.

—UDAY MAHURKAR

PRAVIN GAJJAR

Rajiv with PCC(I) chief Prabodh Rawal and Chaudhary: backs to the wall

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SIKKIM

Fort Bhandari

The chief minister reigns supreme

NATIONAL issues don't count for much in Sikkim. Here, the electoral battle—for both the lone Lok Sabha seat and the 32 assembly seats—is being waged around the personality of Chief Minister Nar Bahadur Bhandari.

Ten years ago, Bhandari was a little-known schoolteacher. Today, he is a cult figure. His portrait adorns living-rooms; and his alleged extra-marital dalliances scarcely affect his popularity—they are taken to be proof of his manliness. In the last general elections, his Sikkim Sangram Parishad won the Lok Sabha seat, and it swept up 30 of 32 assembly seats. Now Bhandari is cockier than ever. Says he: "We'll win 34 of the 33 seats."

That may be an exaggeration. But Bhandari certainly has a lot going for him—organisational skill, money power, and powerful oratory peppered with ribald jokes. The combination should see him back in the saddle.

Still, it may not be smooth sailing. Two regional parties have emerged to challenge Bhandari's vice-like grip on the Himalayan state. His estranged wife Dilkumari is now on the other side—contesting the Lok Sabha election on the Congress(I) ticket. And there have been other desertions.

Posing a serious challenge to Bhandari are the year-old Rising Sun Party led by Ram Chandra Poudyal and the Denzone People's Chogpa registered in September this year. The Rising Sun is an unabashedly pro-Nepali party, while the People's Chogpa (People's Organisation) aims to defend the interests of the Bhotiyas, the Lepchas and other backward tribal groups.

Bhandari insists the two parties are insignificant, but privately, Sangram Parishad officials admit the party could lose quite a few assembly seats.

Nevertheless, with the Rising Sun and the People's Chogpa dividing votes, the battle, it seems, will finally boil down to one between the ruling party and the Congress(I). For the Lok Sabha election, the Sangram Parishad has put up a relatively weak candidate, Nandu Thapa, against Dilkumari, yet her chances aren't very bright.

SAIBAL DAS

Bhandari on the stump: impregnable position

Dilkumari is not the only one to turn against Bhandari. Another opponent, the speaker of the Assembly, Tulsiram Sharma, was expelled from the party. And the erstwhile state forest minister, Thukchup Lachungpa, too could be working against Bhandari, though not openly.

Nevertheless, the dissension in the Congress(I) camp is far more serious. The President of the Mahila Congress, Mrs Rinzing Ongma, quit the party because she was not given a ticket for the assembly elections. Another prominent leader to leave was K.N. Tobgay, state joint secretary, who joined the Sangram Parishad along with three secretaries. Says he: "Without her husband, Mrs Bhandari is a big zero."

Certainly, the most important factor in the elections is Bhandari himself. But he too is not invulnerable to attack. His rivals accuse him of widespread corruption. Says Lachen Gomchen Rinpochi, president of the People's Chogpa: "There is a joke in Sikkim. If you see a ruling party flag on top of a house, you know the household has been favoured with loans, jobs or contracts."

Bhandari has also been accused of manipulating the electoral rolls by including people who figure in the voting lists in Darjeeling and Kalimpong in neighbouring West Bengal. Another issue generating considerable heat in Sikkim's winter is the subject of stateless voters. The People's Chogpa contends that as many as 54,000 stateless subjects in Sikkim have been included in the voters' list. Says Pradhan: "They should not be allowed to vote. The Government of India too has acknowledged that they are not Indian citizens and that their citizenship applications are being processed."

The chief minister blithely brushes aside the allegation. Says he: "You can be a voter without being a citizen and a citizen without being a voter."

Insolent insouciance? Yes, but it's grounded in the confidence that today his position is virtually impregnable.

—UTTAM SENGUPTA in Sikkim

- There is a joke in Sikkim. If you see a ruling party flag on top of a house, you know that the household has been favoured with loans, jobs or contracts by the Government.
  LACHEN GOMCHEN RINPOCHI, President of the People's Chogpa.

- It is going to be a one-party election. We will win 34 of the 33 seats.
  Chief Minister NAR BAHADUR BHANDARI

- Without her husband, Mrs Bhandari is a big zero.
  K.N. TOBGAY, Congress(I) leader who joined the Sangram Parishad

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

IN DISTINGUISHED COMPANY

How do you distinguish between an ordinary refrigerator and a masterpiece? Look at any ordinary refrigerator. Then take a look at the new Godrej 300-litre refrigerator. With dimensions so vast, its wide-bodied interior can offer you more storage space than ever before. And with a design so classic, a distinguished person like you could never settle for less.

Butter, Cheese and Chocolics Anonymous

Twin compartments keep dairy products in prime condition.

Eggstraordinary Design

Two detachable egg racks fit as many as 16 eggs. The space can be used to store other items if you don't find use for the egg racks.

Tall, Broad and Handsome

The wide door panel fits 12 large bottles with ease. Plus, there's a rack that is specially designed to fit 3 smaller-sized bottles.

Shelf Space as Creative as your Culinary Concoctions

The wide shelves are adjustable and flexible and can be adjusted to accommodate odd shaped containers, even a tiered cake.

More Room at the top: the Spacious Freezer

The extra large freezer provides ample room to store more frozen food than ever before.

Top Priority: Cooling Efficiency

Faster cooling. Power saving. It's the result of an all-new robust compressor plus polyurethane insulation, an international standard.

The Secret of the Perfect Hostess

Discover twin crispers that are transparent, lighter and less cumbersome to handle. They allow you to segregate vegetables. That means less spoilage, and you can keep your choice vegetables fresh – the secret of a perfect meal.

Superior Finish

Every feature of the new Godrej 300-litre refrigerator is distinguished by its excellent design. A superior epoxy powder-coated finish. And a choice of extraordinary colours. Exclusively, Godrej.

THE NEW WIDE-BODIED 300-LITRE REFRIGERATOR

Godrej®

The Connoisseur's Choice

KTA 2832

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

WOULD YOU DO BUSINESS WI GOES AROUND IN A JEEP ?

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

One hesitates to deal with a man who does not conform to any of one's preconceived notions. The surface is cool, urbane,yet there's no mistaking that undercurrent of electric energy.

WITH A MAN WHO

Of course if you care to double-check his credentials you'll be pleasantly surprised. He's the best brain in the business. And the first opportunity to deal with him is probably your last. The demand for his services verges on the frantic.

A small tip to help you towards a decision. Get him talking about his Jeep. See him open up. He'll confess to be driven by his need for civilized power. Or for friends whom he can trust through the ups and downs of life. "The Jeep demands so little", he'll say, "and gives so much."

He might even mention in passing that nothing appeals to his robust business sense more than the Jeep's economy (25 paise/kilometer)*.

By the time he holds your hand in a firm, no-nonsense handshake, you would have realized that the reason for his success is simple. In a world of cut-throat competition he stands for a virtue that's becoming increasingly scarce: Unshakeable reliability.

But don't mention it to him. He'll just react with a resounding laugh.

Mahindra
Jeep MM 540
DIESEL

DRIVEN BY A PASSION...FOR COMMON SENSE

*At current diesel prices. Fuel consumption: 15 km/lit. at 40 km/hr under test conditions.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ISPAT ALLOYS

India's most versatile Metal and Ferro Alloys Complex

HI-CARBON FERRO CHROME
FERRO SILICON CALCIUM CHARGE CHROME
CALCIUM SILICIDE
MASTER ALLOYS
FERRO SILICON
SILICON METAL

★ Poised to become India's most versatile Metal and Ferro Alloys Complex, on completion of Rs. 132 crore expansion and diversification scheme under implementation — first phase already commissioned.

★ New projects with thrust towards import substitute products and exports—to result in substantial foreign exchange savings and earnings.

★ Hi-tech Import substitute products having wide usage in vital industries such as electronics, nuclear and solar energy, space technology, aluminium alloys, chemicals, special steels and alloys.

★ Entering the highly profitable area of Charge Chrome to utilise country's rich chrome ore deposits—simultaneous implementation of domestic unit and 100% Export Oriented Unit to meet the growing worldwide demand.

★ Incorporation of world's finest Chrome Ore Pelletisation and Preheating technology from Outokumpu Oy of Finland for substantial energy savings and low operational costs.

★ Captive power plant for uninterrupted power supply—first phase already commissioned.

★ The fastest growing Ferro Alloys Company with a phenomenal annual increase of 127% in profits and 41% in sales for the year 1988-89. Now poised for a quantum leap in assets, turnover and profitability.

ISPAT ALLOYS LIMITED
'Park Plaza', 71 Park Street, Calcutta 700 016

PRESSMAN

Where there's ISPAT, there's VERSATILITY

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Photographs by SHARAD SAXENA

Shekhawat campaigning

- Bofors ke dalalo ko, joote maaro saalon ko. (Pelt the Bofors' touts with shoes.)
  Opposition slogan in Rajasthan
- Bofors ke teen dalal, Rajiv, Pilot, Natwar Lal. (Bofors has three middlemen—Rajiv, Pilot, and Natwar Lal.)
  Opposition slogan in Rajasthan
- Bharat Varsh ka pahredar. Buta Singh apka ummedwar. (India's watchman, Buta Singh, is your candidate.
  Congress (I) slogan in Jalore

RAJASTHAN

Opposition Wind

Electoral unity boosts the Opposition's chances

IN the 1984 elections, the Congress(I) made a clean sweep of 25 seats in Rajasthan. This time, if there's any sweeping to be done, it won't be the Congress(I) which will be doing it.

For one, unlike in 1984, it will be facing a united opposition in 24 constituencies. For another, the Ramshila movement has got a tremendous response and the beneficiary is clearly the BJP. Together, the two factors—opposition unity and Hindu militancy—are a deadly combination.

Just how deadly it could be is obvious from the voting pattern in 1984, when there was a massive wave in favour of the Congress(I). Even so, the combined opposition votes outnumbered the ruling party's in five constituencies—Barmer, Bayana, Bharatpur, Nagaur and Jhunjhunu. With no split in their votes now, the Opposition is already counting these constituencies—four contested by the Janata Dal—as won.

In 1984, the BJP had polled the second highest number of votes in 15 constituencies. But with opposition unity uppermost on the agenda this time, it conceded the Sikar seat to Haryana Chief Minister Devi Lal, for his grudge-bout with Lok Sabha Speaker Balram Jakhar. The upshot is that the BJP is contesting 14 seats leaving 10 for the Janata Dal.

JALORE

Buta's Bid

EVEN 750 km away from New Delhi, in the villages of Jalore, Buta Singh cannot escape the Ayodhya controversy. The Vishwa Hindu Parishad (VHP) and BJP leaders have made it the main plank of their campaign against Singh in his constituency by arguing that the Sikh home minister is standing in the way of construction of the Ram temple.

Says Singh, who is standing from Jalore for the second consecutive term: "It is an absolutely unethical campaign. They are using a religious controversy which I have to manage as the home minister." Aside from Singh, there are eight candidates in the fray at Jalore, the most notable of whom is Kailash Meghwal of the BJP—who also has the Janata Dal's support. Though Meghwal is not a political heavyweight, the shrewd home minister is aware that the emotive Janmabhoomi issue could upset all his electoral calculations. So Singh is not pulling his punches and is sparing no opportunity to lash out at the RSS-BJP-VHP triumvirate.

Singh has also pampered his constituency by opening guest-houses, schools, waterworks, dispensaries and an oil factory.

Singh is hoping that the development of the area and his high-profile image will undo the damage done by the religious campaigning and clinch the election for him.

Even if the BJP does not win the election from Jalore, it has won the preliminary round by giving the prime minister's right-hand man a tough fight, and tying him down to his constituency.

—PANKAJ PACHAURI in Jalore

CC-0. In ... on, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Even worse for the Congress(I), though the BJP and the Janata Dal only have an informal adjustment at the national level, in Rajasthan, the two parties have launched joint campaigns. BJP state chief Bhairon Singh Shekhawat exults: "It's like a baraat (wedding party). There is no difference between the two parties."

The Congress(I), on the other hand, is in a depressed mood. It's fielding candidates from all 25 seats, sixteen of whom are sitting MPs, including Union ministers Buta Singh, Rajesh Pilot and Ram Niwas Mirdha. But with two heavyweights—former chief ministers Harideo Joshi and Jagannath Pahadia—out on gubernatorial assignments, the party is short of star campaigners. Chief Minister Shiv Charan Mathur is unfazed. Says he: "Our party's strength is the worker. And we have plenty of them."

The ruling party's campaign is confined to one slogan: only the Congress(I)

SIKAR

Jakhar Jammed

THE battle for Sikar is clearly a one-sided affair. Frenzied crowds break into dance as Devi Lal's rath rolls into the Lok Sabha constituency. The drum beats reach a crescendo and he is showered with marigold petals.

Devi Lal (above) is all set to defeat Jakhar (below) comprehensively Balram Jakhar gets petals too, but the spontaneity is missing. The garlands are not from the people, but from Congress(I) workers. Worse, the crowds are lacklustre, most having been bulldozed into coming.

Everywhere, thunderous applause greets Devi Lal's promises—waiving of all co-operative bank loans up to Rs 10,000; Rs 100 a month to graduate unemployed youth; Rs 300 to the first child born in Harijan households; and Rs 100 a month as old-age pension to all those above 65. Pointing to a group of old men, he says: "Don't die before November 22." Bursts of laughter greet the rustic witticism.

Encouraged, he continues: "Haryana's budget is Rs 1,349.99 crore and Rajasthan's Rs 2,368 crore. If I can provide so many facilities, why can't the Congress(I) Government. The Centre has a budget of Rs 84,000 crore. Let that money-making machine come into my hands and I'll shower you with currency." The crowd is ecstatic.

In contrast, his adversary's speeches are sombre. Says Jakhar ponderously: "My winning or losing this election is not important. The Opposition has 12 aspirants for the prime minister's seat, and in order to come to power they'll even sell the country."

The contestants are also fighting a personal battle. Months before the elections were announced, Devi Lal declared his intention to fight Jakhar, who is married to his cousin. To ensure that, he filed nominations from both Ferozepur and Sikar. Explains he: "As Lok Sabha Speaker, Jakhar was instrumental in allowing a debate on the death of my granddaughter-in-law (Supriya) even though it was clearly an accidental death."

To face the Devi Lal onslaught, Jakhar, who is seeking re-election by the 11.5 lakh electorate, has been on a gruelling campaign. His strategy is to cover every village in the constituency as opposed to Devi Lal's whirlwind tour.

Unfortunately, Jakhar himself is on the defensive. Pleads he: "I know I have not done all that I promised. But give me more time." A fertiliser plant and a hospital were promises that were not kept. Jakhar also fights embarrassment on the fodder scandal that has sparked off the popular slogan: "Chara chor, commission khor, Sikar chhod Sikar chhod" (Fodder thief, commission agent, leave Sikar, leave Sikar).

Expectedly, the despondency is percolating down to the Congress(I) ranks. Though Jakhar claims, "We will smash Devi Lal", the wind clearly blows in the Haryanvi Jat's favour.

—HARINDER BAWEJA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

"National is famous for creating new trends in audio and video products. Now they've done it again with an exciting new line-up of TVs, videos and portable stereos that will make you glad you waited to buy National. From Super VHS movie cameras that make video movie making so pretty they nearly rival professional level equipment... to large-screen TVs that incorporate National's Dome Sound System, providing cinema-like listening as well as viewing right in your own home. From "soft" design video cassette recorders that permit NTSC (as well as PAL) playback on PAL-format TVs...to portable stereo double cassette component system that overcome the inherent size disadvantages of conventional portable stereo with the Extra Bass System. Yes, National has done it again. They've set the trend in audio and video enjoyment."

A Note About NTSC Playback:
The playback picture will shrink vertically, and black bars will appear both on the top and bottom of the screen. This is not an indication of a malfunction.
And the playback picture may roll up or down, adjust it with the V-HOLD control on the TV.

RX-CW55F
Portable Stereo Double Cassette Component System
- "XBS"-Extra Bass System
- AFD (Acoustic Flat Diaphragm) Woofers
- 60 Watt PMPO Output Power
- 4-Band FM/MW/SW1/SW2 Radio
- 5-Band Graphic Equalizer
- Double Auto-Reverse
- Digital Clock/Timer

Panasonic
NV-MS50E S VHS C 625 VHS PAL
Compact Super VHS Movie Camera
- Super VHS High Quality Picture
- Hi-Fi Stereo Sound System
- Improved Piezo Auto Focus
- AV-9-Head System with Amorphous Pro Heads
- Compact and Lightweight: Only 1.4 Kg

NEW TREND

TC-AV33XR DOME sound system
Type 33 (84 cm) World 17 Multi System Colour TV
- Astonishingly Realistic Dome Sound Syst
- Built-In 10W x 10W Stereo Amplifier
- 600-Line Horizontal Resolution
- TV/Video Dual Remote Control
- S-Video In Terminal
- Video/Audio In and Out Terminals
- 30-Position Auto Tuning

NV-L18EN VHS PAL
VHS Video Cassette Recorder
- Digital Multi-Screen Functions
- NTSC Playback on PAL TV
- Digital Programme Controller
- Variable Double Super Fine Slow (1/5-1/2
- 8-Hour Recording and Playback (LP Mode)
- Digital Intro Scan
- "Soft" Design

NEW TREN

FULL SERVICE National NETWORK

National

• For Information C

National Authorized Service Centres In India
Bombay: Esquire Service Centre Tel: 234226/230311 4131857/4133470 533506
Associated Electrical Agencies Tel: 4930074/4930075
Indus Air conditioning Pvt. Ltd. (For home appliances only) Tel: 4223729/4223737
Madras: Associated Electrical Agencies Tel: 478559
Esquire Service Centre Tel: 479507
Bangalore: Associated Electrical Agencies Tel: 220275/225577
New Delhi: Positive Commercial Co., Ltd. Tel: 262179/268964
Esquire Service Centre Tel: 697285/611327
Calcutta: Esquire Service Centre Tel: 440840
Trivandrum: Master Electronics Co., Pvt. Ltd. (For audio/video products only) Tel: 64
Cochin: Master Electronics Co., Pvt. Ltd. (For audio/video products only) Tel: 361788

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

ON JANUARY 18th, 1986, THE SPACE SHUTTLE COLUMBIA LANDED PERFECTLY ON TYRES WITH TECHNOLOGY LIGHT YEARS AHEAD OF ANY AIRCRAFT TYRE TECHNOLOGY.

Now MRF backed by the same B.F. Goodrich technology brings you space-age radials. Slide into the driver's seat. Start the car. Hit the road. And let MRF ZIGMA take over...

Accelerate: You'll discover that taking off was never so smooth.

Manoeuvre travels a n
Brake: Feel
n light grip.
Park: The to

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Manoeuvre: The unique 'Z'oid tread pattern unravels a new force in road-hugging.
Brake: Feel the broad tyre base hold the road in a tight grip.
Park: The tough, wide tyre base, and the sensational raised black-lettering announce your arrival – in style!

MRF ZIGMA: It's an out-of-the-world driving experience.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

VIMAL

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

A woman expresses herself in many languages. Vimal is one of them.

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

DO FOR YOUR HOME

INTRODUCING ROYALE

Inspired by the secrets of creation. In a palette of 35 designer shades, created, for the first time, to bring to life the colours of the earth. And the glorious hues of heaven. Give your home the divine splendour of Royale. Supreme luxury acrylic finish. The finest premium among premium emulsions. Perfected on earth by Asian Paints.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

WHAT GOD DID FOR THE EARTH

ROYALE
THE FINEST WALL FINISH
SINCE CREATION.

asian paints

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Highly recommended by all who fly.

Lufthansa

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

can keep the country together. The candidates drive home the message at their meetings. The target is obviously the BJP. "These people are instigating Hindus against Muslims," Buta Singh tells villagers in Jalore. "They want to break the country while we want to take it forward." In a Jodhpur state government colony, Ashok Gehlot, state home minister, rattles out details of all that the Congress(I) did during the drought. Says the former Jaipur prince: "In one year, the Government spent Rs 800 crore—more than what was spent in the past 40 years." But he too returns to the refrain of communalism: "The BJP says that Ramshila pujas have increased their votes by 5 per cent. Isn't it mixing religion with politics? They will create more Bhindranwales."

Some BJP leaders are directly targeted for attack. Guman Mal Lodha, for instance, the BJP candidate in Pali. A former high court chief justice, Lodha is currently the chief of the Rajasthan unit of the Ram Janmabhoomi Samiti. Says Gehlot: "It is an unholy alliance."

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

But the BJP too has worked out a strategy to counter the Congress(I)'s attack. While local leaders play on the Ram Janmabhoomi issue, senior leaders like Shekhawat turn the attack back on the Congress(I). As he said at an Ajmer meeting: "In my 32 months as chief minister, we had only one communal incident. In the last 12 months, we have seen 28 riots. The reason is that the Congress(I) instigates riots to get Muslim votes." He concludes with a slogan: "Hindu-Muslim bhai bhai, Congress ki ho gai safai" (Hindus and Muslims are brothers, the Congress is finished).

In Rajasthan, at least, that prospect—of defeating the Congress(I)—no longer seems as outlandish as it did just two months ago.

—PANKAJ PACHAURI

Farooq Abdullah's National Conference faces no opposition in Kashmir

JAMMU & KASHMIR

Silent Valley

Militants issue call for an election boycott

THERE are no posters, no party banners or flags, no speeches or election meetings. So successful has the militants' call to boycott the polls been that campaigning by political parties in the Kashmir valley is distinguished by its complete absence.

The National Conference (NC) is the only party to put up candidates for the three Lok Sabha seats in Kashmir—Srinagar, Anantnag, Baramulla. In Srinagar, the NC's Mohammad Shafi Butt, the only candidate, has been declared elected. NC nominees in Anantnag and Baramulla—Revenue Minister P.L. Handoo and Saifudin Soze—have not addressed a single poll rally to date.

In contrast, frenetic campaigning is on for the two seats in the Jammu region—Jammu-Poonch and Udhampur. Both are traditional Congress strongholds but the party's image has declined. If it wins again, it will be due to the Opposition's failure to come to an agreement on seat-adjustments.

In Jammu-Poonch, the Congress(I)'s Janak Raj Gupta is the sitting MP. But both the BJP's Chaman Lal Gupta and the Janata Dal's R.S. Chib, who recently quit the NC, are strong challengers.

In Udhampur, the Congress(I)'s Dharam Paul faces heavyweights—Panthers Party chief Bhim Singh, BJP state unit chief Thakur Baldev Singh and Janata Dal Secretary-General Shiekh Abdul Rehman. But he might scrape through because of the division.

While it's hard to predict the outcome in Jammu, there is no doubt that the NC will win in Kashmir. But fear of the militants could keep the people from voting. In that case the NC's win will have a hollow ring. It'll be a mockery of the electoral process. —ZAFAR MERAJ

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

- The work of an MP is not to get the drains and streets of a town repaired. But I have got that done too.

  JANAK RAJ GUPTA, Congress(I) candidate in Jammu-Poonch

- Why has the Janata Dal not fielded any candidate in the Kashmir valley? Is it afraid of terrorists?

  RAJIV GANDHI in Jammu

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

PUNJAB

Bullet vs Ballot

The political process offers new hope

THE change in Punjab's skyline is dramatic. Hundreds of vehicles with party flags, loudspeakers and election posters once again dot the countryside. Fleets of vehicles leave trails of dust on the village roads flanked by golden mustard fields. Newspaper headlines too reflect the new spirit; news about terrorist killings have been relegated to the inside pages.

The election campaign has ushered in a new hope and optimism for the future, reflected in the slogan of the Janata Dal candidate from Jalandhar, former diplomat Inder Gujral: "Give peace a chance in Punjab." However, the shadow of the terrorist still looms large. Each of the 227 candidates for the 13 Lok Sabha seats has been provided with five armed guards.

The November 10 incident at Patiala where 18 students were killed and six injured by a group of terrorists brought the threat tragically alive. Five years of terrorist bloodshed have severely stretched Punjab's social fabric which is likely to cause a polarisation of votes on communal lines. Says Akali hawk, Sukhjinder Singh: "I told BJP leaders who came to discuss electoral adjustments that it was no use. Neither can you get us Hindu votes, nor can we make Sikhs vote for you."

Candidates like Gujral who are fighting for "Punjabi ektaa" are finding the going tough. Hardliners among Sikhs ask Gujral—who faces the twice-elected Congress(I) MP, Major-General (retired) Rajinder Singh Sparrow—to openly condemn alleged "fake encounters"

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

TARN TARAN

In the Lion's Lair

THE two cars, with lion-emblazoned saffron flags aflutter, stop near a group of students walking towards Rakseron village. An occupant holds out a bunch of pamphlets and asks the students to paste them in the village. "These are Simranjit Singh Mann's election posters," he says.

The students wave him off. "You don't need to spend money on posters for the villages which fall on the Manochal Highway," they say. The meaning is self-evident: these areas form the operational terrain of top-terrorist Gurbachan Singh Manochal; and here support for Mann, the former IPS officer now lodged in Bhagalpur jail, is taken for granted.

Mann's election symbol, a lion, is literally stalking Tarn Taran. And as if in fear, the Congress(I) appears to have slunk away. The fear is understandable. Tarn Taran is one of the most destabilised areas in Punjab. Bordering Pakistan, it has been a nursery of sorts for terrorism.

Mann's campaign is being orchestrated by his father, Joginder Singh, sister Daljit Kaur, and local functionaries of the Akali Dal(Mann) and the All India Sikh Students' Federation (AISSF). Unlike 1986, when the Barnala group prevented the Badal group from putting up Mann for a parliamentary seat, this time he has the support of all Akali factions. Says Avtar Singh Boparai, office secretary of the AISSF (Manjit): "Winning is no problem—we want him to win by a record margin."

Expectedly, militancy marks Mann's campaign. On November 6 when it was launched, the hardcore Akalis dominated the scene. Among those who spoke were Jasbir Singh Rode, Baba Joginder Singh, and Trilochan Singh Tur, who won the Tarn Taran seat in 1985 and who has now withdrawn in Mann's favour.

Baba Joginder Singh and (inset) Mann

Ninety per cent of the constituency's populace consists of Sikhs. A traditional Congress seat, it was only in 1977 that the Akalis won it. Since then the influence of the Congress has waned. With no old timer willing to contest, the choice finally fell on Ajit Singh Mann, president of the Amritsar district (rural) unit. The candidate is handicapped by the uncertain conditions prevailing in the area. Surinder Singh "Kanwal", president of the Block Congress(I) Committee admitted it would be difficult to canvass openly for him.

For the past few years only the bullet has been relevant in the Tarn Taran area. It remains to be seen if the ballot is allowed to replace it; and if that proves a step towards sanity.

—KANWAR SANDHU

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The commissioning of the LD process, design changes in furnace linings, improved instrumentation including the use of gas analysers—all of these have ensured better energy utilisation.

Not only in steel making, today TISTECH is working for an effective energy management programme at every stage from raw materials to steel processing. Stamp charging for coke. Sinter from blue dust. Power from washery rejects. Cement from slag. Use of LD top gas for reheating furnaces. The list is growing by the day.

TISTECH ENERGY

And Tata Steel's energy programme is not only encompassing every field, it is also involving every mind. Today every employee at Tata Steel is not only talking energy conservation, but doing something about it.

Because TISTECH ENERGY is more than an energy conservation programme in a steel plant. It is a pioneering attempt at evolving a technology that is relevant and an attitude that is contemporary. TISTECH ENERGY is a deep rooted commitment towards meeting the country's needs of today without compromising its tomorrow.

- Fuel oil consumption reduced by 40%
- 45 million Nm^3 of LD top gas recovered per annum
- Heat working time reduced by half in open hearth furnaces through KORF technology
- Flat flame burners introduced at Bar & Rod Mill to conserve energy

TATA STEEL
The first and still the foremost

The KORF control panel at SMS III

collection

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

An exclusive start to a new decade

M-LINE DIARY 1990
le: IT 102
: 82 mm × 177 mm
e: Rs. 65

INDIA TODAY YEAR BOOK 1990
Code: IT 101
Size: 222 mm × 289 mm
Price: Rs. 250

KET DIARY 1990
: IT 103
79 mm × 127 mm
: Rs. 35

India Today Diaries and Address Book

The India Today Yearbook 1989 established distinctive standards which were widely appreciated by discriminating users, for meticulous attention to production and the quality of information offered. This year's edition, the India Today Yearbook 1990 upholds these fine standards and comes with a comprehensive range of exclusive pocket diaries and an address book produced with an eye to detail—a hallmark at India Today.

INDIA TODAY YEAR BOOK 1990

Much more than just a diary, this yearbook puts invaluable information on your desk where it belongs.

The information includes a statistical overview of the Indian economy, a political profile of India, a complete travel guide, city guides, International Time, and 16 pages of full colour maps.

The diary section is laid out with busy executives in mind. The easy-to-read, easy-to-write format includes: a week-at-a-glance, hourly slots for appointments, current and forward year planner, ample space for notes, address and phone number section.

Attractively produced with a burgundy red cover, gold leaf embossing, gilt-tipped pages and a handy ribbon marker, the India Today Yearbook 1990 belongs on your table.

DELUXE MINIATURE DIARIES.

To match the diary on your desk, there is now a slimline for your jacket or the briefcase and a pocket diary specially designed to be carried on your person. With these miniatures, you can now carry all the day-to-day information you need with you. Alongwith provision for space for your appointments, you get 35 pages of invaluable information like India at a glance, Conversion Tables, ISD and STD codes, International Times and a 3-year Calendar 1989-1991.

IF THE ORDER FORM IS MISSING
Just mail your enquiry/order to Living Media India Ltd., P.B. No. 29, New Delhi-110001. Your order should be accompanied by remittance drawn in favour of 'Living Media India Ltd'. (add Rs. 5 to outstation cheques, i.e., outside Delhi).
Please add Rs. 10 for each set of upto 3 initials to be printed in gold leaf (facility available only for the diaries).

DER FORM—1990

Product Code	Product Details	Price (Rs.)	Qty Ordered	Total Amount (Rs.)
T 101	India Today Yearbook 1990	250
T 102	India Today Slimline Diary	65
T 103	India Today Pocket Diary	35
T 201	Address Book	65
			Total (in Rs.)
	Gold Embossing of Initials @ Rs. 10 per Item facility available for diaries only.
			Total Amount of Order (Rs.)

lease give maximum of 3 initials per diary ordered, on a separate sheet.

I enclose my crossed cheque/DD for Rs. _____ (add Rs. 5/- for outstation cheques, i.e. outside Delhi) payable to 'Living Media India Ltd.'
Please send the diaries and address books, as listed in the coupon, at the following address:

Name _____

Address _____

_____

_____

_____ Pin _____

Mail your order to:

Living Media India Ltd.
P.B. No. 29,
New Delhi-110001

Diaries will be home-delivered at your given address by the year end or early in January 1990.

FREE DELIVERY.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

while handbills distributed by Hindu chauvinists ask him to clarify his stand on the Anandpur Sahib resolutions, "Khalistan", and attacks on Hindus by terrorists.

The Akalis are once again undermining their chances through disunity. All three major factions of the Akali Dal—Longowal, Badal, and Mann—have put up nominees, and virtually no understanding has been reached on consensus candidates.

The polarisation of votes on communal lines is also more pronounced this time because of the entry of half a dozen alleged extremists or their relatives. Besides Simranjit Singh Mann from Tarn Taran, other alleged extremists in the fray include the jailed, self-styled chief of the Khalistan Liberation Organisation, Atinderpal Singh. Sucha Singh and Bimal Kaur Khalsa—the father and widow of Beant Singh, Mrs Gandhi's assassin—are also contesting.

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

Political observers feel the immediate result of this will be that many Hindus—who form 40 per cent of the population in Punjab—will not exercise their franchise. Says a shopkeeper at Kharar, near Chandigarh: "It is best to keep away as you either vote for the votaries of the bullet or face the bullet by supporting the Congress(I)."

As opposed to the 1985 elections when militant organisations advocated a complete boycott, this time most of them have announced a "limited boycott". While their members are not contesting, they are extending support to the candidates "upholding the ideals of Sikhism". In a majority of the constituencies, Sikh voters outnumber the Hindus. This time, 7.78 lakh people between 18 and 21 years of age will exercise their franchise; this vote will prove crucial.

Seeing the writing on the wall, the Badal group has incorporated in its election manifesto, the AISSF demand that state governors be elected by members of the respective assemblies and not imposed on the states by the Centre.

The moderates among the Akalis, such as Surjit Singh Barnala, have been marginalised during the election campaign. Though Atinderpal is unlikely to win since former MP Balwant Singh Ramoowalia is contesting against him, it will give people like him a measure of "acceptability", which will have a bearing on the transformation in Sikh politics currently underway. And if Mann and Bimal Kaur win, it will be a further shot in the arm of the emerging Akali Dal (Mann) faction.

The Congress(I) is hoping to benefit from the fact that Akali candidates of different groups have locked horns in seven of the 13 seats. But the Congress(I) is equally handicapped by infighting. Moreover, the Bahujan Samaj Party (BSP) is contesting 11 of the 13 seats. With Scheduled Caste votes in Punjab as high as 28 per cent, the BSP candidates will cut into Congress(I) votes.

With as many as 137 independents in the arena, Punjab's electoral scene is something of a free-for-all. But for most of the electorate, what is important is that it heralds the revival of the political process in Punjab. That alone offers the hope that Punjab may witness a reduction in extremist violence. In a state ravaged by five years of bloodshed and destruction, any ray of hope shines as brightly as the sun.

—KANWAR SANDHU

● The campaign headquarters of the Amritsar Congress(I) candidate, R.L. Bhatia, and the Tarn Taran Akali Dal candidate, Simranjit Singh Mann, are in the same building complex in Amritsar. After the day's electioneering, both sides sit together in a rare show of camaraderie.

● The security forces are worried as Mit Singh—who is contesting seven Lok Sabha seats—has refused to accept security guards. Not that he is thronged by crowds during his campaign. But in case he dies in a mishap, polling in all seven constituencies will be countermanded.

ORISSA

Patnaik vs Patnaik

Hunger for change favours Opposition

LAST May, Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, impressed by the huge gathering at the All India Mahila Congress(I) conference in Bhubaneswar, enthused that there was not a wave but a storm in favour of his party. Six months later, when he flew down to launch his party's election campaign in Orissa's capital, the storm was still there. Only this time, it is blowing against the Congress(I). And the audience numbered hardly 5,000 compared to the 60,000 six months ago.

Congressmen themselves feel that Rajiv is no more a vote-catcher. Moreover, the Janata Dal's alliance with the communist parties has successfully put the Congress(I) on the defensive. Says J.P. Harangi, a schoolteacher, reflecting a common sentiment: "It is not because the Janata Dal in Orissa is in better shape than the Congress(I), but because people want a change, no matter who comes."

EASTERN PRESS AGENCY

Biju Patnaik (right) in Puri

The desire for change has made the elections localised and personality-oriented, dominated once again by the Patnaiks; Chief Minister Janaki Ballav

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Patnaik and opposition stalwart Biju Patnaik.

Biju Patnaik promises the electorate that the moment he and his party comes to power, every single paisa earned illegally by Congress(I) MLAs and ministers would be confiscated, all farmer loans up to 10,000 written off. And the day after the results are announced, the state will get its second steel plant. Says he confidently: "The Janata Dal-communist combine is all set to capture 99 per cent seats."

The J.B. Patnaik strategy is to project the instability and chaos if the Janata Dal is voted to power, as he storms through the state with a fleet of cars and a helicopter. He says he is overwhelmed by the people's response.

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

For the forthcoming polls, the Congress(I) has retained as many as 15 sitting MPs, underlining the serious infighting within the party. The chief minister himself faces opposition from two formidable groups, one headed by party boss K.C. Lenka and another led by former chief minister Nandini Satpathy. Even the Oriya daily Sambad, owned by the chief minister's son-in-law, has predicted that the Congress(I) might be wiped out this time, because of the candidates it has put up.

The Janata Dal too faces a similar problem. The list finalised by Biju Patnaik has angered many, including party General Secretary Hanti Das, who has joined the BJP in protest and is contesting from Bhubaneswar.

In spite of the squabbles in the ruling party, the Congress(I) is confident that the Harijans and tribals, constituting 39 per cent of the population, will back them. But the bottom line in the electoral equation is 'change'. After 10 years of ruling the state—the longest by any Congress(I) chief minister—J.B. Patnaik seems headed for his political Waterloo.

—FARZAND AHMED

NAMAS BHOJANI

Rane addressing party workers

GOA

War Within

Dissidence plagues two main parties

IT is the war within the two main parties—the Congress(I) and the Maharashtrawadi Gomantak Party (MGP)—that dominates the election battle in Goa for two Lok Sabha seats and 40 assembly seats.

The Congress(I) started off on the wrong foot by giving a ticket to the former speaker of the Assembly, Dayanand Narwekar who resigned on September 16 following allegations of attempted rape against him. Churchill Alemao also got the Congress(I) ticket even though there are several police cases against him.

Congress(I) Chief Minister Pratapsinh Rane, however, has his answers and promises ready. "The Opposition too has fielded anti-social elements. The Congress(I) is more interested in thinking about the future of Goa."

But it is infighting that Rane should be worrying about. In Benaulim, the constituency from which Churchill Alemao has been fielded in place of the sitting MLA Monte Cruz, advertisements questioning the wisdom of having fielded Churchill have been inserted by Congress(I) leaders themselves. And in Cortalim, Mauvin Gaudhino, the Youth Congress(I) president of the state is facing a tough fight from former joint secretary of Goa Pradesh Congress(I) Committee (GPCC-I) Francis Valladeras who quit the party to contest as an independent when he was denied a ticket.

The MGP faces similar problems. Its joint secretary and MLA Babuso Gaonkar who is contesting from Mandrem and has the backing of the Gawde community is facing rebels. The community has expressed its "unhappiness" over Babuso not being given a ticket.

Dissidence then will determine the electoral outcome. Congress (I) and the MGP candidates are fighting on two fronts—warding off the challenge of both rebel candidates and their opposition opponents.

—RAGHU NANDAN DHAR

● The Congress(I) is interested in the future of Goa. I want Goans to be ready to face the 21st century. And for this they have to be educated and employed. We hope to remove fear from the hearts of villagers when they face computers.

Chief Minister PRATAPSINH RANE

● The infighting in the Congress(I) is intense. So far as Goa is concerned, the Congress(I) advertisements showing the Opposition fighting for seats, apply more to itself than to the opposition parties.

RAMAKANT KHALAP, President, Maharashtrawadi Gomantak Party

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The shape of excellence.

Swiss Made / Mod. dép.

Individuality, clarity, style and perfection: all these attributes are perfectly blended in the new Rado Florence 'Anatom' models. The revolutionary design, using a scratchproof, diamond-polished sapphire crystal, enables an aesthetically perfect fit to the human wrist. And the mirror-like gold coatings on the crystal ensure that unmistakable radiance for which Rado watches are famous the world over. Despite its slim and elegant look it is still a very dependable and waterproof Swiss top-quality watch.
Rado Florence 'Anatom' – a piece of personality. And a joy forever.

RADO
Florence

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

WHEN YOU WANT TO FINISH FIRST, START WITH THERMAX.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Being ahead of the others has its advantages. Let's start with the finish. Every name on our client list has the winning looks. No wonder. The super surface comes from the little extras Thermax puts into the painting systems designed and built for them.

From pre-treatment to final finish. We offer complete surface coating systems engineering packages. Backed by our association with Trinity Industrial Corporation, Japan, and The DeVilbiss Company, USA, two international leaders in this field.

In fact, from painting of switchgears and refrigerators to bicycles and cars — Thermax has the experience to execute any surface-coating requirement. However complex.

- ☐ Electrostatic and conventional painting equipment.
- ☐ Powder coating and powder recovery systems.
- ☐ Cathodic and anodic electrodip.
- ☐ Auto-transporterised or spray phosphating.
- ☐ Systems for water-based paints.
- ☐ Multi-fuel heating systems.
- ☐ Water and waste water treatment facilities.
- ☐ Computerised simulation of layout and product flow.

So if you have a surface coating need, talk to the leader.

GROWING WITH A MISSION

THERMAX

THERMAX LIMITED
SURFACE COATING SYSTEMS DIVISION
4, Bombay-Pune Road
Shivajinagar, Pune 411 005
Tel : (0212) 51123
Telex : 0145-545 TMXS IN
0145-449 TMXK IN
Fax : 091-212-55041

Finishing at the top

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

You don't have to be India's greatest rock star to be a Raymond's man.

Remo Fe
Rock, writes composes th and performs
Dresden to T
When he' audiences in

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

star

Remo Fernandes, Goa's gift to Rock, writes his own lyrics, composes the music, plays, sings and performs, wowing them from Dresden to Tokyo.

When he's not sending audiences into orbit, you may, on occasion, find him making the scene in a sparkling polyester/wool/silk combination aptly named "Silverene".

You don't have to be India's first rock personality to be a Raymond's man. For that matter, you don't even have to be a Raymond's man.

... but it helps.

Raymond's

Never say no to life.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Marble creates history.

Carara. Blended Marble Flooring. ◆ Carara is a new kind of flooring, a blended marble flooring specially crafted with the technical expertise of ARMSTRONG the International giant in floorings. ◆ Carara is predominantly a marble tile - more than 80% consists of the finest grains of Indian marble blended with binders in a palette of colourants to give you a range of colours which even marble cannot give you. Sombre and classic greys, varied tones of white, rustic and moody browns, muted greens and an array of rich creams. ◆ Carara is made by a unique process which ensures that the design goes right through the tile. So even with years of wear you will see the same tile design. No ugly patches. ◆ Carara has all the toughness of marble; and it is scratch-proof. ◆ Carara is the quickest, most convenient way to fit a marble floor, a matter of a few hours only. ◆ What's more, each tile fits with the other so precisely, that Carara floors

Inarco Ltd. Bombay, Tel: 2022621/2022213 Delhi, Tel: 3320264/3310227 Madras, Tel: 663272/665874

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Again.

is seamless - like a single marble slab.

A master piece needn't cost the earth.

Carara is available in a range from Rs. 20 per square foot onwards - almost nothing - for floors as cold as marble. Carara retains the best of marble and adds to it features that readily distinguish it from every other floor, to make it quite extraordinary. Today, Carara rewrites flooring history. To transform your world. With marble.

CARARA

Blended Marble Flooring

Armstrong

A FLOOR ABOVE THE REST

Armstrong World Industries permits INARCO Ltd the use of their trademark

HTA 1801

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

What did the Khajuraho Surasundari say to the Skypak Man?
'You've roamed the world...
tell me, did you see any woman more beautiful than I?

We'll deliver. Wherever on earth. SKYPAK The worldwide couriers.
Skypak House, Off M. Vassanji Road, Marol, Andheri (E), Bombay 400 059.

Avenues SC-495-89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

DELHI

Capital Contests

Clash of heavyweights

I have a political nose," says H.K.L. Bhagat, Union minister for information and broadcasting, "and I smell a Congress(I) victory in Delhi." K.L. Sharma, general secretary of the BJP, boasts of no such olfactory prowess. But he says: "There is a strong anti-Congress wave and we will win."

Apart from smells and waves there was a cacophony of sounds and a riot of posters that flooded the nation's capital. Though Delhi has just seven seats in the Lok Sabha, the candidates contesting make the battle for the capital important. Among those in the fray are Union ministers, Bhagat and Jagdish Tytler, BJP chief L.K. Advani and the Bahujan Samaj Party President Kanshi Ram.

And Delhi is proving demanding territory. Its old voter profile of govern-

BHAWAN SINGH

SHARAD SAXENA

Bhagat (above); and Advani: poised to romp home

L.K. ADVANI

No Hiccups

PARTY members regard him as an organiser and an idealogue par excellence. Now they want him to be their "mass-based" leader. Yet, as he candidly admits: "I hate to be in front of a mike giving a speech."

That's one reason why Lal Krishan Advani, 62, BJP president, had steadfastly refused to contest a general election. But now as his party's nominee for the New Delhi constituency, he is playing the role he least relishes. Last fortnight, standing atop a Maruti Gypsy with hired drummers belting out a bhangra rhythm and caparisoned horses leading the way, the garlanded Advani seemed more like a reluctant bridegroom than a seasoned politician.

As he waved to curious residents standing on their balconies—a sprinkling of women in their nighties and men in vests sipping their morning tea—he muttered: "It's a game I'm getting used to." Not quite. When he found party supporters trotting ahead and handing out garlands to bystanders to welcome him, he asked them to stop.

When it came to addressing election rallies, he showed no signs of mike-fright. His speeches were brief but hard-hitting. "We promise to give you a good administration not a Bofors-type," he said at one gathering, "Bikau sarkar nahi, tikau hi" (Not a saleable, but a stable government).

But he seemed to deliberately black out any reference to the National Front. His strategy: support any move to defeat Rajiv Gandhi but retain the BJP's identity, so that in the post-election scenario it can emerge as a major power broker.

In contrast, the Congress(I) seemed devoid of a game plan. With K.C. Pant, who won the seat in 1984, refusing to contest, the seat went to Mohini Giri, 51, daughter-in-law of the late president V.V. Giri. Her inexperience as a politician showed up in her lackadaisical campaign. And at one corner-meeting in Amar Colony, a dispirited Giri said: "Even if you don't vote for me from this area, I'll still come back to do social service."

Meantime, Advani's party workers campaigned door-to-door, and seemed confident of winning the seat in a canter. But Advani was circumspect. Said he: "Complacency could prove fatal." At the moment that seems unlikely. —RAJ CHENGAPPA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Acqua Minerale Bisleri uses the same silver system used by NASA to purify water aboard space shuttles.

NASA scientists selected a silver system to purify drinking water aboard space shuttles after testing 23 different methods. Acqua Minerale Bisleri (AMB) also found silver to be the most effective water-purifying agent. Silver sterilised water inhibits the growth of bacteria through the oligodynamic effect. It is further treated with special anti-microbial processes and packed in disposable bottles. AMB is 100% pure drinking water. It is safer than boiled and filtered water which can get contaminated. In fact AMB is so safe that you can confidently give it not only to everyone at home but also to the sick and the convalescent and even to infants. Carry it with you while travelling too. On earth. Or in space.

RADEUS/PE/AMB/3-89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

ment babus and Punjabi refugees has been radically altered in the past decade. Delhi's 5.6 million voters are today among the most cosmopolitan in the country. As Bhagat complains: "I now have to campaign for the south Indian, Bihari, Oriya and Bengali votes."

The Congress(I), which swept all the seats in 1984, seems to have the odds stacked against it. The Bofors scandal has provided the BJP, its main rival, fodder to feed the city's literate population. And the rise in prices is being used to woo the city's large slum population.

Moreover the ruling party has given tickets to lightweights like Subhash Chopra and Mohini Giri. And the nomination of Dharam Dass Shastri, whose name was linked in the 1984 riots, may see the party lose the votes of the city's substantial Sikh population.

The BJP is not free from bickerings either. With Madan Lal Khurana and V.K. Malhotra, both heavyweights of BJP's Delhi units, deciding to contest, younger leaders in the party complain of being sidelined. And in the two seats that the BJP allotted to its ally, the Janata Dal, trouble broke out. In East Delhi, two Janata Dal candidates, Chand Ram and Kishore Lal, fought over who was the real party nominee.

While the Dal candidates slugged it out, Bhagat, with a bevy of black-cats guarding him, went around his constituency in an air-conditioned Contessa, supremely confident. Tytler, though scouring his Sadar constituency on foot with lorry-loads of campaigners in tow, has a tough fight on his hands against the BJP's Malhotra. But the BJP's Khurana, atop a van mounted with a giant cut-out of his, is confident of winning the South Delhi seat. Claims he: "We are now talking only of my margin of victory."

—RAJ CHENGAPPA

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

TAMIL NADU

An Epic Battle

The ruling DMK faces an uphill task

THERE are in Tamil Nadu just 39 Lok Sabha seats up for grabs in the coming parliamentary elections. But for the three major political parties in the fray—the DMK, AIADMK and Congress(I)—the stakes are infinitely higher. If the ruling DMK loses, the opposing AIADMK-Congress(I) combine might use its central clout to dismiss the ten-month-old Karunanidhi Ministry. If it wins, the DMK can buy itself bargaining power in the event of a coalition snatching power at the Centre.

The party kingpin, Karunanidhi, strikes a confident posture on the campaign trail. Says he: "They say that if Rajiv Gandhi is returned to power, the DMK Government will be dismissed. That can happen only if he returns to power. But the next government at Delhi is going to be formed by the National Front of which the DMK is a part."

Easily the most responsive electoral issue is the Bofors scandal. Karunanidhi, a film script writer, has coined catchy lines related to the Bofors issue.

Despite that, he is finding the former film star and AIADMK leader Jayalalitha a formidable foe. She is using the current climate of rising prices and tariffs to telling effect. Says she: "Now that Karunanidhi has come to power there will be shortages and rising prices. No water, no power, no rice. And I am not saying this—the man on the street is."

For Jayalalitha, after losing the assembly elections to the DMK last January, this is her last chance to win political acceptance. Although she is drawing rapturous crowds—more than either Rajiv or Karunanidhi—sceptics don't see this as proof of electoral backing. Says one: "They have come to watch the fun. They won't vote for her."

But that hasn't diluted Jayalalitha's determination. Beginning each speech with a nostalgic reference to MGR, she says that the Congress(I)-AIADMK alliance is not an opportunistic one like the

SHYAM TEKWANI

Karunanidhi on tour: close fight

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Excerpts from the speech of Chairman-cum-Managing Director, at the 6th Annual General Meeting held on 27.9.89.

Dividend

I am happy to inform you that the Board of Directors have recommended a dividend of 18% for the year 1988-89.

Financial Results

The year 1988 started under the strains of severe drought affecting the national economy. However, the subsequent bountiful monsoon set the stage for recovery. Both these factors affected your Company's operations. While the drought pushed up the cost, the heavy monsoon affected the progress of civil works at Chamera, Lakhwar and Vyasi Dams. At Sardar Sarovar site, while new infrastructural facilities are under installation, work continued with the existing facilities. The Cement Division scaled new heights of performance. Thus, despite some adverse factors, I am happy to say, your Company has been able to achieve a record performance. The Gross Operating Revenue reached Rs. 217 Crores (for 15 months period) against Rs. 120 Crores in the previous year and Gross Operating Profit Rs. 35 Crores against Rs. 19 Crores in the previous year, representing an increase, on annualised basis, of 45% and 49% respectively. Both the Engineering and Cement Divisions significantly improved their performance.

Current Outlook-Year 1989-90

In this month of September, 1989, the Engineering Division has been awarded Rs. 10 Crore Rock Fill Coffer Dam by Tehri Hydro Development Corporation Ltd., which is to be completed in 8 months. Your Company has been prequalified for World Bank aided Rs. 380 Crore Srinagar Dam and its Power House in Uttar Pradesh and World Bank aided Rs. 600 Crore Indira Sagar Dam and its Power House in Madhya Pradesh. Confirmation of your Company's prequalification for Rs. 670 Crore Nathpa Jhakri Hydroelectric project in Himachal Pradesh is expected shortly. Your Company will seriously participate in these tenders.

The Cement Plant continues to operate at above the rated capacity. In the last 5 months, capacity utilisation is 104%. Marketing network is being expanded and strengthened wherever it is necessary. The fact that the Cement Plant is able to sell the entire production, while maintaining its prime position in the market speaks volumes about the quality of the product and the sound marketing network.

With the order book of Rs. 866 Crores as on 1st April, 1989, your Company is anticipating a gross revenue of Rs. 180 Crores in 1989-90 from the Engineering Division (Rs. 70 Crores from Indian projects and Rs. 110 Crores from overseas projects). With the Cement Division contributing Rs. 130 Crores, your Company is expected to cross Rs. 300 Crore mark in Gross Revenue in the current year.

Second Million Tonne Cement Plant

You will be pleased to know that the orders for main plant and machinery have already been placed and delivery of equipment will commence from November, 1989. Civil works are in progress as per schedule to match the receipt of equipments. Barring unforeseen circumstances, the plant is expected to be commissioned by December, 1990. Special attention has been given to energy conservation and pollution control measures. Besides that, for the first time in the country, On Line Bulk-Analyser for raw materials is being introduced.

Looking Into The Future

With Rs. 866 Crores of construction jobs on hand, cement plant operating at rated capacity and the anticipated commissioning of the second million tonne cement plant by end of next year, suffice to say that your Company's future is very bright. Your Company has projected a turnover of over Rs. 400 Crores in the years 1990-91 and 1991-92. This does not take into account fructification of any of the tenders for construction jobs, about which I have mentioned earlier. Your Company crossed the Rs. 200 Crore mark in 1988-89. In its sustained drive towards excellence, your Company will cross the Rs. 300 Crore mark in 1989-90 and Rs. 400 Crores in 1990-91, a growth which one can be proud of. However, the optimism of your Company does not mean that there is a rosy scenario for Construction Industry as well as Cement Industry in general.

Construction

The Construction Industry in India has come of age. Today they can undertake any major developmental project. Jobs like the one your Company is handling at Sardar Sarovar involve procurement, installation, operation and maintenance of modern machinery, the value and intricacies of which compare favourably with equipment of any other industry. Still industry status is yet to be accorded to construction.

The major construction companies in the country are now in a position to handle more and more number of major developmental projects of very large magnitude, particularly in the field of river valley and hydroelectric projects and complete them in time. Quicker clearance to such projects in the pipeline would give not only a fillip to the Construction Industry, but also to the overall development of the country.

A number of Indian construction companies have created a sea of goodwill, particularly in the Gulf countries. The potential there is vast and immense. The Government may adopt suitable strategies to enable the Indian construction companies to bag a big chunk of these projects, to the advantage of the country. Basically the incentives given to the Construction Industry for foreign works need a second look.

According Industry status to construction, immediate review of incentives for foreign construction jobs, evolving strategies to bag as many jobs as possible from the Gulf area and quick clearance of river valley projects are the need of the hour.

Cement

Indian Cement Industry has come a long way. It has absorbed latest technology and is achieving higher capacity utilisation. The saturation level reached between demand and supply in cement is having adverse impact on the operation of the Cement Industry as well as its financial results. The signals are clear. The industry, which has stood up to its commitment in the past is under-nourished. The immediate task should be to provide adequate incentives so that export potential to the neighbouring countries is exploited to the maximum, which would ensure inflow of foreign exchange as well as maintaining the upward trend of capacity utilisation in the industry. Discussions have been going on, but decisions need to be taken promptly.

Quicker decisions on mammoth development projects, adoption of cement roads at least in the main arteries of the country and truly encouraging prefab housing in a big way could redeem the Cement Industry from its present status.

Newer cement plants, due to very high investment cost need special dispensation. Excise relief should be continued and extended to all new investments.

I have tremendous confidence in the polity of the country. Development is bound to take place which will need cement and more cement. Let not existing cement plants turn sick. Let not entrepreneurs feel shy of investing in cement. Let there be growth in cement in every sense. Let not the nightmarish experience of cement shortage be repeated. Let not posterity point an accusing finger.

Wish you all a very happy Deepawali and Prosperous New Year!

Lucknow JAIPRAKASH GAUR
27th September, 1989

JAIPRAKASH
INDUSTRIES LIMITED

This does not purport to be a report of the proceedings of the 6th Annual General Meeting.

LINTAS (DELHI)/JI/69/2417

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

At Shanthi Gears customer confidence nurtures growth.

It is not surprising. Because customer confidence has resulted in increasing demand. And the only way to keep them confident is to grow. The result? our turnover has grown six-fold in as many years; we are poised to double it.

No wonder that Shanthi Gears is the first choice of diverse industries like Textile, Cement, Rubber, Steel, Coal, Chemicals, Sugar, Paper, Pollution Control and Thermal Plants – among others.

Our Product range: Worm/Helical Gears and Gear Boxes. Geared Motors and Tailor-made Gear Boxes.

Shanthi Gears

Turning the Wheels of Industries

SHANTHI GEARS LIMITED
304-A, TRICHY ROAD, SINGANALLUR, COIMBATORE – 641 005.
TAMILNADU, INDIA. PHONE: 0422-74241
TELEX: 0855-375 GEAR IN, 0855-302 SALE IN.
TELEFAX: 0422-74245 GRAMS: "SANTHIGEAR"

• Bombay: Ph: 6140168, 6123587 Tlx: 011 79157 SALE IN • Bangalore: Ph: 645018, 646332 Tlx: 0845 2061 SALE IN • Madras: Ph: 582444, 587234 Tlx: 041 7193 SALE IN • Madurai: Ph: 88564 • Delhi: Ph: 554287
Business Representatives at: Calcutta, Ahmedabad, Pune, Nagpur, Varanasi, Hyderabad, Vellore, Salem, Trichy, Cochin.

LINTAS M 8GI 2417

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

National Front—which she calls "an alliance of mice and frogs". Traditionally, the Congress(I) has been Tamil Nadu's most favoured party during Lok Sabha elections. Even though the Congress(I)-AIADMK alliance is unlikely to repeat its 1984 electoral performance when it won 37 out of the 39 seats, it is certain to make inroads into the DMK's bastion.

The DMK is not taking any chances. It has fielded 30 candidates conceding just nine to its allies and played safe in seat selection; most tickets have gone to those who fetched the second largest number of votes in 1984—when the DMK won just two seats.

The DMK is also banking on the Achilles' Heel in the alliance armour—the in-fighting in the ranks of both the alliance partners. Jayalalitha's decision to concede 29 seats to the Congress(I) and its allies has caused considerable resentment in the AIADMK. Further, she has nominated just one sitting MP from her party and her choice of candidates has been questionable. One example: denial of a ticket to Lok Sabha Deputy Speaker Thambi Durai who was then fielded by the Congress (I).

The Congress (I), on its part, is crippled by factional feuds led by TNCC(I) chief V.K. Ramamurthy and G.K. Moopanar, with both sides unhappy with the lack of new faces in the poll fray.

In keeping with Tamil culture, it is building into an epic battle. Both sides are equally matched in terms of resources and electoral ammunition in the form of issues. The DMK cannot but improve on its two seat performance in 1984. For the Congress (I)-AIADMK alliance, there is little prospect of repeating its 1984 showing. But Tamil Nadu is nothing if not traditional, even in the electoral sense. And that puts the odds in favour of the alliance.

—KAVITHA SHETTY

- You must use your votes like Gandivas (Arjuna's bow) to vote these modern day Dushasanas and Duryodhanas out of power.
  JAYALALITHA's campaign speech.

- Karunanidhi: They talk of an explosion if Rajiv wins. But the explosion took place in Delhi and all of you know what it is. What is it? Crowd Crowd (instantly): Bofors.

- This Karunanidhi is not like a mushroom that sprang up after yesterday's rain.
  KARUNANIDHI's election speech, taking a dig at JAYALALITHA's political inexperience.

SHYAM TEKWANI

Jayalalitha with supporters

JAYALALITHA

Bouncing Back

THEY call her Puratchi Selvi (revolutionary maiden), a derivation on the title of Puratchi Thalaivar (revolutionary hero) bestowed on her political mentor, the late MGR. For Jayalalitha, anointed heir to the mantle of MGR, it is a formidable legacy to bear. Her defeat by the DMK in the last assembly polls, her subsequent period in the wilderness, the alleged attack on her in the Assembly, all combined to put a serious question mark over her political future.

But the former film star is now back—with a bang. The coming Lok Sabha elections in the state seem to have provided her with a political elixir. Suddenly, the 'revolutionary maiden' is riding high again, her electoral fortunes on a definite upswing. The chant by her supporters—"Long live the future chief minister of Tamil Nadu"—does not sound incongruous any more.

Her charisma—and glamour—draws crowds who are driven to frenzy as she descends from her Swaraj Mazda Jayaratham to be guided to the stage by party leaders bearing torches. The rapturous cries of "Puratchi selvi Vaazhgai" (Long live the revolutionary maiden), indicate that she is back in popular favour.

Though Jayalalitha rarely speaks for more than five minutes and that too in an expressionless monotone, she uses a clever mix of issues and symbols to sway the electorate. The supreme moment is when she lifts her hand and flashes the victory sign, synonymous with the AIADMK symbol of two leaves.

Her scathing attacks on the DMK Government's drawbacks like the rice shortage or price rise earn an emotional response, specially from the women. The high points are always her salvoes at Karunanidhi: "What has the DMK done since it came to power in the state? Karunanidhi has spent Rs 5 crore of public money on propaganda—that's all."

Her efforts seem to be paying off. The young men in the crowd she attracts might be there because of her glamour appeal, but they listen—and watch. And what they see is a woman of substance who shows every sign of being firmly ensconced on the comeback trail.

—KAVITHA SHETTY

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

TITAN

REQUIRES

HEAD OF PRODUCT DEVELOPMENT

Titan Watches Limited, a Rs.80 crore TATA venture, has emerged as the leader in the fast growing Indian quartz watch market. The company expects to achieve sales of over Rs.75 crores this year. Its products are accepted world-wide and it has secured an order for export of 30 lakh watch movements over the next 3 years. Plans to export watches are under development.

Titan has put together an outstanding professional team. Its success has been achieved by adopting innovative approaches in different areas of the business and creating an environment which encourages creativity, teamwork and a high degree of commitment. Titan is setting new standards of excellence in product design, manufacturing, advertising, distribution and retailing.

At the heart of its success story is AN OUTSTANDING COLLECTION OF FINE QUARTZ WATCHES, comparable to the best in the world. Titan watches, in international styles appropriate to the preferences of the consumers in India, are available in a wide range of designs and at several price levels.

The product development department is responsible for the conceptualisation, development and implementation of this strategy. The head of this department reports to the Vice-President (Sales and Marketing) and is responsible for

- understanding the requirements and needs of different segments of consumers and developing products appropriate to each segment.
- monitoring new trends in the international market and adapting them suitably for the Indian consumers.
- interacting with the manufacturing and the marketing departments to ensure that the desired product reaches the consumer at the right time and at the right price.

The successful applicant will have a highly developed aesthetic sense combined with business acumen to be able to develop and sustain a product mix appropriate to the Indian market as also to the Company's marketing and business needs and profits.

The person, in age group 30 to 45 years, could be a graduate in engineering, liberal arts or fine arts and may even have a management degree. Experience in the management of the product development function or the marketing of fashion products or personal wear and accessories in a reputed company in India or abroad would be very useful.

The position and salary will be appropriate to attract the best talent in the country.

Please apply within 15 days to:

The Vice President (Sales & Marketing)
Titan Watches Limited,
Sona Towers, 71 Miller Road,
Bangalore 560 052.

Please superscribe the code: HPD-IT on the application and envelope.

TITAN WATCHES LIMITED

A TATA + TIDCO ENTERPRISE

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

HARYANA

Devi Lal Wave

Jat leader seems to be unstoppable

THE symbolism is stark—and telling. As the massive bulk of Haryana's strongman, Devi Lal, slowly rises on a hydraulic lift till he finally emerges on the roof of his Vijay Rath, the crowd explodes in a cacophony of cheers. Two and a half years after ascending the chief minister's throne, Devi Lal still straddles the state like a colossus.

If anything, his popularity has reached a more frenzied pitch. Haryana may send only 10 members to the Lok Sabha. But judging by the electoral atmosphere, the number could easily be 10 times greater. More than at any time before, the wily Jat realises he is finally close to the ultimate gaddi—that of the prime minister.

He does keep stressing that V.P. Singh will be prime minister if the Opposition wins. But that is not the message being bandied about in his campaign. All over the state, the chief minister's election managers harp on one issue—Devi Lal as the future prime minister. No material gains are being offered, no promises being made, no local issues being raised.

"Kal ke pradhan mantri aaj aap ke beech mein baithe hein" (Tomorrow's prime

Devi Lal (left); Chautala addressing a public rally: popular support

BHAWAN SINGH

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

BHAJAN LAL

Tough Going

LOOT rajya nikalna hai, Bhajan Lal ko .lana hai," shouted a group of youngsters, dancing in front of the former chief minister's jeep as it rolled into Hodal (Faridabad), where he'd come to address an election rally.

Bhajan Lal himself didn't seem to share their enthusiasm. Having been virtually trapped by the Bansi Lal camp into contesting from Faridabad the Union minister is pitted not only against popular Janata Dal candidate Khurshid Ahmed, but for all practical purposes, against Devi Lal himself.

For, in a show of bravado, Bhajan Lal challenged the chief minister to face him in an electoral battle. Devi Lal did not file his papers in Faridabad but Bhajan Lal did, only to get stuck. The Congress(I) high command stopped him from withdrawing. Consequently, he faces a three-pronged attack—from Devi Lal, Ahmed, and enemies within the Congress(I). Bansi Lal's supporters convinced Rajiv Gandhi that Bhajan Lal should remain in the field otherwise he would spend his time damaging the prospects of other party candidates, and in engineering defections.

Bhajan Lal has indeed kept up his image as founder of the aya ram gaya ram culture. He kicked off his election campaign with Janata Dal MLA, Tayyab Hussain, in tow. Devi Lal promptly alleged that "Hussain has been bought for Rs 1.5 lakh." But clearly, Bhajan Lal has won the first round. For Hussain,

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai

not the mesied about in
All over the f minister's ers harp on Lal as the inister. No re being of-nises being raised.
aap ke beech ow's prime ddressing support

BHAWAN SINGH

evi Lal did dabad but stuck. The d stopped sequently, ack—from ies within supporters at Bhajan otherwise naging the andidates.
ns.
ept up his ram gaya is election
MLA, Tay-promptly en bought hajan Lal Hussain.

minister is in your midst today), thunders Professor Veerinder Kumar, MLA and state sugar cooperative chairman, to an excited gathering in Rohtak. Mangal Sen, deputy chief minister and state BJP chief, echoes the sentiment. "Haryana's chief minister today will change the fate of the country tomorrow."

Elsewhere, Om Prakash Chautala, Devi Lal's son and his chief campaigner, draws repeated applause when he declares: "Leading opposition members are plotting behind Chaudhary Devi Lal. The ticket-seekers flocked, not to anybody else's house but to our very own Haryana Bhawan." There is no mention of V.P. Singh in any of the campaign speeches.

Not surprisingly, the principal spokesman of the 'future prime minister' strategy is the Haryana stalwart himself. Perched atop his fancy Vijay Rath, he proclaims: "I started my campaign only after paying my respects at Gandhiji's samadhi at Rajghat, for, as he said, the country can prosper only when a kisan's son becomes the prime minister." The chord is struck. The kisans hysterically chant: "Desh ka neta Devi Lal."

Bhajan Lal at a rally: determined bid

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

Devi Lal: You had a cup of tea today. How much did it cost?
Crowd: One rupee.
Devi Lal: You bought a beedi bundle. How much did that cost?
Crowd: Two rupees.
Devi Lal: So you have already spent three. All I ask for is one rupee every five years. Will you give it?
Crowd (shouting): Yes. Take more than one.

● Hamko jita do. Phir dekhna ham Devi Lal ki kya gat karte hain. (Vote for me and then see what we do to Devi Lal.)

BHAJAN LAL at Faridabad

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

In the state's electoral context, Devi Lal seems invincible. With Jats accounting for 20 lakh votes out of the 79-lakh strong electorate, the Jat leader has already won half the battle. In fact, for the first fortnight of the campaign, Devi Lal spent just four days in Haryana, a measure of his confidence.

The Congress(I) has only three Jat leaders in Haryana—Bhajan Lal, Bansi Lal and Hardwari Lal. But Bhajan Lal and Bansi Lal are individual, and not popular leaders. And in terms of mass support, they are no match for Tau (Uncle) Devi Lal.

The Congress(I)'s campaign focus is, in fact, on Devi Lal's sons. "Ranjit Singh conspires in Delhi's Samrat Hotel to bring down the Government and Chautala sits in Chandigarh, ordering bureaucrats and minting money from transfers," says Bhajan Lal, adding, "It's not Ram Rajya but Loot Rajya." But Bhajan Lal, despite his public boasts of winning all 10 seats is himself battling for electoral survival in Faridabad (see box). Factionalism within the Congress(I) is severely undermining Bhajan Lal, with half the state's cadres aligned behind Bansi Lal. Congress(I) dissidents are openly working against the party's nominees, particularly in Karnal, Kurukshetra, Ambala and Sonepat.

The BJP, a partner in Devi Lal's Government, is content with the two seats it has got: Ambala for Suraj Bhan and Karnal for Sushma Swaraj. They are confident of victory in both, thanks to Congress(I) dissidence in both constituencies.

But it is the Devi Lal juggernaut that dominates. Flags, banners, posters, audio and video cassettes have flooded the towns and villages. Rising above the din of election speeches and songs, is the fast catching on slogan: "Tau pura tole ga, Lal Quila se bole ga." (Devi Lal will get the measure right, and from Red Fort speak forthright.) In Haryana, at least, this carries an increasing ring of conviction.

—HARINDER BAWEJA

Khurshid Ahmed

Khurshid Ahmed, is a popular leader amongst the Meos who comprise a 4-lakh-strong vote segment in Faridabad.

The other powerful group consists of trade unionists and factory workers. And Bhajan Lal is leaving no stone unturned to woo them. His task is made easier by the fact that the union leaders are agitated with their managements who, they feel, are being dictated to by Devi Lal's sons.

Bhajan Lal is using precisely this weapon to win their votes. In meeting after meeting during his gruelling 20 hours-a-day schedule, Bhajan Lal was eloquent on Devi Lal's misrule and his sons' misdeeds. "Devi Lal has broken all the promises he made in 1987 and in turn has only looted the state," he thunders. "Vote for me and I'll send him packing to his Sirsa farm house."

While half his speech is a tirade against Devi Lal, the other half revolves around the possibility of rigging. "Don't let Devi Lal's goondas capture polling booths," he warns. His fears are not unfounded. Devi Lal's workers openly talk of resorting to rigging. "Goliyan chalva dein ge, par Bhajan Lal ko jeetne nahi dein ge," they threaten. Between the ballot and the bullet, it's a tough fight for the Haryana Congress(I) heavyweight. —HARINDER BAWEJA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE SOFTWARE EXP
IF YOU'VE GOT THE
HELP YOU BEAT TH

The software opportunity. Are you ready for it?

It certainly isn't an effortless business. The world is your market, but it is also your competitor. And in an exacting environment where solutions have a short shelf-life, getting the right solution to the right place at the right time, involves a whole set of elusive variables. With only one constant factor on your side: Exim's financing package.

Exim Bank. The software export catalyst.

When it comes to the key resources—money, knowledge and time—it pays to get into the Exim mode. The Government of India announced the Software Policy in November 1986. Since then, Exim Bank has enabled Indian computer software exporters target over Rs. 100 crores of export business.

Exim Bank offers you swift, single-window access to critic resources. Scan the menu of benefits:

* A total financial package—foreign currency and rupee term loans, plus working capital
* Rebate on Customs Duty for Exim Bank scrutinised proposals
* Clearance for import of computer systems in about 15 d

Plus the Software Policy benefits:

— Release of 30% of excess export earnings for importing new computer systems, augmenting existing computer systems and acquisition of software companies abroad
— Availability of foreign exchange to meet expenses on marketing abroad

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

EXPORT CHALLENGE.
THRIVE, WE COULD TRAFFIC.

ccess to critic
cy and rupee utinised in about 15 d
s for importing ng computer anies abroad xpenses on e for foreign collaboration/foreign investment compensatory support ed tax benefits

ss to databases abroad via satellite links.

u get into Exim's fast lane?

y what it takes is a well-defined project backed by ood track record that proves management abilities
d financials with resilience to meet contingencies omprehensive export plan backed by a marketing or collaboration.
e got it all, do talk to us. Today.
re information, please contact P.O.Box No.11697, Bombay.

EXPORT-IMPORT BANK OF INDIA

Access the menu of benefits.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Solanki addressing press conference with S.C. Shukla, Vora and Arjun Singh

MADHYA PRADESH

Turn in the Tide

Congress(I) faces a debacle

AN anti-Congress(I) wind is blowing through Madhya Pradesh—a wind that, with each passing day, gathers speed and power, and threatens to turn into a swirling typhoon that will sweep away the ruling party in the coming Lok Sabha elections.

For the Congress(I), which has always regarded Madhya Pradesh as an impregnable bastion, that is a frightening prospect. Barring 1977, the state has always returned the Congress to power. In the 1984 Lok Sabha elections, the fragmented Opposition could not win a single one of the 40 parliamentary seats. And in 1980, it won just four seats.

Still, those may not be the right historical parallels. A more appropriate one would be the 1977 Lok Sabha elections—when the Opposition won 38 seats. Now, as then, the Opposition is united. Now, as then, there is an anti-Congress wave. Add to that the dissension in the ruling Congress(I), and history seems all set to repeat itself.

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

On the face of it, the electoral arithmetic would seem to favour the Congress(I). In the 1985 assembly elections, it polled 49 per cent of the votes while the combined Opposition secured only 35 per cent. But these are extraordinary times and electoral precedents don't hold water.

In itself, the anti-Congress(I) wave may not have been crucial. What has swung the scales against the ruling party is the emergence of an opposition alliance. In 37 of the 39 constituencies which go to the polls—in Shahdol the election has been countermanded on account of the death of the BJP candidate—the Congress(I) faces joint candidates put up by the BJP and the Janata Dal. In Bhind and Jhabua, the two parties are locked in what both describe as "friendly contests".

The Congress(I), in sharp contrast, presents the image of an army of generals—Motilal Vora, Arjun Singh, S.C. Shukla and Madhavrao Scindia—working at cross-purposes.

For the present, they have called a truce—at the insistence of the high command. Last fortnight, in fact, Vora, Singh and Shukla addressed a joint press conference along with MPCC(I) chief Shiv Banu Solanki to present a joint front. But it was clearly a facade. Declared Solanki: "We are here to demonstrate that we are one." But the fact that Arjun Singh, cut down to size by the high command, is clearly trying to establish his own base rather than help the party, makes a mockery of such efforts.

In the opposition camp, the BJP, led by state chief Sunderlal Patwa, by far dominates the Janata Dal led by V.C. Shukla who is contesting from Mahasamund. The BJP is contesting 31 seats versus the Janata Dal's 10. In the last assembly elections, the BJP won around 30 per cent of the vote while the Janata Party and the Lok Dal, the two main constituents of the present Janata Dal, together secured just 5 per cent. The two communist parties have always been insignificant in the state—polling around 3 per cent of the total votes.

Other parties too are in the fray but only in a handful of constituencies will the Congress(I) benefit significantly from the divisions in opposition ranks. In Bastar, the BJP has fielded a candidate although the CPI polled the second-highest number

- Rajiv Gandhi ka sandesh
  Ek rahega Bharat desh
  (Rajiv Gandhi's message is: India will remain united.)

- Nai peedi ki nai umang
  Sada rahe Congress ke sang
  (The new generation with new ambitions will always remain with the Congress.)

Congress(I) slogans.

- Bhrashtachar, commission khori,
  Rajiv ki pakri gayi chori
  (There is corruption and also commissions; Rajiv has been caught stealing.)

- Mehangai na bhrashtachar, hum denge achchi sarkar
  (There will neither be inflation nor corruption, we will provide a good government.)

Opposition slogans.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

of votes in 1984. The beneficiary will be Shankuram Sodi, the sitting Congress(I) MP. Similarly, in Kanker, where the radical trade union leader Shankar Guha Niyogi is fielding an independent, the Congress(I) stands to gain.

In Bhind, the Janata Dal candidate could even turn the tide against the Congress(I)'s Rajput candidate and in favour of the BJP by dividing the Rajput vote. But in Jhabua, the two parties could damage each other's chances. There were stumblings too within both the Janata Dal and the BJP over the choice of candidates—and, as a consequence, several rebels are in the fray. Still, these are just tiny blots on the by and large bright picture of opposition unity.

The Congress(I), on the other hand, has given up the idea of a united campaign. The principal leaders are concentrating on their own fiefdoms—Arjun Singh in the Vindhya region, Shukla in Chhatisgarh. Scindia campaigns in the Madhya Bharat region around Gwalior but his mother, Vijaye Raje, vice-president of the BJP, too has an important influence there. Vora, who has no regional base of his own, flits from place to place, making arrangements for Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, the Congress(I)'s chief campaigner in the state.

That could cut both ways. For Rajiv is also the principal target of the Opposition's attack. Equally damaging for the Congress(I), Muslims are peeved by the handling of the Bhagalpur riots. In Bhopal, for instance, the Bahujan Samaj Party nominee, Rouf Khan, is likely to walk away with all the Muslim votes. And though the Congress(I) is openly playing the Hindu card, Hindus are unlikely to vote for it.

As S.C. Shukla says: "It is a no-win situation."

Or perhaps a big-loss one.

—N.K. SINGH

GUNA

Royal Battle

THERE may be very few tell-tale signs of royalty. But the battle Madhavrao Scindia is waging to prevent the Guna Lok Sabha seat from going to his mother, Rajmata Vijaya Raje Scindia, is unmistakably true to feudal tradition.

The bitter family war is not the only issue at stake. Madhavrao finds in these elections the opportunity to be the number one leader of the Congress(I) in Madhya Pradesh. In fact, with Arjun Singh still haunted by the high court indictment, Madhavrao has been extensively campaigning for party candidates close to him in as many as 25 constituencies. If he is successful, it may pave the way for chief ministership of the state.

But there is, ironically, only one person standing between him and his ambition—his mother. Though technically Vijaya Raje fights a protege of Madhavrao, Mahendra Singh, the challenge is directed at her son—who represented the constituency for 14 years before he was pitted against the BJP stalwart, Atal Bihari Vajpayee, in Gwalior in 1984.

Not surprisingly, Madhavrao is mobilising all his resources to retain his pocket borough for the party. The youthful railway minister has even left much of the campaigning in his own constituency of Gwalior to his wife, daughter and son while he is concentrating on Guna.

In his offensive, Madhavrao holds one trump card—the party's contribution to Guna's development. Reeling off statistics, he points out the Rs 600-crore fertiliser factory, the petro-chemical project, a Vayudoot link, the Guna-Etawah rail link, the two low-power transmitters and 95 per cent rural electrification. The message: vote for the Congress(I) nominee and for further progress.

While his vigorous campaign is meeting with an enthusiastic response, Vijaya Raje, on the other hand, is putting up a tough fight. At the age of 71, she maintains a busy schedule. Her image is not of a sentimental, wronged woman, but an inspiring one. Urging the people to take to revenge, she says passionately: "Ita ka jawab paththar se dena chahiye, hame jawab dena chahiye." (For every brick, reply with a stone. We must reply.) Drawing upon the popularity of the televised Ramayan, she addresses the voter as "mera Hanuman" and prods him to be aware of his hidden strength and utilise it.

In her role as the archetypal mother, the Rajmata takes it as her duty to chide the audience instead of wooing them. Says she: "The situation is so bad that even this elderly mother has to come out in the field. If you have any regard for your mother come out to the battleground."

Her real son, however, does not empathise with that sentiment. Madhavrao thinks his mother has played into the hands of the BJP which is simply misusing her position. He chokes with emotion as he recollects how Vijaya Raje publicly condemned his daughter's marriage after having been given place of prominence during the ceremony.

In a rare moment of frustration, he breaks his reticence on the delicate subject: "What does she want? Has not there been development in Gwalior for which she claims she has utmost concern? Why is she in the fray though she is already a Rajya Sabha member?"

The answer to these questions lies with the electorate. But with the mother campaigning against the son and the son hell-bent on getting his mother defeated, today Jai Vilas Palace is in turmoil. One part is taking over the other.

—BHASKAR ROY

PRASHANT PANJIAR

Vijayeraje Scindia addressing a meeting in Guna

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

VOTE YOUR CANDIDATE TO POWER.

HELICAL GEAR
Solid and hollow construction. Suitable for transmitting up to 7700 kW.

FLEXIBLE COUPLING
Available in different sizes, suitable for transmitting power from 0.01 kW/rpm to 44 kW/rpm.

WORM GEAR
Available in sizes ranging from $2^1/_4$" to 17". In horizontal/vertical & hollow shaft design ratios from 5:1 to 70:1.

SPIRAL BEVEL HELICAL GEAR
Right angled with solid and hollow construction. Capacity up to 2850 kW.

GEARED COUPLING
For positive power transmission. Available in sizes/types ranging from 0.06 kW/rpm to 200 kW/rpm.

FLUID COUPLING
Ideally suited for a soft start. Available in sizes ranging from 1.1 kW to 1300 kW.

PLANETARY GEAR
Suitable for bucket wheel and slewing drives for stacking & reclaiming.

GEARED MOTOR
Available in sizes ranging from 0.16 hp to 125 hp.

Elecon's Power Transmission Equipment offers you the widest choice.

Elecon is the right party to contact, for the best in Power Transmission Equipment. Equipment whose credentials are impeccable. They're designed and manufactured using CAD-CAM technology, on state-of-the-art CNC machines, complete with robot handling automation. And they're tested in the latest computerised facilities.

As for experience, consider this: Elecon has been in power for the past 30 years!

ELECON ENGINEERING COMPANY LIMITED
Vallabh Vidyanagar 388 120. (Gujarat). Tel: (02692) 30016, 30222.

Selling Agents:
EMTICI ENGINEERING LTD.
Regd. Office:
Vallabh Vidyanagar. Tel: (02692) 30317.
Branches: Ahmedabad, Bangalore, Bombay, Calcutta, Delhi, Madras, Nagpur, Secunderabad.

ELECON ALWAYS A STEP AHEAD IN TECHNOLOGY.

everest/89/EEC/452

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

KERALA

A Close Contest

The ruling LDF and the UDF are in a neck and neck race

NAIL-BITING contests have characterised the last few elections in Kerala. This time promises to be as exciting. Both the CPI(M)-led Left Democratic Front (LDF) and the Congress(I)-led United Democratic Front (UDF) are waging a no-holds barred battle. Though the UDF won 17 of the 20 seats in the last general elections, it polled just 50.91 per cent of the votes compared to 42.30 per cent polled by the LDF.

Veterans are heading both election brigades. At 81, the CPI(M)'s E.M.S. Namboodiripad is criss-crossing Kerala, attacking Rajiv, the Bofors deal and communal politics. The UDF attack is being led by former chief minister K. Karunakaran who is trying to deflect attention from the Bofors scam and Rajiv's failings by highlighting local issues and the Left's failures. The UDF slogan: "Azhimadikkaran Nayanarine Maatu, Keralam Rakshikku." (Remove corrupt Nayanar and save Kerala.)

The Congress(I) is contesting 17 seats leaving two for UDF partner, the Indian Union Muslim League (IUML) and one for the pro-Christian Kerala Congress(M). As the All India Muslim League has merged with the IUML, the UDF has consolidated the vote of Muslims who form 19.6 per cent of Kerala's population. Similarly, Christians account for 21.4 per cent of the populace. Though the UDF has roped in the Kerala Congress(M), it has fallen out with the other faction of the Kerala Congress led by P.J. Joseph. As Joseph is now going it alone, the Christian vote will be split.

The BJP move to contest all 20 seats has added a new dimension. Though unlikely to win, it will cut into Congress(I) votes. Ironically, this will help the BJP's biggest enemies—the communists. Says state BJP chief Raman Pillai: "These polls will show we have become a force in Kerala."

On close scrutiny, the LDF candidates are more impressive than the Congress(I) nominees. They are younger and most are achievers in their professions. The Congress(I) has renominated 12 of its 13 sitting MPs—an unimpressive lot with no achievements to their credit.

But ultimately, what may prove decisive is communal considerations. Karunakaran is confident that his relatively unknown son, K. Murlidharan, will win from Calicut not because he's a worthy candidate but because 33 per cent of the Calicut voters are Muslims—who are expected to vote for the UDF. And though Kottayam recently became the first Indian city to attain 100 per cent literacy, voting is likely to be on communal lines. Ramesh Chennithala, state Youth Congress(I) chief, hopes to beat Suresh Kurup, one of the CPI(M)'s most dynamic leaders, simply because he's a Christian and Kottayam is a Christian stronghold.

The real test is whether the literate Kerala voter can rise above the narrow communal confines which limit voters elsewhere.

—RAMESH MENON

SHYAM TEKWANI

Karunakaran; (right) Nayanar: bitter fight

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

- Auto driver Sudarshan, an independent, is demonstrating against Doordarshan for not allowing independents air time. But who's listening. His last electoral tally was 272 votes.

- These elections will herald the end of the Nehru dynasty.

  CPI(M) supremo E.M.S. NAMBOODIRIPAD.

- The CPI(M) has shunned idealism with its opportunistic policies.

  KPCC(I) President, A.K. ANTONY.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Politicised Press

ONE wishes that Indian newspapers, after the American tradition, would publicly declare themselves for particular candidates and parties. It would be a more honest way of supporting one side or the other in an election than through the doctoring and angling of news.

It is an indication of the devotion and animosity Rajiv Gandhi arouses that, outside the Emergency, Indian newspapers have never been as partisan or trenchant in reporting on the other side as in the run-up to the elections. Sometimes, it seems, newspapers are living in different worlds, united only by the common factor of love or hate for Rajiv Gandhi.

Take the five major English-language newspapers. Such has been the polarisation in the press that even the respected Hindu has swayed with the winds, ultimately to shake up the very seat of authority in the family business, the patriarch and editor, G. Kasturi.

It is ironic that The Hindu, rather than the Indian Express, should have walked away with all the laurels in unearthing the Bofors scandal layer by layer. The Express, as some other papers, was happy to play second fiddle in the bounty. The Hindu's Associate Editor N. Ram chose to give them as part of his quarrel with his editor.

Perhaps inspired by Ram, The Hindu has taken a more anti-establishment line than expected. It made a frontal attack on Rajiv Gandhi for not resigning on the Bofors issue. It has also expressed intolerance of the perceived arbitrariness of the Centre on such issues as panchayati raj. But The Hindu, to its credit, has tried to be fair to all sides in its news columns, only occasionally straying from the straight and narrow path.

Ram played god in distributing his favours—among the newspapers kept out were The Hindustan Times, The Telegraph and The Times of India. Even more clearly, the litmus test of pro- and anti-establishment papers was the publication of the facsimile of the St. Kitts documents, allegedly related to the secret account of V.P. Singh's son, Ajeya Singh. To no one's surprise, The Hindustan Times and The Telegraph led the field.

The Hindustan Times is, of course, a recognised pro-establishment paper. But silence, rather than support for the Government's indefensible positions, has helped mitigate to an extent the pro-government line expected of it.

The Telegraph has been fully for Rajiv Gandhi and what he stands for. The editor M.J. Akbar finally decided to throw his hat in the ring as a Congress(I) candidate while resigning his job.

The Times of India has been desperately trying to maintain a balance, its carefully calibrated criticism of the Government sought to be balanced by some hard-hitting anti-establishment stories.

The Statesman remains anti-establishment. But it has taken on an uncharacteristically strident and commentative anti-Rajiv line in news reports. This was particularly evident in the headings The Statesman chose to give the reports on Bofors, borrowed from N. Ram of The Hindu.

Above all, the Indian Express is the voice of the Opposition. There are no holds barred. The shrill prose, the hammer blows at the establishment are its hallmark. More effective than its traditional armoury has been the daily trumping of the Congress(I) advertisements by its new cartoonist, Rajendra.

> The healthy American practice of separating comments from news is lacking in Indian newspapers.

The Indian Express has self-consciously donned the mantle of tribune for the Opposition. With the announcement of elections, it is prompting the Opposition on its next moves, replete with pained appeals.

More clearly than in the opposition leaders' statements, the Indian Express mirrors the underlying sense of the Opposition's insecurity. Obviously, the Express is keeping its fingers crossed, hoping that the facade of opposition unity will not come crashing down.

Akbar is not the only journalist to have jumped into the election fray. Cashing in on his role during the Gorkha agitation in the Darjeeling hills, Inder Jit is not merely sponsored by the Gorkha National Liberation Front but has also obtained the Congress(I)'s indirect support. On the other side, Santosh Bharati, editor of Chauthi Duniya, is contesting on the Janata Dal symbol. So is Ajay Singh, editor of Asli Bharat.

There is nothing wrong with editors contesting elections as long as they declare their interests. Akbar properly resigned from The Telegraph. It remains to be seen how Inder Jit runs his Indian News and Features Alliance after his entry into politics.

Copying American newspaper practice has become the vogue in India, particularly in encouraging the new breed of activist publishers. It is a pity though that the healthy American practice of separating comments from news reports, as far as the quality press is concerned, should be so singularly lacking in Indian newspapers. In the run-up to the elections, professionalism is at a discount.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Take the world in your stride.

dinesh

Exclusives ▲ Suitings ▲ Co-ordinates ▲ Safaris

The choice of leading fashion houses, internationally.

...ed dealers: BOMBAY: Babubhai Jagjivandas • Militex Emporium • Woolco Textiles • THANE: Nagrik Stores • KALYAN: Deccan Cloth ... • Roop Sangam • PUNE: Bharat Woollen House • Chandulal Dahyabhai • Jaihind Collections • Mafatlal C. Shah.

(IT/1)

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

When a machine at a there

Ask

In fact,
s in India.
k called for portions th
a had only a span o uding auto eam for lon
ad loop se dersling ro
ting on sin body had d ufactured ure in India everyone be
It took Mu ate Corpor
ing.
The Machi
Mukand co

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

When it comes to assembling machine of the size of a football field, at a height of 11 storeys, there are no simple solutions.

Ask Neyveli Lignite Corporation.

In fact, there seemed to be one in India. Not in 1981. The job called for a crane of proportions that engineers in India had only imagined. A crane with a span of 60 metres, including automatic skew control system for long travel drive with closed loop sensor device. And an undersling rope drum trolley operating on single box girder. Nobody had designed and manufactured such an equipment once in India. Nobody could. Or so everyone believed.

It took Mukand and Neyveli Lignite Corporation to prove them wrong.

The Machine Building Division of Mukand conceptualised the gantry crane for this job, designed it and manufactured it. Within the contractual period of sixteen months. Erected by a unique hydraulic jacking system.

And weighing 560 T, India's largest gantry crane stood proudly. Another technological shackle had been shattered.

This seems to have become the favourite pursuit at Mukand's Machine Building Division. Consider the mobile service structure that we made for ISRO – a feat only NASA was believed to be capable of. Or, Asia's largest rotary drier that we made for SPIC. The first indigenously manufactured ore transfer car for Bhilai Steel Plant was made by us, as was the door extractor for coke ovens at Bokaro Steel Plant.

And, of course, the wide range of quality cranes we are most famous and trusted for. From cranes for steel plant applications to microprocessor controlled rotating trolley cranes.

Yes, we relish challenges. And we are well armed to meet them. With world-class design capability. With technical associations with the world's best in material handling. With a thrust on indigenisation. With engineers we are proud of. Who constantly give shape to their technological dreams. At Mukand's Machine Building Division.

For further information on — Cranes • Bulk Material Handling Systems • Rolling Mill and Auxiliary Equipment • Bulk Material Process Equipment • Ore and Mineral Dressing Equipment • Metallurgical Plants • Projects — call or write to:

MUKAND'S MACHINE BUILDING DIVISION

MUKAND LTD.

Belapur Road, Dighe, P.O. Kalwe,
Thane 400 605, Maharashtra.
(Formerly Mukand Iron & Steel Works Ltd.)
Tel: (0215) 2171-5. Tlx: 011-77011 MUKT IN

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Rediffusion/M/7815

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Amul Chocolates

a gift for someone you love

Marketed by:
Gujarat Co-operative
Milk Marketing
Federation Ltd., Anand

Six delicious varieties
Amul Milk Chocolate, Amul Crisp, Amul Coffee,
Amul Fruit & Nut, Amul Bitter, Amul Orange.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation

MANIFESTOS

Dull Documents

All parties make similar promises

IT is a ritual that most politicians decry. "Manifestos," rasps Devi Lal, the earthy Janata Dal leader, "just tear the first page off and all of them read much the same."

His compatriots agree. L.K. Advani, the suave BJP chief, smiles and says: "In India it is usually one single emotional issue that sways an electorate. Manifestos are omnibus documents that try and satisfy everyone's demands." And Telugu Desam leader, P. Upendra, who helped draft the National Front manifesto, has a twinkle in his eye when he says: "They are usually full of noble sentiments and utopian ideals."

Yet, no political party will forego the chance of writing out an opus—full of rhetoric, tall promises and woolly concepts. Virtually nothing is left out—not even a dissertation on the state of Indian sports.

"The nation is in a whirlpool of crises," bemoans the National Front manifesto, "crisis of confidence, crisis of character and crisis of leadership." The Congress(I) forsees no such gathering storm. According to the party's sunny masterpiece: "Today's India is young, vibrant and innovative. What India thinks today, the world will think tomorrow."

The Congress(I) 'Mani-festo' (so nicknamed because Mani Shanker Aiyer, special assistant to party President Rajiv Gandhi, had a large hand in its formulation), even contains an A to Z charter of carrots. That Telecom chief Sam Pitroda had a finger in it too is indicated by the promise of a telephone and direct dial facilities in every panchayat. However, the immediate need was for a functional copier at the party headquarters. The manifesto's release by Rajiv Gandhi was delayed by an hour as the only copying machine had broken down.

The National Front's manifesto calls for a clean break from the past. But its promises have a familiar ring. It makes the same promises as the Congress(I) to decentralise administration and give wider powers to panchayats and nagarpalikas. Of course, the front believes that theirs would be "genuine devolution".

Strangely, the slogans of the two major parties have been reversed. In 1984, the Janata Party's battle-cry was "Power to the people." That's now been hijacked by the ruling party with a snide remark that the Opposition was only keen on giving "power to the power-brokers". And the Congress(I)'s 1984 slogan of a "clean government" has been lifted by the National Front which says that only it can provide "a clean and efficient government".

Saddled with Bofors, the Congress(I) makes inaudible squeaks about wiping out corruption. It states lamely that decentralisation would "rid the suffering people of India of corruption, inefficiency and neglect". The Opposition, predictably, goes whole hog on cleansing the system. Both the National Front and its electoral ally, the BJP, talk of hounding "those who have taken kickbacks from Bofors and other deals, and punishing the guilty". The BJP suggests appointing more lokayuktas and bringing even the prime minister and the chief ministers under its purview.

The Congress(I) is silent on another embarrassing issue: the price rise. Even the National Front, which weeps about "spiralling prices and man-made scarcities", is vague about how it plans to tackle the problem. It mumbles something about "firm control on deficit financing" and "austerity in public expenditure". The BJP is more definite: it would appoint a price commission to regulate prices. If that fails it has a neat solution: jack up salaries in both the public and private sectors to meet the price rise.

On secularism, the National Front and the BJP differ. While the front vows not to interfere in the personal laws of minorities, the BJP wants a uniform civil code for all religious groups—in line

WHERE DO THEY STAND

Will you	Congress(I)	Janata Dal
*Cancel the Bofors contract?	No	NC
*Give full autonomy to AIR & Doordarshan?	NC	Yes
*Allow India to have a nuclear bomb?	No	No
*Dilute the role of the public sector?	No	No
*Follow the policy of import liberalisation?	No	No
*Make public audit of political funds compulsory?	Maybe	Yes
*Write off loans to farmers?	No	Yes
*Abolish reservation system based on caste or religion?	No	NC
*Favour a negotiated settlement with extremists in Punjab?	Yes	Yes
*Support the construction of Ram Mandir at Ayodhya?	Not at disputed site	NC
*Support company donations to political parties?	Yes	No
*Prosecute any politician and bureaucrat involved in the Bofors deal?	Yes	Yes
*Re-investigate the Reliance and Ajitabh case?	No	Yes
*Discontinue army intervention in other countries?	India has never intervened	Yes
*Give the FERA directorate, CBI and DRI more autonomy?	No	NC

INDIA TODAY submitted a questionnaire to the Congress (I) and the Janata Dal. Anand Sharma replied for the ruling party, and Yashwant Sinha for the opposition party.

*NC: No Comment

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THIS IS THE STORY OF A BORING MONTHLY NEWSLETTER

THAT SUDDENLY PUT PICTURES BETWEEN THE LINES AS TEMPTATION TO READ ON!

Few people ever admit to actually sleeping over a circular or a market report, or even an important strategy presentation.

But the fact is ... nothing could be more monotonous than going through pages and pages of typewritten words, with not a picture to break the monotony.

That's why just about anyone, who wants to present a piece of office communication as something that's attractive enough to catch the reader's eye, can now benefit from the Quantum Desk Top Publisher from Blue Star.

For presentation power that adds visual impact to all written documents. And is the fastest, most economical alternative to getting jobs done through professional printers.

Business correspondence or sales reports, product catalogues or company newsletters ... the Quantum DTP lets you process text, include graphics, design page formats, vary typefaces, change, shuffle and edit till the very end. Then print out artwork quality material at the speed of up to 8 pages a minute.

All this not only in English but in 10 Indian languages as well with Linguist— Blue Star's Multilingual DTP Software Package.

The System? The Quantum PC/AT, with Hewlett-Packard LaserJet, the largest selling laser printer in the world, and the HP ScanJet. The Hewlett – Packard connection gives you the advantage of an unequalled 50-year-old reputation for quality and reliability.

Supported by Software designed for specific applications.

The Quantum DTP from Blue Star is among India's largest selling DTP Systems. With a client list that includes Reliance Industries, Tata Consultancy Services, Hong Kong Bank, ET&T, C-Dot, Bharat Electronics and Exim Bank.

Add to that Blue Star's own Response Centre Support. Offices in 12 major cities have qualified engineers at your service, within hours of calling in.

Please mail in the coupon to the address for a free brochure of the Quantum DTP. Discover the power of presentation which can transform the ordinary ... into the unforgettable.

THE QUANTUM DESK TOP PUBLISHER FROM BLUE STAR.

Yes, I want to know more about the Quantum DTP. Please send me the brochure.

Name: _____

Designation: _____

Company Name & Address: _____

_____

_____ Phone: _____

Ashwini Aggarwal,
Hewlett-Packard Division, Blue Star Limited,
13, Community Centre,
New Friends Colony, New Delhi-110 065. Tel. 6834262.

A QUANTUM LEAP IN PRESENTATION POWER.

BLUE STAR

the hi-technology Company

Rediffusion/BS/7491b

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The Times of India

with its "appeasement for none" policy. The party even calls for "a total ban on slaughter of cows".

When it comes to goodies on the financial front, opposition parties take the cake. While the ruling party makes no new tax concessions, the front, with its eye on the middle class voter, promises to raise the income tax exemption limit. The BJP has its other eye on the rich when it promises to put a ceiling of 40 per cent on the income tax rate.

WITH the Congress(I)'s main success being on the economic front, its approach for the next five years is basically more of the same. In contrast, the opposition parties seem extravagant. While in one-breath they decry the mounting internal debt, elsewhere they promise to write off all loans to small farmers, landless cultivators and artisans. (The National Front puts a ceiling of Rs 10,000 but the BJP doesn't specify it.) Front members calmly estimate that such a move could cost Rs 10,000 crore.

If the Opposition comes to power, big business is in for big knocks. Both the National Front and the BJP want the emphasis to shift to the small-scale sector and cottage industries. Multinationals would be booted out of making consumer goods. Pepsi would have a hard time surviving. They are also averse to the Congress(I)'s computer mania. And the left parties would resist moves bringing "automation" to industry that could reduce jobs.

All the parties make the same noises about agriculture. But on the sensitive issue of population control, barring the BJP, all are strangely silent. The Congress(I), bitten by its 1977 experience, makes no special mention. The front acknowledges the problem but glibly side-steps solutions by saying: "Development is the best contraceptive." Only the BJP talks seriously of adopting a national population policy.

On employment, again there is plenty of tongue-clicking, but the solutions are the same. The Congress(I) with its two rozgar yojanas has already set the ball rolling for sops. Opposition parties follow suit with various proposed employment guarantee schemes. They are keen to make the "Right to Work" a fundamental right under the Constitution. At best, such a move may result in a few jobs for those drafting the law.

The Congress(I) grudgingly agrees to make Doordarshan and AIR into corporations but "it would be government owned". Opposition parties are expansive. Full autonomy for the electronic media. And knowing the value of a friendly press, abolish levy on newsprint.

The pithy statements are reserved for conclusions. The Congress(I) dubs the Opposition as "the self-same false prophets, the self-same false gods that reappeared to give birth to new illusions." The BJP is more direct: "Throw out this corrupt and incompetent government." And the front attempts what is an apology to Nehruvian prose when it concludes: "At last the hour of change has struck. It is for the people of India to ring it in with their votes." By then, voters are probably fast asleep.

—RAJ CHENGAPPA

SEE BETWEEN THE LINES

Even after you've heard about it all
and read about it all – see it all on India's first newsmagazine on video cassette – NEWSTRACK.
Press the play button and you're on the ringside seat –
to people, places, events, issues – incisively covered like on no
other medium ever before.

▶ ONLY ON NEWSTRACK ◀

New rates effective November 15, 1989

SPECIAL OFFERS

SINGLE CASSETTE
- Current Issue Rs.145/- and a money-back guarantee.
- Back Issues Rs.135/- each.

SUBSCRIPTION
- Annual Rs. 1380/- and a FREE INDIA TODAY YEARBOOK* 1990 worth Rs. 250/-

*Offer valid up to December 31, 1989. Year Books will be home delivered at your given address by the year end or early January 1990.

Mail a DD/Cheque favouring
Living Media India Limited to P.O. Box No.29,
New Delhi – 110 001.

For more details contact
Delhi: 3320689. Bombay : 2027867.
Madras : 479163.
Calcutta : 445398. Bangalore : 210834.

Home delivered by courier or Registered Post

India Today Presents
NEWSTRACK
▶The newsmagazine to watch◀

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SIGNS & DESIGNS WITH QUALITY ACRYLIC SHEETS FROM GSFC

Glowsigns. Any design. Any colour: Made attractive with GUJPOL-S. Makes the image glow. And profits soar.

Available as coloured and opaque sheets from 2 to 50 mm thickness at competitive prices.

Ideal for novelty items & gifts.

Penstands. Paperweights. Key chains. Table Articles.

GUJPOL-S—Also used for furniture & decoration, streetlight covers, window panes & sanitaryware.

The GSFC Acrylic Products, a continuity in its plastics range since the merger of PCGL (Polymer Corporation of Gujarat Ltd.) with GSFC in 1983, have proved to be excellent in quality and most suitable for various applications.

GUJPOL-S The Design Acrylic from GSFC

GSFC—Basic to India's Progress

Chief Marketing Manager (IP)
GUJARAT STATE FERTILIZERS COMPANY LIMITED
Polymer Unit
Giriraj Apartment, Race Course Circle, Baroda - 390 015

Navnit/78/89/M.BW

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

REDIFFUSION

Raking it in

But Congress(I) ad campaign flops

READYMONEY Terrace which houses the head office of Rediffusion Advertising, is a shabby building in Worli, central Bombay's business hub. The city's advertising fraternity says that Readymoney Terrace—home base of the ageing whiz-kids of Indian advertising, Arun Nanda and Ajit Balakrishnan—is appropriately located. Reason: the agency's cash registers are ringing thanks to the controversial and highly visible Congress(I) advertising campaign which started on October 26 and will end two days before the polls.

Though it has been the target of considerable ridicule, the cost of the campaign is no laughing matter. In 1985 the party spent Rs 8 crore on the election advertisement campaign by Rediffusion. There are several estimates on the bill that Rediffusion will present to the Congress(I) for the present campaign. An agency insider points out that the budget is more than Rs 20 crore. Speculates a senior executive of another New Delhi-based agency: "The Congress(I) budget for press advertising alone is Rs 1 crore a day. That works out to around Rs 25 crore for the entire campaign." Other sources claim that Rediffusion has placed election advertisements worth Rs 1.10 crore with The Times of India and Rs 70 lakh with Rajiv's bete noire, the Indian Express group. Conservative estimates place the budget in the Rs 15 crore to 18 crore range. But the agency's suave Managing Director Arun Nanda has refused to comment on the campaign's budget. And Congress(I) election mandarins are tightlipped on the subject. Predictably, rumour mills are working overtime.

Nanda: image problem

All newspaper groups have accepted the campaign but for the Shiv Sena-owned Marathi daily Saamna and

RAJENDRA DHODAPKAR

Acid Strokes

THERE is a silver lining to every clouded imagination. If Rediffusion's campaign for the Congress(I) caused revulsion across the land, it also spurred some brilliant ripostes.

While acidic cartoons appeared in more and more newspapers —The Telegraph, The Times of India, Indian Post and Newstime—in the corridors of Indian Express, a star was born. Editor Arun Shourie, a bitter critic of the ruling party, coordinated a hard-hitting counter-campaign of cartoons and Rajendra Dhodapkar, 32, a little-known cartoonist, became an overnight celebrity. Commented his predecessor at the Express, Ravi Shankar: "The cartoons are better than the ad campaign."

Congress(I) advertisement (top); Express cartoon; and Dhodapkar

In most cases, a neat change of blurb turned the advertisement's illustration into a lethal boomerang. The generally reticent Dhodapkar's desk became a milling centre of activity, as friends and colleagues dropped by with ideas, many of which were incorporated in the cartoons. A cartoon sent in by a reader was used only with a slight alteration.

Dhodapkar has come a long way. He dabbled in poetry and painting while practising as a government doctor in Bhopal in the early '80s. In 1985, he left Bhopal for the glamour of Bombay, where he wrote scripts for TV and short films. By late '87, he found himself in Delhi, cartooning for Jansatta, the Hindi paper of the Express group. When Ravi Shankar left the Express a few months ago, Shourie decided to try him out.

It's been a process of growth from "the high-brow circles" of Bharat Bhavan in Bhopal when he used to think of journalism as "non-serious", as opposed to his art. Now, he has come around to the view that one's intellectual convictions manage to permeate one's work even as one tries to provide the readers fun. "Shakespeare was a popular artiste," as he notes.

Dhodapkar is now concentrating on his calligraphy and basic drawing skills, which certainly need honing. However, his daily dose of medicine to the Congress(I) has already earned the relative amateur an enviable following.

—DAVID DEVADAS

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

LAND FOR 5-STAR AND 5-STAR DELUX HOTELS IN DELHI

DDA is planning to dispose of hotel sites in Delhi/New Delhi for construction, setting and running of 5-Star Hotels/5-Star Delux Hotels with all related facilities conforming to standards laid down by the Ministry of Tourism & Civil Aviation, Govt. of India.

Land will be made available by the DDA with defined terms of collaboration agreement with the Party.

Pre-qualification Notice for Disposal of Hotel Sites

For this purpose it is proposed to draw a select list of renowned professional Hotel Groups with specific background and experience and from parties having collaboration (a tie up) with reputed Indian/international hotel chains possessing adequate expertise in the setting up and running of 5-Star/5-Star Delux Hotels. The parties fulfilling any one or more of the following qualifications will be considered for enlistment :

(1) The Indian 5-Star Hoteliers having atleast one well-known established 5-Star Hotel/5-Star Delux Hotel with minimum annual turn over of Rs. 25 crores.

(2) 5-Star Hoteliers who are foreign based should have at least 5 established 5-Star Hotels/5-Star Delux Hotels in different parts of the world.

(3) Indian entrepreneurs who are having arrangement/ collaboration with the Hoteliers satisfying conditions stipulated above in (1) or (2) or both.

(4) Non-resident Indians who are willing to make investment in the country by arrangement/ collaboration with the Hoteliers satisfying conditions stipulated above in (1) or (2) or both. They would be required to remit foreign exchange for financing the project as required/permissible under the Rules.

The applicants are required to give necessary data in support of their financial soundness, proven track record in any organised industry and trade, standing in the hotel industry, collaboration with the reputed world chains of the hotels and arrangement of financing the project including foreign exchange etc.

The selection will be made from the offers received in response to this advertisement and only those who are found eligible would be allowed to participate in the final tenders/auction/collaboration for disposal of the hotel sites.

DDA reserves its right to exclude any or all the applications without assigning any reasons whatsoever for the purpose of drawing up the select list of eligible hoteliers.

The Bio-data complete in all respects may be sent to the undersigned (by name) by or before 30th November, 1989 either personally or through registered post so as to reach by the due date.

(M.G. GUPTA)
FINANCE MEMBER,
DELHI DEVELOPMENT AUTHORITY,
VIKAS SADAN, NEW DELHI-110 023

DELHI DEVELOPMENT AUTHORITY

Proudly we build the Capital of India.

The Statesman. Fearing that if the party loses, it may not pay for the advertisements, as it has done on many other occasions, the Indian Newspaper Society asked all members to take advance payment.

But as far as costs go, the advertisements in the press are just the tip of the iceberg. Says a Bombay-based advertising agency chief: "The press campaign only constitutes 40 per cent of the party's budget. Along with printing of posters and pamphlets, production of video and audio cassettes, the budget will balloon to Rs 50 crore. And Rediffusion has a piece of the action in every segment of the campaign."

The Congress(I) campaign was originally meant to be divided among four agencies: Rediffusion for the press campaign, Clarion for advertising in the eastern region, Tara Sinha Associates to handle video publicity, and Graphic-aids for printing posters and pamphlets. Jaisons, a Bombay-based agency, also made a presentation targeted at the 18-21 age group.

Insiders say that Clarion used a senior executive's family relationship with a Congress(I) bigwig to try and grab a part of the campaign. It had even set up a separate design task force in Delhi. But Rediffusion walked away with a major slice of the campaign, as a 'crack force' of 15 of its executives secretly worked on it for three months.

When the account was up for grabs, Arun Nanda was placed in a unique position as Rajiv's principal adviser on election advertising strategy. Rival agencies, such as Clarion and Tara Sinha Associates which bid for the campaign but lost out in the election advertising sweepstakes, felt they had been short-changed. Now, Clarion Managing Director, Amit Sengupta, is rumoured to be working on a campaign for the BJP.

Ironically it was Arun Singh and Arun Nehru who introduced Arun Nanda to the Congress(I) when they requested Nanda to do the election campaign in 1984. Nanda knew both the Arunns even before they had joined the Congress(I)—during their Reckitt and Coleman, and Jenson and Nicholson days, when Rediffusion was the advertising agency for both the companies.

Rediffusion has come a long way since then. But Bombay's advertising community does not mince its words on its Congress(I) blitz. Comments an agency chief: "Blood and gore are not my cup of tea. Using violent imagery like dismembered toys and scorpions is sheer over-kill. The campaign is a disaster." Sajid Peerbhoy, chairman of Speer Advertising, is equally critical. Regarding the campaign as a "prime example" of bad advertising, he says: "It lists out everything that is wrong with the country. By implication that means the present government has not done anything to solve the problems. It actually damages the credibility of the ruling party." He adds that the campaign "only offers problems, not solutions".

Campaign and counter-campaign: lethal boomerang

The general opinion in the industry is that Rediffusion should have concentrated on the achievements of the Rajiv regime. Asks the chief executive of a leading agency: "With the Indian economy shaping up so well under Rajiv, why couldn't the campaign have focused on liberalisation instead of disintegration?" Adds a former Rediffusion executive: "I think they were not briefed well. It is a negative campaign primarily because the research most probably did not point to any discernible positive trend for the party."

The reaction of Mani Aiyer, managing director of Ogilvy & Mather (O&M), was more muted. Though he declined to comment on the campaign, his reason for doing so made a statement by itself: "I don't know what brief Rediffusion got. Any ad campaign is a manifestation of the client's brief." Adding that political advertising is a complex business, he says: "If the campaign addresses itself to people's problems it will definitely work."

Another point being made is that the campaign lacks focus. Says Enterprise Advertising's Mohammed Khan: "In the West, the issues surrounding an election campaign are clear. Here advertising is not helping the voter make up his mind. It does not focus on any single issue."

Since the campaign was launched, it has been the target of considerable lampooning with the Indian Express parodying the advertisements daily (see box). Says an advertising agency chief: "The Janata Dal, thanks to Rediffusion, is using the front page of Express to retaliate against the Congress(I)—free of cost."

Despite the strident criticism, the Congress(I) campaign will definitely boost Rediffusion's billings. The Rs 20-crore-agency is expected to double its billings, placing it in the big league of agencies. But Rediffusion is also suffering an 'image' problem of its own: once reputed for its creativity, the agency has lost some of its lustre in recent years. Competitors uncharitably suggest that the agency is in the same predicament as the Congress(I). The ruling party can salvage its image with a victory at the polls. But if it loses, Rediffusion's heart will certainly skip a beat.

—S.N. VASUKI

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

NEW TIMES

A Soviet Weekly of World Affairs

The Soviet Union is making global waves, daily.

The USSR is indeed amidst her own "new times" today with an avalanche of sweeping reforms and changes.

The most appropriate journal to obtain an insight into these developments is NEW TIMES. It's a matchless weekly magazine in English, coming out of the Soviet Union.

SOVIET PERIODICALS FESTIVAL SEASON OFFER

52 issues free SAVE 33%

Take advantage of special offer NOW for THREE YEARS
YOU PAY FOR THREE YEARS
AND SAVE 33%
YOU GET 52 ISSUES FREE
OFFER VALID TILL NEW YEAR

Enclosed is my DD/MO receipt for NEW TIMES
Your Choice
☐ 3 Years (156) issues only Rs. 55.00
☐ 1 Year (52) issues only Rs. 28.00
(Please strike out whichever is not applicable)

My Name .....
Address .....
.....

Send this advertisement and payment to :

NAVCHETAN BOOKS (P) LTD.
5-E, Rani Jhansi Road
New Delhi-110 055.

NEW CENTURY BOOK HOUSE (P) LTD
41-B, Sidco Industrial Estate
Madras-600 098.

MAGAZINE CENTRE
M.C.D. Building, No. 2
Dr. Shyama Prasad Gupta Road
New Delhi-110 055.

VIJAY ASSOCIATES
Commissariat Building, 1st Floor,
231 D.N. Road, Fort, Bombay-400 001.

Omkar Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

GRAFFITI

Campaign Carnival

THE elections seem to have brought out the unsung latent talent in poets and painters across the colourful campaign trail. For every couplet created by one party, there was a counter. In the often funny wall-war Rajiv Gandhi was the favourite target, twisted into as complex shapes as the issues involved. For many, the battle at the hustings has dissolved into a carnival-like competition in literary and artistic expression. Long after the illuminated symbols are switched off and rain and sun wipes off these creations, some of them will remain etched in memory. Perhaps, these elections will be remembered only for their slogan output and caricature campaign.

PRASHANT PANJIAR

The Janata Dal chakra

SAIBAL DAS

Graffiti on a Calcutta wall

SHARAD SAXENA

PRASHANT PANJIAR

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

The Opposition's Ravana before it was burnt in New Delhi; and (left) a BJP display

PRASHANT PANJIAR

Illuminated Congress(I) symbol

The Telugu Desam symbol looms over an Andhra Pradesh town

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The New Persuaders

Many well known personalities are canvassing vigorously

BHAWAN SINGH

SHOTGUN APPEAL

AFTER V.P. Singh, he is probably the Opposition's biggest draw. Macho stars attract more crowds than chocolate box heroes. Campaigning for the Opposition, armed with gimmicks like cut-outs of the Bofors gun, adds another dimension. To top it all, 'Shotgun' Sinha live, in person, and giving the performance—and dialogue—of his life.

Yes, Bihar's favourite prodigal son is back doing what seems to come naturally—delivering snappy one-liners like, 'this Congress symbol of a hand, it should have a slogan with it: sleight of hand'; playing to the electoral gallery and drawing rapturous crowds wherever he goes.

But for Sinha this is no joke—he obviously takes himself seriously. In self-righteous tone, he says: "Opposing the powers-that-be is an act of courage and only those who have a clean record can do it." The allusions to those in glass houses—whether in politics or films—are obvious. And the attack is not just smart rhetoric. The desire to dislodge Rajiv seeps through with almost missionary fervour. He explains his enthusiasm for the opposition bandwagon: "They will do good after coming to power." But, what if they don't? The tone turns sombre. He warns: "Then, they will face my ire." Sinha is obviously confident of his political power.

Challenging the mighty is his forte—whether in films or politics. If the Bachchan was Shotgun's pet bait earlier, now his target is the irrepressible Congress(I) loudmouth K.K. Tewari. Dismissing him as the 'professor of obscenity', he boasts: "I'll personally ensure that he loses his deposit."

What does seem difficult to believe is Sinha's assurance that he will never enter the electoral vote-race. Such sacrificial fervour is useful in projecting Shotgun as the Opposition's king-making messiah. If the Opposition does win, it seems Shotgun will assuredly achieve his ambition—of being a real-life hero.

CAMPAIGN CANNON

ASIDE from Bofors, the DMK has a Prachara Beerangi (Campaign Cannon)—or Tamil actress Radhika, so christened by the party. Beerangi also means howitzer.

Her assembly campaign inspired DMK bigwigs to use her to counter Jayalalitha. She says: "My image isn't of a sex-bomb. Crowds come to see me for what the DMK stands for." Or what Beerangi stands for.

FILM SATIRIST

WE'VE heard of advertising wars. But film wars? Seems an expensive way to fight an electoral battle, but in N.T. Rama Rao's land anything goes. While the chief minister's plans to release his epic Brahmarishi Vishwamitra before the elections were nipped in the can by Rajiv Gandhi, his local nemesis. Telugu film director K.B. Tilak, is gunning for him in reel life.

Tilak's crusade against Rama Rao has now reached its climax. With the ensuing elections, Rama Rao is now at his vulnerable worst. Tilak is hoping that his films like Naa Pilupe Prabahnjanam and Gandipeta Rahasyam, biting political satires on the chief minister, will be a ballot box success. If not, they sure seem to be slated to be box-office winners.

DIVINE MESSENGER

NITISH Bharadwaj, of Krishna fame, is having a hard time on the Congress(I)'s campaign trail. He has to say his Mahabharat dialogues before recognition dawns. Obviously, the party hasn't learnt a lesson from the Arun Govil episode.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

BHAWAN SINGH

CINE CRUSADER

THE fiery voice of feminism in new wave Indian cinema is hot electoral property this year with all parties—except the Congress(I)—wooing her with more ardour than her on-screen lovers. The speculation was intense: would she take on H.K.L. Bhagat because she lashed out at him at the International Film Festival at New Delhi last year; or would she contest from Azamgarh, which is her home town. But, Shabana Azmi's response was the same for everyone—whether it was Mrinal Gore, V.P. Singh or Swami Agnivesh. Said she: "I am not interested." The actress-activist prefers her independence as a thinking individual, choosing to align herself with issues rather than parties. Shabana has decided to lend her campaign weight only to secular candidates.

The impatience with communalism is transparent. Says she: "Unfortunately, some Hindus think that Ram exists only in Ayodhya . Likewise, Muslim leaders seem to think Allah is only in Babri Masjid."

Explicably, for one so immersed in issues profound, election results are mundane trivia. But then, she is committed to her political role. Typically, she is scornful of her fellow inhabitants of tinsel town who have restricted their rhetoric to the sets. Says she: "We should have taken this step long ago for we too have a duty towards the nation. Any film star who doesn't carry out this duty is an offender."

CROWN PRINCE

FILM star Balakrishna—Rama Rao's fifth son—is all set to ease into his father's Telugu Desam sneakers. Last fortnight, he was projecting the Desam cause in a modern version of NTR's Chaitanya Ratham. All the 23 Prachara Rathams sported Rama Rao cut-outs together with those of Balakrishna—depicted as Harishchandra. The hard-sell hit hard but not true. Gimmickry can hardly buy political experience.

So, maturity gave way to rash exuberance. Even before his electoral baptimism was complete, he opened his mouth too wide. Balakrishna shocked Telugu Desam activists when he publicly admitted that his two brothers-in-law, N. Chandrababu Naidu and Venkateswara Rao were feuding. By confirming speculation about the family feud, he had managed to embarrass Rama Rao. But then, he patronizingly added: "I will try to patch up the differences." And that sent the message home.

For most Telugu Desam activists, that was sign enough that the heir-apparent had been chosen. The cue has already been taken with the hurried setting up of an NTR-Balakrishna Fan Association in New Delhi. But then, fans may not be voters.

The problem will be how well the party performs in the Andhra Pradesh elections. If it fares badly, the crown prince could wind up looking like the clown prince.

DRAMATIC ROLE

IF Shotgun Sinha is one barrel of the opposition gun, Raj Babbar is the other. And it's far from being a double-bore. The dusty hamlets and grimy faces may be a far cry from the plush environs of Bombay's Beverly Hills, but Babbar plays the role of a campaigner with far more conviction and elan than his screen ones.

Not a hair out of place on the handsome head, he paces the electoral stage oozing energy and righteous ire. "Rajiv Gandhi wants to make India a Nehru Private Ltd company," he thunders, every sinew quivering in protest at the prospect.

The actor in him often takes over. The rhetoric spews melodrama: "The Congress(I) is like the Kauravs. Duryodhan is ruling—and Bhishma, Dhroncharya and Kripacharya are sitting idle. I am with the Opposition—who like the Pandavs—are fighting for the truth." The Opposition, like the long-lost brother in Hindi films, can do no harm. "In 1977, they harmed themselves, not the country," he says dead pan. With the faith of the true believer, he promises to fight till the last breath for the long-lasting underdogs of Indian politics.

RATHIJIT GHATAK

SINGING PRAISE

HE has played a politician in Aaj ki Awaaz. But real life is a different proposition altogether. The romantic hero of the '70s, Rajesh Khanna was a bit peeved at not being given a Congress(I) ticket to contest the Lok Sabha elections. But he does not seem to have taken the snub to heart. For Khanna is campaigning and singing praises of the ruling party: "The rest are just cut-outs," he says. Cut.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Bushillusion.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Breaking into Politics

Several well known citizens have jumped into the electoral fray

POLITICAL NOVICE

AS electoral qualifications go, his are pretty thin. He started studying law but dropped out and began peddling lubricant oil instead. But Murlidharan does have one qualification that seemed to be enough for the Congress(I) to give him a ticket—he is the son of former Kerala chief minister, K. Karunakaran.

Murlidharan's selection hasn't pleased members of the ruling party. He has been awarded the prestigious Calicut seat that several Congress(I) heavyweights were eyeing. Angry telegrams were shot off to the party headquarters in New Delhi by the disappointed aspirants but his political credentials were apparently enough for the high command.

Meanwhile, Murlidharan is on a new high. The prime minister visited Calicut last fortnight to canvass for the young hopeful. Thrilled at the large crowd that Rajiv drew, Murlidharan gushed: "I am definitely going to win." The reality is that he could wind up being a political drop-out as well.

COURTING VOTERS

IT does seem to run in the family. But while celebrity lawyer Ram Jethmalani is content with throwing satirical 'Bofors birthday' bashes, it is daughter, Rani, who is doing all the running this time—for a Lok Sabha seat. Contesting as a Janata Dal candidate from Daman and Diu, the high-profile Supreme Court lawyer will need all her legendary courtroom skills to convince the people that she is a better bet than her rivals, Gopal Dada and Devjibhai Tandel. As an outsider, that could lose her the race. A popular local saying goes: "Ghar ka ghoda, bahar ke ghode se achcha." (A local horse is better than an outside one.)

And Rani's family connection is not proving to be an advantage. Her opponents are backed by the powerful smuggler lobby, even though many have been her father's clients. Two prominent smugglers, Jogi and Bhulabhai, state categorically: "Our old connection with Ram Jethmalani cannot make us withdraw our support for the Congress(I)."

Rani, is unfazed, even lyrical about her chances: "In a mystical way, I believe things happen to me. I think people have a sense of history, and they want a change." But unless her rivals split the votes in Daman and Diu, Rani could find herself electorally damned and bidden adieu.

MAHINDRA PARIKH

UNUSUAL PLANK

HE could be making history, instead of writing it. If K. Shivarama Karanth, the grand old man of Kannada letters, wins the Lok Sabha seat he is contesting in Karnataka, it will signal the arrival of the Green Movement into India's political calculations.

The Albert Einstein look-alike is, at 89, the oldest contestant in this election. His campaign plank is unusual, if predictable: environmental issues. Belonging to Karnataka's Kanara district famous for its thick virgin forests, Karanth has been leading the struggle against projects like the Kalga nuclear plant and the Sea Bird naval base.

Winner of the prestigious Jnanpith Award, Karanth is attracting a surprisingly large following not to mention the various activist environmental groups who have sponsored his candidature.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

HERO IN THE FRAY

ANDHRA Pradesh Chief Minister N.T. Rama Rao seems to have made a lot of enemies during his cine career. Yet another popular film star turned politician, an electoral newcomer, has hopped onto the anti-NTR bandwagon.

Fifty-four-year-old Krishna has been a bitter critic of Rama Rao ever since his film days. But since the 1984 Lok Sabha election, he has taken the battle to the streets. He campaigned for Congress(I) candidates in different parts of Andhra Pradesh and even starred in a film, Naa Pilue Prabhanjanam, a spoof on Rama Rao before the 1985 assembly elections.

Now he is back, contesting for the Eluru Lok Sabha seat. Krishna faces a tough rival in Bolla Bulli Ramaiah, an industrialist and sitting member of the Telugu Desam party. But active Krishna Fans Associations in different districts have despatched volunteers to make sure of their hero's victory. "I went to college in Eluru and it is like a homecoming," says Krishna.

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

BRASH BRAVURA

BYLINE is a far cry from bylanes. More so, if the bylanes happen to be in the dusty interior of Kishanganj in Bihar. When asked what he needed in terms of resources, high-profile editor and unabashed Rajiv fan, M.J. Akbar, who quit The Telegraph to stand for elections, told the AICC(I) to send supplies of Odomos mosquito repellent.

It is another kind of repellent he will need if he wants to make his political career as successful as his journalistic one was. His biggest problem seems to be the perceptible rift between his yuppie, jean-clad managers and local Congress(I) workers. Says one worker: "In a Lok Sabha campaign, you cannot afford to call it a day at seven in the evening."

But Akbar plays by his own rules, elections or no elections. After he retires to a PWD inspection bungalow with a few trusted lieutenants, his brigade leaves behind a video van fitted with an enlarged screen to propagate the ruling party's achievements. Vinod Dua's creative unit provides feedback and artistic inputs.

But more than modern communications may be needed in the communally-charged atmosphere. Though Akbar admits Muslim alienation, he remains optimistic. "Luckily for the Congress(I), the Muslims' anger against the BJP is as much," he says.

Akbar's confidence, unfortunately, is not matched by his new political colleagues. That he is an outsider is a serious drawback. But Akbar, as always, has the last word. Asked about the possibility of defeat, he says: "I hate losing."

ELECTION MEDICINE

SHE thinks she is finally ready. But so far, it's only in name. After a 12-year-stint abroad, Dr Geeta Reddy has returned to her native Andhra Pradesh to add a new dose of tonic to state politics. A practising doctor, Reddy is combining the red cross with the hand as the Congress(I) candidate for the Gajwel (SC) assembly seat in Medak district.

Her campaign strategy is to send out medical teams in ambulances plastered with posters of Rajiv Gandhi to provide medical care to the poor in the villages. Says Reddy: "Whatever may be the criticism against the Congress(I), there's no denying that it's the only party concerned about the rural poor."

Reddy is, however, making her electoral debut and she will need much stronger medicine to overcome that particular handicap.

COCKY MOVE

Call it A.P. Venkateswaran's revenge. The former foreign secretary—undiplomatically dismissed by Rajiv—is bidding for a Lok Sabha seat to get his own back.

Venkat is contesting from south Madras as an independent candidate. His main opponent: the Congress(I)'s star contestant, Vijayanthimala who many predict will dance rings around the former diplomat.

BHAWAN SINGH

But Venkat has handled too many diplomatic crises to let a little thing like that worry him. Puffing on his customary cigars, he conducts his campaign the way he knows best—hosting dinners at the city's plush Taj Coramandel or lunches at the Connemara for selected businessmen, industrialists and intellectuals.

That five-star strategy could prove fatal. But the ever-cocky Venkat simply says: "South Indians are not making their voice heard in Delhi and we will change that."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE LOOK OF YOUR PRESENTATION OFTEN DECIDES HOW YOUR CLIENTS LOOK AT YOU.

[illegible] moment. You're handing the presentation document to your client. And what's the first thing he notices?

A crooked clip?

A page slipping out of the bind?

Imagine on the other hand what his impression would have been had you given him a document like the one featured on the right.

A document dressed up by a GBC Binder. In your office. In a matter of minutes.

The look of a leader.
With a GBC Binder.

Once your presentation is ready, all you [illegible] to do is place it on the GBC Binder. [illegible] sheets get punched perfectly. [illegible] a cover that complements [illegible] presentation a neat [illegible] look.

Of course, GBC binding is sturdy enough to protect all your important documents – plans, proposals, reports, surveys, manuals or directories – against years of handling. And mishandling.

In addition, GBC offers you an amazing choice of covers and spirals. And the facility to get your company name and logo or design printed on the cover.

After all, GBC Hi-Tech (India) Ltd. is the undisputed Indian leader. And an affiliate of no less than the world leader and pioneer in binders and laminators, General Binding Corporation (USA).

And we believe that if your book is going to be judged by the cover, the cover needs to be as good as the book. Doesn't it?

 Also available GBC 419 LM and GBC 426 LM Laminators. And an exclusive range of laminating sheets.*

* Please send your representative to see me.
* Call me up to fix an appointment.

Name : .....

Designation : .....

Address : .....

..... Tel : .....

Mail to 'Marketing' at Corporate Office.

GBC

BINDERS & LAMINATORS

SMART BUSINESS SENSE FOR YOUR OFFICE

GBC HI-TECH (INDIA) LTD. CORPORATE OFFICE : A-216, Okhla Industrial Area, Phase-I, New Delhi-110 020. Tel : 6837412, 635142, 6830857, 6842529. Telex : 031-75146. Fax : 011-6830936 * D/2, Basement, 6 Sri [illegible] Road, New Delhi-110 049 * Chandigarh, Tel : 42655 * Bangalore, Tel : 220313 * Bombay, Tel : 6365814, 6363475 * Pune, Tel : 660784 * Calcutta, Tel : 432768. Telex : 021-7820 FTCI IN. Fax : 033-444614 * Madras, Tel : 452826 * Vadodara, Tel : 326440 * Hyderabad, Tel : 842895

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

JOGINDER CHAWLA

RED AND REVOLUTIONARY

It's quite literally the case of a lightweight taking on a heavyweight. The tall, thin and delicate-looking Subhashini Ali, a long-time CPI(M)labour activist in the Kanpur industrial belt, is in the fray for the first time, taking on the short, rotund Congress(I) veteran Naresh Chandra Chaturvedi. But the debutante's slight build can be misleading. She has led many a strike as a labour leader and is well known among the city's industrial labour as "didi". She moves from street to street, canvassing for votes in a distinct yellow-topped Maruti Gypsy but often has to switch to a bicycle to negotiate the narrower lanes in the city. But she will have to do plenty of homework. The last and the only time the CPI(M) won a seat in Uttar Pradesh was in Varanasi in 1967.

Subhashini also happens to be the wife of well-known film director, Muzaffar Ali and her parents, Colonel Sehgal and Captain Lakshmi Sehgal were famed soldiers in Netaji's Indian National Army. But Subhashini is not one to flaunt her connections. "I am a woman candidate contesting in my own right, not as somebody's wife or sister or daughter or mistress," she says in true revolutionary style.

JUDGEMENT DAY

AFTER years of delivering judicious judgements, the shoe is on the other foot. Subramanian Potti, former chief justice of Kerala and Gujarat high courts, now awaits the electoral jury's verdict on his candidacy. An independent candidate from Ernakulam supported by the CPI(M), Potti's erudite campaign has aroused widespread interest.

SHYAM TEKWANI

SAIBAL DAS

BALLOT WRITER

A Delhi Punjabi, with no political background, contesting from Darjeeling under the banner of the Gorkha National Liberation Front (GNLF)? Sounds like a man-bites-dog story. But not if it appears under the electoral byline of Inderjeet, the well-known columnist. Inderjeet is equally well-known as the broker who got the Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and GNLF boss Subhas Ghising puffing the peace pipe.

Now, ignoring the journalistic code of not getting involved with the subject, he, a stranger, is the GNLF candidate in Darjeeling. Stranger still is his reasoning. "Destiny", he says, somewhat ominously. That, and his hero Ghising. Waxing eloquent on what he calls Ghising's "broad vision and national approach", Inderjeet has his head in the clouds. Literally. Strolling down the hill station's cobbled streets, resplendent in suit and tie, Inderjeet resembles a tourist out to see the sights rather than a serious candidate.

Meanwhile, the hero, Ghising, is busy keeping Inderjeet's former colleagues at arm's length. That may not be such a bad idea. At his first, halting, election speech in Kurseong, Inderjeet confessed to being 'nervous'. But journalism's loss will be Darjeeling's gain. The khukri is clearly mightier than the pen.

REEL FIGHTER

KARWAR'S electorate has to choose between emoting and environment. Can popular Kannada actor Anant Nag bring to his campaign the passion he brought to acclaimed films like Manthan and Nishant? Well, his opponent and eminent environmentalist Shivarama Karanth must be hoping not. But Nag has played this role before: part of Hegde's charmed circle, he entered politics when he joined the legislative council as a Janata Dal member last year. Hegde prizes him as his star-campaigner. And Nag exudes confidence: "I am better qualified to represent the constituency." That's getting the act right at least.

Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

May be it's true that money can't buy you love, but it certainly helps you dress for the occassion.

DIGJAM

SUITINGS FOR THE CONNOISSEUR

A Product of VXL India Ltd.

WE EXCEL

Available at Mill's SUMANGAL showrooms and other leading stores

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

JINDAL

BY JINDAL

World-standard sponge iron made with technology that's totally indigenous.

Great deeds are the work of those who look for challenges, who strive ceaselessly, who actively pursue the discovery of breakthrough products and processes.

In steel, Jindal is one strong example. Jindal has developed on its own the technology to manufacture sponge iron in India. The Jindal sponge iron plant is under construction at Raigarh, Madhya Pradesh.

Pilot plant at Hissar

This is just one instance of breakthrough Jindal R & D and technology at work.

Other Jindal breakthroughs include: a fully integrated stainless steel plant, large diameter submerged arc welded steel pipes, ferro-chrome and direct strip casting of aluminium.

Jindal. Looking for challenges. And meeting them. With skill and determination. Ahead of the rest.

JINDAL

Where there's a challenge, there's Jindal.

Ferro-chrome • Stainless steel plates sheets & coils • Cold rolled M.S. sheets & coils • Carbon steel plates • Large diameter submerged arc welded steel pipes • Aluminium sheets and coils • Paints • Tea

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

The Chariot Brigade

Raths, combining comfort with utility, are in style

BATTLES are fought on land, sea and air. That seems to be literally happening in this year's parliamentary contest. If Rajiv Gandhi is trying to bomb many an electoral base in his special IAF aircraft, a bevy of opposition leaders seems to dominate the battle on the ground, firing their political bullets from a convoy of raths which have become the showpieces of the 1989 election brigade.

The raths have been built with care. Extravagant in comfort and dramatic in political imagery, the effect of these modern caravans is often hypnotic. For instance, at a Haryana rally, an expectant crowd cheers lustily as it waits for Devi Lal. A sudden hush descends as the green-turbaned Jat leader emerges, chakra in hand, out of his Vijay Rath—hauled up by a hydraulic lift. He rests his 105 kg-frame on the throne atop the golden brown bus and says: "The Vijay Rath—as the name implies—will take me to victory."

In a situation of tele-starvation, most opposition leaders have joined the rath yatra, realising that such symbols are often the political message. N.T. Rama Rao, who pioneered the showbusiness of Indian politics with his Chaitanya Ratham in 1983, has despatched 23 Prachara

SHARAD SAXENA

Devi Lal on his Vijay Rath (top); and inside it: campaign chariot

R.K. Hegde campaigning in Karnataka on Jaya Vahini

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

(Anti-clockwise from above) Deve Gowda with his Janata Vahini; Mulayam Singh atop his Kranti Rath; Jayalalitha on the campaign trail supply from an overhead tank. The rath has a Pal-Secam video, a portable Sony TV set, a quartz watch and a National stereo system with Clarion speakers.

The AIADMK's Jayalalitha has a cushioned bed in her air-conditioned Swaraj Mazda, besides reading lamps and an upholstered chair. The rath is equipped with special suspensions to minimise jerks for the "leader of the poor" on the bumpy electoral terrain.

The Karnataka Janata Dal leader, S.R. Bommai, has an air-conditioned room at the back of his Mazda T 3500 Vijaya Chakra, which has a wardrobe, writing table and washbasin. The cushy interior was designed by his son keeping in mind the former chief minister's known propensity for siestas.

The MIM's 22 ft-vehicle called Shaheen—the legendary bird in Mohammad Iqbal's poems—not only has a bedroom but a dining-room and kitchenette. Buta Singh is the only one who doesn't use his rath for resting, but then, he has a special air-conditioned Isuzu van for quick relief on the dusty tracks of his Rajasthan constituency of Jalore.

If the raths can provide a night's rest, they are also equipped for a morning's work. Devi Lal's rath has a carpeted conference room with a semi-circular sofa for his security officers, doctor, secretary and local leaders. The MIM's Shaheen goes a step further. It has a closed-circuit television system. And Hegde's van—whose rear is separated by a glass partition—has an intercom.

EVEN in the actual process of political propaganda, the raths are proving useful. Rama Rao's 46-year-old Chevrolet is a trusted rath-horse by now, having earned its spurs on Andhra Pradesh's campaign trail. Devi Lal's Vijay Rath has six 2000-watt speakers on the roof which blare out Haryanvi songs, eulogising the Jat leader and decrying Rajiv's regime. The message is: "Savdhan ey Congression, hum aa gaye hein (Beware Congressmen, we have come)." Hegde's rath is fitted with a hydraulic lift which raises him through a hatch to address crowds through a built-in public address system. And it's equipped with a special lumbar chair to take care of his back problem. Eight bright lamps in Jayalalitha's rath define her in sharp focus as she speaks from her pedestal atop the van, using the loudspeakers and microphone installed within.

Both Buta Singh and Rama Rao are also discovering that the raths can entertain even as they persuade. So, the home minister has a portly Delhi boy on his rath roof with a jee saheb puppet—which was popular on Doordarshan's morning telecast—mouthing film dialogues. Rama Rao has song and drama troupes celebrating Telugu glory just before he asks voters to stamp his party's symbol. At night, Buta Singh's rath has video showings, with him delivering speeches amongst farmers and saluting police parades. He also airs Indira Gandhi's and Rajiv's voices in his bid to win votes. And punches them with canned patriotic music which also proves effective in muffling the voices of protest at times.

The raths have become a status symbol on the electoral circuit today. They mark the leader's clout underwritten by his money power. So, Devi Lal has built his rath for Rs 8 lakh while Hegde's van cost him Rs 2.6 lakh. Deve Gowda didn't even have to pay for his Janata Vahini—it was a present from the coconut farmers of Channarayapatna. While only a few stalwarts could afford the rath this time, it has been appreciated across party lines for its pragmatic utility. What seems almost certain is that the rath is here to stay as a permanent fixture of India's electoral culture.

—SHANTANU DEY with bureau reports

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Of Kith and Kin

A plethora of politicians' relatives enters the electoral fray

BOOM, boom, goes the Bofors gun in constituencies around the country. But in Gwalior and Guna in Madhya Pradesh, the 155 mm howitzer can barely be heard. The battle here is, quite literally, a royal one and corruption takes a back seat.

In Gwalior, Union Railway Minister 'Maharaj' Madhavrao Scindia takes on Seetla Sahay (BJP). In neighbouring Guna, his mother 'Rajmata' Vijaya Raje Scindia (BJP) is pitted against Mahendra Singh (Congress-I). But the real battle is between mother and son.

At every meeting, Madhavrao plays on ancient royal links. In Paresen village, he says: "My grandfather married a girl of this village. Yahan to sab mamalog baithe hain" (Everyone here is my maternal uncle). In Guna, his mother emphasises the lack of development. At one village, she says: "Ask your maharaj why he is working for a corrupt prime minister. At whose cost is he flying the helicopter? It is your money."

Another chapter of the family feud is being fought in Rajasthan where Madhavrao's sister, Vasundhra Raje, of the BJP, takes on the Congress(I)'s Nirmala Kumari in Chittorgarh. The RSS cadre is backing her and a win seems likely. That could make it three for the Scindia family. Though the family may not see it that way. ■

IN the Himalayan state of Sikkim, elections to the 32-member state Assembly may by and large be under Chief Minister Nar Bahadur Bhandari, but it is in the solitary Lok Sabha seat that the family affair sours. For opposing Bhandari's nominee is his estranged wife, Dilkumari. Bhandari—who despite his alleged extra-marital affairs has become a cult figure—is confident the ruling Sikkim Sangram Parishad will sweep the polls. But Dilkumari, who had won the Lok Sabha seat during the last elections on the Sangram Parishad ticket, has since joined the Congress(I) and is putting up a stiff fight. Bhandari, however, doesn't consider her a serious threat. He has chosen to field Nandu Thapa, a lightweight, against her. ■

Rising Sons

SENIOR leaders who have carved a niche for themselves in the party hierarchy have been doled out valuable gifts: tickets for their sons. Among those favoured with tickets for the Andhra Pradesh Assembly elections are the sons of three Central ministers, P.V. Narasimha Rao, P. Shiv Shanker and J. Vengala Rao. Narasimha Rao's son P.V. Ranga Rao is in the race for the Hanamakonda seat in Warangal district. Shiv Shanker's son, the state Youth Congress(I) President P. Sudhir Kumar, is contesting from Malakpet in Hyderabad. And Vengala Rao's son, J. Prasada Rao, is contesting from the family's native Sattupalli. Of the ministers, only Vengala Rao is contesting from Andhra Pradesh. Narasimha Rao has opted for the Ramtek constituency in Maharashtra from where he was elected in 1984, while Shiv Shanker was elected to the Rajya Sabha from Gujarat.

Uttar Pradesh Health Minister Lokpati Tripathi has also led his son into the fold. While Tripathi himself is contesting for the Assembly seat from Majhwan (Mirzapur), his son Rajeshpati is the Congress(I) candidate for the Chandauli (Varanasi) seat, held by his mother Chandra, who died recently.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Wednesday, 16th July, 8.30 a.m.

Last night, Mr. Tendulkar had checked in as a guest of the Aiyars.

The Aiyars were wonderful people. And their flat was indeed beautiful. But wasn't there something wrong with their furniture? What was it? Oh yes, the furniture lacked shape. And what a pity, there were termites too!

An embarrassed Mr. Aiyar later explained that it was he who had insisted on the use of an ordinary blockboard or some cheaper substitute. He admitted, it was a gamble that didn't pay.

Buy DUROBORD. It has extraordinary features. Manufactured from specially selected and perfectly seasoned timber, it is free of corrugation or warping and has a smooth surface.

DUROBORD is now available in super strong Phenol Formaldehyde Resin bonded grade which makes DUROBORD your lifelong partner.

DUROBORD is also available in ordinary grade. Don't try cheaper substitutes. They will prove disasters in the bargain.

Buy DUROBORD — buy peace of mind

DURO— THE HERO OF BLOCKBOARDS

Duroboard™

The real No.1

Insist on DUROBORD-PF, the 100% Boiling Waterproof Blockboard.

DOUBLE PROTECTION FROM IMITATION

The label and full width strip ensure genuineness. Make sure they are there on the DUROBORD you buy.

Sarda Plywood Industries Limited

Works : Jeypore (Assam)

General Sales Office : 1/7 D. B. Gupta Road, New Delhi 110 055

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

It is almost time for the shift to change in the Bhadrachalam Paperboards plant in a backward district of Andhra Pradesh. And Nageswar Rao is in a greater hurry to get home: his daughter from college must be home today. A bright student at the mill's own school, along with her two sisters, she is studying computer science and hopes to join this ITC company where her father began his career.

Now a proud technician, Nageswar had joined Bhadrachalam Paperboards as a worker. Living in the plant's self-sufficient housing colony, modelled as a 'modern village' with all contemporary comforts, the days of despair live on only as a memory. A time when he had almost given up his unproductive, ancestral land to move out of this backward area. That was ten years ago, when ITC came to his help...

Nageswar Rao of Bhadrachalam. In this backward area, it seemed that progress and prosperity would remain a distant dream.

Until the ITC-promoted Bhadrachalam Paperboards created jobs aplenty and helped him develop his skills productively for rich rewards.

The plant's English and Telugu medium school educates 1500 employees' children.

The ITC-promoted Bhadrachalam Paperboards has grown into a Rs 100-crore operation. Set up to provide a fresh impetus to the paper industry in the core-sector, the project has catalysed the development of a backward area.

Bhadrachalam has been transformed into a bustling centre of commerce and industry, ushered into the mainstream of life. Over 1200 direct jobs—and many more indirect ones — have been created for rural folk and tribals. Today their wages have increased and quality of life has improved, with access to health and hygiene facilities provided by the plant.

Like every ITC enterprise, Bhadrachalam Paperboards has established itself as a leader in its field. Mastering technology and setting new standards in productivity and product quality, it continues to be a source of pride for ITC. And stands testimony to ITC's commitment to the core-sector, to the success in developing a backward area.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

e else is ITC working for India?

Industry : ITC's technological expertise, gained from decades of R&D in development, is being transferred to produce oilseeds. With the facture and marketing of edible and non-edible oils and their derivatives, helping reduce imports and is increasing farmers' yields.

Health and Welfare: Through its far-flung marketing network, ITC tes millions of Nirodh contraceptives and promotes the advantages of a well-spaced family: an effort acknowledged by the 1988 FICCI Award for Planning.

ge-sector Craftsmanship: With looms, raw materials and technical now, the ITC-promoted Triveni Handlooms has revived Shahjahanpur's ral craft of carpet weaving. These carpets are exported by ITC along with other products from small-scale and cottage-sector units.

Contract. ITC. 90.89

New horizons, new hopes.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Hawkins® Pressure Cooking Masala
For delicious VEG. dishes

Hawkins® Pressure Cooking Masala
For delicious NON-VEG dishes

Hawkins® Pressure Cooking Masala
For delicious CHANNA dishes

Hawkins® Pressure Cooking Masala
For delicious DAL dishes

Your Natural Choice

Hawkins pure, blended spices. Four varieties. An average of eighteen choice spices in each. Sealed in tamper-proof, triple-laminate foil packets. Just open, add and cook.

Great taste. Specially blended by Hawkins for pressure cooking. Also great for other cooking.

For a FREE COOKBOOK with 33 recipes, send one empty Hawkins masala packet to Hawkins Dept. No. 006, P.O. Box 6481, Bombay 400 016.

Maximum retail price (inclusive of all taxes) 100 grams, Rs. 15.00.

Hawkins® Pressure Cooking Masala

OWN STOCKISTS AND DISTRIBUTORS WANTED. APPLY IMMEDIATELY.

Quality India Trusts. Hawkins

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ELSEWHERE in the country, the Congress(I) may have faced a shortage of competent women candidates for the Lok Sabha elections, but in one Bihar family it seems to have run into a surfeit of feminine political talent. The family: that of Chief Minister Satyendra Narayan Sinha.

Sinha's wife, Kishori, has once again been fielded from Vaishali Lok Sabha constituency. His daughter-in-law Shyama Sinha is the Congress(I) nominee from Aurangabad. And Shyama's mother, Madhuri Singh, is seeking re-election from Purnea.

A clear case of nepotism? Perhaps, but not many were shocked. Kishori and Madhuri were already MPs. And Congress(I) circles had long concluded that only someone from the chief minister's household could retain the Aurangabad seat, relinquished by Sinha after he took over as chief minister in March this year.

Still, there was a degree of surprise. Partymen believed that the chief minister's wife would be shifted from Vaishali to Aurangabad. In anticipation of the move, in fact, Sinha's political rival L.P. Sahi had demanded a shift from Muzaffarpur to Vaishali. Also, since Madhuri Singh was in poor health, it was felt that she would make way for her high-profile son N.K. Singh, Bihar's industries development commissioner.

THE SINHAS

Madhuri Singh

Kishori Sinha

Shyama Sinha

The nomination of Shyama Sinha raised a few eyebrows. Wife of Nikhil Kumar, the chief minister's only son who is an IPS officer in New Delhi, the Delhi socialite, is considered too soft for Aurangabad. Many in fact expected that Nikhil Kumar, whom Sinha often consults, would be anointed Sinha's heir by being given a Lok Sabha ticket.

Whatever the reasons, finally, it was the three women who got the nod. Winning tickets is of course only half the game. The electoral battle still lies ahead. ■

THE KHANS

Arif Mohammed

Reshma

IN India, the easiest way for a woman to enter politics is to marry a politician. Arif Mohammad Khan, 38, is a seasoned politician. Now his wife Reshma, 34, has made her electoral debut as the Janata Dal candidate for the Aryanagar (Kanpur) assembly seat.

Arif—who left the Congress in 1986—is seeking re-election from the Bahraich Lok Sabha seat in Uttar Pradesh. A leading light of the Janata Dal, he has obviously helped his wife enter the electoral arena. Not that Reshma has nothing to her credit. A gold medalist in law, she practises at the Supreme Court and is a member of the steering committee of the All India Mahila Janata Dal.

Both husband and wife face an uphill task. While Reshma is up against a sitting Congress(I) MLA, Hafiz Mohammed Umar, Arif's rival is the Congress(I)'s A.R. Kidwai, a former governor. Though he'd won the same seat in 1984, he was then in the Congress(I).

If the husband-wife team wins, they'll join the ranks of Indira and Feroz Gandhi, Pramilla and Madhu Dandavate, Shalinitai and Vasantdada Patil, and Laila and George Fernandes. ■

Sons-in-Law

WITH family connections the deciding factor in the initial round for party tickets, sons-in-law too have become the occasional beneficiaries.

In Andhra Pradesh, Telugu Desam supremo N.T. Rama Rao bequeathed the ticket for the Kuppam assembly seat in Chittoor district to son-in-law and party politburo member, N. Chandrababu Naidu, while the ticket for the Parchur seat in Prakasam district went to his other son-in-law, state Health Minister D. Venkateswara Rao.

While Chandrababu Naidu will be facing the electorate for the first time, Rao is seeking to retain his seat. To accommodate Chandrababu Naidu, the sitting member from Kuppam, N. Rangaswamy Naidu, is being shifted to the Chittoor Lok Sabha seat.

N.T. Rama Rao

N.C. Naidu

D.V. Rao

Veerendra Patil

Dr B.G. Javali

Similarly, former Union minister and Karnataka Pradesh Congress(I) President Veerendra Patil has given the ticket for the Gulbarga Lok Sabha constituency to his son-in-law, Dr B.G. Javali. Patil will contest for the assembly from Chincholi.

Javali, 52, an E.N.T. specialist, who is married to Patil's eldest daughter, Lalitha, protests he got the ticket on his own merit. Says he mockingly: "I told the high command that if they did not give me a ticket because I am Patil's son-in-law, I will leave the party or divorce my wife."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The friendly Man from Eureka Forbes is about to demonstrate the most convenient way to keep your home free of dust and dirt.

One of these days the friendly Eureka Forbes salesman will ring your doorbell and introduce himself with his identity card.

This man inspires confidence – which is only natural. Because he is a member of the largest, most successful sales organisation of its kind in India. Backed by dependable after sales service.

He will introduce modern home products to cope with today's problems – dust, pollution, contaminated water and the lack of domestic help.

He has two unique products to demonstrate: EUROCLEAN all-purpose cleaning system, which is much more than a vacuum cleaner, and AQUAGUARD on-line, water filter-cum-purifier.

EUROCLEAN removes minute specks of dirt and dust in your home effortlessly. Even dust you didn't know existed. AQUAGUARD gives you clear, safe drinking water on tap – at the flick of a switch – even if the raw water has high bacterial contamination.

The Eureka Forbes salesman will show you – in your own home – how these products can bring the advantages of modern cleanliness and hygiene to your family. Making it a cleaner, safer world for you.

You need not wait till his rounds bring him to your doorstep.

Do contact Eureka Forbes at any of the following locations for an early visit. Or, write to Eureka Forbes Limited, P.O. Box 936, G.P.O., Bombay 400 001.

EUROCLEAN Sales and Service Centres are listed below. AQUAGUARD is also available at the locations marked with an asterisk.

Eureka Forbes Limited, Head Office: Forbes Building, 4th Floor, Charanjit Rai Marg, Fort, Bombay-400 001. Tel: 2047870 (5 lines). BOMBAY: *1. Al Dossal, 50, Pali Road, Bandra. Tel: 6442741/42. *2. 'Ashadeep', Ground Floor, 23, Azad Road, Andheri (East). Tel: 6323771. *3. D-16, Commerce Centre, Tardeo Main Road. Tel: 4949183/6184. *4. B/3, Happy Home Apts., 1st Floor, 66 Wodehouse Road, Colaba. Tel: 217458/217430. *5. 71, Nahur, 2nd Floor, Opp. Hoechst Factory, L.B.S. Marg, Mulund (West). Tel: 5601082/5619148 • CALCUTTA: *6. 7, Chakraberia Road (South). Tel: 477954/5402. *7. 'Priya', BD-9, 1st Floor, Sector I, Salt Lake City. Tel: 347799. *8. 177, Raja Dinendra Street, Opp. Desbandhu Park, Shyam Bazar. Tel: 555624. 9. 1st Floor, 19 N.S. Road, P.S. & Dist. Howrah. Tel: 674255 • DELHI: *10. 402, Archana Commercial Complex, Greater Kailash Part I. Tel: 6416143/6463606. *11. 12/4, Asaf Ali Road, Mittal Bldg. Tel: 278055/270523/266890/2667302. *12. M/37, Greater Kailash II Market. Tel: 6449727/6433827/6463041. *13. 203-204, Jamuna House, 2nd Floor, Municipal No. 10203, Padam Singh Road, Karol Bagh. Tel: 5717722/5442/5736268. 14. 17A/41, WEA, Opp. Jassaram Hospital, Karol Bagh. • MADRAS: *15. 733, Anna Salai, 2nd Floor. Tel: 869846/861413. *16. East Coast Chambers, 2nd Floor, 92, G.N. Chetty Road, T. Nagar. Tel: 446610/17. *17. 75, I Avenue, Indira Nagar, Adyar • AHMEDABAD: *18. 15, Madhuban Society, Opp. Gujarat Vidhyapith, Ashram Road. Tel: 446982/466821/465320 • ALLAHABAD: 19. United Tower, 53, Leader Road • AMRITSAR: 20. 484, Green Avenue. Tel: 62111 • BANGALORE: *21. Farah Commercial Complex, 68, J.C. Road. Tel: 224453/225673. *22. 4305, High Point-4, 3rd Floor, 45, Palace Road. Tel: 27746 • BARODA: *23. Deep Jyoti, 75, Suvarna Puri Society, Chickoowadi. Tel: 57018 • BHUBANESHWAR: 24. 16/8, Behind Bhubaneshwar Hotel (Cuttack Road). Tel: 57018 • CALICUT: 25. 'Ayodhya', 1/3698, East Hill Road. Tel: 61188 • CHANDIGARH: *26. Sector 7-C, S.C.O. No. 14, 2nd Floor, Madhya Marg. Tel: 26735 • COCHIN: *27. XXXV/1448-2, Nandanam

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Euroclean all-purpose cleaning system which is much more than a vacuum cleaner.

Aquaguard On-line, water filter-cum-purifier.

EUREKA FORBES LIMITED
Pioneers in modern cleanliness and hygiene.

Landing Road, Ernakulam. Tel: 352736/362752 • COIMBATORE: * 28. No. 61, West Chamy Road, R.S. Puram. Tel: 43180 • DEHRADUN: 29. 3, Astley Hall • DHANBAD: Sindhu Bhawan, Jamunabai Road • FARIDABAD: 31. House No. 328, Sector No. 16A. 26345 • GHAZIABAD: 32. 41, Ambedkar Marg. Tel: 40359 • GOA: 33. Shanti Niketan, Near Sports Stadium, Miramar, Panaji. Tel: 6867 • HUBLI: * 34. C.T.S. No. 4569-B, Hubli Dharwar Municipal Corporation No. P. 28/1, Ward No. 11, Vidya Nagar • HYDERABAD: * 35. 403, Kala Sagar Sarojini Devi Road, Secunderabad. Tel: 844128/848572. * 36. No. 10, Ground Floor, Prabhat Towers, Khairtabad • JAIPUR: * 37. 22-23, Central Market, Bapu Nagar. Tel: 70205 • JALANDHAR: * 38. C/o. Hotel Gagandeep, G.T. Road, Near Narinder Theatre • JAMMU: 1-A/C Ground Floor, Gandhi Nagar. Tel: 42586 • JAMSHEDPUR: * 40. Talwar Bldg., 1 Inner Road, C Block, P.O. Bistipur. Tel: 24470 • JODHPUR: 41. 39, Bakhat Sagar Colony, Nehru Nagar • KOTTAYAM: * 42. Ground Floor, Janata Timber Building, S.H.M.P.O., Nagampadam • LUCKNOW: 43. C-414, Sector B, Mahanagar. Tel: 77296 • LUDHIANA: * 44. 23, Red Cross Bhavan, The Mall • MADURAI: * 45. 290, K.K. Nagar. Tel: 45328 • MANGALORE: * 46. 3-33-2951/52, Pinto's Lane, Kadri Kambla. Tel: 32445 • MYSORE: 47. 443/1, Ramaswamy Circle, Chamaraja Double Road. Tel: 27124 • PUNE: * 48. Mubarak Manzil, 1, Dhole Patil Road. Tel: 667968/668773 • RANCHI: 49. Lower Peepee Compound, Behind Gurunanak School. Tel: 27681 • SALEM: 50. 19-C, Saradha College Road • SRINAGAR: 51. Solar House, 2nd Floor, Near Zero Bridge, Raj Baug. Tel: 79935 • SURAT: * 52. 31, Vijay Nagar Annex, Ring Road, Majura Gate. Tel: 54224/53200. 53: Krishna Kripa, 2nd Floor, Zaveri Sadak, Navsari. * 54. 9-Seventh Day Adventists, Extension Bldg., Athwa Lines • TIRUCHIRAPALLI: * 55. "Cauvery", 79/80, Raja Colony, Behind Sangam Hotel, Cantonment. Tel: 41867 • TRIVANDRUM: * 56. T.C. No. 42/88, Pankaja Bhavan, Kalipankulam Road, Manacaud. Tel: 79570 • VIJAYAWADA: * 57. 33-13-14, Venegellavari Street, Seetarampuram. Tel: 65964/66742 • VISAKHAPATNAM: * 58. 50-50-46, Balayasastri Layout, Seethamadhara West, Opp. Maria Red Convent. Tel: 53009/53010.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

everest/89/EFL/188 R1

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

DYNASTIC politics, in full evidence in the ninth general elections, is cutting across party barriers with both the Congress(I) and the Opposition nominating relatives of well-known politicians. The Shastri family is a glaring example. All three sons of late prime minister Lal Bahadur Shastri are contesting, two as Congress(I) nominees and one as a Janata Dal candidate.

THE SHASTRIS

Hari Krishna

Anil

Sunil

The eldest, Hari Krishna Shastri, Union minister of state for agricultural research and education, has been renominated by the Congress(I) for the Fatehpur parliamentary seat. The second son, Sunil Shastri, a member of the Uttar Pradesh Cabinet, is seeking renomination from the Gorakhpur assembly constituency on a Congress(I) ticket. And the youngest, Anil Shastri, is the Janata Dal candidate for the Varanasi Lok Sabha seat.

Of the three, the poll prospects of Hari Krishna are the bleakest as he is pitted against V.P. Singh though his contribution to his constituency is significant, the stature of his rival overshadows such consideration. He is even said to have lobbied to shift his constituency.

Interestingly, while he will be up against the raja of Manda this time, during the by-election to the Allahabad parliamentary seat, it was younger brother, Sunil, who took on V.P. Singh.

Although the brothers Shastri seem destined to challenge V.P. Singh at the hustings, the two families are in fact very close. V.P. Singh was initiated into politics by Lal Bahadur Shastri, and years later Singh repaid his debt by grooming Sunil for public life.

This is why Anil's decision to join the Janata Dal is not surprising. But that he should do so despite his family's age-old links with the Congress, must be a blow to the ruling party which is always trying to cash in on a known name. ■

THE GAJPATI RAJUS

Clock wise from top: Ashok, Uma and Anand

POLITICS runs in the Vizianagaram royal family, though it has rarely been of the same kind. While the ageing P.V.G. Raju is a staunch Congress(I) supporter, his sons opted for the Telugu Desam when the party was founded by N.T. Rama Rao in 1982. Both were elected in 1983. Anand, the elder of the two, became state education minister, and then in 1984 got elected to the Lok Sabha from the Bobbilli constituency. His younger brother, Ashok, who meantime was re-elected to the Assembly, became a minister.

The twist came last year in Delhi when Anand's wife, Uma, declared her support for Rajiv Gandhi. With Uma admitted into the Congress(I), Anand found himself persuaded to make a switch. The reward: Anand's ticket for the Bobbilli seat and Uma's ticket for the neighbouring Visakhapatnam seat.

A piqued Rama Rao, in turn, rewarded the brother, Ashok. After Ashok lost his ministerial post in the en masse sacking of the state cabinet, he was made party general secretary. Now he has been given a ticket by Rama Rao for the Vizianagaram assembly seat. ■

Poll Genes

THE list of candidates for the coming Lok Sabha and Assembly elections would make any geneticist conclude that human chromosomes have an as-yet-unidentified political gene. The roster of fathers and sons, sons and mothers, sisters and brothers, sisters and sisters contesting simply goes on and on.

In Andhra Pradesh's Nellore district, two brothers are fighting the assembly elections. Former minister N. Srinivasulu Reddy, who left the Congress(I) for the Telugu Desam, has returned to the parent fold, to contest from Kovvur. Elder brother N. Chandrasekhar Reddy is the Telugu Desam candidate for the Venkatagiri seat.

A pair of sisters is contesting from Bihar. While Union Minister of State Krishna Sahi is the Congress(I) nominee from Begusarai, her younger sister, Usha Singh, is the Janata Dal candidate in Vaishali. To compound the confusion, Usha's husband, Birendra Kumar Singh, is a member of the Congress(I).

No barrier divides the Bajpais of Uttar Pradesh. Union Minister of State Rajendra Kumari Bajpai is contesting the Lok Sabha elections from Sitapur, which she has represented for two terms. Son Ashok faces Anugrah Narain Singh of the Janata Dal in the Allahabad North assembly constituency, represented by his mother from 1967 to 1977. Earlier this year, he stood for mayor—and lost. If he intends emulating his mother's rise in politics, he'll need lots more luck.

Krishna Sahi

Usha Singh

Rajendra Bajpai

Ashok Bajpai

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Industrial establishments

Hotels

Airlines

Railways

Paramilitary forces

Flight caterers

Ordnance factories

Shipyards

Hospitals

Discover why institutions like these buy quality tea, coffee and spices direct from Brooke Bond's Institutional Business Service

Because buying direct from Brooke Bond's Institutional Business Service ensures competitive prices. And more. One reliable source for all your needs of quality tea, coffee and spices. The widest brand choice in the market with the economy of bulk packs. All with the convenience of doorstep delivery, through a distribution network spread across the country.

So, if you are in the process of tendering for your bulk requirements of tea, coffee and spices, and would like to deal directly with one reliable source, just write to:

Brooke Bond India Ltd., Institutional Business Service,
P.B. No. 4280, Bangalore-560 042.
Tel: 84-2520 (10 lines), 84-2615, 84-2625, 84-2635,
08112-2520 (STD-Whitefield, 10 lines)
Telex: 0845-8506/8518 KORA IN

Yes, I'm interested in
☐ Teas ☐ Coffees ☐ Spices

☐ Call me at (tel. no.).....at the earliest
☐ Ask your representative to call on me

Name: _____

Address: _____

_____

_____

_____

ITN

Brooke Bond India Limited Institutional Business Service

Brooke Bond Products. Packed with care. Packed for consistent quality.

OMD 2917

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

GOD, SHE'S BEAUTIFUL.

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Or how the Cynic was transported.

She's the new Maruti 1000. New? said my frie

a cynic at the best of times. Absolu

I continued, she started life as a clean sheet of pa

And just look at her now. Notice the curve of the fen

The low, purposeful hood. Those smooth fla

(From the corner of my eye, I could see my frien eyebrows travel upwards.) See how the windshield and windows blend smoothly into t bodywork. How beautifully the headlights wrap around, I went on reverently, quite forgetting m companion. And the engine? (Clearly an attempt to bring me back to earth

Powerful, but very quiet. Then there's the independent coil spring suspension. Which means s absorbs every bump instead of dutifully passing it on. Beautiful, he murmured, inspite

BOOKINGS OPEN FROM NOVEMBER 14, 1989.*

Maruti Udyog Limited reserves the right to close bookings anytime after 15 days from the date of commencement of booking, on receipt of a minimum of 25,000 booking applications.*

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri himself. Just step inside, I motioned. I didn't have to ask twice. There he was in the driver's seat, hands sliding reverently, over the wheel. Obviously, transported into another world. Beautiful, he murmured again. I suppose the luggage stays at home, he asked loftily, his eyes still closed. I didn't even bother to reply. Discreet lever was pressed. The rear deck flipped open on its own. Spacious and beautifully toured. Then for good measure, I slid the back seat forward, to reveal the extra cargo space. There was an impressed silence. Lost in thought, my friend began drumming his fingers against gradations inside the door. Air vents, I supplied smoothly. It took him a moment to regain composure. Then a brave effort at sarcasm. Anything she hasn't got? He walked to it. Competition, I answered, graciously.

MARUTI 1000

Quite a conversation piece.

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The unsung hero of the Indian silver screen. It's not the young star who never made it to big time. It's not the also-ran at last year's Golden Peacock Awards. Nor is it the latest box-office flop.

It is the film on which Indian cinema is captured. The very basis of the world's largest motion picture industry: Hindustan Photo Films' INDU Cine Positive Film in Colour and Black & White. And Cine Sound Negative Film.

Picture this. There are over 12,000 cinema houses in the country today, with a daily attendance of around 1,50,00,000 — and HPF's role becomes more than entertainment.

It sustains the Rs.1600 crore Indian film industry. Has curtailed raw stock imports. And, indirectly provides a livelihood to over 2,00,000 people.

The next time you watch an Indian movie, whether it's an award-winning production or the stuff box-office hits are made of, remember the unsung hero.

INDU

HINDUSTAN PHOTO FILMS

PHOTO
CINE
X-RAY GRAPHIC ARTS
INDUSTRIAL X-RAY
CHEMICALS
MAGNETIC TAPE
INSTANT PHOTOGRAPHY

मेरा भारत महान

R K SWAMY/HPF/7374

F U T U R E I N F O C U S

Hindustan Photo Films Mfg. Co. Ltd. (A Govt. of India Enterprise)
Registered Office: Indunagar, Udhagamandalam 643 005.
Marketing Headquarters: Bali Towers, 1 Abdul Razak Street, Saidapet, Madras 600 015.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Day of the Don

History sheeters on the campaign trail

THE have-gun-will-win syndrome is visible in every Indian election. But the ninth general elections will be the meanest yet. The evidence: this is the first time known criminals have been inducted into political parties. Criminals have always had links with politicians, but till now they have been in the sidelines. This time they are in the arena. In Uttar Pradesh, Bihar and Andhra Pradesh alone, at least 50 candidates for the Lok Sabha and assembly polls are facing charges ranging from theft to murder.

Bihar, with its dismal record of election violence, is the haven of the criminal-politician. Of the 48 people killed during the 1984 Lok Sabha polls, 28 were from Bihar. The next year, when assembly polls were held in a number of states, of the 81 people who died throughout India, 51 were from Bihar. Violence is an inevitable feature of elections in Bihar because politicians rely heavily on antisocial elements during polls—though publicly they shun them. This time the deception has been dropped: criminals have become party candidates.

Take Kali Pandey. He has the distinction of winning the 1984 polls as an independent while being behind bars. Pandey had been expelled from the Congress(I) and arrested following a bomb attack on his party rival, Nagina Rai, also a known criminal. Both Pandey and Rai—who too was expelled—have been taken back into the party fold and Pandey is now the Congress(I) candidate for Bihar's Gopalganj Lok Sabha seat.

Equally shocking is the re-nomination of cooperative don Tapeshwar Singh from the Vikramganj parliamentary seat in Bihar. Some months back—at the initiative of the Prime Minister's Office—a number of criminal cases were launched against Singh who was accused of swindling one of the state's biggest cooperatives and supplying spurious fertilisers and pesticides. Bhagwat Jha Azad, then chief minister, had launched a virtual crusade against Singh, who had narrowly escaped arrest by getting anticipatory bail.

Shankar Dayal Singh—who has links with the Dhanbad mafia—and Bagun Sumbrui, the Congress(I) nominees from Dhanbad and Singhbhum, also have dubious records. And the Congress(I) candidate from Khagaria in Bihar, Satish Prasad Singh—who was chief minister for three days in the late '60s—was involved in an admissions racket at a college in Dhanbad.

The Opposition in Bihar has proved as bereft of principles as the Congress(I). The Janata Dal candidate from Hajipur, Laloo Prasad Yadav, was involved in a murder case. And both Taslimuddin, the party's candidate from Purnea, and Dhanraj Singh, the nominee from Munger, are history sheeters.

BHOLA PANDEY

The Congress(I) candidate for the Doaba assembly seat in Uttar Pradesh, he has five criminal cases pending against him.

HARI SHANKAR TEWARI

The Congress(I) nominee for the Chillupar assembly seat in Uttar Pradesh, he is named in over 30 murder cases and has been detained under NSA.

VIRENDRA PRATAP SAHI

Arrested twice under NSA and named a conspirator in 25 murder cases, he is the Janata Dal's choice for Uttar Pradesh's Laxmipur assembly seat.

KALI PANDEY

Detained for organising a bomb attack in Patna, he has been given the Congress(I) ticket for the Gopalganj seat in Bihar.

The scene in neighbouring Uttar Pradesh is even more depressing. The maximum number of history sheeters is in the fray here as the state is having polls to both the Lok Sabha and the Assembly. There are 21 sitting MLAs with police records who are seeking a fresh term. Of these, 15 are Congressmen while four are with the Janata Dal. A small mercy: both parties have limited antisocial elements to the Vidhan Sabha.

Hari Shankar Tewari is contesting the Chillupar Vidhan Sabha seat on a Congress(I) ticket while V.P. Sahi is the

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Janata Dal's choice for the Laxmipur assembly seat. Tewari—who joined the Congress last month—is known as the mafia don of eastern Uttar Pradesh. He has been detained under the National Security Act (NSA) and his name figures in over 30 murder cases. Sahi has been arrested twice under NSA and is named a conspirator in 25 murders. Both men had won the previous elections as independents. Now the nation's two mainstream parties have opened their doors to them.

Also noticeable is the candidature of the Janata Dal Secretary-General Sanjay Singh—involved in the sensational Syed Modi murder case—from the Amethi assembly seat. The CBI has charged Singh with hiring assassins to kill the badminton star. Other prominent history sheeters are Bhola Pandey, the Congress(I) candidate from the Doaba (Ballia) assembly seat, and Janata Dal nominees Raj Bahadur Singh and Rama Kant Yadav who are standing from the Jaunpur and Phoolpur assembly seats.

The criminalisation of politics is not restricted to the Hindi belt. In the south, the Telugu Desam is guilty of admitting history sheeters. Most notable is Devineni "Nehru" Rajsekhar, who came from jail after getting bail to file his nomination papers from Kankipadu in Andhra Pradesh. 'Nehru' is accused of the murder of Congress(I) MLA Mohan Ranga Rao. In Hyderabad, the notorious criminal-politician, Kotha Das, of the Majlis-e-Ittehadul Muslimeen (MIM), has several robbery and dacoity cases against him. The high court has found him guilty in a dacoity case against which he has appealed to the Supreme Court.

In Punjab, among the candidates in alleged to be involved in terrorist activities is Atinderpal Singh. A co-accused in the Indira Gandhi murder and Delhi bomb blast cases, he is the AISSF's nominee from Patiala.

However, none of these unsavoury characters would be in the electoral fray if the Government had acted on an Election Commission recommendation made in 1985, that persons facing prosecution or detained under various acts should be debarred from contesting elections. Under the present law, only those who have been convicted for at least two years are barred. Says Madhu Limaye: "At this rate, the underworld lords and mafiosi will lead the political parties in the next century."

Still, in all fairness to both the Congress(I) and the Janata Dal, there were partymen who spoke up against the induction of criminals. Chandra Shekhar was attacked by irate party members when he recommended his protege, the Dhanbad don, Surya Deo Singh, for a seat. "We do not want rapists, criminals and goondas to come to Parliament," said one. In the Congress(I), Rajasthan strongman, Naval Kishore Sharma, embarrassed the party when he signed an open appeal along with opposition leaders. Their statement read: "History will blame the political leadership in free India of either total neglect or collusion for legitimising criminality and goondaism, mafia and smuggler gangsterism as a political weapon."

Sadly, political expediency has gained the upper hand. Even V.P. Singh who had said just two months ago that "a mafia runs this country" has abandoned all ethics and allowed the Janata Dal's symbol to be desecrated by persons with shady backgrounds.

Although this is likely to be one of the most closely contested elections in India's history, there is one outcome which can be safely predicted: many criminals will represent the Indian people in Parliament and the state assemblies.

—PANKAJ PACHAURI with bureau reports

DEVINENI RAJSEKHAR

The Telugu Desam contestant for the Kankipadu assembly seat, he has been accused of the murder of Congress(I) MLA Mohan Ranga Rao.

TAPESHWAR SINGH

The Congress(I) nominee for the Vikramganj Lok Sabha seat in Bihar he has been charged by the CBI of swindling cooperative funds.

KOTHA DAS

The MIM candidate for an assembly seat in Hyderabad, he faces charges of robbery and dacoity and has been found guilty by the high court.

ATINDERPAL SINGH

A co-accused in the Indira Gandhi murder and Delhi bomb blast cases, he hopes the charges against him will be dropped if he wins from Patiala.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Chandra ate party nded his urya Deo not want s to come In the man, Naassed the n appeal
rs. Their blame the of either itimising nafia and political

has gain-

NGH

in dhi elhi
ses, arges
l be wins

gh who that "a ndoned ta Dal's ons with ne of the ions in utcome

: many ian peocate asu reports

unen you

Does he still belong to your family?

Remember the tin can ?
The one that made sure that the food you ate as a baby was pure, fresh and nutritious ?
The one that later in your life protected your vegetable oil ? Or the one that sealed your vegetables ? If you don't see the tin can around your home anymore then maybe you should read this ad very carefully. For your family's sake.

Because tinplate has the power to prevent air, light and moisture from ageing your food. The power to keep food pure, fresh and nutritious. The power to form an impregnable barrier between germs, bacteria, insects, rats and the food you eat.
The power to be stable across and not react to an almost infinite variety of foodstuffs.
The power of tinplate.
Would you trust your family's food to anything less ?

Trust in food
when it's packed in tin

akhamba Road, New Delhi 110001

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

JOGINDER CHAWLA

Sharma: colourful mascot

◆ Perhaps the most photographed character on the Janata Dal juggernaut is Parmanand Haryali Sharma, about 50, dressed true to his self-given middle name: all in the party green with anti-Rajiv slogans smeared all over them. V.P. Singh zindabad is written even on his eyeglasses through which he squints. Promising to throw Rajiv out, the lonely minstrel from Bareilly goes wherever media attention is expected. He was preening in the glare of the world media eye at Rajiv's first election meeting in Amethi. Says he: "I'll be in Delhi on November 27—for the victory celebration."

◆ When royalty goes begging, it's an occasion. Last week it was Bhawani Singh, former raja of Jaipur, who was painting the city pink. Togged in a raw silk safari suit, the dapper prince drove his custom-built jeep into stinking slums, asking for votes. A change of scene, and of clothes. A navy blue suit to inaugurate the Ranji Trophy match. "I don't want to seem a politician among sportsmen," said the polo-playing prince. But soon, he was sporting the political image again. Donning the safari, Singh declared: "Main thako, the maro" (I'm yours, you're mine.)

Bhawani Singh: quick changes

GOPAL SUNGAR

◆ Guess who got the most flak in the Congress(I) after Rajiv Gandhi? Last fortnight it seemed that the Congress(I)'s official spokesman, Anand Sharma—the 34-year-old former Youth Congress(I) chief amply qualified. Sharma was recently chosen by Rajiv as the party's media manager.

Anand Sharma: press attack

SHARAD SAXENA

But mere articulateness wasn't enough. Often caught napping on sensitive issues like Ram Janmabhoomi, Bofors and opposition unity, his stock refrain was: "You are deviating from the main issues." As Sharma continued his daily five o'clock Follies, it was obvious that he was information-starved about the campaign and Rajiv's schedule. But Sharma remains unfazed by the media bashing. He says: "It's been great. The press has been aggressive but not devious with us." Some people are suckers for punishment.

◆ Kiran Chowdhary—Bansi Lal's glamorous daughter-in-law—has jumped into the fray to find that politics is not all stardust. As the joint secretary of the All-India Mahila Congress hit the Delhi streets in a dawn-to-dusk campaign, she faced jeers. When Kiran's corps descended on some government employees soaking in the sun, chauvinistic jeers replaced the expected cheers. "The least you can do when women talk is to listen," rebuked Kiran. "Go home!" they roared back. Not homeward bound, she went to the press to fully exploit the incident. And announced: "Even women aren't safe with the Opposition."

Kiran: turning tables

◆ They call her the Andhra abhinava rudramma—the legendary queen who led troops to battle. And not for nothing. Telugu Desam MP, Renuka Chowdhury, 35, faces charges of punching a constable's nose bloody—when he intervened in a clash between Telugu Desam and Congress(I) workers. The fiery Renuka was leading a battalion of Telugu Desam "yellow shirts", the party's goon squad. But the police, their nose out of joint, were not amused and charged her with assault. Retorted Renuka: "Isn't it an insult that the man I punched survives?"

Renuka: hitting out

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

MAKING poll predictions in cold print is a hazardous business at the best of times. And if you add to that an electorate of 475 million, the largest and most diverse in the world, an uncertain political climate, and a two-week lead time, you have an exercise which ought to be undertaken only by the stout of heart and thick of skin. For a failed poll pundit faces both a scoffing public and the sudden termination of a specialist vocation. It's not only the wait for the final result which is nerve-racking, but also the insinuations made by those who disagree with the prediction. Braving this for the last three general elections are psephologist Prannoy Roy and his colleagues at MARG. Roy pioneered this arcane science in India through the pages of INDIA TODAY in December 1979. He predicted Mrs Gandhi's return, with the Congress(I) getting 291 seats: it got 353. In 1984, he predicted 366 seats for the Congress(I) and mentioned that "the poll has some indications that with its allies the Congress(I) could command over 400 seats". The Congress(I) won 415.

Prannoy Roy: bull's eye

This year the poll published in the previous issue hit the bull's eye. It predicted 195 seats for the Congress(I) and a hung Parliament. The Congress(I) has won 192, with the result of one seat yet to come. This must certainly rank as one of the most accurate poll predictions in the world. Says Roy modestly: "The next worst thing of getting a poll wrong is getting it dead right. You can't ever do better."

For me it's been a reaffirmation of faith in polling as the best barometer to gauge the political climate. INDIA TODAY had in August 1987 decided to conduct six-monthly opinion polls to keep track of the public mood and the final poll was the culmination of this exercise. Interestingly, the last poll, in August 1989, had said: "The first major finding of the poll is the sharp increase in the strength of the BJP. Its popularity has increased not only in its traditional redoubts of Madhya Pradesh and Rajasthan, but also in the Hindi belt of north India." All this has come to pass, and much more.

THE country has clearly voted for a change and has got it in the form of a National Front Government with V.P. Singh as the prime minister. Singh is no stranger to INDIA TODAY as he first appeared on the magazine's cover in June 1980 as the new chief minister of Uttar Pradesh, along with the other new chief ministers. Since then he has appeared on the cover individually four times, and eight times with others.

Despite this extensive coverage he remains a person not easily fathomed, and one always capable of springing surprises with his quirky behaviour and individualistic stands. However, there is little doubt that though he appears otherwise, he is an astoundingly astute politician who after being expelled from the ruling party has in a matter of 28 months hijacked the Opposition and landed himself in the prime minister's chair. But now he faces the toughest test of his political skills: to run a minority government with support from two diametrically opposed parties. Perhaps, the best outcome of this entire situation is that people's expectations from governments will conform more closely to ground realities and not verge on the wild as in the past. And hopefully, in the process, they may be pleasantly surprised.

CONTENTS

Turbulent Transition 24

Interview with V.P. Singh 34

Election Notes 6
Voices 22
New Government 24
Interview of the Fortnight 34
The States 42
Exit Poll 64
Analysis 76
Winners and Losers 97
Left Parties 121
BJP 125
Photo Feature 130
Trade Winds 139
Business 140
Ayodhya 156
Sri Lanka 165
Bhagalpur 167
Media 174
Mediawatch 179
Sports 183
Books 195
Eye-catchers 200

Cover photograph by RAGHU RAI

An Angry Verdict 76

The Ayodhya Time Bomb 156

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CARTIER — THE PEN

TECHNICAL PERFECTION, SMOOTHNESS AND EASE INCORPORATED IN THE MOST MODERN AND ORIGINAL OF DESIGNS. THE CARTIER WRITING INSTRUMENT IS CRAFTED IN PRECIOUS MATERIALS: GOLD, SILVER, LACQUER. WITH A CHOICE OF 18 CARAT GOLD NIB, BALL POINT, FELT TIP OR PENCIL. ITS RELIABILITY AND FLEXIBILITY AFFORD ENDLESS SATISFACTION FOR EVERY WRITING REQUIREMENT. ITS SUPREME REFINEMENT IS A DAILY SOURCE OF PLEASURE. THE CARTIER PEN. RESOLUTELY CONTEMPORARY, FOR THE PLEASURE OF THE WRITTEN WORD.

® Trade-Mark registered by the Cartier Group must de Cartier

Cartier

THE ART OF BEING UNIQUE

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

SERVICE AGENT: MARCKS & CO., 97/103 M. G. ROAD, OPP. UNIVERSITY, FORT, BOMBAY 400023. TEL: 270999

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The rise of a new Bengal

Taj Bengal. The gleaming new standard of hospitality in the East.
Nestled in lush green, exclusive Alipore, just two kilometres away from the heart of the city.
With its breathtaking atrium and bright, sunlit rooms.
Modern business and conferencing facilities.
And grand banqueting arrangements.

There's a select choice of eating too. The Esplanade for sumptuous breakfasts, all day snacks and informal lunches and dinners. Chinoiserie for exotic Sichuan cuisine from China...and for the thirsty there's The Junction, Calcutta's most distinctive watering hole.

Taj Bengal. It presents a whole new experience.

Taj Bengal
Calcutta

TSA-C/TB/4898

A whole new experience.

THE TAJ GROUP OF HOTELS

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Solidaire adds life. To colour.

Yes, in fact Solidaire adds a new dimension to everything it does.

To give you the extraordinary. Everytime. With an eye for detail, painstaking efforts for perfection, and years of R&D. And a sheer commitment to excellence.

Which is what earned Solidaire international recognition. In the form of large export orders for colour TVs from leading East European, Middle East and African countries.

As the final touch, Solidaire also believes in adding one more thing to your viewing pleasure: value.

So that you get a value-added, value-based product. Everytime.

Solidaire TV

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

INDIA TODAY
THE COMPLETE NEWSMAGAZINE

VOLUME XIV NUMBER 23
FOR THE FORTNIGHT DECEMBER 1-15, 1989

EDITOR
AROON PURIE

EXECUTIVE EDITOR INDERJIT BADHWAR
DEPUTY EDITOR DILIP BOBB
SENIOR EDITOR PRABHU CHAWLA
PICTURE EDITOR RAGHU RAI
FEATURES EDITOR SHEKHAR GUPTA
ASSOCIATE EDITOR RAMINDAR SINGH
ASSISTANT EDITOR P.G. MATHAI

CORRESPONDENTS
SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT RAJ CHENGAPPA
NEW DELHI MADHU JAIN
PARANJOY GUHA THAKURTA
SIMRAN BHARGAVA
DAVID DEVADAS
PANKAJ PACHAURI
SURAJEET DAS GUPTA
BHASKAR ROY
HARINDER BAWEJA
SUDHIR SHARMA
AHMEDABAD UDAY MAHURKAR
BANGALORE CHIDANAND RAJGHATTA
BHOPAL N.K. SINGH
BOMBAY M. RAHMAN
SALIL TRIPATHI
S.N. VASUKI
SHIV TANEJA
RAGHUNANDAN DHAR
CALCUTTA FARZAND AHMED
HYDERABAD AMARNATH K. MENON
LUCKNOW DILIP AWASTHI
MADRAS KAVITHA SHETTY
PATNA UTTAM SENGUPTA
TRIVANDRUM RAMESH MENON
NEWS COORDINATOR SANDHYA MULCHANDANI

ART EDITOR SHIRLEY JOSHUA

CARTOONIST AJIT NINAN MATHEW
CARTOGRAPHER B.K. SHARMA
CHIEF OF PRODUCTION ANURADHA KAPOOR
LAYOUT ARTISTS PEALI DUTTA GUPTA
PRABAL MANDAL
KAMINI SINGH

ASSISTANT PICTURE EDITOR BHAWAN SINGH
PHOTOGRAPHERS PRAMOD PUSHKARNA
PRASHANT PANJIAR
NAMAS BHOJANI
SHYAM TEKWANI

COPY EDITOR TARUN J. TEJPAL

COPY DESK SABA NAQVI BHAUMIK
NANDITA SARDANA

MARKETING DIRECTOR MOHINI BHULLAR

REGIONAL MANAGERS ADVERTISING
BOMBAY NEENA MONGIA
NEW DELHI NAGINDER RISHI
CALCUTTA MEERA PAUL

ADVERTISING MANAGERS
MADRAS R. ANAND
BANGALORE S.J. NAIDU

• EDITORIAL OFFICE: LIVING MEDIA INDIA LTD. F-14/15, CONNAUGHT PLACE NEW DELHI 110001. PHONE: 3315801-4. TELEX: 31-62124 INTO IN CABLE: LIVMEDIA. NEW DELHI • SUBSCRIPTIONS: LIVINGMEDIA INDIA LIMITED, POST BOX 706, FARIDABAD-121001, HARYANA • TRADE CIRCULATION: INDIA TODAY CIRCULATION MANAGER, F-14 CONNAUGHT PLACE, MIDDLE CIRCLE, NEW DELHI. PHONE: 3313076-8. TELEX: 31-62634 INTO IN • ADVERTISING OFFICES: 28 A&B JOLLY MAKER CHAMBER II, NARIMAN POINT, BOMBAY-400021. PHONE: 2026152, 2029326, 2040971. TELEX: 11-5373 THOM IN. CABLE: LIVMEDIA, BOMBAY • 14 CONNAUGHT CIRCUS, NEW DELHI-110001. PHONES: 3325378, 3321323 AND 3321273. TELEX: 31-62124 THOM IN. CABLE: LIVMEDIA, NEW DELHI • FAGUN CHAMBERS, 26 COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF ROAD, MADRAS-600105. PHONE: 477188, 479163. CABLE: LIVMEDIA MADRAS • 74/1 ST. MARKS ROAD, BANGALORE-560001. PHONE: 213037, 212448: CABLE: LIVMEDIA, BANGALORE • 46C CHOWRINGHEE ROAD, CALCUTTA-700016. PHONE: 447726. CABLE: LIVINMEDIA, CALCUTTA • COPYRIGHT: LIVING MEDIA INDIA LTD. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD. REPRODUCTION IN ANY MANNER IS PROHIBITED. PUBLISHED BY AROON PURIE FOR LIVING MEDIA INDIA LTD. NEW DELHI AND PRINTED AT THOMSON PRESS INDIA LTD. FARIDABAD HARYANA • INDIA TODAY DOES NOT TAKE RESPONSIBILITY FOR RETURNING UNSOLICITED PUBLICATION MATERIAL •

A KEEN CONTEST

Your poll predictions ("Election Special", November 30) show that a glorious moment has dawned in Indian history. The voter is now ready for a coalition government rather than a corrupt government. The new government will be forced to perform as it could be thrown out if it fails to do so. It will also show the likes of K.K. Tewary that they can no longer take the Indian voter for granted.

Delhi — BOBBY KAPOOR

■ The renomination of 80 per cent of the sitting Congress(I) MPs by Rajiv Gandhi will be disastrous for the party. The electorate is certain to give an anti-Congress(I) verdict this time.

Raipur — SHAILESH TIWARI

■ There is a fear that if the Opposition forms a coalition government, it will not last too long. The Congress(I) has given the country stability at the Centre, but it has lost its credibility.

Ranchi — SANKALP SHAKUNT

■ The main aim of the Opposition is not to set guidelines for the progress of the country, but to unseat Rajiv Gandhi.

Visakhapatnam — K. SUDHAKARA RAO

■ Your reports on elections were very informative. 'Poll Talk' added the spice.

Calicut — N.R. SRIPATHI

NO BID FOR CAMPAIGN

I was surprised to read in your Election Special issue ("Raking It In", November 30) the reference to Tara Sinha Associates and the Congress(I) publicity campaign. As a matter of policy, we do not handle political advertising. Apart from this, we were not asked to handle video publicity nor have we made any bid for the campaign.

New Delhi — TARA SINHA
Managing Director

COMPUTERISED RIGGING

Electronic voting machines will be ineffective in containing malpractices such as rigging and booth-capturing ("Tortuous Task", November 15). Whoever captures the polling booths will also obviously capture the machines. Collusion by polling agents is all that is required to further put a seal on the misdeed.

Again, the statement of Bharat Electronics Limited (BEL) that its voting machines are not programmed is misleading. At the heart of the voting machine is a micro controller—a tiny computer which is controlled by a computer programme written by BEL. It is possible to write a programme with a built-in bias.

New Delhi — JAYA JAITLY

DISTURBING TREND

Communalism has assumed frightening proportions ("Dangerous Dimensions", October 31) as evident from the riots in Badaun, Kota, Indore, Sasaram and other places. Unfortunately, the VHP-BJP alliance is aggravating the situation by encouraging Hindus to counter Muslim fundamentalists.

New Delhi — SHAILENDRA KUMAR

■ All right-minded people should condemn the actions of the BJP and the Shiv Sena. The Janata Dal's alliance with the BJP proves that the combined opposition cannot give India a stable and secular government at the Centre.

Bangalore — R.N.S.P. ACHANTA

UNCLEAR PICTURE

This refers to the item in Trade Winds ("Big Spenders", September 15) which shows the advertisement expenditure of our company as Rs 24.9 crore. By clubbing advertising discounts along with commissions in sales promotion, the real expense incurred on advertising remains unclear. Commission is paid to authorised dealers or distributors for their services and cannot be classified as sales promotion activity.

The expenditure of Hindustan Lever, Escorts, Blow Plast and Colgate, as their balance sheets reveal, on commissions and discounts is relatively low and that on advertising higher than ours. The most apt comparison would be advertising expenditure and possibly sampling which is a kind of promotional activity.

Bombay — DR PRAGNYA RAM
Manager, Corporate Relations, Hindustan Ciba-Geigy Limited

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

IDEALLY IGNOBLE

☐ THE 1989 elections, somewhat inevitably, spawned the perfect national lampoon: the Indian Opportunist Party (IOP). The IOP offered a hilarious diversion from the deadly serious business of elections. Its symbol: a 'neta' clutching his chair. Its sponsors: the Bribery Front, the Misguiders Unity, the Indian Corruption Forum.

Cartoons by AJIT NINAN

The Delhi-based party's manifesto pledged that the IOP would keep alive "the spirit behind leaders usurping top positions" and would "ignore all boring talk of principles, morality and righteousness".

The party pledged to "wholeheartedly support corruption" and legislate the legalisation of commission agents. It declared that the most notorious agent—meaning the one who makes the most illegal money—would be awarded the Bofors Ratna. The icing on the IOP cake was a lengthy and impressive list of achievements of like-minded opportunists in Indian politics over the last 40 years with, naturally, the Bofors bribe-takers heading the list. The IOP may have failed to sweep the elections, but it certainly garnered the most laughs.

POLL TALK

Q. Why is Rajiv so sure of the Congress(I) getting 400 seats?
A. Because he has chartered an Alitalia Boeing.

● Let us see, after the elections maybe.
ARUN NEHRU on the alleged offer to join the Congress(I)

● History is not something that can be written by government departments. That is publicity.
RAJMOHAN GANDHI in Sunday Observer

● Lord Krishna told Shishupal's mother that he would forgive her son for a hundred sins. When he crossed the limit, Krishna killed him with his sudarshan chakra. Today, the same chakra is in my hands. And we have lost count of the sins the Congress(I) has committed. MANEKA GANDHI at Pilibhit

● They are communal, they are divided and they are deserters.
MOHSINA KIDWAI on the Opposition

● The National Front is an explosive mixture of clashing personalities, contending egos, colliding ambitions and conflicting ideologies.
ANAND SHARMA, AICC(I) spokesman

● Rajiv Gandhi has given this country a government of the yuppies, by the yuppies and for the yuppies. Let the yuppies vote for him. The great mass of Indian people have nothing to do with such a leader.
S.S. BHANDARI, BJP leader

● She is a modern day Rani of Jhansi.
RAJIV GANDHI about Jayalalitha

FIGHTING FOR EVER

☐ S.N. VERMA has one obsession—elections. He just can't resist contesting, and in the process he has notched up something of a record. He has contested for the Lok Sabha eight times. He has also contested several elections to the state assembly, the Rajya Sabha and the legislative council. He once even attempted to contest the presidential election. A resident of Sitamarhi, Verma is undaunted by the fact that he has never won. "I will continue to fight elections till I breathe my last," he says. At 75, that may not give him many more chances.

WORK VAGARIES

☐ IT had to happen. The educated unemployed of Betual in Madhya Pradesh formed a Shramjivi Karyakarta Sangh to supply workers to all parties "at moderate rates". The rates: Rs 50 per day for slogan-shouting, Rs 75 per day for making speeches and painting slogans, and Rs 100 per day for disrupting meetings.

The ploy worked. Temporarily they were rescued from unemployment. The Congress(I), the BJP and even some independents "hired" their services. Electoral enterprise, it is obvious, has no limits.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

India's No.1 Sewing Machine with worldwide acceptability

NO ONE ELSE THINKS MORE ABOUT YOUR CONVENIENCE

A range of world-class features makes Usha sewing machines so convenient and simple to use. Take a look and find out why it's India's No. 1 and acceptable in dozens of other countries.

Features only Usha sewing machines offer in India :

Critical components, made of toughened steel, that run for years without wearing out. A unique feature even in the international market.

A 3-position fabric selector helps you change from stitching on cotton to polyester to silk and even embroidery, with just the turn of a knob. In other brands, stitching of fine material requires manual adjustment of the feed dog holder—a cumbersome process for the housewife.

Automatically adjust the pressure on the cloth with Usha's special 'Single Press' presser adjustor. Another feature unique to Usha.

These features are the highlights of Usha's 'Prima Export' model shown in the picture.

- Most of these features are also available in other Usha models which come in a range of 5 attractive long-lasting colours.

Other attractive Usha features :

- An open-type shuttle race in 4 Usha models enables even beginners to remove and clean the shuttle in less than a minute. A hinged needle plate facilitates easy access to the bobbin.
- A concealed needle bar in Usha models ensures dust-free operation, and minimal wear & tear.
- A special bobbin winder automatically disconnects when the right amount of thread has been wound.
- We care for you. That's why we offer features developed over the years, to more than match the high international standards in the markets of USA, UK, West Germany and many other countries to whom we have exported Usha sewing machines.

USHA

Take home India's No. 1 Export Machine.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Who can ensure a good night's sleep ?

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

National Insurance

That's right ! Because National provides cover for virtually every insurable risk.

Equally significant, it ensures that you are not put through too many formalities and unnecessary hassles, once you have provided relevant information.

All you do, as an insured, is furnish full and detailed information, accurately, in the proposal form what you ought to know about the subject matter of insurance.

And since General Insurance is a continuous process, make sure that you intimate all the changes, keeping the details concerning the subject matter of insurance updated with National who is always there to take care of your worries.

Today National's circle of security has spread from traditional to non-traditional areas—touching all aspects of urban and rural life.

That's why, to people around the country, National is not just an insurance company... It's a friend, indeed.

NATIONAL INSURANCE COMPANY LIMITED

(A subsidiary of General Insurance Corporation of India)

3 Middleton Street Calcutta 700 071

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

FOR THE ADVENTURES OF THE SEA

AND COMFORTS OF THE SHORE

JOIN THE INDIAN NAVY

The Indian Navy gives you the opportunity to break free and explore the world.

You can command invincible destroyers, engineer complex warfare systems, design state-of-the-art warships, dive deep in a submarine and take off in a supersonic jet.

When you come ashore live a happy family life in a spacious house and enjoy a ship-load of perks.

The Navy provides free training and offers excellent salary.

BE A PARTNER IN INDIA'S MARITIME DEFENCE

FOR MORE DETAILS CONTACT: DIRECTOR MANPOWER & RECRUITMENT ROOM NO. 208, 'C' WING, NAVAL HEADQUARTERS, SENA BHAWAN, NEW DELHI-110011. ☎ 3011213

CHIRANJN

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Bakeman's

Bakeman's MINT-O PEPPERMINTS

Start carrying this roll and observe its extraordinary effect on the people you work with.

They keep coming by to consult you.

And while listening very intently to you, they'll reach out quite casually for your roll of MINT-O.

For the pearly white, nothing-centred peppermint rings with the irresistible flavour.

So cool, so refreshing. You immediately feel like reaching for another MINT-O yourself.

Give in to the feeling... before the next person comes by to consult you

New Bakeman's Mint-O.

Sheer self-centred pleasure.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

BEASTLY BIDS

☐ IT was a real jungle out there. Especially in Karnataka where a large number of candidates had chosen beasts or birds as their election symbols. V.N. Subbaiah, a rebel Congress(I) candidate from Madikeri constituency, hired an elephant—his election symbol—from a local circus to add weight to his campaign. Not as ambitious was Independent H.D. Malappa whose symbol was a pigeon. With a flourish, he would release a covey at every meeting. Then there was Pratibha Patil, another Independent who had a lion as her symbol. Fortunately, the lion that accompanied her on her campaign was a caged one—also borrowed from the circus. Elections do, after all, bring out the beast in most candidates.

PRESENCE PRETENCE

☐ THE BJP's grassroots organisation and its canny political bosses make for a potent combination. One example was Gandhinagar constituency in Gujarat. The Congress(I) wanted to open a couple of campaign offices in the Shahpur area of the constituency, but they came up against a blank wall—the BJP's clout ensured that there was not a room to be had. Then came the sting. BJP workers approached local Congress(I) bosses and demanded—and received—money to allow the ruling party to open three offices. The offices were opened, but while the banners belonged to the Congress(I), the propaganda all day from the offices was that of the BJP. The offices were occupied by young BJP workers who would demand a steady supply of snacks from the Congress(I) occupants while unabashedly playing BJP poll songs. The Congress(I) bosses were speechless. Said one lamely: "At least the banners are a mark of our token presence in the area." A pretence of presence?

FINDING THE NOOSE

☐ WINNING an election is but a question of buying the right people. A Congress(I) candidate in Tamil Nadu treated that as electoral gospel. Halfway through the campaign, Vallalperumal, a former minister in the state Cabinet, sprained his leg and was confined to bed. But undaunted, our hero summoned a group of local journalists, and informed them that since he was incapable of campaigning, they ought to do it for him by writing favourable reports in their papers. The bottom line: if he won, a moped for each of the journalists.

Whether it was the ethics of the thing or the fact that Vallalperumal had no electoral chance of keeping his promise, the journalists promptly published his offer in their papers. At least poor Vallalperumal stayed in the news, even if he veered off the election race.

WOOING ANTICS

☐ THE race to woo the electorate can prove literally back-breaking. Especially with candidates like Baki Rao, who contested the Khandwa Lok Sabha constituency, around. He was asked by some spectators at a public gathering to climb an electric pole. Not wishing to alienate potential voters, Rao, garlands and all, immediately clambered up. Back on terra firma there came an even firmer demand. The crowd wanted Rao to perform a series of cart-wheels. Aware that he was finally attracting the largest crowds of his campaign, Rao somersaulted across the stage. Those who would protest at his antics ought to realise that negotiating slippery poles and performing cartwheels is a standard requirement for politics.

POLL TALK

Q. What did Rajiv say when V.P. Singh passed by?
A. Bhala Uski Kameez Meri Kameez Se Safed Kaise?
(take-off on popular detergent jingle).

• In cricket, I prefer the one-day match to the five-day one. I would rather have someone as prime minister for one year at a time.

HAJI MASTAN, president of the Dalit Muslim Minorities Suraksha Mahasangh

• Your precious vote is like a match-stick, you can either light the chulha (hearth) at home or use it to set the entire nation aflame.

RAJESH KHANNA, campaigning for the Congress(I)

• I have no ambitions...my attempt would be to make V.P. Singh the prime minister.

DEVI LAL

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

LISTEN TO THIS PICTURE ON MELTRACK

The maestro ♪ Weaving a composer's signature in the air ♪ Breathing life into mere notations on paper ♪ Coaxing wind, string and percussion into harmony... Music ♪ The greatest tonic of our times ♪

And Meltrack ♪ The greatest tribute to the magic of music ♪ A product of authentic Japanese technology ♪ Exacting quality control ♪ Rigorous testing ♪ To bring you your favourite music exactly as you know it ♪ And love it ♪

Meltrack ♪ Born out of a genuine understanding of the power of music ♪ Pure music ♪

MELTRACK
Audio Cassettes
Music. Pure and Clear.

MURUGAPPA ELECTRONICS LTD.

Mudra:M:ME:3746

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

JAWAHARLAL NEHRU CENTENARY 1889 1989

Faster than courier, cheaper than telex

it ought to be BUREAUFAX Available in 58 cities

- Bureaufax Service is available within India and abroad.
- The fastest and the least expensive service. Tariff Rs. 30 within India, Rs. 90, Rs. 110 and Rs. 125 for other countries for A-4 size (297 mm x 210 mm) document.
- Six hour delivery for bookings from 0800 hours to 1700 hours, next day 1200 noon for bookings between 1700 hours and 2000 hours.
- Sending Charts, Graphs, result sheets, etc. made so easy.
- Bureaufax window delivery scheme for areas not covered by CTO delivery zone.
- Incoming Fax facility for receiving your documents from within India and abroad through registeration.
- Service of authorised agents for Collection and Booking of Documents.
- LATEST ATTRACTIVE OFFER : HALF A-4 SIZE DOCUMENTS INLAND TARIFF — RS 15 ONLY

Services available from your central Telegraph offices

DEPARTMENT OF TELECOMMUNICATIONS

Providing vital infrastrcture for Nation building

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

HOME SOUR HOME

☐ EASILY the most embarrassed Central minister in the election fray was A.M. Arunachalam, contesting from Tenkasi in Tamil Nadu. The reason for the minister's discomfiture: the swank house he has recently built in Tenkasi, which literally stands out like a sore thumb against the hovels and huts that dominate the constituency.

As the Opposition attacked him, a flustered Arunachalam went and put his foot in his mouth by declaring that the house was worth only Rs 5 lakh and that Rs 2 lakh of that came from G.K. Moopanar, the former TNCC(I) chief, as a "gift". Arunachalam's opponents immediately demanded to know where Moopanar had got so much money that he could afford to dole out Rs 2 lakh as a gift.

That was not all. The DMK, to rub salt into the electoral wound, then even offered to buy the house for Rs 5 lakh, knowing full well that the cost of construction was at least twice that amount. Arunachalam, of course, had no answer to that. Well, he ought to have known that people who live in glass palaces cannot afford to throw stones back.

THE BARRED CANDIDATE

☐ THE terrorist problem in Punjab naturally proved a major headache for security forces entrusted with protecting candidates in the fray. But the biggest headache turned out to be an independent candidate from Chandigarh who was firmly convinced that he was destined to be the next prime minister of India.

Besides delusions of grandeur, he also suffered from paranoia. He was convinced there existed a conspiracy to eliminate him. The candidate even suspected his own guards of being party to the conspiracy, and kept giving them the slip. The annoyed policemen finally decided there was only one way to keep tabs on the errant candidate—keep him in jail. So, each night after campaigning, the candidate was installed in the local lock-up. Truly a no-bars-hold election, this was.

POLL TALK

'Don't get your hands dirty. Keep them clean and vote for Gertie'.

Campaign slogan of Gertie Suvarna; Oscar Fernandes's sister in law

- Liberalisation has to be staggered and managed. We must not get in too deep, too fast. Laissez-faire is not on for our country.

V.P. SINGH in Far Eastern Economic Review

- We want complete freedom. Call it Khalistan or whatever you like.

BIMAL KHALSA, widow of Beant Singh

- Why pick on one? This shows the partisan approach of a section of the press. India is a religious country. Each one is entitled to seek blessings of a religious person.

ANAND SHARMA, Congress(I) spokesman, reacting to reports of Rajiv Gandhi's meeting with Devraha Baba

ON A CAPITAL PLANK

☐ HE certainly did not aim at living up to his name. Sardar Patel, an independent candidate contesting from Secunderabad constituency in Andhra Pradesh made what must rank as the most unique poll promise in the 1989 elections. Patel's electoral plank, a rather shaky one, rested on his pledge to get India's capital shifted from Delhi to Ayodhya in Uttar Pradesh.

And what about the massive funds required for such a major upheaval? No problem. Patel would simply ask every Indian to contribute Rs 10 towards the cost of the project. That wasn't all. When asked why Ayodhya should be the capital, Patel's reply was: it symbolised the spirit of unity, brotherhood and religious tolerance, notwithstanding the fact that currently Ayodhya symbolises the exact opposite. Oh well, what's the harm in building capitals in the air.

ELECTORAL ECONOMY

☐ NARAYAN Das Khambra, 67, an independent candidate who contested the Bhopal Lok Sabha seat this time, ought to earn himself a berth in the Guinness Book of Records if not one in the Lok Sabha. He has so far contested three presidential elections, four elections for the post of vice-president, two for the Lok Sabha and one for the state Assembly. Khambra has a peculiar electoral theory. "Losing an election does not bother me because I know that I cannot win," he says.

Why then does he do it? Bodhra, another independent contesting from Bhopal, offers a clue. Explains Bodhra: "I am contesting because by depositing Rs 500, my name will be published in newspapers and also on lakhs of ballot papers. It is good publicity for a small amount." That is some cost-benefit ratio.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Ties Manufacturing Company, Zorex House, A-105, Wazirpur Group Industrial Area, Delhi-52. Ph: 7125554, 7121008

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"Madhya Pradesh!

It's where centuries seemed to be so charmingly preserved.

Unfolding great, golden moments everywhere we went.

Mandu — The City of Joy. The love of a poet prince for his beautiful consort is still alive in the many architectural wonders. You'll fall in love with Mandu. We did.

Gwalior Fort — This massive monument so inspired Emperor Babur that he called it the pearl amongst the fortresses of Hind.

Khajuraho — Magnificent. Beautiful. Sensuous. Khajuraho is many things to many people.

Sanchi — So serene! Glorious stupas and pillars stand as in deep meditation.

Pachmarhi — Enchanting. Tranquil. Myriad green shades embrace mountains. And everywhere there's the murmur of cool, crystal streams.

Amarkantak. Chitrakoot — Further, splashes of Nature's colourful canvas. And near Jabalpur wasn't the boat ride at the moonlit Marble Rocks a memorable experience.

Kanha. Bandhavgarh. Shivpuri — Wildlife reserves with such a profusion of species of birds, deer, antelopes, sambar, blackbuck. And, of course, the tiger.

Ujjain. Omkareshwar. Maheshwar — This is where a hundred gods have taken abode.

And Bhopal — The capital city. Hugging the shores of a magnificent lake. It is a quiet blend of mosques and museums, parks and gardens, broad avenues and modern buildings.

Madhya Pradesh!

The gods indeed destined that this vast 'wonderland' be located nowhere else but in the very 'heart of India'.

There are well organised tours from Delhi, Bombay or Calcutta. To make sure that the holiday was the most memorable we lived in log huts, tourist villages and retreats with true environmental flavour. And we tried the tourist bungalows and holiday homes too. So economical. So easy on the pocket. Transportation too is so planned with a choice of cars, jeeps and coaches.

Madhya Pradesh! You surprise me."

Come to Madhya Pradesh... It's surprising a lot of people like you.

For more information and instant computerised bookings, get in touch with Madhya Pradesh State Tourism Development Corpn. Ltd.
NEW DELHI : 204-205, IInd Floor, Hotel Kanishka Shopping Plaza, 19, Ashok Road, New Delhi-110 001. Tel. : 3321187, 3324422 (Ext. 2353). Textel : 011-3327264. BOMBAY : 74, World Trade Centre, Cuffe Parade, Colaba, Bombay-400 005. Tel. : 214860, 219191 (Ext. 299). Textel : 022-217603. CALCUTTA : 'Chitrakoot', Room No 7, 6th Floor, 230A, A.J.C.Bose Road, Calcutta- 700 020. Tel. : 448543. Textel : 033-448543. BHOPAL : 'Gangotri', T.T. Nagar, Bhopal-462 003. Tel. : 66383, 66342-64388. Telex : 0705-275 TOUR IN. Textel : 0755-61629.

MILESTONES/MPT/151RR

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

HAVE A SHOPPING SPREE IN MALAYSIA

5 TIMES WEEKLY INCLUDING 3 NON-STOPS

Malaysia Airlines departs Madras every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday non-stop to Kuala Lumpur. And every Friday and Sunday via Penang. That makes five flights a week to Malaysia where exciting shopping awaits you.

In Malaysia, you'll find the latest designer watches from all over the world. Malaysian hand-painted batik. Beautiful textiles created in Japan and Europe. Finely-crafted jewellery, hand-made pewter-ware, and an impressive range of duty-free cameras and electronic equipment. The list of wonderful shopping goes on. And with an exchange rate that is more favourable than that in most other countries in the region, you can really indulge in a big shopping spree.

And all the way to Malaysia, you'll enjoy the genuine warmth and charm that only Malaysians can offer.

malaysia AIRLINES

ENCHANTMENT WHEREVER YOU FLY

Visit Malaysia Year 1990

FOR RESERVATIONS AND MORE INFORMATION, CALL YOUR FAVOURITE TRAVEL AGENT OR MALAYSIA AIRLINES/GENERAL SALES AGENT: STIC TRAVELS PTE. LTD., DELHI TEL: 3326302, 3325786, 3324308, 3321605 OR MALAYSIA AIRLINES, MADRAS TEL: 868625, 868985, 868970, 862802.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

FOR TOUGH, SUCCESSFUL MEN

PALMOLIVE
Shave Cream & Brush

with SGL-4

Palmolive Shave Cream available in Deluxe Lather, Lemon Fresh & Menthol Cool.

Rediffusion CP-5628b

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

GHEE WIZ

☐ IN the absence of having anything weighty to say, candidates in India have traditionally preferred to be weighed themselves. But now even being weighed against coins is becoming passe, though heavyweights like Haryana strongman Devi Lal continue to stagger the scales.

This election, one contender decided on a commodity that he felt offered much more incentive for his workers than mere coins. The Janata Dal candidate for the Outer Delhi Lok Sabha seat, Tarif Singh, had himself weighed against desi ghee.

Tilting the balance at a hefty 81 kg, Tarif Singh acquired enough of the stuff to keep his workers soaked in desi ghee for the remainder of the election campaign. That was what one could call a well-oiled party machinery.

POLICE PIGEONS

☐ INDIA on the threshold of the 21st century? Try telling Orissa's police force that, and the answer is most likely to be: "Oh, tell tnat to the birds!"

That's exactly what the state's police did in order to maintain links with remote polling centres: told it to the birds. Around 40 polling centres in Koraput, Phulbani and flood-prone areas of Cuttack were linked to the police control room, not by wireless or walkie-talkies, but by specially trained homing pigeons which carried messages to and fro.

And by all accounts,

despite the difficulties, they seem to have done a commendable job. Pigeons they may be, pigeon-hearted they were not. For the Orissa Police, though, that may only have been partial consolation. The elections were for them, literally, a flight back in time.

POLL TALK

- Chahey Hum Jiten Ya Loosaen...Yani Haren.

  RAJIV GANDHI's faux pas during Amethi speech

- If we got Devi Lal in Haryana and V.P. Singh at the Centre, I am pretty sure we can solve the Punjab problem within a week.

  KHUSHWANT SINGH

- Kuchch baaten gupt rahni chahiyen.

  DEVRAHA BABA, when asked what transpired in Rajiv Gandhi's secret meeting with him, in Indian Express

HANDING IT OUT

☐ ELECTIONS can cause paranoia in candidates. But Rammurat Shukla, an independent candidate from Raipur in Madhya Pradesh, seems to see a hidden hand behind everything.

He demanded that the returning officer ensure that all traffic constables in Raipur be removed from duty during electioneering. His reasoning: traffic constables on duty were blatantly canvassing support for the Congress(I) by displaying the 'hand' (the ruling party symbol) to all passing traffic, thus violating election guidelines.

His complaint further alleged that the automatic signals installed at traffic junctions had been deliberately rendered out of order by the district administration so that the traffic constables could influence the electorate. You have to hand it to Shukla.

MILITANT MOVES

☐ THE climate of fear in Punjab seems to have made electioneering much easier—and infinitely cheaper—than usual for the militant elements in the fray. The poll strategy of activists of the All India Sikh Students' Federation is a classic example. Having obtained the campaign schedules of certain moderate Akali leaders from the Badal and Longowal group, they would arrive at their election meetings. Standing menacingly in the front row, they would persist in asking inconvenient questions to the Akali candidates in the fray.

The inevitable result: the Akalis would hastily wind up their speeches and move to the next village, leaving the militants with exactly what they wanted—a ready-made stage, a public address system and, above all, a captive audience.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

IDBI Capital Bonds An attractive instrument for exemption from Capital Gains Tax.

- Available at par throughout the year.
- Exemption from Capital Gains tax under Section 54E of the Income Tax Act, 1961.
- Exemption from Wealth tax under Section 5(1) (xvie) of the Wealth Tax Act, 1957
- Income tax benefit under Section 80L.
- Interest at 9% p.a. payable half yearly.
- At the investor's option, interest for the full period of 3 years can be paid in advance on discounted basis.
- No deduction of tax at source.
- Outstation cheques accepted and cost of collection will be borne by IDBI.

For further details contact the nearest IDBI office or write to Manager

INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT BANK OF INDIA

IDBI TOWER, Cuffe Parade, Colaba, Bombay 400 005.

Sobhagya-B/IDBI/89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

If you have a telex, sending a FAX message anywhere in the world is very easy.

Thanks to Videsh Sanchar Nigam's

T-FAX SERVICE

Available from December 1, 1989

विदेश संचार निगम लिमिटेड
(भारत सरकार का उद्यम)
VIDESH SANCHAR NIGAM LTD.
(A Govt. of India Enterprise)
Regd. Office: Videsh Sanchar Bhavan, Mahatma Gandhi Road, Bombay 400 001.
Tel: +91(22) 271819 Telex: +81(11) 2429 Fax: +91(22) 942222

Yes I would like to know more about your T-FAX Service.
Please send me a detailed Brochure.

Name :

Address :

Telex No. :

(Cut & Mail to)
Mr. G.C. Banik
Manager (PR)
Videsh Sanchar Nigam Ltd.
M.G. Road, Bombay 400 001.

PRESSMAN

Sobhagya-B/IDBI/89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE TIMES OF INDIA

THE TIMES OF INDIA

NEWSTIME

• If they make a khichri, the Opposition won't be able to form a government. Doctors generally recommend khichri only to those who are sick. But the opposition parties are seeking to feed khichri even to a healthy nation like India. ■ RAJIV GANDHI

• Rajiv Gandhi is history now. Let's talk of the future. ■ V.P. SINGH in Probe

• Mein Italy ki beti ho sakti hoon, lekin Amethi ki bahu hoon. (I may be a daughter of Italy, but I am the daughter-in-law of Amethi.)

■ SONIA GANDHI, while campaigning in Amethi

• We will win 12 out of 10 seats in Haryana. I'm contesting from Sikar and Ferozepur also but I remain a Haryanvi. ■ DEVI LAL

• If they win they'll loot, and if they lose they'll smash and shoot.

■ Slogan in Punjab on the terrorists contesting

• This pompous manifesto, obviously written by a hack, assumes an air of condescension while speaking of the Congress Party's wish to transfer power to the people.

■ Janata Dal statement on the Congress(I) manifesto

• Hum to dubenge sanam, tujhko bhi le dubenge.

■ Graffito on the walls of Harsud in Madhya Pradesh, which will be submerged under the Narmada Sagar reservoir

• Rahul Gandhi who accompanied his father was impressed with the large crowds that had gathered in the election meetings at different places in Madhya Pradesh.

■ MOTILAL VORA, chief minister of Madhya Pradesh

• You may spit on my face, but vote for the Congress(I).

■ BALKAVI BAIRAGI, the Congress(I) candidate for Mandsaur Lok Sabha seat, at an election meeting

• To ask for votes is like abusing us.

■ A poster put up by the residents of a Harijan basti in Sehore, Madhya Pradesh

• Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi is a disillusioned man. He never thought that the opposition leaders would see eye to eye. ■ CHANDRA SHEKHAR, Janata Dal leader

• Their leadership changes its chief ministers every six months—and from that, you know how they are running the Government.

■ JYOTI BASU, West Bengal chief minister, on the Congress(I)

• Rajiv Gandhi, his mother and his grandfather ruled this country for 42 years. Even today, nearly 64 per cent of the population is illiterate and millions of people don't get two square meals a day. But, Rajiv Gandhi still insists on saying: "Mera Bharat Mahaan".

■ RAMAKRISHNA HEGDE

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Instantly filtered clean, pure water that tastes like clean, pure water.

Put the ordinary water filter to a taste test. You will find that the strong, unpleasant aftertaste of filtered water puts you off the very idea of drinking filtered water.

Here's the Ranutrol Aquapure Water Filter. For instantly filtered water that is safe for drinking, and has the pleasant taste of natural, clean, pure water. The secret is its revolutionary new granular activated carbon technology, that not only filters, but improves the taste of municipal water—by reducing excess chlorine. Technology from Teledyne Water Pik, USA, brought to you by the Ranutrol Group, people who gave you the Ranutrol Hansa Aqua Mixer.

The Ranutrol Aquapure Water Filter. Puts taste back to filtered water.

Ranutrol Aquapure Water Filter
From Teledyne Water Pik, USA.

TECHNOLOGY QUALITY SERVICE RANUTROL GROUP

...able in ...es only.

...free booklet, write to or contact, the Home Improvement Division of Auto Controls Pvt. Ltd. □ F-85, Okhla Indl. Area, Phase-I, New Delhi-110 020. Tel: 683 6001. □ X-37, Okhla Indl. ..., Phase-II, New Delhi-110 020. Tel: 63 3494, 684 5055. □ 114, 1st Floor, A2 Building, Shah & Nahar Indl. Estate, Lower Parel, Bombay-400 013. Tel: 492 0297, 492 7125. □ 5-... Court, 18A, Park Street, Calcutta-700 016. Tel: 29 1755. □ Flat No. A-4, 2nd Floor, Parsan Menere, 602, Anna Salai, Madras-600 006. Tel: 86 7121. □ Natraj Complex, 2nd F... ...ency Road, Richmond Circle, Bangalore-560 025. Tel: 21 2846, 21 4683. □ H. No. 1108, Sector 33C, Chandigarh-160 031. Or, Contact your nearest dealer.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Enterprise/D/AC...

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

NATIONAL FRONT TURBULENT

FOLLOWING three days of postponements and harrowing delays during which the entire nation was seriously beginning to doubt whether the vanquishers of the Congress(I) could form a government, the Janata Dal finally convened its parliamentary board meeting at 3:15 p.m. on December 1 in Parliament's Central Hall to elect its leader and the next prime minister of India.

It was an orderly meeting, but an extraordinary happening. Seated on the dais were Madhu Dandavate, presiding over the proceedings, V.P. Singh, Devi Lal, and Chandra Shekhar, an air of expectant jubilation on his face. Dandavate called for the nominations. And the denouement occurred within the next 15 minutes. The first surprise came when V.P. Singh proposed Devi Lal's name. It was seconded by Chandra Shekhar. Since there were no other names, Dandavate declared Devi Lal elected. While a shocked silence descended on Central Hall, all hell broke loose outside. Domestic and international wire agencies flashed the message to all corners of the world that Devi Lal had been elected the next prime minister of the largest democracy in the world. Outside Parliament crowds that had followed Devi Lal screamed their support for him. Even members of the Congress(I) were ecstatic that V.P. Singh had met his Waterloo.

> One of the most complex and ultimately successful operations conducted by V.P. Singh's supporters was to neutralise Devi Lal and Chandra Shekhar.

Then four minutes later, wire services sent urgent messages urging, "kill, kill, kill, earlier story". The change came, it seemed, suddenly. Devi Lal rose to his full height, and in a masterly performance, thanked V.P. Singh for supporting him. He then said that the election result was really a fight against the corruption of the Rajiv Gandhi government and the leading warrior was V.P. Singh. "Aur phir, Haryana me, jahan mujhe log tauji, tauji karke pukarte hain, main wahan tauji hi banke rehna chahta hoon." (Besides, I prefer to look after Haryana as an elder uncle of my people.) And as the audience listened raptly, he proposed V.P. Singh's name for the leadership. He had barely stopped speaking, when Ajit Singh loudly seconded him. There were no other nominations. Amid thunderous applause Dandavate declared Singh elected. The only sign that there was an undercurrent of turbulence was the shell-shocked look on Chandra Shekhar's face.

Four hours later, President R. Venkataraman officially asked V.P. Singh to form a National Front Government and scheduled the swearing-in ceremony for the following day.

The cavalry of grim-faced armed guards and police escorts accompanying V.P. Singh to Parliament and then to Rashtrapati Bhawan, associated more with Rajiv Gandhi's imperious style rather than the princeling of the erstwhile Jan Morcha, was a clear signal that the power equations in the nation had changed. On November 29, while speculation abounded about some last-minute game plan by which Rajiv Gandhi would try and hang on to power, Rajiv drove to Rashtrapati Bhawan and tendered his resignation to the President.

On the surface, a smooth transition. But underneath, a political volcano that threatened to erupt for four days with nightmarish consequences for the very stability of the nation. For even as the National Front was hurtling towards forming the new government, 48 hours of dramatic developments were demonstrating how precariously the new government is balanced. The events preceding the formation of the Government—blackmail, brinkmanship, rumour, tantrums—indicated a rocky road ahead that will call for some of the most astute political jugglery and management ever witnessed in this country. The Augean stables extended right into the belly of the very Janata Dal.

According to plans, the leader of the new government was to be picked at 3 p.m. on November 28. The day came and

RAGHU RAI

Devi Lal, V.P. Singh and Chandra Shekhar: clever manoeuvres

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

TRANSITION

went. Postponed to the 29th. Postponed to the 30th. Postponed to the 1st. What was happening within these four crucial days was a replay of Indian politics at its filthiest and grimiest. Money, muscle, treachery, self-interest, blind ambition, and the machinations of two men—Devi Lal's son Om Prakash Chautala and Chandra Shekhar—were playing havoc with the people's electoral verdict and holding to ransom the entire political process. Groups favouring the twain—and assisted by industrialists opposed to Singh—were engaged in frenetic back-stabbing to ensure his defeat. The strategy, partly born out of self-destructive avarice and partly out of a game plan worked out between Congress(I) and anti-V.P. Singh forces, was aimed at sabotaging the delicate balance worked out by V.P. Singh, whereby a centrist core, the

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

RAGHU RAI

Rajiv Gandhi chosen leader of the Congress(I): unchallenged

Janata Dal, would form a government assisted from the outside by the BJP and the communists. The Congress(I) advertisement campaign of fighting roosters and scorpions may have backfired during the election campaign, but it began to hit home with an ironic fury in the developments that marked the post-election power struggle in the Janata Dal.

THE one person who emerged as the master strategist responsible for blunting the daggers being hurled in V.P. Singh's direction to prevent his emergence as prime minister was none other than Arun Nehru, the latter day Chanakya of Indian politics. V.P. Singh's major task lay not only in finding a modus vivendi with the revivified BJP whose support for him was in total contradiction of the anti-Hindu-fundamentalist stance he had taken during the election campaign, but also in battling the formidable beasts of opposition to him that lay buried within the belly of his own party. Here is how the intrigue unfurled:

■ November 27. Devi Lal is lobbying for himself. He meets L.K. Advani to test BJP support for himself, but Advani bluntly tells him that the country has voted for V.P. Singh as the alternative leader, and since Devi Lal's own government has fared badly in Haryana, he should confine his role to building up the party. Devi Lal says in an interview that evening: "My personal support is for V.P. Singh."

■ November 28. Devi Lal, Atal Behari Vajpayee, and N.T. Rama Rao visit Chandra Shekhar, the most virulent V.P. Singh foe, lying in bed with malaria at his house, to urge him to support V.P. Singh. He remains non-committal, but begins organising a subterranean effort among V.P. Singh's opponents, including Devi Lal's son, Om Prakash Chautala, to revive Devi Lal's opposition to V.P. Singh. This is because Chandra Shekhar has made his own head count and realises that he would be soundly thrashed in a contest with V.P. Singh. But he keeps this close to his chest and continues to create the impression that he is still in the running while also letting it be known that he will support Devi Lal. His tactic is that even if he cannot trounce V.P. Singh himself, he will do it through Devi Lal and emerge as the kingmaker who humbled V.P. Singh.

■ November 29. Anti-V.P. Singh industrialists who have been campaigning amongst Janata Dal MPs—many of whom have been provided luxury suites in two posh hotels—as well as international

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

godman Chandraswamy get active. The industrialists, Chautala, and Chandraswamy hatch a plan to: bring Devi Lal back into the fray; and turn the BJP's support to Devi Lal. Chandraswamy and emissary "Mama" Aggarwal confer with Chandra Shekhar, and then visit Atal Behari Vajpayee. They try and sell Vajpayee the line that the BJP should join the new government and support Devi Lal because only he, and not V.P. Singh, would openly support the militant Hindu demand for a "Hindu Rashtra". Vajpayee listens patiently, but makes no commitment.

Meanwhile, Chautala organises busloads of Jats from Haryana who arrive in the capital in thousands to pressure Devi Lal. They chant: "Ban gaye, ban gaye, pradhan mantri aap ban gaye." (You have become the prime minister.) The psychological pressure begins to work and Devi Lal starts assuring his supporters that he is very much in the race. Janata Dal leaders decide to postpone the scheduled meeting of the party's political affairs committee and the parliamentary board.

Late that night Arun Nehru, Arif Mohammed Khan, and V.C. Shukla launch a counter campaign. They put pressure first, on people like Chimanbhai Patel and Nathuram Mirdha—leaders known to be in the V.P. Singh camp, but now wavering under pressure from various lobbyists. The same night V.P. Singh and Arun Nehru confer separately with Jyoti Basu and L.K. Advani and gain their reassurance that their support is exclusively for a National Front government led by V.P. Singh.

Still, a paralysing stalemate was in the air. According to the numbers count, of the 141 party votes, the V.P. Singh-Biju Patnaik-Ajit Singh-Mirdha camp would get 80, and the Devi Lal-Chandra Shekhar group 61. The splinter group, consisting of more than one-third of the party, was in a position to switch sides without being affected by the Anti-Defection Act.

RAGHU RAI

■ V.P. Singh with Advani, Vajpayee and other leaders ■

V.P. Singh was able to garner the support of the Left and the BJP by hammering out an agreement on a minimum programme of action.

Basu greeting Devi Lal and Rama Rao

PRASHANT PANJIAR

■ November 30. There appears to be a clear and ominous divide between Devi Lal and V.P. Singh. The two leaders, who were in personal contact with each other every hour until the 28th, have not spoken to each other for two days. But this apparent division is part of a strategy masterminded by Arun Nehru along with Arif Mohammed Khan, Satya Pal Malik, and a senior official from the Intelligence Bureau. The plan: to make an assessment of whether Chandra Shekhar is indeed a contestant, and how much support he enjoys. In doing so, Nehru also seeks to convey the impression to Chandra Shekhar that there is a real falling-out between Devi Lal and V.P. Singh. With this in mind, he advises V.P. Singh's camp to break all contact with Devi Lal while secretly planting key V.P. Singh supporters in Chandra Shekhar's camp to ensure that Chandra Shekhar's support for Devi Lal is absolute. This is part of an intricate design that unfolds the next day.

■ December 1. Devi Lal arises at 6 a.m. and starts contacting key MPs and leaders like Sharad Yadav and Ajit Singh to canvass their support. Chautala, meanwhile, parks himself at Chandra Shekhar's house. The second part of Nehru's strategy is to keep Chandra Shekhar convinced that he is regarded as a real king-maker, and that if he steps down from the contest in favour of Devi Lal he will be doing so from a position of strength. In order to carry out this tactic, Nehru persuades Jyoti Basu and former president Zail Singh, and actor Shatrughan Sinha, who is close to Chandra Shekhar, to convey to Chandra Shekhar that he should help avoid a conflict and disintegration of the party by lending his support to a consensus candidate. And Devi Lal, the very man Chandra Shekhar is secretly backing, appears to be emerging as this consensus candidate. Also, Ram Jethmalani attempts to conduct a fast outside Chandra Shekhar's house to dissuade him from his hostile stance, but is ruthlessly beaten up by hoodlums.

As the game continues, the next step is to approach Devi Lal to accept the candidature of V.P. Singh. But Nehru wants to make certain that while this is being accomplished Chautala should not be allowed to meet his father for two crucial hours—between 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. when the critical meeting of the parliamentary party for election of the new leader is to begin. This is accomplished by despatching dozens of senior partymen to lobby Chautala and keep him buttonholed at Chandra Shekhar's residence.

Now the crucial question is how to establish contact with Devi Lal. A team of journalists, working closely with the group, requests him to talk to Nehru and V.P. Singh directly to sort out the problems. After considerable dithering, Devi Lal agrees. At 1:30 p.m., Nehru drives in a white Maruti to Haryana Bhawan and has a half-hour closed-door meeting with Devi Lal. He reminds the Jat leader that he is the key architect of opposition unity and the defeat of Rajiv Gandhi and urges him to do his duty to the nation by not allowing party-wreckers to turn victory into defeat. At 2 p.m. Devi Lal agrees to drive with Nehru to Orissa Bhawan where V.P. Singh and Biju Patnaik are secretly waiting. There ensues a heart-to-heart talk in which Devi Lal recognises the problems for the party's image, but adds that since he's being projected by his followers as the next prime minister, it has now become a matter of personal honour for him.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

> Arun Nehru was the master strategist responsible for blunting the political daggers hurled at V.P. Singh.

V.P. Singh again plays his famous "withdrawal card", and tells Devi Lal that if that is the case then he would himself propose his name for prime minister. Nehru and Patnaik interject. They argue that since V.P. Singh had made the offer to nominate Devi Lal, and since it was a matter of general agreement that Devi Lal's heart really lay in running Haryana and that V.P. Singh was the only man experienced in running the Central Government, Devi Lal should reciprocate in equal measure. A deal is struck which would guarantee Devi Lal's honour, yet tilt the scales in favour of V.P. Singh.

Immediately thereafter, Devi Lal, now part of the Nehru strategy, invites Chandra Shekhar to Orissa Bhawan. The Rajput leader from Ballia is informed that Devi Lal is the consensus candidate whose name would be proposed by V.P. Singh. Chandra Shekhar is asked if he will second the nomination. A beaming Chandra Shekhar agrees, and he and Devi Lal arrive at Parliament House where a throng of supporters scream: "Chandra Shekhar zindabad! Devi Lal zindabad!" Some minutes later, Arun Nehru and V.P. Singh arrive. But a little earlier, Nehru makes a key telephone call to Ajit Singh and informs him of the strategy.

WHAT transpired at the parliamentary party meeting that began at 3:15 p.m. was ultimately the unravelling of this meticulous, elaborate and clandestinely designed nuts and bolts strategy, in which an unwary Chandra Shekhar, for long labelled the country's wiliest politician and party wrecker par excellence, was brilliantly checkmated and politically humiliated. And the shock showed on his face as he muttered under his breath: "I'll show them." He spoke briefly afterwards saying: "I support the decision, but with reservations because I was kept in the dark about all this." Later, when saffron-robed N.T. Rama Rao called a general National Front meeting to order, Chandra Shekhar, with a few of his supporters, walked out in obvious disgust.

V.P. Singh's fight had been on two fronts. For even as the complex and ultimately successful plan to neutralise Devi Lal and Chandra Shekhar was being carried out, a parallel effort was underway to ensure the support of the BJP without any loss of face either for V.P. Singh or the BJP.

The main reason for this was that the mathematics on the basis of which the post-electoral calculations for forming a government were made, went completely awry. The National Front had made its seat adjustments with the BJP and the Left parties in the belief that it would win a total of about 260 seats. This was seen as a comfortable position in which, with the BJP and Leftists receiving about 50 seats each or less, V.P. Singh could rely on the Left for supporting his government even to the exclusion of the BJP, whose support for the Vishwa Hindu Parishad (VHP) on the Ram Janmabhoomi-Babri Masjid issue he had openly condemned.

In its calculations, the Front had not even remotely envisaged that a pro-Congress(I) wave in the south, that went against the regional parties of the National Front, would just about wipe out the Front leaving the Janata Dal with about 141 seats in the Lok Sabha. Nor did they calculate that the communists would lose Kerala and leave the CPI(M) with only 32 seats in Parliament.

PRASHANT PANJIAR

Arif Mohammed, Arun Nehru, Shukla

And least of all was the Front prepared for the virtual tidal wave on which the BJP swept into Parliament with 88 seats. Singh's flirtation with the BJP in terms of seat adjustments erected a veritable Frankenstein for the Janata Dal. The contradictions began hitting home as soon as the results began to come. On November 27, V.P. Singh suddenly discovered that he could not possibly form a government without BJP support. And he was unwilling to make a public request soliciting its support because it would have totally contradicted his earlier public posture.

A major crisis was at hand: it seemed the National Front would fail to form a government. Fumed Advani: "If he wants our support he should accept it publicly. I will not accept his cloak-and-dagger politics."

The crisis was finally resolved through the appointment of a committee consisting of V.P. Singh, Rama Rao, Arun Nehru and Ajit Singh to negotiate with the BJP. First, Rama Rao, as National Front chairman, and its convener V.P. Singh,

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

wrote a letter to Advani seeking the BJP's support. "It is now the sacred duty of all of us to see that this mandate of the people is not frustrated and the formation of a non-Congress(I) government is not delayed to give effect to the hopes and aspirations of the people," the letter read.

Next, in secret negotiations between V.P. Singh, Nehru and Advani lasting all night, the problem of whether the BJP would support the National Front from outside or participate within the Government—as a BJP faction led by Advani had been demanding in view of its massive gains in Parliament—was thrashed out. V.P. Singh remained adamantly opposed to this. Again another compromise was hammered out. In return for supporting a government led by V.P. Singh from outside, the BJP demanded that the new government implement certain basic reforms, including: State funding of elections; cleaning the judiciary of political elements; granting autonomy to Doordarshan and All India Radio; arriving at a consensus on including Sanskrit in the national multi-lingual formula for different states; replacement of the Minorities Commission by a civil rights commission; immediate dissolution of state assemblies in Bihar, Himachal Pradesh, Gujarat, Rajasthan, Madhya Pradesh, Maharashtra with seat adjustments favouring parties according to the new strength they have demonstrated in the Lok Sabha.

All this amounts to virtually unconditional support by the BJP to the new government. It is not even asking the Janata Dal to support the VHP's proposal for the construction of the Ram Janmabhoomi temple, and has also made the commitment that it will prevent construction from starting at least until assembly elections are held in the states.

For the time being V.P. Singh has been able to meander his way out of a political thicket of stinging nettles with only a few rashes to show for it. But what is he really presiding over? The brew in his own party consists of unpredictable and rebellious Jats who could well rebel against Devi Lal for standing down; adherents of the former Congress(I) culture; as well as the followers of Chandra Shekhar who have shown themselves capable of unfathomable political mischief. Moreover, Chandra Shekhar, neutralised for the time being, is unlikely to keep silent.

Among his allies there is a segment of powerful BJP leaders like L.K. Advani, still smarting under the memory of V.P. Singh having publicly condemned their stance as communal, who may still seek participation in the Government much to the disenchantment of V.P. Singh's newly-acquired Muslim vote-bank in the Hindi heartland.

BHAWAN SINGH

Jethmalani being roughed up

AND there is still the spectre of how severely the alliance with the BJP will be strained once the plan for the construction of the temple in Ayodhya starts moving ahead and how the BJP leadership will respond to pressure from its own militant cadres. Also, strains are bound to develop with the Left during the budget session because it does not entirely see eye to eye with V.P. Singh's liberal economic thinking.

Then there is Rajiv's Congress(I) to contend with. In fact, the consensus prevailing among political observers when the election results began pouring in was that only a realignment of the opposing factions of the Congress(I) and the Janata Dal could provide a stable government with more than 300 seats. The speculation was that a Congress(I), led into a debacle by Rajiv Gandhi, would be willing to dump him and join hands with V.P. Singh in a new political configuration.

But that eventuality was also the victim of the final arithmetic. Today Rajiv Gandhi finds himself sitting pretty as leader of a formidable and undivided opposition facing a potentially fractious ruling party. And there is nobody within the Congress(I) capable or willing to lead a revolt against him.

This was amply demonstrated at the party's parliamentary board meeting at 7 p.m. on November 27 where a confident and totally relaxed looking Rajiv, so different from the piteous figure he had cut during the campaign, was unanimously re-elected leader of the party amongst paeans of praise from party members.

Ranged against V.P. Singh, Chandra Shekhar's supporters beat up Ram Jethmalani when he tried to fast in protest.

"The election has proven," Rajiv told wildly cheering partymen, "that we are the only national party that stands on a well-founded ideology and does not move from its ideology for momentary gain."

The reasons for Rajiv's new-found confidence are not difficult to explain. The power of the syndicate bosses, with the exception of Sharad Pawar, who has openly exhorted all partymen to support Rajiv, has been totally squashed. The electoral numbers have served, in effect, to split the party in Rajiv's favour. The political machines of the potential challengers—N.D. Tiwari, Jagannath Mishra, Amarsinh Chaudhary, Motilal Vora—have been defeated in their own states. And rival power centres within the party like Buta Singh, Shiela Dikshit, K.C. Pant have also been eliminated, leaving Rajiv Gandhi as the only elected national figure in the Congress(I).

Besides, the power-base in the party has now shifted to the south—returning as many as 104 of the party's 192 MPs. Most of them owe their tickets and victories to Rajiv Gandhi and are unlikely to try and eject him.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Overtly, the Congress(I) will not seek the support of any other group. "But we are not opposed to receiving their support should they choose to give it to us," says Arjun Singh. He was the first partyman to issue a circular to his colleagues asking pledges of support for Rajiv Gandhi. Clearly, he has made a comeback as a key Rajiv adviser, along with Madhavsinh Solanki and Sharad Pawar.

The Congress(I)'s game plan, it seems, is to project a sober image, to cooperate with the new government in its investigations, and to project Rajiv not as a humiliated but a humbled and wiser leader in the fashion of the post-Emergency image of Sanjay Gandhi. At the same time, the party will spare no subterfuge to engineer a massive defection from the National Front just before the assembly elections.

As Kamal Nath, one of the few victorious Congress(I) MPs from Madhya Pradesh, put it: "The real campaign has just begun. Some of the elements who were responsible for the prime minister's dilemmas have been wiped out by the people. As far as the new government is concerned, my slogan is, we will meet them, greet them, and then beat them." Should the National Front alliance begin to come unglued, its inability to provide a stable government could be the most potent weapon in the hands of a Congress(I) attempting a comeback.

But there are also the pluses for V.P. Singh that cannot be ignored. If he appoints a 55-member ministry—and assuming each minister has the support of at least three MPs—he will ensure that at least 150 of his partymen will have a vested, patronage-based interest in not defecting. And there is reason to believe that the Left Front and BJP support for the National Front will be firm at least initially. For, both parties realise that if the Government falls they are unlikely ever to recoup their positions in Parliament. The BJP, in particular, remembers the lesson of 1980 when, because of the failure of the Janata government, it found itself decimated. The party leaders appear committed to not repeating that mistake again.

And even with their support, the National Front can hope to chalk up no more than an uncomfortable majority of 281 seats. Moves are already underway to garner the support of independents and satellite groups such as the Simranjit Singh Mann supporters. Together, these comprise about 40 MPs and plans are afoot to include them in the Government by giving them ministerial berths. The immediate plan is to incrementally build up the core group to about 200 by chipping away at the satellite groups that now support the Congress(I).

And the long-term strategy is to weaken Rajiv's position even further, not by punishing him, but by opening up all the files on scandals and related improprieties, and thereby pulling down his image to such an extent that he becomes an embarrassment and liability to his own party. In this eventuality, National Front strategists figure, Congressmen will have little option but to defect in large numbers, thereby giving the National Front a comfortable majority in which it will have to depend neither on the BJP nor the communists.

But beyond the strategy, there is the enigma of V.P. Singh himself. While he now boasts an 'A' Team of Nehru, Arif, V.C. Shukla, Inder Gujral, Satya Pal Malik, he still trusts no aides, but only his inner voice that he has repeatedly said never fails to serve him in coming to the right decision. The turbulent transition in government, while it provides V.P. Singh as an alternative and a minimum programme of opposition unity must now demonstrate that if the Congress(I) had destroyed national consensus, as V.P. Singh claims, a new one must emerge in its place.

The electorate has shown that it is a harsh task-master and will brook no excuses for incompetence, arrogance, and the failure to deliver. V.P. Singh too will find himself subjected to remorseless scrutiny. The problems he faces are Herculean. Especially since he is still performing a balancing act on a precarious tightrope and will be appointing a meal-ticket ministry, catering to the greed of people within his own party through massive patronage.

The acid test for the new Mr Clean will be his ability to ensure that those given key ministries provide a ruthlessly clean government. Otherwise the "alternative" will all have been in vain.

There is little doubt, that so far V.P. Singh has achieved a goal even his most ardent supporters believed was an impossibility. During the past two-and-a half years, he had chalked out a war front and a peace front. The war front was Rajiv Gandhi. The peace front, despite its contradictions stemming from the fact that so many discredited and corrupt politicians had flocked to his bandwagon, was his party. Sooner than later he will have to choose two similar fronts in his own party. The war has only just begun. And in resolving these contradictions, Singh may continue to baffle and confound the Doubting Thomases as he has done for the past three years. But his task has only one direction: uphill. —INDERJIT BADHWAR and PRABHU CHAWLA

V.P. Singh with President and Rajiv after swearing in ceremony

RAGHU RAI

Singh has achieved a goal even supporters thought impossible. But he faces a continuing uphill battle.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

An exclusive start to a new decade

INDIA TODAY YEAR BOOK 1990
Code: IT 101
Size: 222 mm × 289 mm
Price: Rs. 250

India Today Diaries and Address Book

The India Today Yearbook 1989 established distinctive standards which were widely appreciated by discriminating users, for meticulous attention to production and the quality of information offered. This year's edition, the India Today Yearbook 1990 upholds these fine standards and comes with a comprehensive range of exclusive pocket diaries and an address book produced with an eye to detail—a hallmark at India Today.

INDIA TODAY YEAR BOOK 1990

Much more than just a diary, this yearbook puts invaluable information on your desk where it belongs.

The information includes a statistical overview of the Indian economy, a political profile of India, a complete travel guide, city guides, International Time, and 16 pages of full colour maps.

The diary section is laid out with busy executives in mind. The easy-to-read, easy-to-write format includes: a week-at-a-glance, hourly slots for appointments, current and forward year planner, ample space for notes, address and phone number section.

Attractively produced with a burgundy red cover, gold leaf embossing, gilt-tipped pages and a handy ribbon marker, the India Today Yearbook 1990 belongs on your table.

DELUXE MINIATURE DIARIES.

To match the diary on your desk, there is now a slimline for your jacket or the briefcase and a pocket diary specially designed to be carried on your person. With these miniatures, you can now carry all the day-to-day information you need with you. Alongwith provision for space for your appointments, you get 35 pages of invaluable information like India at a glance, Conversion Tables, ISD and STD codes, International Times and a 3-year Calendar 1989-1991.

IF THE ORDER FORM IS MISSING

Just mail your enquiry/order to Living Media India Ltd., P.B. No. 29, New Delhi-110001. Your order should be accompanied by remittance drawn in favour of 'Living Media India Ltd'. (add Rs. 5 to outstation cheques, i.e., outside Delhi).
Please add Rs. 10 for each set of upto 3 initials to be printed in gold leaf (facility available only for the diaries).

Make your selection now and send in the order with coupon

ORDER FORM—1990

Product Code	Product Details	Price (Rs.).	Qty Ordered	Total Amount (Rs.)
IT 101	India Today Yearbook 1990	250
IT 102	India Today Slimline Diary	65
IT 103	India Today Pocket Diary	35
IT 201	Address Book	65
			Total (in Rs.)
	Gold Embossing of Initials @ Rs. 10 per Item facility available for diaries only.
			Total Amount of Order (Rs.)

Please give maximum of 3 initials per diary ordered, on a separate sheet.

I enclose my crossed cheque/DD for Rs. _____ (add Rs. 5/- for outstation cheques, i.e. outside Delhi) payable to 'Living Media India Ltd.' Please send the diaries and address books, as listed in the coupon, at the following address:

Name _____

Address _____

_____

_____

_____ Pin _____

Mail your order to:

Living Media India Ltd.
P.B. No. 29,
New Delhi-110001

Diaries will be home-delivered at your given address by the year end or early in January 1990.

FREE DELIVERY.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

The future on your wrist.

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Ceramics - not only aerospace engineers but Rado designers have rediscovered it. The result? The new Rado DiaStar Anatom. Slim and slightly convex, it is the most comfortable watch you could wear as it molds itself perfectly to the anatomy of your wrist. It is watersealed and its ceramic bracelet and its crystal are fully scratchproof. Available in ladies' and gentlemen's models.

RADO

Switzerland

NOW YOUR PRECIOUS DOCUMENTS HAVE THE OPTION OF GROWING OLD GRACEFULLY.

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Does the picture on the left remind you of how your documents look after a few weeks of handling?

And would you believe us if we told you that the one on the right is the older, more used document?

Or would you think it's just an advertising gimmick?

Actually it's a document that's been laminated on a GBC Laminator. In an office. In a matter of minutes.

Give your documents lasting power. With a GBC Laminator.

Once your document is ready, all you have to do is choose the lamination you want. Thick or thin. Matte or glossy. Then switch on the machine and pass your document through it.

That's all. [illegible] your documents – blueprints, drawings, charts, maps, photographs, schedules and proposals – resistant to ink and coffee stains, greasy fingers and years of handling. And mishandling.

In addition, the GBC lamination enhances the colour and appearance of your documents. Giving them a real international look. A look that's here to stay.

After all GBC Hi-Tech (India) Ltd. is the undisputed Indian market leader. And an affiliate of the world leader and pioneer in binders and laminators, General Binding Corporation (USA).

[illegible] that your documents should stand up to the test of time as beautifully as your ideas do. Don't you agree?

 Also available : GBC Binders*

* Please send your representative to see me.
* Call me up to fix an appointment.

Name :

Designation :

Address :

Tel :

Mail to 'Marketing' at Corporate Office.

GBC

BINDERS & LAMINATORS

SMART BUSINESS SENSE FOR YOUR OFFICE

[illegible] INDIA) LTD. CORPORATE OFFICE : A-216, Okhla Industrial Area, Phase I, New Delhi-110 020. Tel : 6837412, 636142, 6830857, 6842529. Telex : 031-75146. Fax : 011-6830936 * D/2, Basement, 6 Siri Fort [illegible] Delhi-110 049 * Chandigarh, Tel : 42655 * Bangalore, Tel : 220313 * Bombay, Tel : 6365814, 6363475 * Pune, Tel : 660784 * Calcutta, Tel : 432768. Telex : 021-7820 FTCI IN. Fax : 033-444614 * Madras, [illegible] * Vadodara, Tel : 326440 * Hyderabad, Tel : 842895

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

V.P. SINGH

"I'll have politics on my terms"

THE newly-elected Prime Minister, Vishwanath Pratap Singh, outlined his views, plans and hopes on vital issues facing his government and the nation in a series of interviews with Editor AROON PURIE and Features Editor SHEKHAR GUPTA during his campaign and on the day he was sworn in as prime minister. Excerpts:

Q. How do you feel, now that you are prime minister?

A. I have a deep sense of responsibility towards those who live in huts and hamlets and particularly towards the younger generation which expects a lot from this crucial change at the Centre.

Q. Since you were expelled from the Congress(I) you have always maintained that you will not hold political office. What made you change your mind?

A. Left to myself I would like to play the role of Balram in Mahabharat. But at the moment I am carrying out the wishes of the leaders of the National Front and all the elected MPs of the Janata Dal.

Q. How would you describe the mandate given to your party? The south has rejected the National Front causing a horizontal political divide. Isn't it accurate to describe yours as a regional party of the Indo-Gangetic basin?

Q. There is certainly a set-back for us in the south. But electoral reverses do not mean that we have been wiped out politically. National Front partners like the DMK and our supporters like the Left Front are ruling two states in the south. We are sure we will correct this imbalance.

Q. How do you answer cynicism about your government's stability?

A. Since 1977, the Opposition has moved towards stability and the Congress(I) has deteriorated towards instability. It is the Opposition that has given stable governments in Assam, West Bengal, Andhra Pradesh, Tamil Nadu, Kerala—Karnataka too, but there was foul play there. Look at Maharashtra, Rajasthan, Uttar Pradesh, Bihar, where chief ministers have changed, almost like calendars, every year. This political process has not been fully appreciated. We are not bankrupt like the Congress(I) where there's not a replacement for even a man like Rajiv Gandhi. I can't understand this. Political bankruptcy is being counted as a big asset.

Q. The process of your selection has been marred by dissidence and Chandra Shekhar seems distinctly unhappy. How do you intend to tackle this situation?

A. I have no problems with anyone. I will continue to seek his co-operation.

Q. How do you view the phenomenal success of the BJP? Is it because of their communal appeal?

A. I think the BJP has won primarily due to one to one contests in almost every state. Both the Janata Dal and the BJP have benefited from this exercise because it reassured the people that we meant business.

PRASHANT PANJIAR

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Q. Since you are leading a minority government relying on the support of the left and the right which have diametrically opposing ideologies, how do you plan to ensure the stability of your government and implement a minimum programme?

A. Yes, there are inbuilt problems of a minority government. But I don't see any serious problem in implementing a minimum programme. All of them are committed to provide a clean and stable government at the Centre. I have always made it clear that I will have politics on my terms.

Q. What is this minimum programme?

A. Fight against the influence of big money over politics.

Q. As finance minister you were considered responsible for unleashing what many of your critics called the raid raj. Will the raids resume with the same vigour?

A. Raids cannot be an integral part of any government policy. But when there is evidence of government rules being violated by someone, corrective measures have to be taken to enforce the law. For a strong industrial base the Government will not hesitate to give positive impetus to agriculture-based industries along with the core industries.

Q. Will you have inquiry commissions as in 1977?

A. I don't think there is any need for it. The normal law of the land can take care of any lapses. The Government should have the will to implement these laws. And certainly there will be no vindictiveness.

Q. But you will identify those who took the Bofors money?

A. That is our bounden duty towards our motherland.

Q. You were one of the architects of the last government's economic policies. Do you plan to continue on the same path?

A. We see the agriculture sector as one of the mainsprings of the economy. Industry languishes when there is a drought, while there is an upswing when there is a good crop. We don't see a contradiction between agriculture and industry. But agriculture is still the main sector which provides the largest employment. Investments in agriculture have been inadequate. While the real price of agricultural produce has not gone up, the price of what the farmer is buying has gone up. These adverse terms of trade are depleting the rural area and pauperising it. This has to be reversed—even for the sake of industry. Otherwise, we have an industrial growth that is skewed.

Q. That means you will reduce the costs in industry too?

A. Yes. Because then it caters to the high-income bracket and items of mass consumption get neglected. We have to think of small-scale industries. Now, our biggest asset is manpower. And if this asset is idle, our main asset is idle. So you have to adopt technologies that will result in greater overall employment. We want agro-based industry.

Q. Does it matter if big business houses get into this?

A. I don't think big houses should get into the small-scale sector. But at various levels it is the new entrepreneur class that has come up in India—educated engineers and all. And they have given a fillip to industry and exports. Not the big ones. The dynamism of this sector has to be recognised and it matches our strategy. Then, of course, we will have to face the balance of payments problem. We will have to have a positive strategy for exports.

Q. Will you reverse some import liberalisation?

A. There is hardly any flexibility—70 per cent of our imports are compulsory imports: petroleum products, non-ferrous metals, precision machinery. Of the remaining 30 per cent, 50 per cent is for the raw material needs of industry. The debate is about the 15 per cent—a storm in a teacup. So that sets the minima.

Q. What about the maxima?

A. You take a person in the supermarket, put Rs 10 in his pocket and tell him he is free to buy anything he likes. You could have a debate about what he should buy, but it is purely academic. There is another problem. The rupee is not a freely exchangeable currency. So earnings in rupees, even say by generation through increased production, will not be enough. Payments will have to be in dollars from other sectors or exports. If you put the three constraints together and see the hard reality, you don't have enough to debate about.

Q. So what do you think is the critical economic issue?

A. The balance of payments management and the debt. I think that we'll have to have a positive and very forceful export policy. Then many items of our imports like edible oils can be curtailed. I've always had this strategy in the Finance Ministry. On edible oils it has paid off. Take many of the agricultural products, like pulses. There is no reason for importing them. Basically, import is like food—if you take too little you starve, if you take too much, you fall sick. A proper mix is also necessary—the wrong type of imports is like unhealthy food. So prudence is the password—just like management of blood pressure which should not be too high or too low. You have to pass a judgement seeing the needs of growth.

Q. What role do you see for large industrial houses? With your return, a lot of them are scared.

A. I don't know why they are scared. We mean no harm to them. We have nothing against them as such. One of the areas in which they have been found wanting is export. Large-scale houses have recently shown some interest. But if you compare their economic strength and the country's need for export, I don't think they have come up to expectations. And on the employment side, if you see the data in the corporate sector, employment has not gone up. They should come forward in areas where employment is generated.

Q. Will you push for that?

A. Yes. I have never restrained industrial growth. We need that. I think there was a positive fillip to industry as far as legitimate industry was concerned. It is activity other than industry that we stopped. I mean siphoning of money outside, evading excise.

Q. Will you pursue that in the same way?

A. We are all for industrial growth. We

STABILITY

"I don't see any problem with either the BJP or the Left. There are areas where we have no differences at all."

LEADERSHIP

"We are not bankrupt like the Congress(I) where there is no replacement for even Rajiv Gandhi."

BIG BUSINESS

"I don't know why they are scared. I have never restrained industrial growth. It is activity other than industry that we stopped."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

are not against making profits through industrial activities. But the activities we objected to are not connected with genuine profit. There is no reason why somebody with access to the powers that be, just for that reason, has an edge over the other unit which is enormously more efficient. Because of patronage, why should they hit the more efficient unit.

Q. Will you try and make a lot of the control fiscal....?

A. We will move from discretionary controls to non-discretionary controls. We will have to prioritise. There should be a more elegant way of dealing with this than this system of discretionary controls, of giving licences, moving from desk to desk, causing delays and corruption.

Q. Do you see a nexus between financial institutions and large industrial houses?

A. Actually so many banks have been forced to give loans—long-term loans and big public issues. It is unhealthy.

Q. How would you unwind this?

A. If one government gets legally committed, it is a problem for the next government. The credibility of the Government comes into play.

Q. How do you propose to remove corruption?

A. This is a poser for parliamentary democracies the world over. As politics becomes costly, and elections become costlier, political parties begin to need large funds. And those who have large funds need the Government. So a natural nexus builds up. Now I am not raising an ethical question, but a question on how it affects the political system.

Q. How do you break the nexus?

A. One, we have to have a package of electoral reforms. We have a very definite programme of state funding of elections. And I think we should all treat it as a national issue—all parties should put their heads together. Two, how do we control the bureaucracy? How can the gap between the rulers and the ruled be bridged? That's again a global problem of administration. It is a poser in communist countries, it is a poser in capitalist countries. And I'm very clear it cannot be bridged through elected representatives only. There has to be a counter-balance mechanism at the people's level—of joint committees of people and also decision-makers. The other thing is the Official Secrets Act. Much of the corruption exists because there is cover. The more the transparency, the more the check on corruption.

Q. Do you have any disagreement with the Congress(I) on Panchayati Raj?

A. Our model is better. We stand for real devolution of financial and administrative powers while retaining the federal system. Under the cover of the Panchayati Raj, they (Congress-I) want to hit at the federal system. They are mixing poison in sweetmeats. From PM there is DM, no elected CM.

Q. What is your view on the Ayodhya issue?

A. You can't expect an answer to such a complex question in monosyllables. The first thrust is for an amicable solution. That alone can bring a lasting solution. If it is not possible, then the matter has to go to court. At least during the pendency in court, anything that causes social tension should be avoided. We respect all religions—Hindu, Muslim, and all the religions that we have in the country. The Hindu sentiment is that Ayodhya is the birthplace of Ram and that there should be a temple here. I think that sentiment should be respected. I talked to Muslim leaders, and they say that we have no quarrel with them (Hindus) building a temple in honour of lord Rama. It is a Hindu place; there is no debate on that. Their fear is that the mosque could be demolished. One mosque is demolished, another one, then another. So between the Hindus' sincere and intense desire to have a temple in Ayodhya and the Muslims' apprehension that the mosque will be demolished, a way out has to be found.

CONTROLS

"We will move from discretionary controls to non-discretionary controls. We will have to prioritise."

INQUIRY COMMISSION

"I don't think there is any need. The normal law of the land is enough if the Government has the will. There will be no vindictiveness."

EXPECTATIONS

"We have to grow out of the fear psychosis that if a government goes, the nation will go. The country should have the courage to reject governments in a row."

Q. What is your reaction to the Rajiv government's last minute decision to release many alleged Punjab extremists?

A. This means that the previous government has accepted that the cases registered against them were wrong. We cannot compromise with the integrity and unity of the country. The process of reconciliation has to be started.

Q. When you reflect on the past five years, is there a sense of regret or some feeling of disappointment?

A. My own conscience is clean. I fought all day, but I slept well at night. Going back, yes, in a sense it is true that Rajiv had tremendous opportunity. No one has started with that much goodwill. I myself worked very hard for him, because I was very attached to his mother. And I thought that being with Rajiv, it was my duty to see that he was a success. And one by one things turned out differently.

Q. So in that sense you would say that you are disappointed?

A. You could say disillusioned.

Q. You may be placed in the same position—where people expect a lot from you and you disappoint?

A. The country should have the courage to reject people in a row and reject governments in a row. The whole system has to be put in a crucible and melted. There is this fear psychosis that the Central Government is the nation. And if the Central Government goes, then the country will go. We have to grow out of this fear psychosis. The country will not go. In so many countries governments change, but the country does not fall apart.

Q. Mrs Gandhi had described her government as the government that works. Rajiv said his was the government that worked faster. What kind of government are you promising?

A. A government of people's participation. Garib ka pakhsha, sarkar ka paksha (government of the poor, for the poor).

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Free from bitter saccharin taste. Free from weight-inducing calories.

Throw those saccharin tablets away. Don't even look at sugar! Now you have Sugar Free, made from 'aspartame' — a natural protein derivative.

Sugar Free type sweeteners are approved in over 69 countries and used in products like Diet Pepsi and Diet Coke. Sugar Free. Brought to you for the first time with the Cadila stamp of international Quality.

Say YES! to Sugar free

MULTIMEDIA AQUARIUS/CC/5/89

CREDO FOR QUALITY

Cadila CHEMICALS LTD

It's not saccharin. It tastes just like sugar.
Confirm with your doctor. See instructions on pack.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

WHEN YOU WANT TO FINISH FIRST, START WITH THERMAX.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Being ahead of the others has its advantages. Let's start with the finish. Every name on our client list has the winning looks. No wonder. The super surface comes from the little extras Thermax puts into the painting systems designed and built for them.

From pre-treatment to final finish. We offer complete surface coating systems engineering packages. Backed by our association with Trinity Industrial Corporation, Japan, and The DeVilbiss Company, USA, two International leaders in this field.

In fact, from painting of switchgears and refrigerators to bicycles and cars — Thermax has the experience to execute any surface-coating requirement. However complex.

- ☐ Electrostatic and conventional painting equipment.
- ☐ Powder coating and powder recovery systems.
- ☐ Cathodic and anodic electrodip.
- ☐ Auto-transporterised or spray phosphating.
- ☐ Systems for water-based paints.
- ☐ Multi-fuel heating systems.
- ☐ Water and waste water treatment facilities.
- ☐ Computerised simulation of layout and product flow.

So if you have a surface coating need, talk to the leader.

GROWING WITH A MISSION

THERMAX

THERMAX LIMITED
SURFACE COATING SYSTEMS DIVISION
4, Bombay-Pune Road
Shivajinagar, Pune 411 005
Tel : (0212) 51123
Telex : 0145-545 TMXS IN
0145-449 TMXK IN
Fax : 091-212-55041

Finishing at the top

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

We'll let the picture speak!

PLENTY OF SHADOW DETAIL

There's not a shadow of doubt! Thanks to the superb image detail of SUPER plus.

VERY GOOD SKIN TONE

This freshness and clarity is due to the ultra-fine grain and astonishing sharpness of SUPER plus.

MODERATE CONTRAST

Top marks for contrast! Overall color is very good. Yet another plus for SUPER plus.

EXCELLENT HIGHLIGHT AREAS THROUGHOUT

A result of the ideally balanced color characteristic curves of SUPER plus. No matter what the lighting situation.

SUPER plus

Colors that come to life!

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

When Indian Railways were upgrading their communications system who got the green signal?

Tata Telecom.

The Indian Railways has the largest network in the world. With over 7000 stations connecting more than 1000 towns and cities all over the country.

Helping Indian Railways in their crucial minute-to-minute communication is Tata Telecom.

This is not all.

Elsewhere, Tata Telecom is upgrading communication systems for core sectors like banking, hotels, steel, business and industry. Plus the all-important area of defence.

This is how Tata Telecom is revolutionising communication and making life convenient. Everywhere.

Indeed the commitment of Tata Telecom to the nation's communications needs is total. Reflected in the quality of products and the customer-support it offers:

Digital EPABXs manufactured with technical assistance from Oki of Japan, the world leaders in the fields of telecommunication and information processing.

Tata Telecom has its sights set on tomorrow. And is geared to harness the communication technologies of the future.

A future that's going to be exciting. Because Tata Telecom is committed to take you there.

Tata Telecom. A commitment to serve the India of tomorrow.

For more information on Tata Telecom Digital EPABX Systems, contact:

Tata Telecom Ltd.
A-78/4/6, Gandhinagar Electronics Estate,
Gandhinagar 382 015.
Tel: 21773, 21774. Tlx: 0120-3231 TTLG-IN

DIGITAL EPABX SYSTEMS
FROM

TATA
TELECOM

TECHNOLOGY FOR THE FUTURE WORLD

Karishma/TT/87/2418

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

UTTAR PRADESH

Mauled Mercilessly

Faulty campaign, opposition wave, rout the ruling party

KINGPINS fell like ninepins during the Uttar Pradesh Vidhan Sabha elections. And though the man who would be king—chief minister Narayan Datt Tiwari, till yesterday considered a candidate for the prime ministership—won his own seat, his image crumbled overnight as he failed to deliver the nation's most crucial state to his party. It was an anti-Congress(I) mandate all the way: not only did the Janata Dal win 198 of the state's 422 seats where elections were held, the V.P. Singh wave consumed all but one of Tiwari's cabinet ministers. At the end the final Congress(I) tally of 89 seats had reduced it to insignificance and relegated it to a position it had not known for a long time—on the opposition benches.

There were sound explanations for the party's rout in the state in the Lok Sabha elections: Rajiv Gandhi's downslide, the Hindu backlash, Muslim insecurity, corruption charges, and most crucially, the Opposition's seat adjustments. But the crushing defeat in the assembly polls—where the ruling party faced triangular or even quadrangular contests in as many as 355 seats—indicated that virtually all castes and communities in the state had deserted the Congress(I).

Along with the Congress(I)'s morale, the people's clear mandate shattered many beliefs. Principal among these, was that Tiwari was an astute politician, well equipped to steer the nation's most complex state—and perhaps even the nation. This, because Tiwari made all the wrong moves. He, in fact, probably hastened his Waterloo by insisting that assembly polls be held along with the Lok Sabha elections. The rationale behind the move seemed sound at the time it was made: to rent the opposition camp by creating confusion. Unfortunately, the reasoning which looked good on paper did not work. What happened, instead, was that he lost twice over in a state that was home to the Congress(I)'s top leadership.

Unfortunately for Tiwari, Uttar Pradesh was also home to the Janata Dal's top leadership. And in what was expected to be a fight among equals, V.P. Singh clearly dwarfed Tiwari. The Raja—and other Janata Dal notables—criss-crossed the state, putting heart and soul into the campaign. To Tiwari's credit, he carried out the campaign with aplomb even if he could not see the writing on the wall. He had the state Government's French-made Dauphin helicopter leased to his party and used it to reach the remotest corners of the state. Obviously, the political headwind he ran into, proved too much to cope with.

BHAWAN SINGH

Sustained campaigning by V.P. Singh turned the pro-opposition mood into an anti-Congress(I) tidal wave.

But because of the many triangular contests, the Janata Dal was not able to get a comfortable majority.

The Tally

Congress(I)	92
Janata Dal	203
BJP	57

Besides, the Opposition had the advantage of not being dependent on one leader. It had several effective campaigners, influential in different regions of the state, particularly in the western grain bowl where Ajit Singh and the Janata Dal state unit president Mulayam Singh Yadav—the front runner for the chief ministership—came up with a winning campaign. Mulayam Singh Yadav not only defeated his Congress(I) rival comfortably in Jaswantnagar in Etawah, but virtually wiped out the party from the district. Said he after the victory: "The Congress(I)'s defeat shows that people have taken the right decision."

The clearest message was this: Uttar Pradesh's electorate was voting against misrule, vacillation and confusion, blamed primarily on the Centre, but also on the state leadership. In one of the nation's poorest states, the common man had stood up to be counted. He would not tolerate a government that not only failed to deliver, but also fudged on principles. And he would do so without displaying any confusion or a half-hearted approach even if the opposition parties confused the scenario by fielding candidates against each other.

One look at the figures make it clear that this time, multi-cornered fights did not distract the voters from giving a firm verdict against the Congress(I). In most places, people overwhelmingly favoured the Janata Dal, and to a smaller extent the BJP—which won 56 seats—to the Congress(I) candidates. Even in most of the 22 seats where there was a direct clash between the Janata Dal and the BJP, the Congress(I) was trailing in the third position. While the combined haul of the Janata Dal and the BJP touched the 250 mark, the Congress(I) was hard put to cross the nineties its worst ever performance, but for 1977 when it got a mere 47 seats.

The Congress(I) had only itself to blame for the BJP's strong showing. If the party's vote bank had gone up from around 10 per cent in 1984 to 18 per cent this time, it was thanks to the Hindu backlash over the Ayodhya controversy—a problem that the Government itself had created—which subsequently led to fierce communal bloodletting in the state. To a certain extent, the BJP piggy-backed on the shoulders of the Vishwa Hindu Parishad (VHP) which succeeded in whipping up considerable Hindu hysteria over the Ramshila pujas and the laying of the foundation-stone of the proposed Ram temple in Ayodhya. The BJP's haul had a clear tinge of saffron.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

That disaster came from all sides for the ruling party was evident from the desertion of the Muslims—who had till now proved faithful supporters. Outraged and humiliated over Ayodhya—the very issue that angered Hindus of all castes—the Muslim vote was scattered among all the opposition parties barring the BJP. Most backed the Janata Dal, but many plumped for candidates of the Bahujan Samaj Party (BSP) which bagged an unexpected 13 seats. In stray instances, the Muslims voted for the communist parties, who got a combined tally of 7 seats.

THE results from the Rohelkhand region, which has a huge Muslim population of about 31 per cent and accounts for 50 assembly seats, illustrate the Muslims' disillusionment with the Congress(I). The party retained only eight of the 35 seats it won from here in 1985. Also notable was the apathy of the Muslims in the state—who did not prove an enthusiastic voting section as before. Another pointer to their loss of heart.

And to compound the loss of the Muslim vote bank, two other traditional vote banks also turned away from the Congress(I). While Brahmins backed the BJP, Kanshi Ram's BSP made huge inroads in Harijan-dominated areas throughout the state. Together, all these factors exacted their toll of the Congress(I). In fact, it was only in the hill region that the Congress(I) could stand its ground. And that was due to the

PRASHANT PANJIAR

Tiwari's decision to simultaneously hold assembly and Lok Sabha elections has put a question mark on his own political career.

Mulayam Singh Yadav was the front-runner for chief ministership, but the battle proved messy.

BHAWAN SINGH

personal influence of Tiwari himself. In his own constituency, Haldwani, where he did not campaign at all, he won with a huge margin of 37,000 votes.

While Tiwari's victory was predictable, somewhat unexpected was the emergence of the BSP which finds representation in both the Lok Sabha and Vidhan Sabha from Uttar Pradesh for the first time. The fact that BSP candidates—who contested 375 seats undercutting both the Congress(I) and in some instances the Janata Dal's support—polled around 16 per cent of the votes, indicates that the party had arrived. Kanshi Ram had clearly succeeded in polarising the crucial Harijan votes. In fact, the BSP's coming of age was one of the most interesting aspects of the assembly results.

Though the party did eat into the Congress(I) vote bank, by and large, the ruling party dug its own grave. The renomination of most sitting MLAs except for those considered to have been close to Tiwari's predecessor, the late Bir Bahadur Singh, caused widespread resentment among many partymen. The party also made a massive blunder in not giving adequate representation to the Youth Congress(I). "They alienated the youth just when their votes had increased substantially because of the lowering of the voting age," said a senior Youth Congress(I) leader. As the INDIA TODAY-MARG exit poll has shown, the youth were clearly inclined to vote in favour of the Opposition.

These tactical errors combined with the communal mess-up and a shrill opposition campaign about corruption at the Centre to spell unqualified disaster for the ruling party. Only one of Tiwari's cabinet ministers—Arun Kumar Singh—managed to return to the

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Don Juan

PREMIUM COLLECTION

BECAUSE LIFE IS AN ENDLESS ROMANCE.

Location: Lake Palace Udaipur

DISTINCT. AS YOU ARE.

GRAVIERA GR SUITING

AKSHARA/GR-317

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Vidhan Sabha besides four ministers of state, Awatar Dixit, Surendra Singh Chauhan, Gulab Singh and Moid Ahmed. The rest in the 50-member ministry were handed out crushing defeats.

The Congress(I)'s only consolation was its candidates' victory in all the five assembly segments of the Amethi Lok Sabha constituency. This included the defeat of Janata Dal leader Sanjay Singh by more than 34,000 votes in Amethi segment. That Sanjay Singh lost by such a large margin despite the attack on him and resultant sympathy must have surprised even many persons in the Congress(I) camp (see box).

Tiwari, on his part, admitted gracefully: "It was the people's verdict against the ruling party. I thank the people for participating in this poll and I assure them that we respect their verdict." Tiwari who would always begin his election speeches by saying: "Loktantra ka tyohar, jamhooriat ka mela" (a celebration of democracy), has obviously learnt a few new lessons about the power of the people.

One of these is that a man who cannot hold his own at Lucknow certainly cannot rule the roost at New Delhi. The reverberations from the electorally crucial state have always been felt in the nation's capital. Even the state's new victors—the Janata Dal-BJP coalition—have a lesson to learn from the Congress(I)'s rout. If they create chaos in Lucknow, the resultant cacophony will be heard not only throughout the length and breadth of Uttar Pradesh, but will resonate in New Delhi as well.

—DILIP AWASTHI

Being the land of Ayodhya, the Janata Dal-BJP relationship will be put to the severest test in Uttar Pradesh.

PRASHANT PANJIAR

V.P. Singh visiting Sanjay Singh in hospital

AMETHI & FATEHPUR

Violent Ways

THE widespread nature of electoral violence this time came into stark focus with even Rajiv Gandhi's and V.P. Singh's constituencies being affected by the poll malaise. There was tremendous public outrage at the near-fatal assault on Janata Dal leader Sanjay Singh near Amethi. Sanjay Singh reportedly became a victim of an inter-group altercation. This is ironical since Sanjay Singh had been known as Rajiv's and the Congress(I)'s manager of polling day dirty tricks.

However, there are widespread allegations that the Janata Dal leader fell into a trap laid by the Congress(I). In fact, when Rajiv went to Lucknow but refrained from visiting Singh at the hospital, it was obvious he feared his presence might provoke the crowd.

On the day of the incident, November 22, Sanjay Singh was in the Ram Nagar court—his ancestral palace near Amethi town. Some of his workers, supervising the polling came in to inform him that some Congressmen accompanied by criminals were terrorising voters in the countryside.

With his supporters in cars, jeeps and motorcycles, he rushed towards Bhusiyanwan. But within 5 km, a jeep emerged from a side road with Congress(I) supporters shouting abusive slogans at Sanjay Singh. His supporters—led by him—immediately gheraoed the jeep, and attacked it. Soon, another car parked itself on the opposite side, and five or six jeeps appeared on the side road. About 20 armed men took up positions. Indiscriminate shooting began and when it stopped 20 minutes later Sanjay Singh had been shot.

V.P. Singh, visiting Dugrai village in Fatehpur, to check on reports of booth-capturing, also faced poll violence. Even as he began speaking to the presiding officer, three men fired from a temple about 150 yards away in full view of newsmen and photographers. Three shots were fired before Singh's police escorts took up positions and the men fled. A shocked Singh said: "Have they gone out of their mind?"

The ninth general elections, which have claimed one hundred lives, have seen a graduation of poll violence in extent and territory—raising serious questions about the nature of the electoral process.

—DILIP AWASTHI

The firing on Sanjay Singh and V.P. Singh highlighted the dangerous level to which the gun dominated the campaign.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ANDHRA PRADESH

Dramatic Drubbing

Voters' reject Rama Rao's eccentric politics and incompetence

PRASHANT PANJIAR

"Lord Krishna said do your duty and don't worry about the results."
N.T. RAMA RAO

"People are the masters. They can say anything they choose to anyone."
M. CHENNA REDDY

Rama Rao's whimsical ways wrote the script for the disaster reflected in the final tally.

The Tally

Congress(I)	180
Telugu Desam	74
BJP	5

D. RAVINDER REDDY

WHEN history last fortnight replayed a decade-old drama in Andhra Pradesh, it was not just the protagonist who was the same. Even the number of seats that the Congress(I) won in the repeat show was almost stunningly similar.

In 1978, Chenna Reddy had led the party to a 175-seat victory. In November, the 71-year maverick APCC(I) president who has done a few political cartwheels in his chequered career, once again overran a triumphant wave to overthrow the Chaitanya Ratham and its saffron-clad occupant, to win a comfortable majority of 180 seats for the Congress(I). Chenna Reddy, who was elected the new chief minister, said: "People are the masters. They can say anything." Chenna Reddy knows only too well the power of the people. From the time he was a minister in the B. Ramakrishna Rao ministry of Hyderabad state as a 33-year-old to his comeback as chief minister, Chenna Reddy has been through the troughs and waves of political life. In between long periods in political cold storage, he has founded two short-lived political parties—the Social Democratic Party and more recently the National Democratic party. He was one of the leaders of the Telengana agitation in 1969-70 and governor of Uttar Pradesh and Punjab. He came home to the Congress(I) last year following the call by former general secretary G.K. Moopanar to old Congressmen to rejoin the parent party.

If Chenna Reddy's return to power was dramatic, the fall of N.T. Rama Rao was surprising—the Telugu Desam won only 74 seats compared to its 202 seats and the Congress(I)'s 50 in the 1985 poll—and had all the trappings of a classical Greek tragedy. Especially considering the dizzy heights he sat on as the nation was poised on the threshold of the general elections. As chairman of the National Front he had hoped to play the king-maker in Delhi after the elections, but what the country saw was a shattered Rama Rao handing in his resignation letter to Governor Kumudben Joshi. "Lord Krishna said do your duty and don't worry about the consequences. I have served the people and respect their verdict," Rama Rao said, tears welling in his eyes.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

For once, the man who had played Lord Krishna on screen seemed alienated from the people and as unreal as the cut-outs of his divine cinema roles that appeared on street corners. Though he went on a 16-day campaign through the state in his Chaitanya Ratham and by helicopter he failed to find out why the crowds had thinned. Instead he laid faith on the film clips and videos to give him the aura that reality didn't.

REALITY had in fact been gnawing at Rama Rao for some time now. His whimsical ways including the sacking of his own cabinet in February 1989, the rise of his sons-in-law Chandrababu Naidu and Dr Venkateshwara Rao, a pro-Kamma bias in important appointments and forgotten promises like the 30 per cent reservation for women had created an aversion for him that he failed to see. No wonder, he was lost in the glitzy studio sets of his ambitious opus Brahmarishi Viswamitra, meditating as Menaka danced seductively in front of him. The people, however, danced to a different tune this time. Said Telugu Desam politburo member Minte Padmanabham: "Earlier victories had made us complacent and this turned to the advantage of the Congress(I)."

According to the Janata Dal general secretary and outstanding parliamentarian S. Jaipal Reddy who lost the Mahabubnagar Lok Sabha seat to a marginally active M. Mallikarjun of the Congress(I), Rama Rao made a mistake by calling for simultaneous assembly elections. "Local issues and regional issues are more important for the electors and with the simultaneous assembly poll the national issues were forgotten," argued Reddy. The state Janata Dal president P. Babul Reddy, the state BJP president M. Venaiah Naidu and 21 former MPs of the Telugu Desam and other parties fell by the wayside. And in the assembly elections at least 14 of the 23 ministers were defeated.

The ad hoc planning and lackadaiscal approach in the choice of candidates also affected the party's prospects. The decision by Rama Rao to file his papers for Kalwakurthy, for instance, was made at the Secunderabad railway station when he was about to board a train to Hindupur from where he was elected in 1985. Partymen from Mahabubnagar suggested Rama Rao should represent Kalwakurthy in the backward district and he readily agreed. But Rama Rao had not visited the area during his tenure as chief minister. "He took the voters for granted," said the sitting Congress(I) MLA, J. Chittaranjan Das who defeated him. It was only after he was told the prime minister was visiting the constituency that Rama Rao decided to campaign there for about three hours on the last day of electioneering.

> "Earlier victories had made us complacent; this helped the Congress(I)."
> PADMANABHAM
> TDP Politburo member

> "Local issues are more important for the voters and with the simultaneous poll, national issues were forgotten."
> S. JAIPAL REDDY
> Janata Dal General Secretary

> The turning point in the Congress(I) campaign was the separate manifesto for the state which promised anti-poverty programmes.

Chenna Reddy had on the other hand taken nothing for granted. He had activated all the units of his party by launching agitations and convinced other leaders of the party to stay together. The turning point in the Congress(I) campaign was the deft move by Chenna Reddy to come out with a separate nine-page manifesto for the state, typed overnight, to counter the Telugu Desam manifesto which promised to set up a land army to tackle unemployment. The Congress(I) promises: continuance of the anti-poverty programmes and the Telugu Desam scheme of providing rice at Rs 2 a kilo, the revival of the legislative council abolished by Rama Rao and to scrap the entry tax.

In one stroke Reddy managed to make disgruntled party workers close ranks, gain the goodwill of traders and reassured the rural poor. Said APCC(I) Vice-President K. Rosaiah: "This helped the party to win the total support of sections which were angry with Rama Rao." Added ex-chief minister and the new party MP from Kurnool K. Vijayabhaskara Reddy: "For the first time Marwaris and other traders invited us and assured their support."

The Congress(I) did exceedingly well everywhere except in north coastal Andhra Pradesh from where the Telugu Desam got 21 of the 37 Assembly seats and retained the Bobbili Lok Sabha. The only other area in which the Telugu Desam did well was West Godavari district where the party bagged half the assembly seats and retained the Narasapur Lok Sabha seat. The Congress(I) fielded a Madras-based film producer Nachu Seshagiri Rao, banking on the predominant Kapu community to vote for one among them. Said the Telugu Desam's Vijaya Kumar Raju who was re-elected from Narsapur: "The caste card may work against a candidate who does not know or work for his constituency."

Though Rama Rao cleared the dues of government employees and the arrears of college teachers soon after elections were announced, very few of them were inclined to support the Telugu Desam. Admitted BJP's Venkaiah Naidu who lost the race for the Bapatla Lok Sabha seat: "The Telugu Desam and its friendly parties banked heavily on the rural voters who have benefited by the Government's programme to provide food and shelter."

Perhaps the only section to support the Telugu Desam was the backward classes for whom Rama Rao extended reservations in the state till 2000 A.D. even before the elections were announced. The representation for backward classes is the vexatious question nagging Chenna Reddy. Those in the Congress(I) have accused him of ignoring the backward classes in appointing district Congress(I) Committees and in the choice of candidates for the election. The party will have to give them more seats if the legislative council is revived. This will be electorally crucial.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

A particularly thorny problem Chenna Reddy faces is keeping the quarrelsome district level leaders of the Congress(I) together even though many of them will be accommodated in the promised Legislative Council and in the boardrooms of the state-owned corporations.

Unlike Rama Rao, Chenna Reddy will enjoy the support of bureaucrats in spite of his well-known ill-temper in these circles. Said one civil servant: "Dealing with him is easier—he knows the ropes of administration and has the perception to take his own decisions." Many of them gathered in groups in their houses in the posh Banjara Hills in Hyderabad on the night the results were out to toast to the Telugu Desam's defeat. Said a senior bureaucrat: "Happy days are here again. The early morning summons at Rama Rao's residence forced us to cut short our evenings." Given his experience, Chenna Reddy will be able to tone up the administration and get the best of government employees.

Unlike Rama Rao, Chenna Reddy will enjoy the support of bureaucrats though he is known for his outbursts.

For Rama Rao it will not be easy to continue as an unquestioned leader of a party out of power. Supporters of the two groups led by his sons-in-law Chandrababu Naidu and Venkateshwara Rao are already trading charges blaming each other for their party's defeat. What is apparent to impartial party insiders is Rama Rao's heavy reliance on them for advise. As one of them put it: "If Rama Rao does not change his style and become a democrat, the party itself will be wiped out before the next elections." If that is not to happen Rama Rao has to learn many lessons from the rout of 1989.

Shorn of that aura of invincibility and devoid of the trappings of power, Rama Rao has enough time to meditate on how he got alienated. Now at least there will not be the dancing Menakas and the cronies from his cabal to distract him and filter reality. And with his penchant for the incredible, he might then think up yet another political revolution.

—AMARNATH K. MENON

SIKKIM

Ruling the Hustings

THE Sikkim Chief Minister Nar Bahadur Bhandari lived up to his every boast—"I will get 33 out of the 32 seats"—as he led his Sikkim Sangram Parishad (SSP) to a resounding victory. His party won all the 32 assembly seats, and also wrested the lone parliamentary seat from his estranged wife, Dil Kumari. The performance is a personal victory for the charismatic leader, smothering criticism that Bhandari has foisted a "corrupt and autocratic" rule on the state.

In fact, from the beginning of the campaign the SSP seemed confident. Santosh Kumar Rai, SSP publicity chief, says: "The year-old Rising Sun Party (RSP) and Congress(I) were no match for the SSP." But, with the elections being fought on purely ethnic and racial issues the going was certainly far from easy. The RSP and some other groups were raising new demands: citizenship rights for stateless people, reservation of assembly seats for the Nepalese and inclusion of the Nepali language in the eighth schedule of the Constitution.

The clear verdict is a personal victory for Bhandari, smothering charges of corruption.

Shrewdly realising the public mood, Bhandari used his enormous state and money power to convince the people that he represented both "continuity and change". Meanwhile, the formidable RSP leader, Ram Chandra Poudyal, declared: "The time has come for Bhandari to go." Bhandari countered: "The people are on one side and these two parties are on the other."

In the event the results proved even more dramatic than the campaign. And the opponents are now accusing the SSP of rigging the polls. Both Dil Kumari and Poudyal of the RSP claimed "massive rigging" had led to the massive mandate. Whatever the truth behind these allegations, what seems clear is that a huge sympathy vote in favour of Bhandari has created quite a peculiar situation—an assembly without any opposition. Bhandari's magical ability to rule the Sikkim hustings seems unmatchable.

—FARZAND AHMED

SAIBAL DAS

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

La Creme de La Creme

Principal G.D. Agrawal with some of our I.I.T. JEE, 1989, top-rankers at the 35th Annual Prize Distribution Function.

Agrawal Classes

Congratulates its top-rankers at the I.I.T. JEE, 1989.

What you see in this picture is the pick of our 1988-89 batch. With our expert coaching they rose to the top at the JEE 1989, securing 16 out of the first 17 positions, including the All India First Rank. One more feather in our caps. One more proud step in our pursuit of excellence. (All India Ranks shown below.)

Sitting (Left to Right)
Sameet H Agrawal	4th	Vineet Buch	1st	Ashish Kr Banerji	2nd	K Shivkumar	3rd
Mandar Mitra	6th	G D Agrawal (Principal)		P G Agrawal (Director)		Kaustubh S Agashe	5th
		Charu Aggarwal	9th	T Vikram	10th
Standing (1st Row)
Sanjeev Khirwar	15th	Rosen Sharma	11th	Manoj P Samanta	13th	Sudhanshu Aggarwal	14th
P Naga Vamsi	22nd	Jayanth Majhi	16th	Jignesh R Jain	17th	P N Subramanya Rao	20th
Vijay Kumar	27th	R Anand	23rd	M S Sriram	24th	S Murali Dhar	26th
Standing (2nd Row)
Rahul Singh	38th	Samir Agrawal	28th	Niten Malhan	36th	V N Padmanabhan	37th
Chander Kant	47th	Sanjeev Kumar	39th	Supratik Chakraborty	45th	Atul Gupta	46th
Rajiv Pratap	58th	Rohit M Lotlikar	48th	V Sivakumar	51st	Naveen Ashish	53rd
Standing (3rd Row)
Hari Balakrishnan	68th	Vishal Gaur	60th	Purushottam S Prabhu	63rd	Prateek Sarkar	67th
Dakshi Agrawal	75th	Amit Narayan	69th	Ashwin J Rao	73rd	R Prakash Iyer	74th
Manoj Sehgal	80th	Gaurav Suri	77th	Sandeep S Kulkarni	78th	Gaurav Gupta	79th
Standing (Top Row)
Sachin U Naik	86th	Sandeep Chhabra	81st	Chandra Prakash	82nd	Nischal Sheth	84th
V Kasturi Rangan	95th	Vishal Mishra	88th	B Girish	91st	Nitin Sharma	92nd
		Puneet Sharma	96th	Srihari Cadambi	99th
Absentees
Archan Misra	30th	B Sreekanth	8th	Kunal Kishore	12th	V S Anil Kumar	21st
Sudiplo Ghosh	54th	Avnish Kr Rastogi	31st	D Harish	34th	Amit Goyal	35th
Sandeep Gupta	66th	Jeetendra S Dublish	55th	K Vijaya Chander	62nd	V Vivekananda	64th
		Rajesh Bhatt	76th	Ravi Shekhar	90th	A Veena	93rd

Top-ranking students almost always come from Agrawal Classes!

Agrawal Classes

Wallace Apts. 3, N. Bharucha Marg, Bombay 400 007.

For admission in our I.I.T. JEE 1991 and the CBSE's All-India PM/PD Entrance Examination 1991 courses, contact us in December 1989, along with a xerox copy of your Std. X marksheet. Courses start in April 1990.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

There's someone who can protect your insects, germs and bacteria.

Issued in the public interest by ITMA Indian Tinplate Manufacturers' Association, 721, Indra Prakash, Barakham

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ect your child from

Does he still belong to your family?

Remember the tin can ?

The one that protected your child's food from impurities and staleness ? The one that safeguarded his cooking oil ?

Or the one that kept his vegetables fresh and nutritious ? If you don't see the tin can around your home anymore then maybe you should read this ad very carefully. For your family's sake.

Because tinplate has the power to prevent air, light and moisture from ageing your food. The power to keep food pure, fresh and nutritious.

The power to form an impregnable barrier between germs, bacteria, insects, rats and the food you eat. The power to be stable across and not react to an almost infinite variety of foodstuffs.

The power of tinplate.

Would you trust your family's food to anything less ?

Trust in food
when it's packed in tin

ra Prakash
Barakhamba Road, New Delhi 110001

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

When LCV owners demand high-stability load carrying capacity they trust India's No. 1 tyre manufacturer...

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

And you thought Modi Continental only makes India's best truck tyres?

You could hardly help thinking that.

After all Modi Continental's N416 and RL8 truck tyres have led the way on India's challenging highways for the last 14 years – and have set standards others are still trying to match.

And the same proven technology – backed by the world renowned tyre manufacturer, Continental Aktiengesellschaft, West Germany – has gone into making Modi Continental No. 1 in LCV tyres too.

What makes the RL8M and R414 the trusted choice?

RL8M – Semi-lug pattern

- Rib-cum-lug pattern for a wider contact area
- Extra depth for longer life
- Special tread compound for durability
- Thick under-tread to guard against impact.

R414 – Highway pattern

- Zigzag pattern with sipes for better traction and braking
- Sturdy casing for longer life
- Reinforced shoulder design for effective shoulder response.

Plus! A nationwide network of 40 centres to ensure prompt after sales service.

Modi Continental LCV tyres. Excellence only India's No. 1 tyre manufacturer can offer.

LCV TYRES

No. 1 in tyres – technology, sales, exports

MODI RUBBER LIMITED

Modi Continental

CONTINENTAL

The tyre that never tires

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

FROM PARIS TO ROME VIA MONTE CARLO

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Monte Carlo

COLLECTION

DESIGNER KNITWEAR
CREATED EXCLUSIVELY FOR

COUNTRY CASUA

EVENING ELEGAN

SPORTING LIFE

CAMPUS LOOK

Woolmark

Pure new wool

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The Phantom is alive and well. Not in the eerie skull cave in Denkali. But in the picturesque hill station of Udhagamandalam. In a sophisticated test lab. At Hindustan Photo Films.

The Phantom, as it's fondly called, is an artificial skeleton that can emulate the bone and skin tissue functions of a human being. HPF's INDU CTA and Polyester X-ray Films undergo various tests, at all stages, on the Phantom. Just to make sure that all's well when it reaches you.

Tests like this make HPF click. Because today's technology may become obsolete by sundown. That's the impetus to research. The need to develop the photofilm technology of tomorrow.

A Rs.300 lakh investment, HPF's R&D facility is manned by a dedicated team of 150 scientists. Fruits of their labour include state-of-the-art film for India's space programme. Very soon, HPF will also commence production of laser recording film, instrumentation film with extended sensibility, duplicating film of high contrast and resolution, and photo typesetting film.

Just a few samples of homegrown technology, from the Company that believes tomorrow may be too late.

INDU

HINDUSTAN PHOTO FILMS

PHOTO
CINE
X-RAY GRAPHIC ARTS
INDUSTRIAL X-RAY
CHEMICALS
MAGNETIC TAPE
INSTANT PHOTOGRAPHY

मेरा भारत महान

F U T U R E I N F O C U S

Hindustan Photo Films Mfg. Co. Ltd. (A Govt. of India Enterprise)
Registered Office: Indunagar, Udhagamandalam 643 005.
Marketing Headquarters: Bali Towers, 1 Abdul Razak Street, Saidapet, Madras 600 015.

R K SWAMY/HPF/7375

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

KARNATAKA

Ruthless Retribution

Janata pays for a shoddy record as Congress(I) storms back to power

AN electoral tornado ripped through the Janata Dal in Karnataka last week—uprooting the party which had ruled the state for six years. As dazed partymen picked themselves up amid the debris of the wreckage, the poll toll read: Congress(I)—177 seats; Janata Dal—24 seats; BJP—4 seats; and Janata Party—2 seats.

It was a gale that no one had seen coming—least of all Congressmen in the state. Bumbling into the hustings under a beleaguered high command and an anarchic state unit, even the most optimistic Congressmen had at best hoped to put up a decent show to offset the ruinous losses in the northern Hindi belt.

In fact, even as late as on the morning the results were declared, former chief minister R. Gundu Rao predicted a haul of only around 120 seats for the Congress(I) in the 224-member Assembly. But what they finally reaped simply astounded them—a four-fifths majority and a complete decimation of the Janata Dal in the state. Crowed state PCC(I) chief Veerendra Patil: "The people of Karnataka have again shown that the Congress(I) is the only party they trust." Patil, the seniormost Congressman in the state was sworn in as chief minister soon after.

The unexpected disaster in Karnataka held several lessons for the party. The Congress(I) had been swept back to power in the state not due to a positive vote in its favour, but due to a harsh negative vote against the Janata Dal. The reasons: unfulfilled promises and infighting. Said Ramakrishna Hegde, a former Janata chief minister: "Once again we paid for our complacency."

And heavily. The anti-Janata Dal wave was ruthless in its sweep, brushing aside a galaxy of state leaders, barring Hegde and a few of his faithfuls like ministers Jeevaraj Alva, R.L. Jalappa and R.V. Deshpande. Among the victims to fall under the Congress(I) tornado were former chief minister S.R. Bommai, senior minister J.H. Patel and a score of former ministers. In fact, with just 10 per cent of the seats. The Janata Dal has barely managed to be recognised as an opposition party in the House.

That the electorate was in a punishing mood was clear from the fact that the Congress(I) candidates won by big margins in many constituencies irrespective of caste and communal factors and the division in opposition votes. The verdict was against the Janata Dal government's non-performance, particularly during its last two years in power when dissidence led to a drift in the administration. Said victorious Congress(I) leader Veerappa Moily: "They just could not deliver the goods." A remorseful Bommai agreed: "The infighting disrupted the functioning of the Government." After-the-event analysts recalled that the dismissal of the Janata Dal ministry by the governor early this year had hardly evoked any sympathy among the people. And if they were reticent at that time, they had spoken their opinion now through the medium of the ballot box.

Still, the people's anger against the Janata Dal was not the only reason for the party's miserable showing. The rout may not have taken place had the Janata Dal managed to stitch together an alliance with other opposition groups. It could not. While the breakaway Janata Party of Deve Gowda and the Rajya Raitha Sangha were inimical to any understanding, the Dal leadership failed to even carry along friendly parties like the BJP and the CPI. The beneficiary was clearly the Congress(I). It won upwards of 60 seats due to the division in opposition votes.

Such was the electorate's revulsion to-Karnataka is once again the bastion of the Congress(I).

VEERENDRA PATIL

The Congress(I) astounded with a four-fifths majority and a complete decimation of the Janata Dal.

The Tally

Congress(I)	177
Janata Dal	24
BJP	4

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

wards the squabbling Janata Dal that it even forgave and resurrected dozens of Congress(I) politicians thought to have been consigned to the dustbin of electoral history for their past misdemeanours. Among them were former ministers Renuka Rajendra, A.B Jakanur, Chandraprabha Urs and Nagamma Keshavamurthy.

The electorate virtually obliterated the rump Janata Party of Deve Gowda, rewarding the projected third force with a pathetic two seats. Gowda himself hurtled to defeat in the two constituencies he contested while dozens of his factotums, who ran mysteriously expensive campaigns, bit the dust.

Still, if the Vokkaliga strongman's own electoral ambitions were destroyed, he could draw ample consolation from one fact. He had succeeded in sabotaging the Janata Dal's chances in more than 50 constituencies. And his party's haul of two seats may not be an entirely accurate reflection of his party's influence. To his credit, Gowda's candidates came in second to the winning candidate in nearly a score of constituencies. Still, for a leader who nurtured chief ministerial ambitions it was hardly a noteworthy performance. Nevertheless, at the end of the self-defeating exercise, Gowda was unrepentant, exhorting his party- men to re-establish themselves, and insisting that on the state's electoral scenario, the Janata Party had a place.

While Gowda emasculated the Opposition in the state by contesting over 200 seats, the BJP contributed by putting up candidates for over 120 seats, ending up winning only four. The Rajya Raitha Sangha did not lag far behind, scratching together just two seats while affecting opposition chances in a dozen. Said a rueful Jeevaraj Alva: "We gave it to the Congress(I) on a platter."

For the state Congress (I), which has been in the political wilderness since 1983, the landslide victory came as an elixir. The party, which was beset by infighting and mutual recrimination till yesterday, sprang to life overnight. S. Bangarappa, who had walked out of the Gundu Rao cabinet in 1982 signalling the downfall of the Congress(I) in Karnataka, was among the first to rush to Rao's house and give him a bear hug.

> Once again we in the Janata Dal have paid for our complacency.
>
> RAMAKRISHNA HEGDE

BHAWAN SINGH

RAMAKRISHNA HEGDE

The Fallen Mighty

"OH, what a fall!" That could easily be Ramakrishna Hegde's current bio-graphical sub-title. The suave opposition leader's political career graph hit an all-time low as the Janata Dal was annihilated at the hustings in Karnataka. Having sought the title of campaign commander before the elections, Hegde now takes the rap for the party's disastrous performance in the state.

The immediate fall-out of the rout is the question mark it puts on Hegde's place in the opposition hierarchy. By opting to lead his party in the state elections and contest for the Assembly, the Janata Dal vice-president had taken a calculated risk. The effort was to refurbish his scandal-scarred image and reinforce his stature as a leader of substance. But the electoral rebuff has certainly sent his political stock plummeting.

Yet, things did not look so bad for Hegde when he was on the campaign trail. In fact, they looked quite encouraging. In north Karnataka he often pointed to the big crowds that waited for him till the wee hours of the morning and exclaimed: "See, I am not a paratrooper politician, the kind that Devi Lal despises. I have a base of my own."

> The verdict was against the Janata Dal's non-performance, particularly during its last two years in power.

But retaining his base was not easy. He defeated his nearest Congress(I) rival, Harnali Ramaswamy, from the Basavangudi seat in Bangalore by a narrow margin of 8,400 votes.

The rest of the party's results too were not commensurate with the large crowds it had drawn. Political observers were stunned as the Congress(I) swept the assembly polls. Said a dejected Hegde: "The mysteries of the ballot boxes are difficult to unravel."

And as the news of the rout trickled in, downcast, he retired to play with his granddaughters. But later, in a moment of self-reproach he told INDIA TODAY: "Perhaps, I should call it a day."

Yet, two days later, Hegde was flying off to Delhi to congratulate his victorious colleagues from the north—perhaps the first indication that he would soon strive to rise again.

—CHIDANAND RAJGHATTA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

INTAC

The power of a new generation

INTAC engines offer the same durability which has made Caterpillar the most trusted name in oil field applications around the world.

The latest design ensures high strength engine blocks and crankshafts, large bearing areas and power ratings that contribute to long service life.

INTAC

DIESEL AND GAS ENGINES YOUR ASSURANCE OF CATERPILLAR ECONOMY, DEPENDABILITY AND DURABILITY

INTAC engines represent the last word in diesel engine technology. Continuing research by Caterpillar has led to the development of better fuel injection and combustion techniques, lowered emissions and improved fuel economy. The use of tough and durable construction materials increases engine life, reduces wear and tear and facilitates engine rebuilds again and again after extended use.

The INTAC range of diesel engines – from 144 kW (180 KVA) and up – will match your needs ranging from gensets to workhorse applications in the petroleum, marine, earth moving and locomotive industries.

CAT PLUS – A worldwide commitment to product support. Extending the Caterpillar tradition of excellence in product support, Hindustan Powerplus dealers will ensure that service support adds value to every INTAC engine.

INTAC engines and gensets powered by INTAC engines are now available through our dealer in your area.

For more details, please fill in the coupon and mail it to us.

GMM CO GENERAL MARKETING AND MANUFACTURING COMPANY LIMITED

Anil Pewekar
Divisional Manager (Engines)
Maker Bhavan No. 2, 2nd Floor,
New Marine Lines, BOMBAY-400 020.
Tel: 257411, 253921 Tlx. No: 011-5738/2315

TIL Limited

Ranabir Chaudhury
Engine Sales Manager
1, Taratolla Road, Garden Reach,
Calcutta-700 024.
Tel: 455771/5, 454962, 451861
Tlx. No: 021-8072/8101

Name: _____
Designation: _____
Company: _____
Nature of Industry: _____
Address: _____
_____
_____
Pin Code: _____
Tel: _____ Tlx: _____
(a) Please send me a detailed brochure.
(b) I would like your representative to call on me.
(c) Indicate your KVA requirement: 180, 225, 275, 320, 500, 590, 856 KVA.

DEPENDABLE POWER FROM INTAC

Caterpillar, CAT and ⬚ are Trademarks of Caterpillar Inc., U.S.A.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SPECIALLY CREATED FOR PEOPLE WHO WORK HARDER

Your whole day is a race against time. Deadlines. Meetings. Work pressure.

No wonder you feel drained by the time you get home.

The natural way to cope with today's hectic pace.

Just a spoonful of Chyawanshakti taken twice a day goes a long way. Right through the day, in fact. To keep you fit and active. Its natural ingredients have been proven by Ayurveda to result in all round fitness.

Amla, the major ingredient in Chyawanshakti, is the richest known source of Vitamin C. This not only prevents coughs and colds but also revitalises your body tissues.

Its action is fortified by Ashwagandha which helps you combat mental and physical stress. Saffron – which acts as a stimulant to keep you active throughout the day. Draksha – which prevents gastrointestinal troubles. And Akarkara – which keeps your nervous system toned up.

All this goodness is enhanced with rich, natural honey which also acts as an excellent nutritious diet supplement.

So that you stay fighting fit – day after day after day.

CHYAWANSHAKTI

FROM THE MAKERS OF DABUR CHYAWANPRASH

DABUR INDIA LIMITED
HARSHA BHAWAN
'E' BLOCK,
CONNAUGHT PLACE
NEW DELHI-110 001.

ENRICHED WITH DRAKSHA, HONEY AND SAFFRON

overest/d89/0/U228

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

MAHESH BHATT

Gundu Rao himself, resplendent in a red silk shawl, swaggered into the centralised results hall. This was his hour of glory: dozens of his supporters, including at least 20 for whom he had secured tickets at the last moment, had swept to victory. Other Congress(I) leaders were more restrained, but overjoyed nevertheless. With the party routed in the north, Congressmen here seemed to realise that they would be accorded special treatment by the party high command, after having been treated as poor cousins during the last six years. Gushed a jubilant Patil: "Karnataka is again the bastion of the Congress(I)."

That it is. Along with the other four southern states. For the Janata Dal in Karnataka, it is back to the opposition benches after six heady years in power. Being out of power should give the party adequate time for some introspection.

But the Congress(I)'s assumption of power was not without hiccups. Almost the entire state Congress(I) resisted the choice of Patil as chief minister. But with some deft manoeuvring and diplomacy, Patil rallied the support of a majority of 177 MLAs to present the high command with a fait accompli.

The people could demolish the Congress(I) as easily as they did the Janata Dal. The price of non-performance and infighting could be heavy. Power is not for keeps. That is the lesson all governments would have to learn.

—CHIDANAND RAJGHATTA

Dozens of Gundu Rao's supporters, including 20 who got tickets at the last moment, swept to victory.

With just 10 per cent of the seats, the Janata Dal barely crossed the benchmark in order to be recognised as an opposition party.

The key to end the impasse in the Goa assembly now lies with the two seats that were countermanded due to death of a candidate.

GOA

Tiebreaker Solution

IF the rest of the country went through the suspense created by a hung Parliament, the picturesque coastal state of Goa experienced it close at home too. The ruling Congress(I) and its rival Maharashtrawadi Gomantak Party (MGP) won 18 seats each in the 40-member assembly. Election for two seats was countermanded while the remaining two went to independents who then held the electoral key to the Assembly.

Faced with an electoral deadlock, both parties staked their claims to form a government after winning over an independent candidate each. To help resolve the deadlock, the Election Commission will speed up the election to the two countermanded seats, which might be held on January 10. Pratapsinh Rane has been asked to continue as chief minister till then.

Earlier it seemed that the only possibility was President's Rule. At one stage, both independents had pledged support to the MGP. But one of them, Dr Carmo Pegado was lured into the Congress(I) as he was about to announce his alliance with the MGP. There was high drama as he was taken to Rane's house and the following morning flown to Delhi with Rane as MGP leaders waited in vain for him. Said MGP President, Ramkank Ghalap: "We will launch a agitation if the Congress(I) is asked to form the Government."

Khalap with supporters: close call

Both sides are now eyeing the two all-important seats where election wasn't held. "We will press for early election to break this deadlock," says Goa Pradesh Congress(I) President Sulochna Katkar. The Congress(I) is banking on the fact that both seats are in its traditional stronghold, south Goa. While the MGP, having made major inroads into the Congress(I) citadel, is hoping its plank, the recognition of Marathi as the second language, a sensitive issue in the state, will sway the vote its way. Till then, in electoral terms, Goa seems likely to remain in a state of suspended animation.

—RAGHUNANDAN DHAR

everest/d89/01/228

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Why Ramco guarantees the performance of industrial roofing systems.

Project: Regency Ceramics Limited, Yanam, Kakinada.

"The Regency Ceramics factory is located on the banks of the Godavari river, where it joins the sea. The corrosive, saline sea breeze causes deterioration of civil jobs. We needed a roofing material that was highly corrosion-resistant. We chose Ramco AC Sheets because we found this property in them."

– N.N. Associates, Architects & Engineers

Ramco AC Sheets.

They have the strength, the durability and the consistency in quality, essential to meet high performance standards set by architects and professional builders. Because Ramco uses the world's most technologically advanced process of production.

The finest portland cement and imported chrysotile fibres are mixed, blended, formed, cut and corrugated into high quality sheets using a totally automated process – the 'Ramco Hi-grade Process'. It's given Ramco strength that's unsurpassed, even corrugation and a breakage rate that's amongst the lowest in the world.

It's also made Ramco the name that's specified by professionals all over India. Every time you specify a sheet, do the same. Make Ramco AC Sheets your automatic choice.

Ramco
Advanced technology reaches the roof

Ramco Industries Limited
'Apex Plaza', 3, Nungambakkam High Road, Madras 600 034. Phone: 473770.

Sales Offices/Depots: • Delhi • Gurgaon • Ghaziabad • Indore • Raipur • Kadodara (Surat) • Ahmedabad • Bombay • Mira (Bombay) • Kolhapur • Nasik • Nagpur • Pune • R. Sumandi (Orissa) • Vijayawada • Hyderabad • Yanam • Bangalore • Madras • Palghat • Ernakulam • Quilon

FOUNTAINHEAD-RL-A-2-61-89-RL

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

COVER

UI's Fire and Machinery Breakdown Insurance Policies cover loss of property. But what about cover for loss of earnings during the period of interruption?

EXTRA COVER

UI's Consequential Loss Insurance is an additional insurance policy that goes beyond loss of property and covers loss of earnings.

A policy that gives your company financial security even if work comes to a standstill due to a fire or machinery breakdown.

Contact your nearest UI office today and ask for details.

You'll discover UI can do for you, what your business would have, had no loss occurred.

CONSEQUENTIAL LOSS INSURANCE

HTA 7309

UNITED INDIA INSURANCE CO. LTD.

(A subsidiary of the General Insurance Corporation of India)

24 Whites Road, Madras 600 014

Innovative insurance for better risk management

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

EXIT POLL

The Voters' Profile

INDIA TODAY commissioned Marketing and Research Group (MARG) to conduct an exit poll—the first such nationwide poll—during the Lok Sabha elections.

The poll was carried out on November 22 and 27 in 50 constituencies spread all over the country, which were selected by psephologist Prannoy Roy.

With a countrywide sample of 77,107, this exit poll is perhaps the largest of its kind in the world. In each constituency, MARG employed three supervisors and six interviewers, divided into three teams.

These teams traversed the constituencies, interviewing voters as they emerged from the polling booths. The interviewers recorded information on the voters' age, sex, caste/religion and the party voted for.

Some voters were also presented with a brief questionnaire (a total sample of 6,565 across the country) which sought information on reasons for voting, and the issues facing the next government.

The data was analysed by Prannoy Roy, and in this report information is presented on nationwide voting behaviour of different groups, caste/religious affiliations as well as their reasons for voting for the Congress(I)/the Opposition.

YOUTH PREFERENCES

The poll shows that the recently enfranchised group of 18-21 year-olds has, on balance, voted against the establishment.

At the national level, a greater proportion of the BJP's backers was in the 18-21 group. The Congress(I) fared relatively better among older voters.

The Janata Dal's support was fairly even across all age groups.

In the opposition-ruled states of West Bengal, Andhra Pradesh and Tamil Nadu, the situation reversed itself with the Congress(I), and its allies, getting a greater share of their support from the younger voters.

Charts by B.K. SHARMA

MALE-FEMALE DIVIDE

The voters' response showed that the Congress(I) continues to remain more popular among women than among men.

This time the women's vote it fetched was 1.9 per cent above its average party vote.

The Janata Dal, on the other hand, is a party that is much more male-supported. The women's vote it fetched is 2.3 per cent below the average party vote.

The BJP's support, however, is fairly evenly spread among both men and women.

A NEGATIVE VOTE

Quite a significant proportion of the opposition voters backed their parties in order to remove the Congress(I) from power.

This desire to humble the Congress(I) was greater outside south India. Forty-three per cent of the voters in the rest of the country were for it.

But it was considerable in the four south Indian states too—37 per cent.

Tables by RAJEEV MADAN

VOTED FOR THE OPPOSITION

	South India	Elsewhere
Because an opposition government would be good	63	57
Remove the Congress(I)	37	43

Don't knows excluded — All figures in percentages

THE BIG CHURN

Voters were asked to state when they had decided on the party they were going to vote for.

Twenty-nine per cent claimed they had made up their minds during the three-week election campaign (of which 9 per cent had decided on the day of the election or on the previous day).

There was a clear 'hawa' (wind) blowing in favour of the Janata Dal with almost 40 per cent of the voters deciding to back it during the campaign. Eleven per cent of the Janata Dal's

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

SONY

New from Sony... VHS video decks

Quality and performance from the leader in audio and video

SLV-X10/X10ME

Sony, the video expert, presents the X10. VHS video with world-famous Sony quality. The quality that makes Sony the choice of professionals around the globe. Plus the convenience of features such as the new Super Access Mechanism. To give you the picture on-screen in less than a second. Instead of the long wait with conventional VHS video decks. So now, there's really only one word you need to know to get the best in VHS video. And that word is... Sony.

•HQ •AutoVolt •3ch-4ch •Compatible with locally produced CTV •2 System (PAL/SECAM)

VHS PAL

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

My speling befor I got miself an ACN Electronic Typriter.

For more information, write to or call: AUTO CONTROLS PVT. LTD. (A RANUTROL GROUP COMPANY). CORPORATE OFFICE □ F-85, Okhla Industrial Area, Phase-I, New Delhi-110 020. Tel: 683 6001. NORTH ZONE □ B-12, New Delhi House, 27, Barakhamba Road, New Delhi-110 001. Tel: 331 0137, 331 6464. □ 1108, Sector 33C, Chandigarh-160 031. □ C-976/77, Sector B, Mahanagar, Lucknow-226 006. Tel: 77 289. □ 312, Guru Nanak Pura, Raja Park, Jaipur-302 004. Tel: 18 007. □ HIG 82, 1st Floor, Shivaji Nagar, Hoshangabad Road, Bhopal-462 016. Tel: 55 2478. □ 23, Chakrata Road, Dehradun-248 001. SOUTH ZONE □ A-4, 2nd Floor, Parsan Menere, 602, Anna Salai, Madras-600 006. Tel: 86 7121, 825 2428. □ Natraj Complex, 2nd Floor, 9, Residency Road, Richmond Circle, Bangalore-560 025. Tel: 21 2846.

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

My spelling after I got myself an ACN Electronic Typewriter.

Buy an ACN Electronic Typewriter with Spell Check and you will never make a spelling mistake again. Because the moment you do, the ACN Spell Check will stop you. Then refer to its mammoth, over 80,000 word dictionary and, before you know it, correct the mistake.

To give you clean, crisp, flawlessly typed documents. Every time.

ACN ELECTRONIC TYPEWRITERS FROM NAKAJIMA ALL, JAPAN.

INTERNATIONALLY, THE BEST.

AMULTROL GROUP

21 4683, 21 5429. □ 303, Swapnalok Complex, Sarojini Devi Road, Secunderabad-500 003. EAST ZONE □ 5-1, Stephen Court, 18A, Park Street, Calcutta-700 016. Tel: 29 1755. WEST ZONE □ 114, 1st Floor, ... Building, Shah & Nahar Indl. Estate, Lower Parel, Bombay-400 013. Tel: 492 0297, 492 7125. □ 1012, Embassy Centre, Nariman Point, Bombay-400 021. Tel: 23 3629, 23 4424. □ 303, Aurora Towers, 3rd Flo... 7, Moledina Road, Pune-411 001.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Enterprise/D/ACN

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

If your credit card carries this symbol, read on carefully.

If it doesn't, throw it away.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Now with MasterCard, get credit at the collective Merchant Establishments of nine leading banks in India and Nepal.

If your credit card carries the MasterCard symbol, it doesn't matter which Member Bank it belongs to. Walk into any of over 8000 MasterCard Merchant Establishments in India and Nepal, where a warm welcome awaits you.

No other credit card is more widely accepted than MasterCard. None.

MasterCard is the world's largest association of banks and financial institutions. With over 29,000 banks in 170 countries. Offering the best financial services and products to customers around the globe. Servicing more than 153 million MasterCard cardholders. At 7.2 million Merchant Establishments worldwide.

Now, nine of the finest banks in India and Nepal are members of MasterCard's worldwide family. Andhra Bank, Bank of America, Bank of India, Central Bank of India, Hongkong Bank, United Bank of India, Vijaya Bank, Vysya Bank and Nepal-Arab Bank.

Come, use your MasterCard to its fullest advantage. Of course, if you've been reading this without owning a MasterCard, contact any of the MasterCard Member Banks. Today!

More power to your credit card

LINTAS (DELHI) MC/1/2842

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Speak your mind.

At the finest convention venues in the country.

Whether an international meet or a small sales conference, the Ashok Group offers the finest conference facilities in the country. Halls of great dimensions. State-of-the-art audio-visual equipment, special lighting effects, multiple screen projection, simultaneous multilingual translation, telex and associated trunk links.

Backed by the efficiency of specially trained executives. And support services like transportation, city tours and cultural extravaganzas that make them exciting convention venues.

For further information, contact:

Ashok Conference & Convention Bureau
India Tourism Development Corpn.
347, Hotel Samrat, Chanakyapuri,
New Delhi- 110 021. INDIA.
Tel.: 607313, 603030 Extn. 2347, 2353, 2357, Cables: HOTELSMRAT
Telex: 031-5296, 031-5241

CONFERENCE AND BANQUET FACILITIES

Ashok Hotel, Delhi

Convention Hall : Seats 2500. Simultaneous translation in 6 languages for 500 persons. Adjustable stage with lighting arrangements. The Hall can be divided into three separate sound-proof sections.

Banquet Hall : 3rd floor, Seats 350. Committee Room : 3rd floor, Seats 15-17. Conference Room : 2nd floor, Seats 125. Foyer : Seats 150-300. Party Rooms : 50-200. Room : No. 479.

Hotel Samrat, Delhi

Kautilya : Seats 300, Hunt Room : Seats 50 for parties, Chandragupta : Seats 40; 100 cinema-style, 300 for buffet, Chanakya : Seats 40; 100 cinema-style, 350 for buffet.

Kovalam Ashok Beach Resort

Conference Hall : Seats 80 theatre-style.

Lalitha Mahal Palace Hotel, Mysore

Banquet Hall : Seats 150, Board Room/Congress Room : Seats 35 Party Room : Seats 30. Lawns for parties 1500 persons.

Airport Ashok, Calcutta

Victoria Hall : Reminiscent of the grandeur of the Victorian era in its decor. Seats 300 theatre-style, 120 class-room style, 84 round the table and 200 for buffets and receptions.

Board Room : Seats 30 for business meetings and small get-togethers.

The Ashok Group

India's host to the world

AKSHARA/ITDC-3237

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri support came in the last two days before the election.

The campaign had little effect on the cadre-based CPI(M), 80 per cent of whose supporters put their weight behind it even before the campaign began.

While 29 per cent of all voters had made up their minds only after the election campaign began, a higher proportion of the Muslims (36 per cent) made their voting decision quite late. This suggests that the Shilanyas ceremony by Hindu fundamentalists in Ayodhya on November 9 could have affected their voting behaviour.

Thirty-five per cent of Scheduled Caste and Scheduled Tribes also made up their minds in the last three weeks.

WHEN DECIDED

	ALL	BJP	CONG(I)	CPI(M)	JD
On polling day/day before	9	7	9	3	11
During the campaign	20	22	16	15	28
Earlier	67	67	72	80	59
Can't say	4	4	3	2	2

Don't knows excluded — All figures in percentages

ISSUES BEFORE NEW GOVERNMENT

The voters were asked to name the two major issues facing the next government.

Inflation and corruption were perceived as the main problems.

MAJOR ISSUES

	All Voters	Muslim Voters
Controlling inflation	37	33
Establishing Panchayati Raj	9	9
Controlling corruption	33	22
Communal harmony	21	36

Don't knows excluded — All figures in percentages

The Muslim voters, however, felt that the main task before the new government was to improve communal relations. The second priority they spelled out was the question of spiralling inflation.

The Muslim voter did not place too much of emphasis on the issue of corruption.

The Congress(I)'s primary election plank, the Panchayati Raj, was rated a distant last among the four issues by all the voters.

OPPOSITION CANDIDATES FOR PM

Vishwanath Pratap Singh was the overwhelming choice for prime minister. This, in the event that the Opposition grouping, the National Front, formed a government at the Centre.

CHOICE FOR OPPOSITION PM

	ALL
V.P. SINGH	63
N.T. RAMA RAO	7
R.K. HEGDE	6
DEVI LAL	10
OTHERS	14

Don't knows excluded — All figures in percentages

Voters were asked to choose from one of the four specified leaders: V.P. Singh, N.T. Rama Rao, Ramakrishna Hegde, and Devi Lal.

While around 80 per cent of the opposition voters opted for V.P. Singh, he was also considered the best opposition leader by a majority of Congress(I) supporters.

THE MUSLIM VOTER

In the major north Indian states of Uttar Pradesh and Bihar, Muslim voters moved away from the Congress(I). In Bihar, the drop in Muslim support for the Congress(I) was a massive 1.2 per cent: from a normally strong support of about 6.5 per cent above the average it dropped to 5.5 per cent below the average. The sudden swing away from the Congress(I) appears to have occurred at about the same time as the outbreak of large-scale violence in Bhagalpur in the run-up to the elections.

The drop in Muslim support for the Congress(I) in Uttar Pradesh was much less. Contrary to popular belief, the Congress(I) held on to a substantial part of its Muslim base in the state. Muslim support on the whole was 5.3 per cent higher than the average Congress(I) vote.

A set-back for the Congress(I) in these two states was the sharp swing away of the Scheduled Caste and Scheduled Tribe vote. Normally, a strong bank for the Congress(I), Scheduled Caste and Scheduled Tribe voters deserted it in Bihar and gave no extra benefit in Uttar Pradesh. The Bahujan Samaj Party was the beneficiary of this erosion in Congress(I) support.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

In diagnostic imaging there's never been a better time to choose GE.

For more than 90 years, GE has been a leader in diagnostic imaging technology, helping people around the globe live longer, healthier lives. But there has never been a better time than now to make us your imaging partner.

Today, we are the world's largest supplier of advanced imaging systems in X-ray, Computed Tomography, Magnetic Resonance, Nuclear Medicine and Ultrasound, plus our newest offering — Radiation Therapy equipment. And all backed by our unmatched array of technical and financial support capabilities.

As an integral component of one of the world's most respected and best-managed companies, GE Medical Systems offers the market strength, financial stability and worldwide technological expertise you should expect from any imaging supplier. Yet, while our capabilities may span the globe, we remain strongly committed to serving each customer individually — no matter what your needs, no matter where you may be.

For our valued clinical partners in Asia/Pacific, we have strategically positioned our technical and marketing resources to provide the level of highly responsive service and support you deserve. Whether in products matched to your requirements, specialized sales support, responsive equipment service, or thorough applications training, GE Medical Systems is poised to respond.

To learn more about our wide range of products and customer support services, we invite you to contact us at our office below.

We think you will discover that there has never been a better time — or more reasons — to choose GE Medical Systems.

GE Medical Systems
Asia / Pacific

International General Electric (India) Ltd: Phone: (91) 7:2-202-3075 Telex: 011-2363 or 011-2289 + IGEC IN Fax: (91) 22-202-7995 Bombay, India.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

INTERNATIONAL SEMINAR ON INDUSTRIAL AND EXPORT OPPORTUNITIES IN ELECTRONICS

January 10th, 11th and 12th, 1990.
Hotel Krishna Oberoi, Hyderabad.

This International Seminar will explore the various industrial and export opportunities in the fast growing field of Electronics. Opportunities for foreign collaboration will also be discussed at length.

The Seminar is intended for Chairmen, Managing Directors, Presidents, Chief Executives, Senior Executives, Government Officials, Consultants, Entrepreneurs, Industrialists, Exporters and NRIs.

SESSIONS

- Perspectives & Policies
- Consumer Electronics
- Communication & Broadcasting Equipment
- Computers, Software and Office Automation
- Foreign Collaborations
- Electronic Materials & Components
- Control Instrumentation and Industrial Electronics
- Export Policies and Opportunities

SPEAKERS

A number of eminent persons from well established Indian and multi-national enterprises, Indian and Foreign Governments, Financial Institutions and also several internationally renowned technical experts will make presentations during the Seminar.

INTERNATIONAL PARTICIPATION

Representatives from Foreign Companies, Organizations and Governments are expected to participate from the following countries:

U.S.A., Canada, U.K., West Germany, France, Italy, Switzerland, Spain, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Japan, Hong Kong, South Korea, Taiwan, Singapore, Australia.

TRADE AND TECHNOLOGY EXHIBITION

A Trade & Technology Exhibition will be held from 10th to 14th January, 1990. In this hi-tech Exhibition, a large number of Indian and Foreign participants would be displaying their products/services meant for the domestic and international markets. It is expected that a number of trade enquiries would be generated and substantial business would be carried out at the Exhibition. The Exhibition would also be an invaluable venue for transfer of technology.

TARA•8951

For free Seminar Brochure, please contact:

Network Consultancy Services Pvt. Ltd.
P.O. Box No. 1065, Gaganmahal
Hyderabad-500 029.
Phone : 237315 (3 lines); 235312, 241642
Telex : 0425-6075 MCA IN; 0425-6681 ELVS IN.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

An Angry Verdict

Clear results in the states, but no national consensus

NO matter what the pollsters predict, no matter what the pundits proclaim, no matter what the politicians plot, on the day of reckoning the Indian voter manages to surprise everyone. His, ultimately, is the last word. The ninth general election was the most extensively and accurately predicted Indian election ever. But under the mass of figures and cold statistics lay the message that the Indian voter had delivered with such telling effect.

Witness the total destruction of the mighty Congress(I) monolith in its own homeground, the Hindi heartland. Witness the humiliation heaped on N.T. Rama Rao, once lionised as a demi-god by millions in his home state. Witness the devastation of Ramakrishna Hegde's Janata Dal by a people fed up of incompetence, corruption and squabbling. Witness how the Haryana voter cut Devi Lal to size—defying casteism, rigging and muscle power.

In the run-up, it had been fashionable to compare this election with the one in 1967 which brought India closest to a hung Parliament. But the very first trends from counting stations laid the fallacy to rest. This election was going to be one of a kind. Where a level of opposition unity unmatched except by the Janata experiment of 1977 changed electoral arithmetic and where the voter in each state or region gave a clear, resounding verdict even if he was not in agreement with the voter in the adjoining state.

In the Hindi heartland the predominant pull was that of V.P. Singh as a new, honest alternative to Rajiv. There was also the BJP's communal appeal. The two pulls worked along different axis but led to the same goal, the rout of the Congress(I), considered corrupt and incompetent. The roles reversed in the south. The Andhra voter could not have expressed his disgust with Rama Rao's eccentric style of functioning more effectively. Nor could the Oriya have better conveyed his disenchantment with the non-performance of Janaki Ballabh Patnaik.

Even though the Biharis, the Tamils, the Telugus, the Gujaratis, the Kannadigas or the Malayalis chose different parties, a remarkable consensus was obvious in the messages they sent out. Throughout the country, it was absolutely clear that the vote was against corruption and a failure to deliver. The only regional group to survive the anti-establishment wave was the Left in West Bengal—a tribute to its clean record. Also to the fact that it does not suffer from the other bane of Indian politics: political dynasties. Despite the year-long hoopla over the Nehru centenary and the many tears shed on Mrs Gandhi's death and birth anniversaries on television, the people rejected the notion that the nation could be part of an individual's personal legacy.

Similarly, Devi Lal paid the price for the misdeeds of his sons, as Rama Rao did for his sons-in-law. It is not uncharacteristic of the Indian voter to get into a punitive mood. The devastation of Mrs Gandhi's Congress(I) in 1977 and then of the Janata in 1980 are still fresh in the memory. But never has the punishment been handed out so singlemindedly, so discriminatingly.

Perhaps the lack of a national electoral consensus had something to do with the absence of a truly national, trans-Vindhyachal issue. The centrist opposition unity that rewrote electoral equations so decisively in the rest of the

Map by B.K. SHARMA

No. of Seats Won by Congress(I)

	1984	1989
Hindi Heart Land	218	31
South	68	103
East	36	6
West	67	31

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

country came a cropper in the south.

Also, while both Bofors and Ram Janmabhoomi-Babri Masjid were issues in the north, west and to an extent even in the east, they did not cut too much ice in the south. Again, in the Hindi heartland the voter was basically choosing between two leaders: Rajiv Gandhi and V.P. Singh. And though that particular duel resulted in a knockout victory for Singh, his failure to reach out to the south was colossal.

The Opposition had left the south to their regional partners, giving the voter the impression that its leadership was north-centric. Rajiv was identified as a national leader and his presence in the southern campaign was ubiquitous. Obviously, the voters preferred a known devil to distant claimants for their affections who did not even care to talk to them. Above all, the voter's message was: don't take me for granted.

In the process the voter created quite a few complications as well. The geographical polarisation of political opinion rendered both major national parties—the Congress(I) and the Janata Dal—regional in character. This while the voter was firm in his rejection of regionalism in Andhra and Tamil Nadu. There are embarrassing ironies for both sides. Rajiv's party now draws two-thirds of its Lok Sabha strength from the south, but has no southern leader of real stature. As for the National Front it has a mere three Lok Sabha members from the south to choose its ministers from.

Unfortunately, the divide this election created is not merely politico-geographical. If this election was one of the most negative—no side promised anything but the destruction of the other—it was also certainly the most communal. The BJP was at least clear about its non-secular pretensions. The Congress(I) too tried to take advantage of the Ayodhya issue, but burnt its hand. The foundation stone laid at Ayodhya on November 9 is now a legacy of this election that could bleed many successive generations.

From the victory of the legion of Ram Shila puja organisers throughout the Hindi belt to the remarkable sweep of candidates supported by extremists in Punjab, this election brought the communal forces out in the open, fighting for votes with the gloves off. It also consecrated the arrival of the avowedly caste-based Bahujan Samaj Party as a major political pressure group. And it brought a new level of cynicism to the use of the bullet and muscle power.

Those who gain power as a result of this election will also inherit this legacy—a nation more fractured politically and communally than ever. —SHEKHAR GUPTA

HINDI HEARTLAND

UTTAR PRADESH

Going VP's Way

Bofors, communalism, anti-Rajiv wave, defeat Congress(I)

COMPROMISE on principles, a blatantly communal ploy, and a host of corruption charges cost the Congress(I) the electorally crucial state of Uttar Pradesh. The raja of Manda rode roughshod over his former party, winning most of the state's 85 Lok Sabha seats, leaving the Congress(I) with barely 13.

Charts by B.K. SHARMA

Rajiv Gandhi and Union ministers Kalpnath Rai, Rajendra Kumari Bajpai, Mahavir Prasad and Brahm Dutt won, but the other eight Central ministers were defeated. On the other hand, virtually all the opposition leaders—V.P. Singh, Arun Nehru, Maneka Gandhi, Chandra Shekhar, Ajit Singh, and Arif Mohammad Khan—won with a one lakh-plus margin.

The Congress(I) could only blame itself for the debacle. It lost both the Hindu and Muslim vote on one day—November 9—when it permitted the foundation laying ceremony of the Rama temple on the disputed plot in Ayodhya and then stopped construction. The Muslims—its traditional supporters—were outraged as the state Government had struck a covert deal with the Vishwa Hindu Parishad. In many seats where Muslims form 30 to 38 per cent of the electorate, the Congress(I) lost. The Hindus remained unsatisfied—a sentiment that cut across caste barriers.

Apart from drawing mileage from the Congress(I)'s mistakes, the Janata Dal came up with a winning secular campaign—with V.P. Singh travelling throughout the state. The BJP, with which the Janata Dal had seat adjustments, won 8 seats by exploiting Hindu sentiments.

That the Congress(I) could not cash in on the Hindu backlash was evident from the poll percentages. Congressmen polled 31 per cent of the votes against 51 per cent in 1984, while the BJP's 30 candidates got 20 per cent from wherever it contested, up from 6.4 per cent in 1984. Janata Dal nominees got around 40 per cent, against the combined 25.2 per cent that went to Lok Dal and the Janata Party in 1984.

A poor poll strategy made the situation worse for the ruling party. While the decision to hold simultaneous Lok Sabha and assembly elections created confusion in the Congress(I), the Opposition managed to confront the Congress(I) in one to one contests in the Lok Sabha election. The usually astute chief minister N.D. Tiwari had got his poll arithmetic badly mixed up. To accomodate his favourite, S.P. Guria, he denied Defence Minister K.C. Pant the Nainital seat. Pant refused to stand for the polls and Guria lost.

But the underdogs who proved giant killers were the Bahujan Samaj Party (BSP) candidates. They made inroads into the ruling party's two traditional vote banks—the Harijans and the Muslims—and hammered in the final nail in the Congress(I)'s coffin. The BSP's 72 candidates got around 13 per cent of the votes, undercutting many Congressmen and even a few Janata Dal nominees.

The clearest message was this: that virtually every caste and community was furious with the Congress(I)'s misrule and simple ineptitude. —DILIP AWASTHI

BIHAR

Janata Jells

Sweeping vote against corruption, incompetence

IT was a vote against non-performance. And as Congress(I) stalwarts like Tariq Anwar, Abdul Ghafoor, Madhuri Singh and Shyama Sinha fell like ninepins, the Bihar debacle dealt a virtual death blow to the political standing of Chief Minister S.N. Sinha.

Sinha had been catapulted to the post just eight months ago with an eye to Rajput votes. But ironically, all the party's Rajput candidates, including Sinha's relatives, were swept off their feet by the opposition wave. Said a gloating Janata

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Dal worker: "The myth that Sinha is the leader of the Rajputs is finally exposed."

The ruling party's disadvantage was apparent the day the campaign began. Far from being taken by surprise at the announcement of elections, the Opposition managed to come to an understanding, agreeing to confront the Congress(I) in straight contests in as many as 34 seats. And the combination of the Ayodhya controversy, the Bhagalpur riots and the campaign of the Jharkhand Mukti Morcha alienated its traditional vote-banks—the tribals and the Muslims. The tribals rallied round the Jharkhand Mukti Morcha and other Jharkhand groups while the Muslims cast their lot with the Left. And many of the Hindus, who had voted for the Congress(I) in the last election, went over to the BJP. Compounding the chief minister's woes was the high command's decision to renominate most of the sitting MPs—who had angered the electorate with their non-performance and, more importantly, their lack of concern for their constituents.

Expectedly, the Congress(I) gains were in seats where the Opposition failed to ensure straight contests, leading to a split in the opposition votes. Damaging charges of rigging and clumsy attempts to terrorise voters were hurled at the Congress(I). In Jehanabad, three MLAs—Asghar Hussain, Jagdish Sharma and Krishna Singh—were reported to have indulged in booth capturing.

The Bihar PCC(I) President Jagannath Mishra said: "If the state Government had performed better, things would have been different." Giving an indication of the lack of cohesion that may have affected the Congress(I)'s chances, he blamed the Sinha Government for failing to control the communal riots in Bhagalpur.

The Lok Sabha election might possibly lead to the dissolution of the state Assembly. In any case, it is unlikely that Sinha will be able to continue as chief minister. Said a distraught party MLA: "We had kept quiet because of the elections. But now we must make it clear that we have no faith in Sinha."

—UTTAM SENGUPTA

MADHYA PRADESH

Saffron Wash

BJP reaps the rewards for solid grassroots work

As in several other states across the Hindi belt, Madhya Pradesh too did a dramatic volte-face. While it had sent all the 40 Congress(I) candidates to Parliament in 1984, this time it inflicted a near-mortal wound on the party, giving it only eight seats out of the 39 for which elections were held. The elections made it obvious that the state has become the theatre for a mighty resurgence of the BJP, which has won a whopping 27 of the 31 seats it contested.

For the BJP the election results were the outcome of the dedicated and determined ground work the party had been doing for the last four years, including a highly successful campaign for writing off loans. Simultaneously, they subtly whipped up Hindu passions, a process which later culminated in the communal riots during the Ramshila pujas. Said the MPCC(I) chief Shivbanu Solanki: "The BJP has benefited by creating communal frenzy. They sent their supporters to polling booths with chandan (sandalwood paste) smeared on their foreheads." Retorted Sundarlal Patwa, chief of the BJP state unit: "Next he will object to people casting votes wearing dhotis."

If the BJP capitalised on the communal tension—23 people were killed in riots in Indore in October—the ruling party lost a major chunk of its vote bank because of the manner in which it had allowed the communal situation to drift. A Congress(I) candidate who was defeated admitted: "We failed to take a firm stand on the issue."

In the meantime, the Muslims, angered by the Congress(I)'s attempt to reap political harvest from the bloodied streets, swung away from the party which led to the party losing at least five seats. In Bhopal and Indore, for instance, two independent Muslim candidates walked away with 97,000 and 88,000 votes respectively. The loser was the ruling party.

So wide has been the BJP sweep that it has emerged as a viable alternative to the Congress(I). The Janata Dal has pockets of influence—it won three out of the 10 seats it contested—but the fact that even its state chief V.C. Shukla could just about

PUNJAB

Rebels' Win

The people of Punjab, faced with unending misery and unresponsive administrations, hit back with a vengeance in the Lok Sabha polls. They opted for an extreme radical group, Akali Dal (Mann), and its allies in 10 of the 13 seats. They cast a negative vote not only against the Congress(I) but also against the Badal and Barnala factions of the Akali Dal, making it clear that they were fed up with their selfish and dithering policies.

While the victory of those like jailed former IPS officer Simranjit Singh Mann, Beant Singh's widow Bimal Khalsa and alleged terrorist Atinderpal Singh was expected, it was the triumph of Dhian Singh 'Mand' from Ferozepur that provided the accurate pointer to the factors that dominated the poll in the strife-torn state. Dhian Singh, an unknown, defeated both Congress(I) leader Jagmeet Brar and Jat supremo Devi Lal. His credentials for this resounding success: he was supported by the Mann group, which did so because three of Dhian's brothers—alleged terrorists—have been killed in encounters with the police.

Obviously, the biggest factor that worked in favour of the Akali Dal (Mann) is the growing resentment among the masses against police excesses. An obvious example of this was Rajinder Kaur. Her husband had been killed in an 'encounter', and the Government had refused to order a probe into the matter. A reluctant candidate, she won from Ludhiana by over a lakh votes. Said Major Jagjit Singh (retd), a leader of the Mann group: "Governor Ray should accept moral responsibility for the vote against his misrule and resign." Underlining this resentment was the fact that higher turnouts were witnessed at rural areas as compared to urban.

This election also saw an increased polarisation of votes. The Mann group

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

scrape through with a majority of only 12,000 votes serves to expose the party's limitations.

Madhavarao Scindia, who once again won from Gwalior, and Kamalnath, who won from Chindwara, were amply rewarded for nursing their constituencies. The Congress(I)'s victory in Jhabua, Bastar and Kanker was mainly because the Opposition was divided.

The basic reason for the fall of the Congress(I) is of course the issue of communalism, corruption, price rise and political hooliganism that has eroded the party's base in the other north Indian states as well. The electoral adjustment between the BJP and the Janata Dal—only in two constituencies did they fight each other—and the factional infighting in the Congress(I) did not help matters either.

The debacle—the party lost all seats except Chindwara and Seoni in the Mahakoshal region and was swept away from the Vindhya region—is only the beginning of what appears to be a continuing trauma for the Congress(I) in the state. The badly mauled party will have to withstand the pressure from the saffron brigade as well as the unavoidable siege from within, led by Arjun Singh who will not rest before the political burial of Chief Minister Motilal Vora. But Patwa sounded magnanimous: "I will not ask them to quit. They ought to think about it on their own." The problem is the Congressmen are too numbed to think.

—N.K. SINGH

RAJASTHAN

Royal Rout

A demoralised Congress(I) receives a sound drubbing

IN Rajasthan, they call it flipping a chapati. And it's an apt metaphor. From giving a 100 per cent mandate to the Congress(I) in the last Lok Sabha elections, the electorate did a complete turnabout this time round—plumping for the Opposition in each of the desert state's 25 constituencies. Only in 1977 had the Opposition triumphed with such an overwhelming majority, when all but one seat had gone to Charan Singh's Bharatiya Lok Dal. The bitter anti-Congress(I) mood of the people was illustrated by the fact that of the opposition victors, as many as six romped home with margins of over 1.5 lakh votes.

Things moved with clockwork precision right from the time the elections were announced. The BJP and Janata Dal carefully carved out the state between them, burying all outstanding differences, at least temporarily. The BJP walked off with 13 seats, while the Janata Dal got all the 11 it contested. Said BJP strongman Bhairon Singh Shekhawat: "People were very angry with the Congress(I). The results were no surprise." If the Congress(I) had a chance of victory anywhere at all, it was in Bikaner, where the opposition vote was divided. But there too the Congress(I) came a cropper. The CPI(M)'s former MLA, Sheopat Singh, humbled both the BJP and the Congress(I).

Apart from a strong show of opposition unity against a fragmented Congress(I), what really did turn the tide against the ruling party in the state was a shrill campaign by the BJP on the Ayodhya issue. Its victorious candidate from Pali, former judge Guman Mal Lodha, is the state chief of the Ram Janmabhoomi Samiti and is a counsel for the Hindus in the court tussle. What further helped polarise votes for the BJP was the communal rioting that broke out in Kota months before the polls.

Said a bitter state Congress(I) chief, Heeralal Deopura after submitting his resignation: "It was an immoral campaign where religious issues took precedence over political matters." Immoral or not, it carried the day for the Opposition.

—PANKAJ PACHAURI

swept the Sikh majority areas, but its candidate Chanan Singh Sidhu lost to Sukhbans Kaur Bhinder of the Congress(I) in Gurdaspur, which is a Hindu-dominated area.

One seat that went against the polarisation trend was that of Jalandhar, where the former diplomat I.K.Gujral of the Janata Dal won on a platform of peace and communal harmony.

Bimal Khalsa campaigning in Sirhind

Among the factors that resulted in a poor showing by the Congress(I)—two seats as compared to six in the last general election—were the demoralised mood of the state party and the delay in announcing the names of candidates. Also the fact that party workers, fearing the militants, shied away from campaigning in the countryside. Moreover, the presence of BSP candidates in 11 of the 13 constituencies ate into traditional Congress(I) vote banks.

Another reason why the Mann group fared so well as compared to the older Akali groups is that it shone in better light when it came to the concept of 'sacrifice' that so dominated the religio-political mix of the Sikhs.

But the victory of the Mann group is creating consternation. While some feel that with the militants joining the mainstream the Punjab situation might ease, there are those who feel a dangerous legitimacy may be given to extremists who may end up using it to further their secessionist cause. —KANWAR SANDHU

DELHI

Capital Loss

Congress(I) fortunes dimmed by BJP star performance

AT election-end the message from Delhi's seven Lok Sabha seats was clear: the Opposition wins if it unites. The BJP wrested four seats and the Janata Dal one from the Congress(I) which had swept the capital in 1984. The star winner was BJP President L.K. Advani from New Delhi constituency.

It was the obstinacy of Devi Lal, who insisted on fielding his man Chand Ram against Information and Broadcasting Minister H.K.L. Bhagat, that split the opposition vote in East Delhi giving the Congress(I) one of the two seats it managed to retain. Bhagat beat the Janata Dal candidate Kishore Lal—who even trailed behind Kanshi Ram of the Bahujan Samaj Party (BSP) and Chand Ram. In Chandni Chowk too, it was opposition disunity that helped Jai Prakash Aggarwal of the

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Congress(I) to retain his seat. Aggarwal's tally was 65,000 less than that of the BJP and Janata Dal combined.

The big upset for the Congress(I) in Delhi was the defeat of Union minister of state for food processing Jagdish Tytler at the hands of Vijay Kumar Malhotra, the national secretary of the BJP. By fielding its Delhi unit chief, Madan Lal Khurana, from South Delhi constituency, the BJP showed a desire to develop a second rung of leadership in Parliament. The vocal Khurana is expected to campaign for a statehood status for the Union territory in the Lok Sabha. After his victory procession, he said: "We are committed to this demand and we will get it for Delhi's citizens." This fits into the BJP's game plan of ruling a substantial portion of the Hindi heartland—Rajasthan, Himachal Pradesh, Madhya Pradesh and Delhi.

Even as the Opposition rejoiced, the Congress(I) was reeling under the impact of the electoral debacle. One of the significant implications of the results is a diminishing of Bhagat's clout—whose writ ran large in the city's affairs for more than a decade. Dharam Dass Shastri from Karol Bagh, Subhash Chopra from South Delhi and Mohini Giri from New Delhi were all his choice—and they had to lick dust at the hustings. Explaining his party's poor performance, a pensive Bhagat said: "The kind of communal and casteist alliances these elections have seen are dangerous for the country."

The capital's citizenry has already shown its indifference to the electoral process, despite knowing that Delhi more than any other city is ruled by the party in power at the Centre. Actually it is the administrative confusion which prevails because of conflicting orders from various authorities—at the central and local level—that is the major reason for political apathy. It seems only a statehood can crystalise Delhi's political identity—something which it now lacks—and restore voter confidence in the political process.—PANKAJ PACHAURI

HARYANA

Rude Rebuff

Devi Lal keeps the edge, but suffers a firm electoral snub

JAT versus non-Jat. That in essence describes the poll outcome in Haryana where Devi Lal could win only six of the 10 Lok Sabha seats—of these Hisar, Sirsa, Rohtak, Sonepat and Mahendragarh are Jat dominated constituencies.

Two factors seem to have set back the Jat's juggernaut. First, the label of Jat misrule pinned onto his government by Congress(I) heavyweights Bhajan Lal and Bansi Lal, seems to have stuck. Added to this was the revolt of Kirpa Ram Punia and five other senior party members who resigned from the ministry a mere week before the state went to the polls. And the issue of family rule also worked against the Janata Dal leader. "We are fed-up with Devi Lal and Chautala's style of functioning. It seems to be a curse to be a non-Jat," said Punia, once Devi Lal's lieutenant. "Devi Lal wants to establish family rule in Haryana," the rebels chorused.

It is the battle for power between the two politically ambitious sons of Devi Lal that cost the party dearly. Interestingly, while the attack on the Jat leader helped consolidate the hardcore Jat electorate in his favour, it severely affected the BJP contestants Suraj Bhan (Ambala) and Sushma Swaraj (Karnal) for the votes of the non-Jats went not to them but to the Congress(I). This election, thus, saw the widening of the rural-urban divide.

The Congress(I) did better than anticipated, winning four seats. That arch-rivals Bansi Lal and Bhajan Lal won by margins of over one lakh each also signalled troubled times ahead for Devi Lal, what with the tightrope he is being forced to walk between his warring sons.

Typically, however, Devi Lal feigned unconcern. "We have won six seats when in 1984 we had not got one. West Bengal and Haryana are the only two states which have not voted for a change," he said confidently. But that confidence must certainly conceal a host of worries, for he knows both Bansi Lal and Bhajan Lal are capable of extracting a mile if conceded an inch.

—HARINDER BAWEJA

THE SOUTH

TAMIL NADU

Sweet Revenge

Congress(I)-AIADMK alliance outmanoeuvres the DMK

AS electoral slaps in the face go, the DMK couldn't have been dealt a more resounding one. In the 1984 elections, it sent two representatives to the Lok Sabha. This time, it seemed, it could only improve on that dismal showing. Yet the party actually managed to do worse, losing all the seats it contested.

Worse, the DMK's allies too drew a complete blank, barring the CPI which won one seat. In sharp contrast, the AIADMK-Congress(I) alliance bagged 37 of the 38 seats to which elections were held, with the AIADMK netting every one of the 11 seats it contested.

But in a way, the results were true to form. The Tamil electorate, like other states of south India, has always distinguished between the party it voted to power in the state and the one it plumped for at the Centre. The traditional favourite for the Lok Sabha has been the Congress(I). This time it proved to be no different. Among the prominent victors from the Congress(I) were Union ministers P. Chidambaram, M. Arunachalam and R. Prabhu, and the sitting MP Vyjanthimala Bali.

DMK supremo M. Karunanidhi apparently had a premonition of impending electoral doom. Before the election, he had begun to insist that the results

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Creativity

that breaks out of the mould

From automotive instruments to precision machine tools to electronics... it's the hallmark of every product that bears the Pricol stamp.

Creativity.

In a word, it describes Pricol's place in Industry.

As the clear leader in automotive instruments. As the source of precision engineered Textile Counters, Wind Speed Monitors, Small Machine Tools and Oil Pumps for Two Wheelers.

Pricol is a technology driven company. And creativity is the catalyst.

A catalyst that has created a unique position for every Pricol product.

Today Pricol is moving into the technologies that are steering the world forward.

Electronics.

Colour TV Tuners. SMPS & UPS Systems. Powerline Conditioners. And Micro processor based products. Each product — distinctively Pricol. Each an example of creativity, and reliability.

Fourteen proven years of excellence are now distilled into technology for your every tomorrow. Trust Pricol when it comes to electronics.

AUTOMOTIVE INSTRUMENTS
SMALL MACHINE TOOLS
COUNTERS & CONTROLS
WIND SPEED MONITORS
ELECTRONIC TV TUNERS
SMPS & UPS SYSTEMS
POWERLINE CONDITIONERS

pricol Technology at your service

Premier Instruments & Controls Limited
Post Box No. 6331
1087 B/C Avanashi Road Coimbatore 641 037 India
Phone: 0422 — 31521-4 Fax: 0422 — 33028
Telex: 0855 — 376 PIL IN Cable: PRICOL

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

MAA COMMUNICATIONS PRICOL 189A

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

For every changing
whim and fancy ...

A man of principles.

Fabric
Royal Gold
Blend
Super 80's
extra fine
Merino Wool
Season
Autumn, Winter
Occasion
Whenever the intention is to make headlines

Royal Gold

Raymond's

The Final Word.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

BAGPIPER

Club Soda

All the makings of a great occasion

Shatrughan Sinha

everest 88 HL 323

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

would not be a reflection of the performance of the DMK Government. On the other hand, the opposition alliance, and especially AIADMK chief Jayalalitha, had all along maintained that the election was a "referendum on the DMK rule". Declared an exuberant TNCC(I) President V.K. Ramamurthy, who assumed charge of the state party after its debacle in the assembly elections in January this year: "The poll results are a clear verdict against Karunanidhi."

The victory of the Congress(I)-AIADMK alliance is a victory of pragmatism. Ten months ago, the two had decided to go their separate ways. The result was a clean sweep for the DMK in the assembly elections—with a marginally higher vote.

Still, the alliance's victory is not just a matter of electoral arithmetic. In more than half the constituencies, it won by margins of over one lakh votes. The Bofors scandal cut no ice with the voter. What seems to have mattered was the shortage of rice and cooking oil—and both issues were vigorously raked up by Jayalalitha at every meeting.

For Jayalalitha, the victory is a personal triumph. Over the past year, she has emerged as the sole leader of a united AIADMK. And now she has won the supreme endorsement of her position—electoral stamp of approval from the people of the state.

Though her party conceded most of the seats in the Lok Sabha contest to the Congress(I), it was undoubtedly the senior partner in the alliance. Now her sights are clearly aimed at the chief ministership. If there's a black lining at all in her silver cloud, it's that the Congress(I) may not return to power at the Centre and dismiss the DMK Government.

The corresponding fear in the DMK camp—of dismissal in the event of a Congress(I) government being formed at the Centre—was voiced by a party worker outside the party's headquarters in Madras. "V.P. Singh will come to power, won't he?" he asked dejectedly.

—KAVITHA SHETTY

ANDHRA PRADESH

Wiped Out

N.T. Rama Rao is humiliated by an indignant electorate

FOR N.T. Rama Rao and his party, the results were apocalyptic. Piggybacking on the broken promises of the Rama Rao government, the Congress(I) romped home, with 39 of its candidates winning against the Telugu Desam's two.

The results were more than a reversal of the 1984 verdict when the Congress(I) had managed only six seats of the 42. Even the formidable N.T. Rama Rao suffered a humiliating defeat in Kalwakurthy assembly constituency, one of the two seats he contested. And a weighty contestant like Janata Dal General Secretary S. Jaipal Reddy met the same fate at the hands of Congress(I) candidate, former Union deputy minister M. Mallikarjun. The normally cautious Reddy conceded: "There's no denying the public disgust with Rama Rao's style of functioning." This was a total about-turn in the fortunes of Rama Rao, an iconoclastic politician who successfully withstood even the Rajiv wave of 1984, rising in stature to become the chairman of the National Front.

Interestingly, all the Congress(I) candidates won by convincing margins except for K. Ramakrishna who wrested the Anakapalle seat from the Telugu Desam's P. Appalanarasimhan by the lowest margin of nine votes.

According to the Telugu Desam leader in the dissolved Lok Sabha, C. Madhava Reddy, the simultaneous elections to the Lok Sabha and the assembly helped the Congress(I). While Rama Rao himself was still too dumbstruck to react to the devastating electoral verdict, a member of the party politburo said: "The choice of candidates for assembly constituencies and the lack of funds were reasons for the failure."

Rama Rao also paid a heavy price for going back on his earlier plan to give at least half the tickets to first-time contestants. And the conflict between his sons-in-law N. Chandrababu Naidu and D. Venkateswara Rao deepened dissensions within the party. Apart from this, the people were tired of Rama Rao's eccentric ways, typified by his whimsical decision to contest the Kalwakurthy assembly seat.

But primarily it was the anti-Rama Rao wave and the rejuvenated working of the Congress(I) that turned the tide against the Telugu Desam. Andhra Pradesh Congress(I) president M. Chenna Reddy, 75, attributed his party's success to "the willingness of Congress(I) workers to go to the field". The party also gained from Chenna Reddy's organisational abilities and his clout with the influential Reddy community in the Telengana region.

The rout has plunged the Telugu Desam into an uncertain, dismal future. If the party is not to be reduced to a rump, Rama Rao will have to build a team to organise programmes for the workers. Promises a hopeful Telugu Desam MP in the Rajya Sabha, Renuka Choudhary: "The Telugu Desam will rise like the phoenix." At the moment that sounds like wishful thinking.

—AMARNATH K. MENON

KARNATAKA

Swept Aside

Hegde pays the price for a riven party and poor tactics

KARNATAKA once again stood solidly behind the Congress(I)—propping up the shuddering political monolith.

The Congress(I) steamroller claimed even the four Lok Sabha seats it had conceded to the Janata Party in 1984. Primary among these was the prestigious Bangalore South constituency which sent non-Congress(I) candidates to the last three Lok Sabhas. The former chief minister, R. Gundu Rao's smashing one-lakh plus win over the Janata Dal's S.M. Raghupathy was indicative of the Congress(I)'s sweep.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Even as their colleagues in the north fell, key Congress(I) leaders in the state romped home with unexpected ease. Rural development minister B. Janardhan Poojary and AICC(I) General Secretary Oscar Fernandes coasted to victory with a lakh plus margin each, while minister of state Jaffer Sharief brushed aside the Dal's Lawrence Fernandes and relegated Janata-backed Syed Shahabuddin to third place. B. Shankaranand, who headed the infamous Joint Parliamentary Committee and who sneaked home by a mere 3,000 votes in 1984, cruised to victory this time. Said Sharief: "It's not the victory that surprises us, but the ease with which we won."

Clearly, the Congress(I) rode an anti-Janata Dal wave in the state. It was a deep resentment unleashed on polling day. Even Congress(I) leaders admit that the poor response to prime minister Rajiv Gandhi's chopper-stop tours concealed the bonanza the voters had readied for the party.

The Janata Dal in the state blundered in turning the Lok Sabha poll into a kind of referendum of the performance of the Janata/Janata Dal government over the last six years. The Janata Dal's chief campaigner, Ramakrishna Hegde, dropped major issues like Bofors, corruption and communalism from the agenda. Instead, he preferred to harp on the theme of performance, judged by even the most charitable voter to be lackadaisical.

The Karnataka Janata Dal also did not apply its mind to selecting strong candidates for the Lok Sabha, concentrating its energies on the list for the assembly election. This proved to be a fatal error. The party's assumption was that if the voters plumped for the assembly contestant, that vote would automatically transfer to the Lok Sabha candidate. What happened was quite the reverse. The result: nothing short of devastation. Concedes S.M. Raghupathy, who proved to be a lame duck candidate against Gundu Rao: "We got our sums all wrong."

It wasn't Raghupathy alone. Even relatively stronger candidates like the charismatic Anant Nag in Karwar came a cropper against the old bag of Congress(I) MPs. Once again, the state that resurrected Mrs Gandhi in 1978 from Chikmagalur provided a beam of hope for the Congress(I).

—CHIDANAND RAJGHATTA

KERALA

Tables Turned

Congress(I)-led front cashes in on the communal card

AN undeclared alliance of convenience knocked the stuffings out of the CPI(M)-led Left Democratic Front (LDF) Government. The Congress(I)-led United Democratic Front (UDF) won 17 of the 20 Lok Sabha seats, leaving the communists with three. The polling percentages made it clear that the BJP had covertly supported the UDF in order to unseat the communists.

It was also evident that the UDF had cashed in on a communal vote, their candidates carrying the votes of one community or the other en bloc—the Catholic Christians in Trichur, Latin Catholics in Ernakulam, Marthoma Christians in Mavelikkara, Muslims in Ponnani, Manjeri and Calicut, Nadars in Trivandrum and Nairs in Kottayam.

The CPI(M)'s campaign based on corruption and growing communalism, obviously failed with the nation's most literate electorate; its unfulfilled poll promises acted as a further setback. In any case, the Kerala electorate has tended to back the Congress during general elections, and is wary of opposition unity experiments. "Remember 1977?" PCC(I) chief A.K. Antony would ask at each rally. By stressing local concerns and playing the communal card the UDF managed to rout many a dynamic communist, and put a question mark on the future of the LDF Government.

—RAMESH MENON

THE EAST

WEST BENGAL

Holding on Firm

Left Front bastion remains unaffected by national trends

WHILE many chief ministers across the land were swept away by the winds of change, the redoubtable Jyoti Basu stood his ground. As the CPI(M)-led Left Front romped home in 36 of the 41 Lok Sabha seats in which elections were held, the state provided the one aberration from the election trend throughout the country: the electorate here preferred to vote for continuity rather than to clamour for change.

The Congress(I) could wrest just four seats, two of which went to seasoned war-horses—PCC(I) chief Ghani Khan Choudhury and Union minister of state for revenue Ajit Kumar Panja. But the Congress(I) win that proved to be a real surprise was that of new entrant Debi Prasad Pal. Pal defeated former Congress(I) Union law minister Ashoke Sen who was contesting from his Calcutta seat this time on a Janata Dal ticket.

Yet, even in Calcutta—the sole Congress(I) stronghold in the state—the party suffered surprise losses. Firebrand Mamata Banerjee lost Jadavpur while Union minister of state for commerce Priya Ranjan Das Munshi lost Howrah.

It was clear that the well-knit communist cadres had once again delivered. It was also clear that the ageing communist leadership had once again shown its shrewdness by fielding many new faces interspersed with a host of respected stalwarts. The ploy paid off, as several new entrants came good, such as Malini Bhattacharya, a lecturer

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

WHEN YOU GROW UP WITH THE BEST YOU STAY WITH IT.

Lal Imli Dhariwal. Suitings that have remained classics through the years.

Yet, contemporary too! Keeping with to-day's fashion trends they offer you a range to choose from. Tweeds, Worsted, Blazer Material, Woollies, Blankets, Cosy Shawls, Knitting Yarn. And more.

Lal Imli Dhariwal. Always in style. Never out of fashion.

THE ORIGINAL DRESS CIRCLE!

Lal Imli Dhariwal

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Now in India, do as the Romans do floor-to-floor, wall-to-wall.

ROlling beauty up your walls is a concept as old as the Mediterranean civilization. They don't just stop at the floors. And that's what Romano now brings to India.

MAke a different interior for yourself. At home or at work. With the soft matt finish of ROMANO tiles made in technical collaboration with MORI S.P.A. of Italy.

NObody else gives you a colour range so subtle and delicate.

And nobody else but ROMANO will bring you tiles with motifs and designs edged with stunning Italian borders.

ROMANO TILES

Anant Raj Clay Product Ltd.
H-65, Connaught Circus
New Delhi-110 001
Phones: 3324127, 3310881
Telex: 31-65859 TILE-IN

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

UPTRON SL8109 TELEVISION CONSOLE IT'S TRULY SENSATIONAL!

Sleek. Smart. Sophisticated.

The Uptron SL8109 Television Console, styled on the lines of tomorrow with extra space for your VCR and tapes.

Feast your eyes on its stunning looks ... you'll know why black is beautiful.

Treat your ears to mind-blowing sound. Pouring out of its four-way speakers.

And rest assured, you're getting the greatest value.

UPTRON SL8109. Entertainment will now be measured by this unit.

UPTRON
TELEVISIONS

SL 8109 Console-A TV and trolley unit

ULKA-D-UIL-731-ENG

COMPUTERS • SOFTWARE CONSULTANCY • COMMUNICATION SYSTEMS • COMPONENTS • CONTROL SYSTEMS • INDUSTRIAL ELECTRONICS • TELEVISIONS

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

To a Hero Honda owner, it's a one-litre road.

No, we're not stretching the facts. Just the fuel. One litre does get you a long way when you're on a Hero Honda CD 100. 80 km, to be precise.

No other bike can give you as much.

Fill it. Forget it.

Honda's technical leadership is evident in every aspect of the Hero Honda CD 100's exceptional 4-stroke engine. Complete fuel combustion ensures the phenomenal 80 km/litre* fuel-efficiency, easy maintenance, and a clean, pollution-free exhaust. For kilometre after kilometre of trouble-free service.

Our favourite performance figure, though, is the lakhs of happy owners. Who make the Hero Honda CD 100 India's largest-selling bike.

HERO HONDA

You've got a Good thing Going!

*At 40 km/h. 150 kg.

HTA 6347

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

who trounced Mamata Banerjee, and Dr Biplab Dasgupta, a renowned economist.

While the Left worked unitedly, confusion and infighting rent the Congress(I) camp, where heavyweights worked to undermine each other. Before the polls they attacked each other, and in the face of defeat they united to hurl abuse at the "communist goons" who they claimed indulged in booth capturing and rigging. Reports of violence and police firing, in which two people were killed, did mar the poll process. "This is not an election but a shameless rape of democracy," said Somen Mitra, Congress(I) MLA.

But the Left Front was unperturbed. Said CPI(M) leader Biman Bose: "Bengal has set another record in free and fair elections. The defeat of the Congress(I) shows the people's rejection of their policies and their faith in the Left." Clearly, unlike elsewhere, the rulers of Bengal had not disappointed, or else even their tough cadres would have been unable to withstand the storm that blew across the rest of the country.

—FARZAND AHMED

ORISSA

Knocked Out

Patnaik's record and rifts spell doom for the Congress(I)

As one Patnaik, long in the wilderness, got the better of the other in Orissa, the message was clear. The people were not merely voting for a change, as Chief Minister J.B. Patnaik believed, they were revolting against his misrule.

So total was the rejection of the ruling party that it surpassed even the 1977 disaster when it had managed to salvage at least five seats. Consequently, the state Congress(I) unit is now in disarray with even party president Kanhu Charan Lenka seeking permission to quit.

The campaign for the Lok Sabha elections in the state did not follow the national pattern. Here the thrust was more localised. While J.B. Patnaik sought the people's sanction to continue his 10-year-old rule, Janata Dal leader Biju Patnaik sought a mandate to head the next state Government.

In the event the results stunned even those who had gauged the people's mood fairly accurately. As many as 18 Janata Dal-CPI-CPI(M) combine candidates won the elections with huge margins, while only three Congress(I) candidates, including Girdhar Gomango, Union minister of state for communications, managed to just about scrape through.

For the ruling party, easily the most demoralising blow was the defeat of its strongest candidate, Jayanti Patnaik, wife of the chief minister, at the hands of Janata Dal General Secretary Srikant Jena in Cuttack. J.B. Patnaik's supporters attributed the defeat to the infighting and the calculated move by dissidents headed by Lenka. The ruling party also suffered a setback with the defeat of stalwarts like former Union minister K.P. Singh Deo and former PCC(I) chief Nityanand Misra.

The general consensus seems to be that both Rajiv Gandhi and J.B. Patanik—with their tarnished images—proved to be more a liability than an asset. Now in the Congress(I), there appears to be a sense of panic although J.B. Patnaik has ruled out large-scale desertions. The chief minister, on his part, immediately let it be known that he was for the dissolution of the Assembly and for the party high command nominating his successor.

For 'Kalinga Samrat' Biju Patnaik, who has been storming the state for years, it has been a personal victory. However, when the electoral verdict became obvious, Biju maintained his cool. Said he: "The people, who are the masters, have now decided to change their servants."

—FARZAND AHMED

THE WEST

MAHARASHTRA

Shared Spoils

BJP-Janata Dal divide helps the Congress(I) save face

THE Congress(I) citadel in Maharashtra has been breached. And it has been done amid Hindutva war cries, as the BJP-Shiv Sena combine has bagged 14 of the 48 Lok Sabha seats. In Bombay, the combine grabbed four of the six seats. The Congress(I) just crossed the halfway mark, notching up 28. Though the Janata Dal disappointed, it increased its share to five. Even the CPI recorded one victory.

For the first time ever, the Shiv Sena will send its MPs to the Lok Sabha. Veteran Sena leader Waman Mahadik, who beat trade union supremo Datta Samant, Marathi journalist Vidhyadhar Gokhale and Parbhani's Ashok Deshmukh are among the debutants.

The Sena's head hunters felled state Janata Dal President Mrinal Gore in Bombay North and challenged Bombay Congress(I) chief Murli Deora to near-submission. Only actor Sunil Dutt won comfortably in Bombay North-West.

Although the Opposition has eroded the Congress(I) bastion, the ruling party maintained its hold in the sugar belt of western Maharashtra—winning nine out of the 10 seats. AICC(I) General Secretary V.N. Gadgil was among the important victors here.

Chief Minister Sharad Pawar had predicted the results soon after the campaign began. Out of the 44 seats the Congress(I) held in the last Lok Sabha, Pawar thought there could be trouble in at least 16 of the seats. He said: "The renomination of some sitting MPs affected party fortunes." As was the pattern elsewhere, a disgruntled electorate re-elected just 23 sitting MPs.

The Congress(I) defeat can be largely attributed to the Hindutva wave, which swept through even its traditional strongholds of Vidarbha and Marathwada regions. As the chief minister admitted: "In some areas, the Hindutva atmosphere created by the Ram Shila pujas paid off, garnering sizeable support for the BJP and the Shiv Sena." This is especially worrisome for the ruling party since even in 1977—when the Congress(I) won just 20 Lok Sabha seats, suffering its worst losses barring the present general elections—the party had won all the 11 seats from Vidarbha. This year, although Union external affairs minister Narasimha Rao and AICC(I) General Secretary Ghulam Nabi Azad have posted victories, the BJP has won four seats and the CPI has captured one. This is significant for the BJP, especially since the RSS is headquartered in Nagpur—Vidarbha's premier city. This breakthrough will help it erase the stigma of being just a 'Brahmin-Bania sideshow'.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

In neighbouring Marathwada, the BJP won another seat while the Sena bagged two, including the prestigious Aurangabad seat—from where Rajiv Gandhi launched the Congress(I) campaign in the state. Marathwada has a higher than average Muslim population, and has been the scene of renewed communal conflict ever since the Sena's entry here some years ago. Nevertheless, Sena leaders said even Muslims voted for their candidates, a claim described as "a total lie" by Pawar.

Whatever may be the truth behind the controversy about the pattern of Muslim voting, it seems clear that the Other Backward Classes (OBC) like the Malis, Vanjaris and Dhungars now constitute the backbone of the Sena's victory trail. Comprising virtually half the state's population, they have been historically overshadowed by the Marathas, who are less than a quarter of the population, but dominate the Congress(I). The Sena—though led largely by the Brahmins—has now given OBC a new and militant voice.

The Hindutva juggernaut has marginalised even the formidable peasant leader Sharad Joshi in his strongholds of Nasik and Vidarbha. An optimistic Sena chief Bal Thackeray exulted: "The foundation has been laid for our victory in the impending assembly elections."

What does seem clear is that the Sena-BJP combine has stepped into the vacuum in the Opposition created by the return of Pawar and his Congress(S) followers to the Congress(I) fold three years back.

—M. RAHMAN

GUJARAT

Hindu Wrath

Communalism holds sway, defying caste equations

COMMUNALISM got the better of casteism in Gujarat. The Congress(I)'s carefully calculated KHAM equation (Kshatriya, Harijan, Adivasi and Muslim) got completely wiped off the electoral blackboard as the Hindus voted en bloc for the Opposition, routing the ruling party, which could pick up just three of the state's 26 Lok Sabha seats—one in each of the three chief regions, south Gujarat, central Gujarat and Saurashtra. In the north, it drew a blank. In sharp contrast was the performance of the Opposition. The BJP won with huge margins in all the 12 seats it contested, while the Janata Dal gained 11, giving the Opposition 23 Lok Sabha seats in all—ironically, the same number that the Congress(I) had won in 1984. The Congress(I)'s performance was far worse than in 1977—when it had managed to retain 10 seats.

Caste considerations don't seem to have been important in the elections at all. But that's not cause for rejoicing. The reason for casteism taking a back seat was simply that it was overwhelmed by communal considerations. The Hindu wave meant that voters plumped for the Opposition sending the Congress(I)'s intricate caste calculations awry. Says Professor Pravin Sheth, a political scientist: "The victory margins of opposition candidates in Other Backward Classes (OBC) areas show that even they have voted overwhelmingly for the Opposition. This is clearly a result of the Hindu wave created by the Ram Janmabhoomi issue." Chief Minister Amarsinh Chaudhary attributes his party's drubbing to the same reasons.

The Vishwa Hindu Parishad's (VHP) Ramshila pujas in about 8,000 villages had united Hindus in the rural hinterland. And a string of communal flare-ups on poll eve had sent them scurrying into the BJP's lap. The Congress(I) was projected as a "mischievous enemy of the Hindus," a line that served well not only the BJP but also the Janata Dal. The upshot was that many Congress(I) stalwarts faced humiliating defeats: Minister of state for finance B.K. Gadhvi who lost by a whopping 2.50 lakh votes, former PCC(I) chief Ahmed Patel and former Union minister Yogendra Makwana who lost by 2.13 lakh votes. In 13 constituencies, the Congress(I)'s margin of defeat ranged between 1.35 lakh and 2.68 lakh votes.

Several factors contributed to sealing the fate of the Congress(I). The Bofors scandal was a major campaign issue as in most other parts of the country. And along with the corruption charges against Rajiv Gandhi were those against Chaudhary and his ministerial colleagues. Even more damaging was the open split in the party between Chaudhary's men and supporters of former chief minister Madhavsinh Solanki, who worked to undermine each other. Asks Yashwant Shah, editor of the daily, Jai Hind: "Can a divided house remain intact?"

Other issues too played a role. Despite a record crop of groundnut, groundnut oil prices have soared. And the two farmers' bodies, the Bharatiya Kisan Sangh and the Khedut Samanvay Samiti, too issued a call to vote against the Congress(I). So in the farmers' eyes, the Congress(I) was virtually enemy number one. Clearly, the Congress(I)'s cup of woe was running over.

But despite all this, the party may still have managed to scrape through. That it did not was due to one overwhelming reason—that the Opposition managed to bury its differences and confronted the Congress(I) in one-to-one contests in all the seats. State BJP chief Shankarsinh Vaghela's words before the elections seem to have been prophetic. He had said then: "The Janata Dal's chakra will prove to be the Congress(I)'s kalchakra and the BJP's lotus will herald the emergence of a new beginning."

How important opposition unity was can be seen from two cases. In Vadodara, the Janata Dal's victory was ensured after its rebel candidate Jaspal Singh decided to retire from the contest. In Bhavnagar, the rebel Janata Dal candidate in the fray refused to withdraw and the Janata Dal candidate, state Secretary General Pravinsinh Jadeja, lost.

Perhaps there is a lesson in that somewhere for the Congress(I).

—UDAY MAHURKAR

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

In its warp, in its weft, in its weave...

India. Primordial, deep, faceted. The wellspring of countless creative impulses. Palpably alive, to this very day. Strikingly and most colourfully manifest in the handspun magic of its fabrics. The handlooms of India. Resplendent, intricate, patterned, rustic, sophisticated, earthy, ethereal. In Indian handlooms rests India's very soul.

Handloom House's entire National Design Collections at specially subsidized prices – right through the year.

...India lives.

handloom house

Sarees ○ Dress Materials ○ Readymades ○ Furnishings ○ Carpets ○ Bed, Bath & Table Linen

THE ORIGINAL ONE STOP SHOP

Ahmedabad • Bangalore • Baroda • Bombay • Calcutta • Chandigarh • Coimbatore • Delhi • Ernakulam • Gorakhpur • Hyderabad • Imphal • Jaipur Madras • Madurai • Patna • Ranchi • Secunderabad • Surat • Vijayawada • Vishakapatnam.

Interact : AIH : 175

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Sheikh Omar al Khemir.

The world is his playground. And his nineteen oil wells keep him busy.

When he's not solving an OPEC crisis, he's racing his prize horses.

Or buying departmental stores.

"I am not the easiest man to please", he admits between forkfuls of Black Forest, "but these Germans have come up with an idea I can't fault.

The Hansa Aqua Mixer."

"Tell me habibi, do you think they'll let me buy the company?"

For a free booklet, write to : Auto Controls Pvt. Ltd. (A Ranutrol Group Company), Home Improvement Division. Corporate Office ☐ F-85, Okhla Indl. Area, Phase-I, NEW DELHI-110 020. Tel : 683 6001. North Zone ☐ X-37, Okhla Indl. Area, Phase-II, NEW DELHI-110 020. Tel : 63 3494, 684 5055. ☐ 1108, Sector 33C, CHANDIGARH-160 031. East Zone ☐ Flat No. 5-1, Stephen Court, 18A, Park Street, CALCUTTA-700 016. Tel : 29 1755.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The Ranutrol Hansa Aqua Mixer. The world's most elegant way of mixing water, with pleasure.

Flawless to the minutest detail. Functional adornments in the finest settings in over forty countries.

An exquisitely crafted range with the distinctly superior ceramic cartridge technology. Pioneered and perfected by Hansa Metallwerke AG of West Germany. Brought to India by the Ranutrol Group. For the discerning few.

RANUTROL HANSA
AQUA MIXER
From Hansa Metallwerke AG, West Germany.

TECHNOLOGY QUALITY SERVICE
RANUTROL GROUP

South Zone □ Flat No. A-4, 2nd Floor, Parsan Menere, 602, Anna Salai, MADRAS-600 006. Tel: 86 7121 □ Natraj Complex, 2nd Floor, 9, Residency Road, Richmond Circle, BANGALORE-560 0
Tel : 21 2846, 21 4683, 21 5429. West Zone □ 114, 1st Floor, A2 Building, Shah & Nahar Indl. Estate, Lower Parel, BOMBAY-400 013. Tel : 492 0297, 492 7125 □ 1012, Embassy Cen Nariman Point, BOMBAY-400 021. Tel : 23 3629, 23 4420.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Enterprise/D/ACL

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Germany's leading bank is now in Bombay and New Delhi.

The successful introduction of products to worldwide markets requires a bank with international resources. Deutsche Bank, with offices in more than 40 countries around the globe, is such a bank.

First-hand information, international know-how and professional advice on business trends and prospects are but a few of the advantages Deutsche Bank offers.

Because ultimately all business is local business, ask the bank that is at home wherever your business may take you.

Ask Deutsche Bank.

Deutsche Bank

Deutsche Bank AG
Bombay Branch, Tulsiani Chambers
Nariman Point,
Bombay 400021
Tel: 22/223262, 22/223292

Deutsche Bank AG
New Delhi Branch, Tolstoy House
15 – 17 Tolstoy Marg,
New Delhi 110001
Tel: 11/3313629, 11/3324079

Deutsche Bank's presence in the Asia/Pacific region: Bangkok, Beijing, Colombo, Hong Kong, Jakarta, Karachi, Kuala Lumpur, Lahore, Macau, Manila, Melbourne, Nagoya, Osaka, Pusan, Seoul, Singapore, Surabaya, Sydney, Taipei, Tokyo

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Giants and Giant-Killers

This was expected to be the most tumultuous general election ever. And it has run true to form. Fought with all the stops pulled out, it has seen many a stalwart come a cropper, and many an unknown steal the limelight. A list of the giants who were felled, the giant-killers who felled them, and the dark horses who romped home winners.

BUTA SINGH, Congress(I), Jalore, Rajasthan

LOST BY 53,405 VOTES

RAGHU RAI

THE Buta is on the other foot. Rajiv's hatchetman and all-powerful home minister Buta Singh failed to keep his own electoral house in order, humiliated by a virtual unknown in Jalore. For the party, Buta's defeat was easily the most embarrassing. The number two man in Rajiv's cabinet, Buta had nursed the arid Rajasthan constituency with a mother's fervour, but was engulfed by a saffron wave—sadhus of the Vishwa Hindu Parishad who campaigned against him with equal fervour. Even Buta's bid to fight fire with fire—a Delhi tantric said the burly Sikh had paid him a large sum to perform a havan to ensure his win—failed to check the slide. His BJP rival, Kailash Meghwal, literally made the capital with a highly communalised campaign. Said a bitter Buta: "They had marked me for attack on the Ayodhya issue. This was not a political campaign." The trishul, obviously, proved mightier than the hatchet.

"They'd marked me for attack on the Ayodhya issue. This wasn't a political campaign."

S. JAIPAL REDDY, Janata Dal, Mahbubnagar, Andhra Pradesh

LOST BY 30,000 VOTES

THE greatest loss to the Lok Sabha will undoubtedly be the articulate and convivial Jaipal Reddy, the Janata Dal's general secretary. A fiery orator and astute parliamentarian, Reddy was the Opposition's main battering ram in the eighth Lok Sabha—a solidly effective counter to the loudspeakers of the Congress(I) such as K.K. Tewari and Kalpnath Rai.

Reddy's loss, by a wide margin, to Congress(I) candidate M. Mallikarjun, was clearly because of the anti-NTR wave that swept the state into the waiting hand of the Congress(I). Charged Reddy: "Rama Rao had outraged the democratic sensibilities of educated people by his style of functioning. By clubbing the Lok Sabha and assembly election together, he made defeat inescapable." Reddy is being tipped to get a Rajya Sabha nomination so he may still have his say in Parliament.

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

"Rama Rao had outraged the people by his style of functioning."

MOHSINA KIDWAI, Congress(I), Meerut, Uttar Pradesh

LOST BY 1,22,041 VOTES

TWO years ago when she visited her Meerut constituency in Uttar Pradesh after communal riots devastated the city, Union minister for urban development Mohsina Kidwai was greeted with humiliating chants of "Go back, Go back". That should have been warning enough. This time, the people really did send her packing—by a margin of over 1,22,000 votes. Kidwai, seasoned politician that she is, had seen the graffiti on the wall and sought to contest from elsewhere. But the high command's quixotic match of candidates and constituencies ignored her claims. Once again, it was the polarisation of the communal vote that eased the way for her Janata Dal opponent, Harish Pal. Said one of Kidwai's aides: "Our strong constituency was the Muslims, and we lost that."

The loss of the support of Muslims caused her defeat at the hustings.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

K. NATWAR SINGH, Congress(I), Mathura, Uttar Pradesh

LOST BY 37,688 VOTES

MATHURA is barely 36 km from his house in Bharatpur. But for minister of state for external affairs Natwar Singh, it might have been located in a foreign country for all the good it did. Barred from contesting from his home constituency of Bharatpur—famed for its bird sanctuary—by the high command, Natwar was forced into electoral migration to the holy city of neighbouring Mathura.

J.N. NEGI

In electoral terms, it could have been Siberia. As far as the electorate was concerned, Natwar was clearly an external affair. The sitting Janata Dal MP, Manvendra Singh, who had already established a strong local presence, was preferable to an 'outsider'.

"The communal tinge to the opposition campaign lost us the Muslims."

However, it was the city's powerful religious ambience that Natwar sees as the main reason for his defeat. "The Muslims were angry with us. And the communal tinge to the opposition campaign lost us the whole community," he says, adding rather undiplomatically that it was the "low level of campaign" that disgusted him more than the electoral veto.

RAJESH PILOT, Congress(I), Bharatpur, Rajasthan

LOST BY 70,452 VOTES

THE Congress(I) high command's decision to shunt surface transport minister Rajesh Pilot to Bharatpur was clearly a travesty of electoral judgement. Pilot had been assiduously nursing his own neighbouring Dausa constituency for the last five years, but was inexplicably fielded from Bharatpur. That lost him the election even before it had begun.

In village after dusty village, Pilot lamely admitted: "We are like travellers with our bags packed. Wherever the leaders want us to go, we go." And he went. Even his constant pledge, "I promise you that what all I did for Dausa, I will do here", cut no ice. As far as the electorate was concerned, he could have told that to the birds. Admits Pilot: "We must have done something to annoy the people."

"We must have done something to annoy the people. I respect the verdict."

BHAWAN SINGH

M.J. AKBAR, Congress(I), Kishanganj, Bihar

WON BY 35,000 VOTES

THE bush telegraph in the Kishanganj constituency had given him up as a lost cause. But lost causes seem to be something that former Telegraph editor M.J. Akbar thrives on. Having quit journalism to contest from this dusty outpost,

"It's a privilege to represent a constituency which has thrown out communal forces."

Akbar put his neck on the electoral block—the first time he set foot in Kishanganj was a month ago. But Akbar's victory was one of the major election surprises, more so in Bihar. The triangular contest split the Muslim vote between his two opponents. Akbar's closeness to Rajiv Gandhi and his own tireless campaigning also helped. Says Akbar: "It's a privilege to represent a constituency which has consciously thrown out communal forces." And knowing Akbar's secular credentials, that must be a privilege he really cherishes.

JAGDISH TYTLER, Congress(I), Sadar, Delhi

LOST BY 32,099 VOTES

AS one of Delhi's political dons, Jagdish Tytler seemed electorally secure in the capital's Sadar constituency, which he had husbanded carefully for the last 10 years. But the minister of state for food processing found his electoral goose had been cooked this time round. Up against a formidable rival—the BJP's national secretary, Vijay Kumar Malhotra—Tytler was pipped at the post, falling behind in the last round of counting. For the Gandhi family loyalist, however, it was the long memory of the electorate that contributed to his shock defeat. His suspected involvement in the 1984 anti-Sikh riots lost him the vote of the community which has a sizeable presence in the area. As Tytler admitted: "Members of a particular community were incited to vote against me."

"A particular community was incited to vote against me."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ted Watch & Jewellery Stores (Telephone Nos.): BOMBAY: Tribhovandas Bhimji Zaveri: 341010 ● A.K. Motiwala Jewellers: 6428081 ● Apsara Pen Mart: 271101 ● Cliftons: 264288
Time: 6490011 ● Lawrence Watch Co: 2048416, 2040130 ● Marcks & Co: 270999 ● Akbarallys: 6490612 ● Eastern Watch: 264711 ● Christian Bernard: 4948791 ● PUNE: Pundole Enterprises:
5, 63685 ● DELHI: Johnson Watch Co: 3322002 ● Fine Watch Co: 264636 ● Big Ben: 3320216 ● Mehra Sons (CP): 3324944 ● LUCKNOW: Rupani Bros: 43619 ● KANPUR: Thakurdas
ers: 68020 ● Kashi Jewellers: 212746, 212887 ● CALCUTTA: Rams: 431590 ● MADRAS: Doshi & Doshi: 565118, 560963 ● Chhotabhai & Co: 32024 ● SECUNDERABAD: Ramesh Watch Co:
● HYDERABAD: Meena Jewellers: 231073 ● AHMEDABAD: Vajubhai Jewellers: 401901 ● Kenya Watch Co: 448035 ● Favourite Watch Co: 78395 ● Khazana: 466625 ● BANGALORE: Perfect 77516

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

K.P. UNNIKRISHNAN, Congress(S), Badagara, Kerala

WON BY 8,209 VOTES

IN the Lok Sabha, K.P. Unnikrishnan is considered a heavyweight, literally and figuratively. Just how much, is now evident. By retaining his seat while a Congress(I) wave swept Kerala, the Congress(S) leader has set a record of sorts by winning the same seat (Badagara) for the fifth time. "It is a good feeling to win for the fifth time. But it was a hard-fought battle," he said modestly.

BHAWAN SINGH

"The people sent me to Delhi to be a powerful opposition leader and I am doing my best."

SHARAD SAXENA

A.R. ANTULAY, Congress(I), Kolaba, Maharashtra

WON BY 1,15,434 VOTES

FINALLY, the exile is over. Former Maharashtra chief minister A.R. Antulay emerged triumphant from a hard-fought battle in the opposition stronghold of Kolaba, winning the Lok Sabha seat for the Congress(I) by a margin of more than one lakh votes.

The ebullient Antulay sees the victory as a vindication of all his years in the political wilderness after he was forced to step down as chief minister following charges of corruption. More than just a parliamentary seat was at stake. Victory was crucial for him to gain political rehabilitation. In 1984, he had left the Congress(I) in a huff after being denied a Lok Sabha ticket. He had then contested as a rebel from Kolaba, but had lost.

In the event, the once discredited politician posted a remarkable victory. In a state where the Congress(I) suffered several setbacks, this was no mean achievement. "I was made to stand before the jail door. But I fought against heavy odds and proved myself. I take this victory as a comeback from vanvas (exile)," said a visibly exhausted but jubilant Antulay.

"I fought against heavy odds and proved myself. I take this victory as a comeback from vanvas (exile)."

BALRAM JAKHAR, Congress(I), Sikar, Rajasthan

LOST BY 46,756 VOTES

EVEN the prime minister has to seek Sikar's permission before speaking," was the proud boast of Balram Jakhar's supporters during campaigning in Sikar constituency, a reference to his exalted status as Lok Sabha Speaker. But there was an even more potent, if cruder, slogan coined by supporters of his opponent, Devi Lal, that put Jakhar in an electoral jam. It went: "Chara chor, commission khor, Sikar chhod, Sikar chhod." (Fodder thief, middleman, get out of Sikar.)

That embarrassing reminder of the fodder scandal that stained Jakhar's last few months in Parliament sealed his fate. Billed as a grudge-match, the contest between Jakhar and Devi Lal degenerated into a one-sided battle. Jakhar lost by over 40,000 votes, making a mockery of his oft-repeated claim that "I will smash Devi Lal". For the electorate, the result was obvious. Says Jakhar: "Money power and muscle power were used to the hilt. If the election had been fair, Devi Lal would not have won."

SHARAD SAXENA

"Money power and muscle power were used to the very hilt against me."

BHAWANI SINGH, Congress(I), Jaipur, Rajasthan

LOST BY 84,487 VOTES

SHARAD SAXENA

IT was the bubble that burst. When Bhawani 'Bubbles' Singh, the erstwhile prince of Jaipur state, first eased his royal frame into the electoral fray as a Congress(I) candidate, he was confident that his former subjects would ensure him a place in the Delhi durbar. Instead, Singh received a royal drubbing at the hands of a comparative commoner, the BJP's Girdhari Lal Bhargava.

"The people have refused my appeal to serve them and my constituency."

What caused the raja's downfall was his aristocratic mien and lineage. A rank outsider in politics, he was unable to relate to local Congress(I) party functionaries who clearly resented his intrusion. Singh himself was philosophical about his disastrous debut. "Unlike other politicians, politics is not my profession. I had come into it only to serve my constituency and the people. They have refused that appeal," he shrugged.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The Portrait Of A Winner

A few among the upper league have cultivated the art of making a point. Without saying a word.

They use the subtle language of shade and design.

A language possible, only when the fabric is from Vimal's Worsted Woollen range. A range which demands time (and patience) to choose from its over hundred designs. Each an original. Like these distinguished winners. Who insist on that exclusive fabric range.

Worsted Woollens from Vimal.

VIMAL
A RELIANCE PRODUCT
WORSTED WOOLLEN
& POLYRICH SUITINGS

The Finest In Fabric Hierarchy

Mudra:A:RIL:4968

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"The results have once again shown the people's faith in me."

SHARAD SAXENA

DEVI LAL, Janata Dal, Rohtak, Haryana

WON BY 1,88,000 VOTES

"As far as I am concerned the victory was not at all unexpected."

BHAWAN SINGH

BHAJAN LAL, Congress(I), Faridabad, Haryana

WON BY 1,31,227 VOTES

"This is not the first time that I have won an election."

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

BANSI LAL, Congress(I), Bhiwani, Haryana

WON BY 1,57,330 VOTES

IT was Lal vs Lal vs Lal. The triumvirate who dominated the electoral battlefield of Haryana were the three supremos—Devi Lal, Bhajan Lal and Bansi Lal. A chief minister against two former occupants of the same chair. But two against one proved too much even for the wily Devi Lal. Despite his best efforts, his arch-rivals cantered past the winning post with surprising ease. Bansi Lal's win in Bhiwani was dual revenge—he got his own back on Devi Lal and also defeated Dharamvir, the man who had bested him in Bhiwani during the assembly elections in June 1987. "This is not the first time that I've won an election," said he scornfully. Bhajan Lal, on the other hand, could not conceal his elation in winning the Faridabad seat, saying: "The victory was not unexpected." Devi Lal did manage to win the Rohtak seat by a massive margin. In the process, he humbled yet another Lal—Hardwari Lal. "This shows the people's faith in me," he rasped. The other Lals would probably disagree.

SUKH RAM, Congress(I), Mandi, Himachal Pradesh

LOST BY 28,069 VOTES

EASILY the most vulnerable ruling party candidate in this election was Sukh Ram, Union minister of state for civil supplies. Dubbed "cheeni chor" by his opponents, he faced an electorate incensed over sugar price rise.

The Opposition BJP candidate in Mandi in Himachal Pradesh, Kunj Lal, drummed the price rise issue at every meeting and the posters plastered across the constituency reinforced that message. Ram's ill-advised statement during the sugar crisis that "If the Congress(I) loses because of the sugar price, I will be to blame", only added to the stockpile of ammunition that blasted him.

To add to Ram's woes there were many charges of corruption in the import of sugar. Said a bitter Ram: "I had sent imported sugar but it was not distributed. The sugar issue gave the Opposition a point."

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

"Actually, the sugar issue did give the Opposition a point."

SUBHASHINI ALI, CPI(M), Kanpur, Uttar Pradesh

WON BY 57,014 VOTES

IN the exclusive Welhams Girls School in Dehra Dun she was better known as 'Shabby'. That was more an abbreviation of her name, Subhashini, than a reflection on her attire. But it was her married name, Subhashini Ali, that caused the most confusion among the electorate of Kanpur from where she fought and won as a CPI(M) candidate. They wanted to know whether she was a Muslim or a Hindu. Subhashini, wife of film maker Muzaffar Ali, has been an active member of the CPI(M) since 1969. Her secular platform and political background helped her defeat the Congress(I) opponent, N.C. Chaturvedi.

JOGINDER CHAWLA

Says Subhashini: "We have been struggling so long for the people of Kanpur. This win is a tribute to that."

"This win is a tribute to our struggle for the people of Kanpur."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

At New India, we aim for total customer satisfaction. That's why every one of our innovative insurance covers is backed by prompt, efficient and personalised service.

Be it a villager or an industrialist, New India reaches out to customers in all walks of life. Reviving hopes and renewing faith through quick response to their security needs.

Speedy settlements

Naturally, New India has built up an enviable track record of speedy claims settlement. From organising a $72.6 million compensation for the failure of Insat 1C. Through a Rs.7 crore claim settlement in 15 days for a sunk export consignment.

Down to a crucial grant of Rs.3000 under the Social Security Scheme. To a needy family in Ratnagiri district. Within 24 hours! A result of New India's efforts to provide much needed welfare-oriented insurance covers for the weaker sections of society.

Born to lead

This dedication to providing security, this commitment to quality of service are what have made more people approach New India. For their insurance needs.

New India went on to consolidate its leadership soon after nationalisation in 1973. When it expanded its activities to also cover rural India.

Today, New India has the largest network, spread across 30 countries.

A wide range of over 80 insurance covers.

A premium base exceeding Rs.725 crores.

And the services of nearly 800 specialists.

New India. The giant, 20000-strong insurance company whose success lies on the solid foundation of service.

Service with a special personal touch.

For us, times change. Values endure.

NEW INDIA ASSURANCE

A subsidiary of the General Insurance Corpn. of India.

1919 1989

BORN TO LEAD

A public sector enterprise with the entrepreneurial spirit.

CONTOUR ADS-NIA-164C/89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

STAR OF THE TIMES.

AC 6645-57H

AF 2072-54P

AC 6663-55P

AC 6653-59E

He's got star quality. Whichever face he shows the world, it's there. That aura of elegance. Those perfectly timed movements. Water resistant timepieces famous the world over. Citizen. For the man of fashion, it's time to be the star.

Available at Duty Free Shops in India (Delhi, Bombay, Calcutta, Madras and Trivandrum).

CITIZEN

CITIZEN IS A REGISTERED TRADEMARK OF CITIZEN WATCH CO. JAPAN

SUPPORTED BY THE MOST EXTENSIVE SERVICE CENTRE NETWORK IN INDIA: BOMBAY: Crown Watch Corporation, 1/F, 24 Mahendra Chambers, 136 D.N. Road, Opp. V.T. Station, Bombay 400 001 • 16/18 Abdul Rehman Street, Bombay 400 003 NEW DELHI: Amarson Watch Co., 10-C Connaught Place, New Delhi 110 001 • 71 Janpath, New Delhi 110 001 COCHIN: Kaniampuram Bros. Watch Co., P.B. No. 2582, Broadway, Ernakulam, Cochin 682 031 MADRAS: Doshi & Doshi, 3 Blackers Road, Next to Casino Theatre, Mount Road, Madras 600 002 • 28 Devaraja Mudali Street, Park Town, Madras 600 003 • 116 Royapettah, High Road, Mylapore, Madras 600 004 CALCUTTA: Anglo-Swiss Watch Co., 6 Binoy Badal Dinesh Bag, Calcutta 700 001 HYDERABAD: Khaleel & Co., 4-1-848 Abid Road, Hyderabad 500 001 BANGALORE: Everjoy & Co., 37 Commercial Street, Bangalore 560 001

(For information only)

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ASHOKE SEN, Janata Dal, Calcutta North-West

LOST BY 54,732 VOTES

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

"I lost because the Congress(I) rigged the polls. I had warned my workers."

THUS are the mighty fallen. Ashoke Sen, former Union law minister boasted during his campaign: "People say this is a Congress(I) stronghold. I say this is Ashoke Sen's stronghold. Ask the people of the constituency, they will tell you we only know Sen and not the party he represents." Sen seems to have spoken a little too early. Despite the powerful backing of the CPI(M) and his own towering image, the lone Janata Dal candidate in West Bengal lost his case—and the electoral verdict. Sen claimed he had lost because "the Congress(I) rigged the election. I had warned my workers, but they didn't listen." But it was really his overconfidence based on the fact that he had won this seat every time since 1957(except in 1977) on a Congress ticket. Added irony lay in the fact that Sen was humbled by another member of the legal profession, Debi Prasad Pal, a judge of the Calcutta High Court. That's justice.

JAYAWANTIBEN MEHTA, BJP, Bombay North-East

WON BY 72,000 VOTES

THE Hindutva wave from the north swept Jayawantiben Mehta into the Lok Sabha—making her the first woman to be elected on a BJP ticket from Bombay. Jayawantiben has been the BJP's most high-profile woman leader in the city. Her 72,000 vote victory over the Congress (I) stalwart Gurudas Kamath was remarkable, considering she moved from her Bombay South stronghold to contest in alien territory of Bombay North-East which has large chunks of Muslim, Dalit and Sikh votes. Says she: "Our dream of an Akhand Bharat and Ram Rajya is much closer to fulfilment now."

"Our dream of an Akhand Bharat and Ram Rajya is much closer to fulfilment now."

P.C. SETHI, Congress(I), Indore, Madhya Pradesh

LOST BY 1,11,697 VOTES

HIS electoral credentials were impeccable. A member of successive Congress union cabinets since 1962 and former chief minister of Madhya Pradesh, he had never lost an election. But nemesis for P.C. Sethi came in the form of a housewife, Sumitra Mahajan of the BJP, who wrested the Indore seat. Says Sethi: "In a democracy, the highest court is the verdict of the people."

When the two met during electioneering, Mahajan asked Sethi for his blessings. Sethi replied: "Be victorious." She was.

"In a democracy, the highest court is the verdict of the people. I accept that."

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

Z.R. ANSARI, Congress(I), Unnao, Uttar Pradesh

LOST BY 29,364 VOTES

THERE's many a slip between the cup and the lip. In the case of Z.R. Ansari, Union minister for environment, all it took was one slip—his alleged attempt to molest social activist Mukti Dutta—to write finis to his electoral aspirations.

"My defeat was the result of a high-level conspiracy involving my own partymen."

The Dutta episode obviously did the most damage, considering that Ansari has won this seat since 1971. The only time he lost was in 1977. His defeat, he claimed, was "the result of a high-level conspiracy in which my own partymen were involved". That was easier to believe than his protestations that the Dutta affair was a "total fabrication". Ansari's election had become a battle of Congress(I) groups instead of a direct contest with the Janata Dal. His opponents in the party led by Sheila Dixit played up the Dutta case. Ansari lost to the Dal's Anwar Ahmed, but in reality, he was beaten by Dutta.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

UMA G. RAJU, Congress(I), Visakhapatnam, Andhra Pradesh

WON BY 25,733 VOTES

"It is a very exciting feeling. I have to now justify the confidence Vizag's people have vested in me."

THERE is an electoral moral in here somewhere. Uma Gajapathi Raju, the glamorous socialite fielded by the Congress(I) from the prestigious seat of Visakhapatnam was given no chance of winning. Her husband Anand, a scion of the princely house of Vizianagaram, was, on the other hand, considered a sure bet. One of the original founder-members of the Telugu Desam, Anand had joined the Congress(I) party earlier this year. With the pro-Congress(I) wave in the state, Anand seemed to have his Bobbili constituency sewn up tight.

In the event, it was Uma—she got the party ticket only at the last moment—who waltzed through by over 25,000 votes over her nearest rival M.V.V.S. Murthy. Anand lost by 40,000 votes as the voters apparently felt that his chameleon-like qualities of changing political colour should not be encouraged.

Even as her husband was licking his wounds which would take some time to heal, Uma was ecstatic: "It is a very exciting feeling being elected. I have to now justify the confidence that the people of Vizag have vested in me." Especially now that she wears the electoral pants in the family.

AHMED PATEL, Congress(I), Bharuch, Gujarat

LOST BY 18,909 VOTES

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

"It was a defeat of secularism rather than mine."

HIS supporters have a favourite quote: "Only a miracle can lead to his defeat." It wasn't really a miracle, although it did have much to do with religion—swarms of saffron-clad sadhus and volunteers of the Vishwa Hindu Parishad and the RSS. Their highly communalised campaign, which was spread to the remotest corners of Bharuch, spelt electoral doom for Ahmed Patel, former parliamentary secretary to the prime minister and Gujarat Pradesh Congress(I) president. Patel happens to be the only Muslim Lok Sabha member from Gujarat and Bharuch has been his pocket borough since 1977. Said Patel disgustedly: "It was a defeat of secularism rather than mine."

SHYAMA SINHA, Congress(I), Aurangabad, Bihar

LOST BY 66,493 VOTES

AURANGABAD is called the Chittorgarh of Bihar. Few citadels are as durable—it has been represented virtually uninterrupted by Bihar Chief Minister S.N. Sinha. But by putting up his daughter-in-law Shyama Sinha as the Congress(I) candidate, the chief minister had clearly over-stepped electoral limits.

Shyama, an articulate Delhi socialite, was obviously a misfit in this predominantly rural and Rajput-dominated constituency. Says Shyama, whose defeat is a setback for Sinha: "The vote against the Congress(I) is unfortunately an endorsement of communal politics in the state." And perhaps family politics as well?

"The vote against the Congress(I) is an endorsement of communal politics in the state."

RAM VILAS PASWAN, Janata Dal, Hajipur, Bihar

WON BY 4,98,377 VOTES

THE love affair between the electorate and the candidate grows more amorous with each outing. Ram Vilas Paswan of the Janata Dal has bettered his own record for the largest margin of victory in the Lok Sabha polls. He won from Hajipur by an astounding 4,98,377 votes. "I wanted to make it to the Guinness Book this time and I've succeeded," he says.

"I wanted to make it to the Guinness Book this time and I have succeeded."

SHYAM TEKWANI

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"Our family friend..."

Moonmoon Sen

In the intimate circle of the home – only the very finest is acceptable for the family. Be it Love, Care or Comfort. And, when it comes to comfort that's created exclusively for healthy living and sleeping — RILAXON is your best family friend. Rilaxon products are designed scientifically, made of rubberised coir fibre.

RILAXON

CARES FOR YOUR COMFORT

Mattresses • Cushions • Pillows • Underlays

Coir & Felt Division of Shree Digvijay Cement Co. Ltd.

14, Netaji Subhas Road Calcutta 700 001

CC-0. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Webel Telematik

Webel Telematik adapts high-tech from Siemens

Revolutionary, not evolutionary... an invitation to feel the power of the sensational new T1200 electronic teleprinter

Webel Telematik brings you the new T1200. The world's most complete electronic teleprinter.

From the inventors of the teleprinter—Siemens AG, West Germany. The company whose technology backs every third teleprinter in the world.

The T1200 is brought to you in India by Webel Telematik, a high-tech arm of the West Bengal Electronics Industry Corporation (WEBEL) and Siemens in India.

Please send me more details of this incredible electronic teleprinter. The new Webel Telematik T1200.

Name .....

Designation .....

Company .....

Address .....

Phone .....

Webel Telematik Limited.
AG Towers, 2nd floor
125/1, Park Street, Calcutta- 700 017
Tel: 299438/299405 Telex: 021 4760
Gram: TELEMATIK

IT/1

Superior features. More benefits.

- Automatic transmission can cut your telex bills by half.
- Faster, clearer business communication : the T1200 arranges formats, corrects and edits matter before sending messages.
- Built-in doctor for instant fault detection and reporting.
- Modular construction makes servicing quick and easy.
- Unique confidential telex facility.
- Amazingly low fault rate.
- Back-up battery keeps inherent memory fully active. Even during a power failure.
- Advanced 16 bit microprocessor brain and infinite memory with micro-discs.
- Low installation costs : no need for airconditioner or voltage stabiliser.
- Quiet as a whisper. No vibration. Ideal for your secretary's desk.
- Enrolment in the Worldwide Telex Directory with access to 1.8 million subscribers.

Bulk orders received for supply of T1200 to Govt. Telecom Authorities, Defence Services and for export.

To know more about the amazing new T1200 electronic teleprinter, mail the coupon today. And get to see the full picture of the T1200. The cost effective solution to meet your communication needs.

O&M 1067A

Webel Telematik Ltd.
Joint venture Webel-Siemens

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

BLENDED DOUBLE BREASTED SUIT, MATCHING TIE AND PINSTRIPE SHIRT. FEELING OF TRIUMPH WILL COME NATURALLY.

The Fabric of Life

JIYAJEE

FSA-D/JS/271

SYMBOL OF QUALITY & STYLE

JIYAJEE

JIYAJEE FABRICS

SUITING · SHIRTING · LEISUREWEAR

O&M 1067A

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

tized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Smooth take-off from Sydney.
Soaring over the seas.
Singapore at sunrise.
Strong morning tea.
And twin blade pleasure.

Touch of steel on skin.
Slice of lather in a stroke.
Cool smooth shave.
A Wilman shave.

Shaving Systems
Wilman II
Smooth days begin this way

Mudra:Blr:Wil:223:89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

KAMALA BAHUGUNA, Congress(I), Allahabad, Uttar Pradesh

LOST BY 39,470 VOTES

THANKS to Amitabh Bachchan and V.P. Singh, Allahabad is something of a celebrity constituency. Thus, by fielding Kamala Bahuguna, wife of the late opposition leader, H.N. Bahuguna, the Congress(I) was taking something of a gamble. It had lost the Allahabad Lok Sabha seat just twice in electoral history—in 1977 and in 1988 when V.P. Singh won and set forth on his momentous campaign to unseat the Congress(I) from power—a mission which even many in the Opposition then thought would be impossible.

Congress(I) strategists had this time figured that the Bahuguna name still carried electoral clout and that Kamala would attract a lot of sympathy votes.

But the anti-Congress(I) wave that swept the north ensured that the gamble failed. Says Kamala philosophically: "In such a situation when the people are voting against the ruling party which you represent, there is not much one can do."

"When people are voting against the ruling party, there is not much one can do."

RANI JETHMALANI, Janata Dal, Daman and Diu

LOST BY 8,415 VOTES

IN the end, Supreme Court lawyer Rani Jethmalani, a Janata Dal candidate, remained an 'outsider' in the tourist enclaves of Daman and Diu. She lost the Lok Sabha sweepstakes from the Union territory in coastal Gujarat, dominated for long by some of India's biggest smugglers. In the tiny constituency of 57,000 voters, Rani polled less than 7,000 votes. Clearly, in an insular coastal enclave dominated by the seafaring Tandel community, the 'outsider' label prevented Rani from benefiting from the anti-Congress(I) wave. Nevertheless, she conducted a lively and aggressive campaign, proclaiming that she was "an insider in India".

"Marginalising the impact of money power among educated voters was not enough."

Admitted Rani ruefully: "I thought I had marginalised the impact of money power, at least among educated voters, but it was obviously not enough."

PRASHANT PANJIAR

ANIL SHASTRI, Janata Dal, Varanasi, Uttar Pradesh

WON BY 1,75,800 VOTES

IT should have been a family affair with three Shastri brothers in the fray. Except that Anil Shastri, the youngest son of the late prime minister Lal Bahadur Shastri, opted for the Janata Dal—he was the only one of the brothers to win a Lok Sabha seat. Besides the sweeping vote for change in the state, Anil's victory was mainly because he was a new face though carrying an old name. That helped too. Throughout his campaign, he harped heavily on his father's name and image. But, according to Anil, the major factor that worked in his favour was the support of Brahmins who were sore about the way Kamlapathi Tripathi had been treated by prime minister Rajiv Gandhi. Said Shastri: "It is the people's victory over Congress(I) policies."

"My victory is not mine alone. It is the people's victory over Congress(I) policies."

KALPNATH RAI, Congress(I), Ghosi, Uttar Pradesh

WON BY 60,000 VOTES

PERHAPS there is a reward for loyalty after all. Kalpnath Rai, Union minister of state for energy, is better known for his loud mouth and almost fanatical loyalty to the Gandhi family. But this time, the man who once said that "Rajiv Gandhi is like a diamond", seemed to have bitten off more than he could chew. The anti-Congress(I) wave in the state threatened to blow the blowhard away. But contrary to expectations, Rai romped home in Ghosi constituency in Uttar Pradesh. Advertising his proximity with Rajiv Gandhi did pay. Crowed Rai: "My victory proves that the Congress(I) party will come back very soon."

"My victory proves that the Congress(I) party will come back very soon."

PRASHANT PANJIAR

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

VASUNDHARA RAJE, BJP, Jhalawar, Rajasthan

WON BY 1,46,541 VOTES

IT could only have been titled The Reluctant Princess. Vasundhara Raje, 36, received the shock of her life when she heard she had been nominated as a BJP candidate for the Lok Sabha elections in a Marathi news bulletin while in Bombay. She is already an MLA from Dholpur and the vivacious Vasundhara had been given no hint by the BJP leadership that she was a likely candidate. But politics has replaced the blue in the family blood—her mother, the erstwhile rajmata of Gwalior, is BJP vice-president while estranged brother Madhavrao is, or was, Union minister in the Rajiv Cabinet. Vasundhara contested from Jhalawar while her mother was contesting from neighbouring Guna. That may have helped. Though a virtual stranger to Jhalawar, Vasundhara won by a royal margin as did mother and brother. The Scindias are finally together again—even if only in the Lok Sabha.

She, along with her mother and brother, made a family of winners.

S.S. MANN, Akali Dal (Mann), Tarn Taran, Punjab

WON BY 4,64,000 VOTES

IT bore more resemblance to an actual battlefield than an electoral one. Heavily armed security forces patrolled the countryside and more were flown in daily by giant IL-76 aircraft from all over the country. In the end, it was a bloodless victory. Not a shot was fired in the home of the Kalashnikov, Tarn Taran, as Simranjit Singh Mann, behind bars for the last three years for the Indira Gandhi murder conspiracy case, emerged triumphant. It was, in every sense, a remarkable victory. The former IPS officer not only won the seat by a record margin of votes but also emerged as the most powerful political force in the state. The Akali Dal (Mann) group, won six seats, giving it political dominance while also giving the militants a shot in the arm. "It is a referendum against repression in Punjab and elsewhere," said his father, Joginder Singh Mann, who campaigned for his jailed son.

"It's a referendum against repression in Punjab and elsewhere," says Mann's father.

P.R. DAS MUNSHI, Congress(I), Howrah, West Bengal

LOST BY 1,432 VOTES

HE was like the boy on the burning deck. Congress(I) firebrand Priya Ranjan Das Munshi, Union minister of state for commerce, was determined to go down fighting, even though the odds were heavily stacked against him in West Bengal. He was forced to accept the Howrah seat under pressure from his opponents in the Congress(I) state unit headed by PCC(I) chief Ghani Khan Choudhary. The ruling CPI(M) had made the Howrah seat an election issue, portraying its neglect and closed industrial units as a symbol of the "Centre's deliberate apathy towards the woes of West Bengal". Determined to prove his "bravery", Das Munshi launched a massive campaign to counter the hostility. It almost worked. He lost by a mere 1,432 votes. Das Munshi, typically, claims he would have won had "the CPI(M) not shamelessly rigged the election". For Das, it is no Kapital.

"I would have won if the CPI(M) hadn't shamelessly rigged the election."

JAYANTI PATNAIK, Congress(I), Cuttack, Orissa

LOST BY 2,04,000 VOTES

FOR nearly a decade, she has been the power behind the throne of Orissa. This was to be the election which would finally put her directly on the throne—as successor to her poet husband, Chief Minister Janaki Ballabh Patnaik. But even the best laid plans of mice and women can go awry. Jayanti Patnaik's defeat from the politically sensitive coastal constituency of Cuttack was a stunning blow not only to the Congress(I) but also to Patnaik, the longest serving chief minister in the ruling party. Her nemesis was the youthful Janata Dal General Secretary, Srikant Jena. Despite Jayanti having turned Cuttack into an island of prosperity, added humiliation lay in the fact that Jena's winning margin was the highest in the state. Jayanti attributes her defeat to jealousy in the party: "I not only had to fight the Opposition but this time party colleagues and party bigwigs were also opposing me."

"I had to fight the Opposition plus party colleagues and bigwigs opposing me."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

What did the Skypak Man say to Mount Rushmore?

"When it comes to matters more current and time-sensitive, two legs are better than even four heads!"

We'll deliver. Wherever on earth. SKYPAK The worldwide couriers.

Skypak House, Off M. Vassanji Road, Marol, Andheri (E), Bombay 400 059.

Avenues:SC:489:89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"400 computers working round the clock at 10 Apple Education Centres, spread all over the country. That's what I mean by 'large.'

And that's what made us sceptical about choosing PCL as our computer company in the beginning.

Both in terms of being able to provide us the necessary hardware.

And the service support that's so critical for a computer training organisation.

But were we in for a surprise! Not only did PCL deliver the hardware on time, they also came across as totally professional in their approach to our problems. And displayed a standard of efficiency that's rare today.

What impressed us the most was PCL's concept of preventive maintenance, which was,and still is strictly followed at all levels, in all parts of the country.

Giving us consistent quality of service all through.

And size? Well, even now PCL is not the biggest computer company. But they're equipped to handle accounts even bigger than ours.

Most of our computer systems today are from PCL. And we're planning to buy another 325 odd computers from them in the near future. "How's that as testimony from a company that thought its requirements were too large for PCL!"

PCL

India's fastest growing computer company.

Pertech Computers Ltd.
Corporate office : E-46/10, Okhla Phase-II, New Delhi-110 020.
Tel : 6847687, 6841864, 6846472, 6837379, 6832307. Telex : 031-75163 PCL IN
Fax : 6841868.

everest/d89/PCL/262

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

"I thought our computer requirements were too large for PCL."

Atul Nishar
Managing Director, Apple Industries Ltd

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

More business connections

Now Lufthansa offers you 9 non-stop flights to Frankfurt every week. All originating in India. No other airline offers you better connections and greater flexibility. It goes without saying that Lufthansa also caters to your tastes. There's Indian vegetarian cuisine, Indian music and newspapers. It's all part of Lufthansa's commitment to help you meet your growing business commitments. Relaxed, and on time.

UH/489

Lufthansa

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

RAGHU RAI

The Left now has to join the rightist BJP in backing the National Front government.

SHYAM TEKWANI

Basu at rally; and Nayanar: joy and gloom

LEFT PARTIES

A Mixed Bag of Fortunes

A sweep in one state, a rout in another, and a chance to play kingmaker but along with the BJP

IT has virtually made a clean sweep of West Bengal. And if it's been routed in Kerala, it has compensated by establishing pockets of influence in little red islands all over the country. All in all, a mixed bag. Yet, the mood in the Left is one of unmixed gloom. Shattered forever is its hope of playing sole kingmakers to the nation by supporting a National Front government from outside, while at the same time isolating the BJP.

The reason for the gloom is not far to seek. The little islands of red have been swamped by a flood of saffron, with the BJP winning far more seats than all the left parties put together. In Kerala, in fact, there were indications that the BJP, with its undeclared support to the Congress(I)-led United Democratic Front, had contributed significantly to the humiliating rout of the Left Democratic Front. Kerala Chief Minister E.K. Nayanar will find it difficult to justify continuing in office any longer.

Quite obviously, the Left's electoral calculations went largely awry. With the DMK and the Telugu Desam routed, the National Front was reduced in effect to a single party—the Janata Dal. And since there was simply no possibility of it forming a government with the help of the Left alone, on the morrow of the elections, the Left found itself in a situation of supreme irony. It could still play kingmaker. But it would have to share that role with the BJP. The alternative was unpalatable—to help the Congress(I) form a government.

Soon after the election, the Left, or at least the CPI(M), seems to have made its choice. Senior party leader Harkishen Singh Surjeet indicated that the CPI(M) would support a National Front government, even one backed by the BJP, so long as that party did not participate in it.

Still, that decision can't have been easy to make. Within the CPI(M), there is a deep schism. One wing, led by E.M.S. Namboodiripad, has consistently held that the Congress(I) and communalism (a euphemism for the BJP) were equally dangerous. CPI General Secretary C. Rajeshwar Rao seemed to go along with that viewpoint, stating unambiguously that all leftists in the country were united on the question of not allowing the BJP to join a government at the Centre.

The other—more pragmatic—wing of the CPI(M), whose most vociferous proponent is West Bengal Chief Minister Jyoti Basu, has equally consistently argued that the Congress(I) was enemy number one and that all other considerations were secondary.

Immediately after the election, it seemed that Basu had triumphed though he himself disclaimed all knowledge of a decision. Before rushing to New Delhi, he said: "I don't know at the moment what the party will do. We will take a decision after discussing it at the party level." Still, barring a sudden change of tack, it was clear that the Left would support a National Front government. Pragmatism, it appeared, had won over ideology.

On another plane too, the elections were a triumph for Basu. He led the victorious campaign in West Bengal. On the other hand, Namboodiripad's policy of not having anything to do with communal parties in Kerala failed miserably. And far from having isolated the communalists in the state, the policy seems to have given them a new lease of life.

At the national level too, the spectre of a rejuvenated communalism confronts the Left—in the form of a BJP more powerful than it has ever been. Ironically, the Left, by forcing the Janata Dal not to ally with the BJP, may have helped the BJP carve out a separate niche for itself. The spectre that haunts the Left now is one it has itself invoked.

—FARZAND AHMED

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

A Twist of Elegance

Twist left for blue

Twist right for red

Available in a range of finish – matte black, brown, grey and silver.

Chromatic refills are available in individual tamper-proof cellopoly packs by Luxor.

CHROMATIC

Writes blue. Writes red.

Exciting writing By Luxor®

Luxor Pen Co.,

229 Okhla Industrial Estate, Phase-III, New Delhi-20

Phones: 633318, 6835607, 6833372, Tlx: 031-75069 SIGN-IN, Fax: 011-635694

Bombay: Ph: 6730251, Calcutta: 250407

CLARION D 212

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

When you buy VENUS water heaters you don't pay more.

You buy value for money.

You will value quality when you see it in VENUS water heaters.

Every part that goes into VENUS bears the stamp of quality because it is made in-house.

The exclusive safety features like fusible plug, pressure release and vacuum release valve are quality add-ons at no extra cost, built for trouble-free, long-haul service;

The catridge type element never comes into contact with water. So, no shock.

Country-wide dealer network

Manufactured and Marketed by :
STANDARD ELECTRIC APPLIANCES
H.O. & Factory :
Tuticorin, Tamil Nadu.
Branches at : Madras, Bangalore, Calcutta, Bombay, New Delhi.

In a rare call for service, you need not run after the dealer. Just one call is enough.

VENUS may be the only water heater which bears ISI mark in 10 of its models.

Choose from a quality range of 10, 15, 25, 35, 50, 70 and 100 litres capacity in vertical, horizontal and dwarf models.

Look up to the leader in quality.

IS:2082 ISI for 17 years

VENUS®
WATER HEATERS

Central Marketing Office :
S-2, Green Park Extension,
New Delhi 110 016.

ADWAYE/SEA/3906

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

WHEN DO YOU WISH YOUR COURIER WAS DHL?

WHEN

YOU HAVE TO FACE

THE CHAIRMAN

BECAUSE

YOUR BIGGEST CLIENT

JUST WENT TO ANOTHER BANK

BECAUSE

YOUR CLIENT JUST LOST

HIS CLIENT

BECAUSE

THE LETTER OF CREDIT

ARRIVED 2 DAYS LATE

BECAUSE

YOUR COURIER WASN'T

DHL.

RAKA: 2767: 89: D

THAT'S WHEN.

BECAUSE DHL HAS MORE OFFICES WORLDWIDE THAN ANY OTHER COURIER, YOU'RE IN SAFE HANDS ALL THE WAY.

DHL THE COURIER DIVISION OF AIRFREIGHT LIMITED.

To contact us, please refer to your Telephone/Yellow Pages Directory.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

SHARAD SAXENA

Advani in victory procession

BHARATIYA JANATA PARTY

Riding in Triumph

Party takes centre-stage with an impressive showing

"For our ideological school of thought, the eighth general election of 1984 marked the lowest point in our progress graph. Let the deliberations and decisions of this Bombay session of ours fire us with a determination to make the ninth general election the peak point in our onward journey."
—Lal Krishna Advani at the 11th National Council session of the BJP at Bombay on September 25.

JUST two months after that quiet exhortation, it's time to celebrate for the BJP—and for L.K. Advani, the party's tall balding president. The BJP, making a comeback with a vengeance, has turned in its most outstanding performance in its recent incarnation. The party which touched its nadir five years ago—with just two seats in the Lok Sabha—has hit its acme. And though it is in no position to form a government at the Centre on its own, it can dictate terms to whoever does. Says Advani quietly: "The results have slightly surpassed our expectation."

That is of course a gross understatement. Not even the wildest optimists could have anticipated the superb showing that the party has put up—netting the third highest number of seats in the ninth Lok Sabha. But it was not merely a question of winning seats. The matter was one of survival. One more humiliating rout as in 1984, and the party would have been heading for liquidation—its ideology at a discount, its raison d'etre gone. But weeks before the election, as the party rode the wave of a Hindu upsurge, it was clear that the party was headed for electoral success.

The seeds of that success were sown three years earlier, when Advani took over as party president in May 1986, and carefully nurtured in the following years. Immediately after assuming office, Advani had emphasised that instead of indulging in pointless 'summit politics' the party should work hard at the grassroots level to build a base. That policy has paid rich dividends.

But it was not simply a matter of quiet work. Under Advani the BJP has consciously sought to regain the hardline image it had in its previous incarnation as the Jana Sangh, an image the party had, for a while, sought to jettison under Atal Behari Vajpayee.

After it broke away from the Janata Party to form the BJP the erstwhile Jana Sangh group, ostracised for its links with the RSS, had consciously sought to live down its communal image. The new party under Vajpayee adopted 'Gandhian socialism' as its philosophy at its first convention at Bombay in December, 1980. But the decision caused a lot of heartburn among hardliners. Vijayaraje Scindia brought out a pamphlet at the convention, arguing that the new philosophy was incompatible with the party's ideology. For a time, Vajpayee succeeded in quietening the fears. But the debacle in the 1984 elections was viewed as a rejection of the party's attempt to acquire a a centrist image.

After a period of confusion and drifting, Advani took over and gave the call for a return to the roots. The party reestablished a close relationship with the RSS. And Advani outlined a five-year action plan, directing the party's cadre to prepare to contest about 375 seats on its own in the next Lok Sabha elections.

For the next two-and-a-half years, it went about putting that plan into action. Even as major scandals rocked the Congress(I) and the opposition parties busied themselves in endless parleys and mudslinging, the BJP, away from the

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

HINDUSTAN MOTORS CONVERTIBLE DEBENTURES

With an opportunity to acquire shares AT PAR

Highlights

- A giant industrial conglomerate ranked 20th in terms of Assets and 22nd in terms of Sales*
- Diversified manufacturing activities – Automobiles, Earthmoving Equipment, Power Products and Heavy Engineering Machinery
- A Rs.250 crore modernisation and technical upgradation programme under implementation
- Development of new, market-oriented vehicles like Contessa Station Wagon and Diesel Contessa
- Improving engine, gear box, steering and suspension design of the popular Ambassador cars to ensure more power, greater fuel economy and driving comfort

Rights Issue of 23,00,000 12.5% Secured Convertible Debentures of Rs.200/- each for cash at par

Managers to the Issue
The Industrial Credit and Investment Corporation of India Limited
Merchant Banking Division
2B Gorky Terrace, Calcutta 700 017

HINDUSTAN MOTORS LIMITED
Regd. Office : 'Birla Building', 9/1 R.N. Mukherjee Road
Calcutta 700 001

A new momentum

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Attractive terms. And prospects of capital appreciation.

Debenture Features

- Face Value : Rs.200 per Debenture
- Interest : 12.5% p.a. from the date of realisation of application money.
- Attractive Conversion :
  1st conversion
  Rs.50 to be converted into 5 Ordinary Shares of Rs.10 each AT PAR at the end of 6 months from the date of allotment.
  2nd conversion
  Rs.50 to be converted into 5 Ordinary Shares of Rs.10 each AT PAR at the end of 12 months from the date of allotment.
- Redemption : The non-convertible part of Rs.100 to be redeemed at par in 5 equal instalments on the expiry of 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th year from the date of allotment
- Rights Entitlement : 2 Debentures for every 23 Ordinary Shares held on 1st November, 1989.
- Listing : The Debentures shall be listed at Calcutta, Bombay and Delhi Stock Exchanges.

Rights Issue open

* Source : Business Standard Survey of top 300 companies (1987-88)

PRESSMAN

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

glare of publicity, was working on different fronts with rugged determination.

In keeping with the party's renewed effort to refurbish its image as the champion of the Hindu cause, it sought a rapprochement with the RSS. Last October, BJP leaders attended the meeting of the 'karyakari mandal' (working committee) of the RSS at its Nagpur headquarters. In a significant step, several RSS men were appointed to key posts in the BJP. Govindacharya, as a nominee of the RSS leadership, became a special assistant to the party president and started participating in its decision-making process. Another youthful RSS activist, Narendra Modi, took over as the de facto leader of the Gujarat BJP unit. The party's impressive showing in the state has been attributed, in part, to Modi's leadership.

THESE appointments coincided with the increasingly hard line the party was taking on issues like the Minorities Commission, Article 370 and Ram Janmabhoomi. Earlier this year, leaders of all the front organisations of the RSS met at Ahmedabad to take stock of the political situation. Bhairao, brother of RSS supremo Balasaheb Deoras and a key RSS strategist, held regular talks with the BJP leadership. After the Bombay convention, he held a meeting with BJP leaders where he suggested that Advani be projected as a mass leader by contesting the elections and that others concentrate on campaigning and organisational work.

This does not mean that the BJP reinforced its call for Hindutva just to oblige the RSS bosses. The decision was an answer to its search for an issue with popular appeal across the country. And in the Ram Janmabhoomi issue, it found an answer.

Party leaders had realised that despite its being a pro-Hindu party, it was the Congress(I) that had cashed in electorally on Hindu sentiments. Said Vajpayee: "This time we were determined not to allow the Congress(I) to play the Hindu card."

However, BJP leaders maintain that it was the well-oiled party organisation that made the crucial difference. Says J.P. Mathur, party general secretary: "The Hindu Mahasabha, which also endorsed the Ram Janmabhoomi demand, fielded a lot of candidates. Have they been able to do anything?"

Now there is jubilation in the BJP camp. But it's tempered with caution. Party leaders regard the party's good electoral performance as just a stage on the road to the ultimate goal. The decision not to join the Government has been guided by a clear long-term perspective. The memories of the Janata fiasco are still fresh. Nor have party members forgotten the way the question of dual membership in the RSS was raised while they were in the Janata Party. The party is wary of a repetition of that scenario if it joins the coalition.

Besides, the party feels that even if the National Front forms a government, sooner rather than later, controversies will surround it since most of its leaders have their roots in Congress culture. Joining such a government that is unlikely to complete its full term, it reasons, would only sully its own image. At the same time, not supporting the National Front in its bid to form a government would amount to letting down the electorate since it too fought the elections essentially on an anti-Congress(I) plank. The party would rather prefer to form governments in at least four of the states scheduled to go to the polls shortly. At the same time it plans to expand its base, especially in the east and south where it is comparatively weak.

Party strategists reckon that it will be some time before the Congress(I) recovers from the shock of its current defeat. At the same time, the bickering and infighting within the Janata Dal, they reason, will create a political vacuum in the country in which the BJP can expand rapidly. The time for the next big move, they believe, would be during the next general election by when the party would be in a position to make a serious bid for power at the Centre.

However, that situation may arise far sooner than BJP strategists make allowances for. The National Front government is likely to be pulled in diametrically opposite directions under pressure from the Left and the BJP. On crucial policy matters, the Left and the BJP have well defined and sharply conflicting stands. It is difficult to visualise a compromise. Some party ideologues, however, do not foresee any such problem. "We are as much opposed to the Pepsi-Cola project as the Marxists are. Only Namboodiripad will have to be more realistic," said noted journalist and party think-tank K.R. Malkani.

Whether the Opposition can provide a stable government or not is a matter of speculation. What's certain is that the BJP has arrived on the national scene as a key player.

—BHASKAR ROY

THE KEY PLAYERS

NANAJI DESHMUKH

Low-profile, he was responsible for logistics management. He also sorted out recurrent RSS-BJP ego hassles.

ARUN JAITLY

The former student leader ensured the flow of funds, and masterminded the BJP's publicity campaign.

GOVINDACHARYA

Sent by the RSS to the BJP last year, the former ABVP leader reorganised party units in the north.

ATAL BEHARI VAJPAYEE

With Advani tied down in New Delhi, Vajpayee spearheaded the campaign, drawing massive crowds.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Most of your baby's diet consists of water. Shouldn't you make sure it's really safe?

Your baby depends on you for care and nourishment. And despite a busy schedule, you make sure of utmost hygiene, knowing that safe drinking water is most important to the baby's health. You obviously take the trouble of filtering, boiling and cooling the water – everyday.

And yet you cannot totally eliminate the risk of water getting recontaminated while cooling, handling or when stored.

Aquaguard is uniquely designed to give you clear, safe, ready-to-drink water, at the flick of a switch!

No more tedious boiling and waiting for the water to cool. You can use it directly to prepare your baby's feed, anytime of the day or night!

Give your family the confidence of water from Aquaguard.

For a free demonstration at your home, write to:

EUREKA FORBES LIMITED
P.O. Box 936, G.P.O., Bombay 400 001.

Contact your nearest AQUAGUARD office today!

Ahmedabad: 446982; Bangalore: 224453; Baroda: 322681; Bombay: 2047870; Calcutta: 347799; Cochin: 352736; Coimbatore: 43180; Delhi: 6416143; Faridabad: 22645; Hubli: 73291; Hyderabad: 844128; Jaipur: 70205; Jammu: 42586; Jamshedpur: 24470; Ludhiana: 26877; Madras: 863309; Mangalore: 32445; Surat: 54224; Trichy: 41867; Trivandrum: 79570; Vijayawada: 65964; Vishakapatnam: 53009.

Aquaguard for clear, safe drinking water.

On-line water filter-cum-purifier

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The Winds o

What do we know about things like Bofors and corruption? We simply vote for the hand that feeds us.

PALIANIAMMA, voter, in East Delhi

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ls of Change

SAIBAL DAS

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

Like paan leaves must be periodically thrown away as they begin to rot, so should be our rulers.
BIJAYA, voter, in Bihar

There was an air of surrealism about last fortnight's general election, a dream-like quality that appeared to project each electoral frame in slow motion. The sudden announcement ensured that the campaign got off to a painfully slow start before it exploded into frenetic life. No less surprising was the rapidity with which the opposition parties forged the face of unity with electoral adjustments.

There may have been irony in the fact that the man who foiled Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi's chances of a triumphant second coming was V.P.Singh, his finance minister barely two years ago. But ironies were inevitable in an election that promises to rewrite Indian political history.

Outwardly, it may

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

PRASHANT PANJIAR

BHAWAN SINGH

SHARAD SAXENA

I hope that everyone will take up the responsibility and not look up to any one leader. Leaders come and go.

PUPUL JAYAKAR, quoting Mrs Gandhi

The campaign was aimed at the Opposition. You describe venom with scorpions not bees.

ANAND SHARMA, Congress(I)

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SHARAD SAXENA

This may be the most open election. If the Congress loses, we'll see the end of dynastic rule and of a party which has lost its democratic character.

KHUSHWANT SINGH, Journalist

have seemed like business as usual. The posters and propaganda; the hysteria and hype; the chaos and the colour that turn the elections into a continental carnival. For one month, the symbols that have dominated the Indian psyche are the hand, the wheel, the lotus or the sickle.

But this time there is a discernible difference; this election is, in some ways, a catharsis. The mood of change that is evident all across the land is not for a mere change of government or an end to dynastic rule. It is a mood that has one strong, if subliminal, message: that politicians will now be accountable for their deeds—and their promises.

It may not endure. There is too much cynicism in the air to allow it to endure. But its portents are powerful enough to eventually overcome that. Since 1971, every election has been tied to a

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SAIBAL DAS

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

Bofors and corruption in high places have filtered down to villages and are ingrained in the people's conscience.
MADHU LIMAYE, opposition politician

Corruption has elbowed out all other issues to become central to the battle.
PRITISH NANDY, editor

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

PARVEEN PUSHKARNA

SHARAD SAXENA

If now the Opposition can enact such dramas, then if voted to power in Delhi they would do nothing but show 'nautanki' to the people.
RAJIV GANDHI, Congress(I) President

cataclysmic event—the Indo-Pakistan war, the Emergency, the Janata debacle and Mrs Gandhi's assassination. This time, there was no such crisis to influence the vote.

Now, for the first time, the Indian polity has the chance of witnessing a two-party system. More important, the Indian electorate has issued an unmistakable message: that the future leadership of this country will have to be more responsive to the public mood and that corruption in public life has now become a major electoral issue. Even more significant, for the first time, India's Parliament will be truly representative, spanning the entire ideological spectrum.

These are no insignificant changes. Taken together, they could finally herald the coming of age of Indian democracy. The blood that has stained the campaign trail to make this the most violent election in Indian history may not be entirely in vain. Indian politics has, in the last few years, overstepped the limits. The bile and the bitterness, the rigging and the rioting, the arrogance and the indifference, are what this country is voting against. That, eventually, is the true meaning—and worth—of this election.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

—DILIP BOBB

PRASHANT PANJIAR

This time it has been a mirror election. You can see your true face in it.

BHABANI SENGUPTA, columnist

We have no illusions about the Opposition, but want a change. The Gandhi Government must go.

JAGDISH KUMAR, factory worker

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

All Ribbon Cartridges Look Alike

Behind This Cartridge Is Something Wł

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ıich Would Change Your Opinion.

It's Quality Control

IBM | EPSON EQUITY | CITIZEN | Nakajima | olivetti | Canon | brother | NEC

And That's The Reason Why All These International OEMs Have Chosen The General.

Now manufactured in India in collaboration with General Co. Ltd. Japan.

GENERAL The impressive type

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

PARTING OF WAYS

THE Shriram family feud is over. The Delhi High Court has called an emergency meeting of DCM shareholders on December 18 to ratify a partition agreement. DCM's units are being divided among the three branches of the family, with a further split in DCM Chairman Bansi Dhar's branch between Bansi Dhar and brother Shri Dhar. Three DCM subsidiaries have been formed, to be run by Bansi Dhar, Shri Dhar and DCM Managing Director Siddharth Sriram. The Bharat Rams will get what's left of DCM, plus the companies they now run. The Shriram family's other assets and liabilities will be split three ways. Shares in holding company Madan Mohan Lal Shri Ram—which has stakes in companies like DCM (around 8 per cent), Jay Engineering (about 30 per cent) and Usha International (roughly 40 per cent)—are to be partitioned. A deal has been struck on the Bharat Ram-controlled Shri Ram Fibres' 18 per cent stake in DCM. This entitled it to shares in the three DCM subsidiaries. The deal changes this because the right to the shares will pass to other branches of the family. Finally, Siddharth Sriram is to take over the losing, Calcutta-based India Hard Metals, which till now was under Shri Dhar.

FINANCING BUSINESS

THE Tatas, the Birlas, the Ambanis, the Goenkas and the Mafatlals already have or will soon launch financial service companies. The latest to join their ranks are the Jains who run Bennett, Coleman and Co Ltd, publishers of The Times of India. They are readying to float Times Guarantee Financials Ltd early next year with a capital of Rs 5 crore. Its business will include hire purchase, leasing and merchant banking. There's also speculation that a tie-up with an American securities firm is on the cards. Among the many reasons for the rush into financial services are the business opportunities India's growing middle class offers.

PEPPY PRODUCTS

COME March, there'll be plenty of fizz in the soft drinks market. But that is only a part of the splash the recently-incorporated Pepsi Foods will be making. In the works are chips, carbonated drinks and juices. Some could even have regional flavours (for instance, coconut drinks for Kerala, tea-based ones up north). Backing it will be a zany advertising campaign. To meet its 50 per cent export commitment, Pepsi is looking at products like shoes, marine products, mushrooms and tea—it has already test marketed an instant tea called Tea Breeze in the US—apart from tomato paste.

SMOKE SIGNALS

WITH production in the cigarette industry steadily dropping, tobacco giant ITC continues its efforts to kick the cigarette habit. The industry's monthly cigarette output has fallen by around a billion cigarettes from the 1986 peak of roughly 84 billion cigarettes, thanks partly to high cigarette taxes and prices. Three months ago, ITC shut its Bombay factory. More ITC factories could be closed. The company has also applied to the Government for clearances for a Rs 48.30-crore edible oils and processed foods project (ITC has already made a foray into oilseeds and edible oils). Using by-products such as fatty acids and glycerine as raw materials, it can well leap into the soaps, cosmetics and perfumes industries. While ITC has applied to the Government to do so, company sources say that this option is merely being considered, and that ITC could settle for hawking the by-products.

INDUSTRIAL SLOWDOWN

THERE are stray signs that the slowdown in the industrial production growth rate last May and June is no flash in the pan. Preliminary figures for July show that the index of industrial production is up by 5.3 per cent, compared with

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

July 1988-89. But confidential government statistics on output in September in 18 industries—with a weightage of 48.15 per cent in the index—reveal that fertiliser, saleable steel, and sugar production is down (see chart). Most economists are puzzled by the phenomenon. Still, a recession may not be in the offing: production in powerlooms, handlooms, coal and electricity is up. All the same, many economists are scaling down this year's industrial growth estimates from 8 to 9 per cent, to about 6 per cent.

WRONG NUMBER

IF CIT Alcatel officials are to be believed, Rajiv Gandhi's government proposed that the Hindujas partner the French telecommunications giant in a large electronic switching systems venture in India. Alcatel officials made a presentation on the project to the prime minister's office (PMO) last year. Alcatel, they told the PMO, was willing to tie up with any Indian partner who had the technical expertise and financial muscle. The Government then suggested the Hindujas (who, however, deny they were involved in any way). Still, some private sector groups like the Hindujas and the Tatas have expressed interest in producing switching systems. And more than two business groups approached Alcatel on floating a joint venture, though the French multinational declined to commit itself.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Bombay Exchange: uncertain times

STOCK-MARKETS

Swaying to the Ballot

Share prices react to election news

AT noon on Monday, November 27, the trading ring of the Bombay Stock Exchange (BSE), the country's largest stock-market, was chock-a-block with stock brokers. Hundreds of them prepared for another day of hectic trading. It seemed business as usual.

But Monday was no run-of-the-mill day. The results of the ninth general elections had started trickling in from Sunday. And as the prospect of a hung Parliament loomed large, some pundits thought the markets would plunge.

They did—later. At first, however, leading share price indices rose marginally. The Economic Times index of share prices in Bombay, for instance, climbed from 474.6 to 475.6. Crowed Manohar Pherwani, chairman of the Unit Trust of India (UTI): "The election results have not had an adverse impact on the stock-market. They are rock steady and it's a good time to buy shares." Pherwani's optimism was premature. Amidst the uncertainty of government formation in New Delhi, the index plunged the next day from 475.6 to 467.1 before levelling off. Some of the see-sawing was also due to brokers selling shares to meet their fortnightly obligation to pay for stock they had bought earlier.

Some share prices too reacted sharply: those of 274 scrips went up, while those of 365 stocks dropped. Bombay Dyeing, which has just turned in a good financial showing and whose chairman, Nusli Wadia, is commonly perceived as being close to the Opposition, moved up on November 27 from Rs 146 to Rs 151, but subsequently dropped to Rs 144. Reliance Industries scrips too inched up from Rs 78.50 to Rs 79.50—after taking a beating earlier—and then plummeted to Rs 74.

Yet there's little doubt that the markets have remained fairly stable during the past month. One reason: the financial institutions, the UTI and the mutual funds managed by the State Bank and Canara Bank, extended what is referred to as "support," a euphemism for heavy buying. Says Bhupen Dalal, chief of Champaklal Investments and Financial Consultancy Services: "Institutional buying was a major factor contributing to the steady market." No estimates are yet available on the quantum of shares the institutions bought. Pherwani merely says the institutions "were around the market."

Mahendra Kampani, head of stock broking firm Jamnadass Morarjee, offers another explanation: "The election trend was clear a fortnight ago. And the markets had already discounted the possibility of a hung Parliament."

The "discounting" process took its toll. The Economic Times share index for Bombay was at 479.10 when the elections were announced in mid-October. The BSE sensitive index, a basket of leading share prices, was then quoted at 738. The Economic Times index then scaled a 1989 high of 495,

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Available With GENERAL's Most Important Quality Controlled Components.

THE GENERAL-DEALERS

In addition to creating quality controlled Ribbon Cartridges, General insists on quality conscious dealers. Only at these authorised dealers will you be sure to find General Ribbon Cartridges & Refills, designed & manufactured for use in all types of ETs & Computer Printers, protected by General's quality assurance.

To make this list, each dealer had to demonstrate exceptional customer service, quality consciousness and outstanding expertise. While this concern for dealer service may seem obsessive, General wouldn't have it any other way.

ANDHRA PRADESH

Management Acting & Computer Services Pvt. Ltd.
Vishakhapatnam-530 003. Ph. : 61814

Premier Computer Systems
Hyderabad Ph. 224660

BIHAR

The Marketers,
Patna-800 001. Ph. : (054) 34597 (PP)

Raisurana & Sons,
Jamshedpur. Ph. : 26685

Computers India
Ranchi. Ph. 27849

CHANDIGARH

ENN VEE Enterprises,
SCO 363, Sector 32 D, Chandigarh.

DELHI

Office Automation Consultants & Engineers,
New Delhi-23. Ph. 671163/5719478 (R)

Delhi Stationary Mart,
Delhi-110 006 Ph. : 2915753/2916424

Gupta Brothers,
New Delhi-110 049. Ph. : 644108, 657454

GUJARAT

B & K Engineers,
Ahmedabad-380 014. Ph. : (0272) 447991

Revapex,
Baroda-390 005. Ph. : 326822/326126

Raj Traders,
Baroda-390 005. Ph. : 328143, 320352

Copymate Corporation of India
Baroda-390 005. Ph. : 551406, 32335

Kagazi Stationary Mart,
Surat-395 003. Ph. : 35131, 54424

HARYANA

Kalpa Business Systems,
Sector 7 A, Faridabad (Haryana)

KARNATAKA

Kulyandikar & Co.,
Mangalore-575 001. Ph. 24632/22677

Kripamrit Enterprises,
Bangalore, 560 005. Ph. : 575542

Brahma Organisations,
Mysore-570 001. Ph. : 33542/21945

MAHARASHTRA

VTC Enterprises,
Bombay-400 034. Ph. : 4943445

Lalwani Electronics,
Bombay-400 007. Ph. : 352403, 380945

Chetan Enterprises,
Kolhapur-416006 Ph. : 28570.

Excellence Business Machines P. Ltd.
Aurangabad-431001. Ph. : 26810

Maharashtra Stationaries,
Aurangabad-431001. Ph. : 25278

Pune Computers
Pune-411005. Ph. : 0212-51097, 59170

Venus Traders,
Pune-411 002. Ph. : 447023

Rematronicx,
Nagpur-440 010. Ph. : 23592 (PP)

Mask Computers & Management Consultants
Nasik-422 001. Ph. 77368

MADHYA PRADESH

Master Computer Services
Bhopal-462 022. Ph. : 552199/551770

Sunny Marketing Systems,
Indore-452 001. Ph. : 4548

ORISSA

Trade & Traders,
Cuttack-753 009. Ph. : 24199 (PP)

PONDICHERRY

Electro Channel,
Plot No. 2, Raja Rajeswari Nagar,
Pondicherry-605 011.

PUNJAB

System Specialities,
H-20/A, Sukhdev Nagar Colony, Jamalpur,
Ludhiana-141 111

RAJASTHAN

Electro Equipments,
Jodhpur-342 001. Ph. : 22411

Bits & Bytes,
Jaipur-1. Ph. : 66862/67613 (R)

Shobhit,
Kota-324 007. Ph. : 27552/23484

Sharda Typewriters,
Udaipur-313 001. Ph. : 26726

TAMIL NADU

Kaarthic EDP,
186, Chinnasamy Naidu Road, 100 Feet Road,
Sathy Road, Coimbatore.

Computer Information Systems,
Madurai-625 001. Ph. : 37276/36750 (PP)

Alphabetics Computer Services,
Madras-600 018. Ph. : 452762

UTTAR PRADESH

Computer Aids,
Agra-282 001. Ph. : 67395/67363

Migra Computronics,
Kanpur-208 001. Ph. : 210397, 241453

Graphic Aids,
Kanpur-208 002. Ph. : 247957

Siddhartha & Co.,
49-B, Brij Enclave, BHU-DLW Road,
Varanasi - 221 005

S.G. Services.
8, Ballupur Road, Near Bhumi Vikas Bank, Dehradun

Dynamic Computer Services,
Noida ,U.P. Ph. : 89-20693/655351

Development Enterprises,
Lucknow-226 001 Ph. 54,289

Neeraj Enterprises,
Ghaziabad.

Bits & Bytes,
Meerut-250 001 Ph. 76874

WEST BENGAL

COMP-TECH Sales & Services,
Calcutta-700 001. Ph. : 279170/262674

Alphabetics,
Calcutta-700 017. Ph. : 449636/444229

Lalani & Co. Pvt. Ltd.
Calcutta-700 012. Ph. : 265847/265912

S.B. Enterprises
Calcutta-700 001. Ph. : 289520

IBM | EPSON EQUITY | CITIZEN | Nakajima | olivetti | Canon | brother | NEC

N.B. If you are an Automation/Media dealer and match upto those quality standards of General, do drop in a line.

Vinkas General Carbon Limited

REGD. OFFICE : C-1/44, Safdarjung Development Area, Hauz Khas, New Delhi-110 016. Phone 667787 Telex : 031-62317
Grams : RIGHTEOUS — NEW DELHI

BOMBAY OFFICE : Executive Centre, Unit No. 407, Jolly Bhawan, No. 2, 7, New Marine Lines, Bombay-400 020
Phone : 294348, 294653, 250955 Telex : 011-4220, 6451

BANGALORE OFFICE : No. 19. Ist Cross, 3rd Floor, Above Chartered Accountants Instt., Fort Road, Lal Bagh,
Bangalore-560 002. Ph. : 0812-234454

GENERAL The impressive type

sulekha

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

underlining the market's bullishness.

Come November, both share prices and trading volumes plunged steeply (see chart). The pre-election gross daily turnover of around Rs 60 crore nose-dived to Rs 38 crore in early November. Says a leading stock broker: "There were reports that the Congress(I) was heading for a major defeat. Individual investors either sold shares or simply stayed out. Large market operators did the same." With the market value of stocks down, shareholders lost an estimated Rs 347 crore between mid-October and mid-November.

Expectedly, Reliance group shares were an early casualty. Between October 17, when the elections were announced, and November 27, the Reliance Industries scrip fell from Rs 93 to Rs 79.50. Quite simply, brokers and punters felt that V.P. Singh would become the next prime minister and Reliance would be in the dog-house.

But the price tumble was arrested by two factors—the closure of the BSE for a week in mid-November due to a fire (an event marketmen described as "divine intervention") and the marginal selling pressure. Companies have flourished this year and punters were not keen on selling shares. Also, leading speculators steered clear of the markets during the crucial election period. Ram Piparaiya, managing director of Aridhi Investments, is not surprised: "The financial institutions are the dominant players in the stock-market today. So the dominance of the large operators is progressively declining."

Still, some uncertainty ruled outside the trading ring. Merchant bankers say several companies postponed share and debenture issues. Says one: "Let the new government announce its economic blueprint. Only then will companies go out and raise money." Some worry also persists about the new government's economic policy. Warns BSE President G.B. Desai: "No government can afford to distort the economy."

Later in the fortnight, however, most market analysts remained bullish and were advising clients not to sell stocks. Explains Kampani, a former BSE president: "Five years ago, political uncertainty of the 1989 variety would have led to a sharp decline. For the next 10 days I don't see any bearish tendency."

The stock-markets are resilient today and their growth over the past five years will be an enduring legacy of the Rajiv Gandhi government. For many Rajiv's talent is better reflected in economic scoreboards—rather than political ones.

—S.N. VASUKI

ELECTION EXPENSES

Expensive Exercise

Crores spent on campaigning and poll preparations

THERE was hoopla. There was din. And there was much dipping into pockets. The choreography for the biggest show on earth came expensive. As political parties in the country wooed the world's largest electorate of 500 million, an astounding sum—perhaps exceeding Rs 1,000 crore—was spent on electioneering.

If you think that number is outlandish, consider the following:

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

► The official estimate of government spending on the elections is Rs 166 crore. But Election Commission sources say the actual figure must have been upwards of Rs 180 crore—excluding around Rs 100 crore spent on revising the electoral rolls and an estimated Rs 50 crore spent on the assembly elections. The total: around Rs 330 crore.

► Political parties spent a huge sum, possibly running into several hundred crores. Estimates of the AICC(I)'s publicity budget alone run to more than Rs 75 crore, including a Rs 20-crore advertising campaign and expenditure of Rs 10 crore on videos. Over Rs 200 crore was possibly spent on "volunteers", the men who man the polling booths and paste posters on walls. The 6,084 Lok Sabha candidates who contested the ninth Lok Sabha elections may also have splurged roughly Rs 6 crore on petrol bills—to name just one item.

Quite simply, inflation, a burgeoning electorate and the need to use electronic media have forced the Government, parties and candidates to foot fatter bills.

At the Government level, the first Lok Sabha elections in 1952 cost the treasury just Rs 10.4 crore, or 60 paise per voter. In the second election in 1957, the figure dropped to Rs 5.9 crore (31 paise). But since then, expenditure has risen exponentially. This year's election was more than twice as costly to the exchequer (around Rs 180 crore or Rs 3.50 per voter) as the previous one (Rs 88.4 crore or Rs 2.20) (see chart).

What's true of the Government is true of parties. "Ten years ago, we could get people to work for very little. Now, we are not only expected to pay cash but also provide food and liquor," lamented a veteran Congress(I) minister.

It's impossible to determine the overall expenditure by political parties, because few know how many vehicles parties bought (one guesstimate: 2,000

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CAREERS WITH ITC

Managers, Legal Department

COMPANY

ITC is among the largest companies in India with diversified business interests in tobacco products, hotels and tourism, printing and packaging, paper and board, agribusinesses, exports and information technology.

CANDIDATES

Candidates should be articulate and have a strong conceptual and theoretical base. They should be intelligent, confident and co-operative, with a capacity for effective inter-personal relations and a practical approach to legal problems. The preferred age group is between 25-35 years.

Experience as a legal practitioner or as a member in the legal function of a reputable organisation could be an advantage, but is not essential.

The post calls for the ability to give legal advice to various Divisions in the Company; instruct and work with both Senior and Junior Counsel; conduct cases as well as make appearances before Tribunals and other Courts throughout India when required; draft various types of agreements based on a thorough knowledge of all aspects of law including tax and industrial law as well as petitions, plaints, written statements, legal notes, etc.

CAREER

Prospects of growth are excellent for the right person as the job offers opportunities to reach a senior management position within a reasonable period.

COMPENSATION

Salary will be commensurate with qualifications and experience. An attractive remuneration package of not less than Rs 7000 (and upwards depending on age and experience) will include Housing or generous House Rent Allowance, Leave Travel Allowance, Medical Assistance, a three-tier retiral scheme and other benefits.

Interviews will be held at the Company's Headquarters in Calcutta. For outstation candidates, airfares and reasonable incidental expenses for board and lodging will be reimbursed.

Please apply within 14 days of the date of this advertisement, giving name, address, date of birth, qualifications, experience, present employment, current emoluments, and extra-curricular activities along with a passport-sized (non-returnable) photograph.

Applications will be treated in confidence and should be addressed to the Corporate Personnel Manager, I.T.C. Limited, Virginia House, 37 Chowringhee, Calcutta-700071, with the envelope marked 'LEGAL'.

New horizons I.T.C. Limited New hopes

India Tobacco Division □ Indian Leaf Tobacco Development Division □ Packaging & Printing Division □ Agri-businesses Division □ Welcomgroup — Hotels Division □ Exports Division □ Group Companies : Bhadrachalam Paperboards Limited □ Tribeni Tissues Limited □ Punjab Anand Batteries Limited □ Triveni Handlooms Limited □ Surya Tobacco Company Private Limited

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Cartoon by AJIT NINAN

of various kinds). There are sundry other expenses that can't be pinned down.

Legally, each candidate is not permitted to spend more than Rs 20,000 to Rs 1.5 lakh, the ceiling depending on the constituency. But there's a loophole: there is no ceiling on spending by parties or by supporters and well wishers. So parties tend to chip in by footing much of the bill for transport and people, which account for 60 to 70 per cent of the campaign expenditure.

Easily the greatest expense was on people—for organising rallies and mobilising crowds. And the Congress(I) had to shell out the most to 'volunteers' because it has no cadre base.

An inkling of the kind of money spent on people can be obtained by a rough and ready reckoning of how much the Congress(I) spent on one of its candidates in Delhi on polling day alone. In one of the bigger Delhi constituencies, it had around 2,000 polling booths. Assuming that there were at least 10 volunteers per booth and that Rs 80 was spent on each in cash and kind, the total works out to Rs 16 lakh. Even if this was an exceptional case and assuming that Rs 16 lakh was spent by all parties put together in each constituency, nearly Rs 84 crore would have been spent on volunteers on polling day in the 525 constituencies which went to the polls. Even if they'd been employed for just two or three days, the sum would come to Rs 168 crore to Rs 252 crore.

Cut to the normally busy Indian Institute of Technology gate intersection in south Delhi late last month. Some time past midnight, 20 young men got off a van. Within 15 minutes the wall of a nearby building was plastered with a hundred posters. Said Rakesh, 18, a college student: "It's good pocket money we're getting—Rs 50 for six hours of work, two meals and a ride back home."

But posters are passe. This has been a video election—with heavyweights spending lakhs to sell themselves. At least 30 video raths—let out by New Delhi's Jain Studio—were on the road. The video industry recorded an estimated billing of around Rs 10 crore during this election. At least 20,000 audio cassettes were in circulation.

THE logistics of electioneering are truly staggering. Hoardings, cutouts, leaflets, badges, pandals and public address systems, in tens of thousands. At least 100 million posters valued at about Rs 10 crore, consuming over 2,000 tonnes of paper.

With a deeper war chest, the ruling party tends to spend more than the Opposition on its candidates. Vishwajeet Prithvijit Singh, the Congress (I)'s election coordinator, provided a list of items (including, for the first time, 1.5 lakh stick-on bindis per candidate) distributed by the Congress(I). The value of the material, for each Lok Sabha candidate, works out to just under Rs 1 lakh. Clearly, this was an underestimate. Admitted a Congressman: "Most of us are getting material worth twice as much, but the party can't disclose it." If that's true, the Congress(I) must have provided more than Rs 10-crore worth of material alone to its candidates since it contested 509 seats.

The Opposition was no laggard either. Take, for example, Andhra Pradesh and Karnataka. In Andhra Pradesh, every Telugu Desam Party (TDP) candidate got 10,000 posters, 7,000 flags, 500 banners, 15,000 badges, 50,000 buntings, 250 tin plates, 50 audio cassettes and a couple of video cassettes and film prints. Before the election, a TDP politburo member said the party would be spending Rs 2.5 crore on all this, with candidates forking out extra sums. In Karnataka, Janata Dal sources said the party spent over Rs 10 crore on providing its candidates with just cash and material. If the Opposition met a Rs 12.5 crore bill for two states, what would it have spent all over the country?

On another plane, many of the 6,084 candidates for the ninth Lok Sabha elections—not to speak of those who campaigned for assembly polls—would have met some of their petrol bills, opened their purse strings to provide tea and perhaps food to their supporters. True, many of these were low-budget independents. Even so, several others were backed by parties. In Andhra Pradesh, said the TDP politburo member, each assembly candidate would spend a minimum of Rs 3 lakh; a parliamentary candidate, Rs 8 lakh. In Karnataka, according to Janata Dal sources, the average expense of an assembly candidate must have been around Rs 5 lakh and that of a Lok Sabha candidate Rs 25 lakh. So candidates of just these parties in these two states would have spent some Rs 47 crore in electioneering expenses—apart from the expenditure incurred on them by their parties.

What is more, there are some election expenses that are difficult to estimate—for example, paint, postage, telephone calls, hotel bills and, of course, travel. In other words, Rs 1,000 crore is not such a high figure for the total expenses incurred on the ninth Lok Sabha elections. It costs a lot to win over that poor Indian voter.

—PARANJOY GUHA THAKURTA
with bureau reports

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

One of India's most progressive companies is also the most diversified

In 1951, Century was just a textile mill. Today, it ranks among the most diversified companies in India. Internationally, it has become synonymous with the very best in Indian cotton textiles, emerging as the largest and most dependable supplier of superior cotton textiles.

To meet the country's vital needs, over the years Century has diversified into rayon yarn, tyrecord, minerals & chemicals, cement, pulp & paper, and shipping... In all these, the Company has achieved commendable success.

Besides, it has designed and fabricated complete chemical and tyrecord plants.

In the highly competitive global market, the Company made a big breakthrough by achieving an export of almost Rs. 100 crores in 1988.

Confident of the unique combination of its vast experience, resources, and professional skills, Century is branching out into new areas to create more productive assets for the country and more opportunities for our people to better the quality of their lives.

CENTURY

— the dawn of a new era.

Century Textiles and Industries Ltd.

Century Bhavan, Dr. Annie Besant Road, Worli, Bombay 400 025.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Said the Vivekananda Rock Memorial to the Himsagar Express :

Indian Railways

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The unique Rock Memorial at Kanyakumari is a testimonial to the vision of a great sage of our times, Swamy Vivekananda — the vision of a new and vibrant Indian nation.

With rock-like steadfastness, 1.8 million railwaymen work round the clock, round the year... binding the country together... transporting every day 11 million people and 9 lac tonnes of freight in 12,000 trains across the vast expanses of our great land. A dedicated team operating Asia's largest rail network and the world's second largest railway system.

Passing through 8000 stations... across 62,000 route kilometres... bringing together people from every community, creed, caste and conviction.

INDIAN RAILWAY
FINANCE CORPORATION LTD.

Come... Join the Fund of Confidence

Sobhagya/443/89

The nation's fast track for progress.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

One of CMC's most rewarding insights has been to reduce the gap between the possible and

Can't be done. Forget it. You'll fall flat on your face. Get an experienced multinational technical associate. Good, sound, well-meaning advice. Given every time we start on another complex and challenging job. Where would we be if we had taken it.

Almost every major job we have done has been a trail-blazer, undertaken for the first time in India.

It started with IMPRESS, the Passenger Reservation System for the Indian Railways, one of the world's largest railways. Indian Airlines carry 10 million passengers a year. Indian Railways carry as many every day. Yes, every day. Indian Airlines got a foreign information technology giant to supply their reservation system. Naturally, everybody's advice to the Railways was to go in for an imported system.

But Indian Railways put their faith in CMC. Could the job be done? Frankly, we never think about these things. We just get down to work.

50,000 passengers a day in Delhi alone. 72 different categories of coaches. 7 classes of accommodation. And 32 different types of quotas. One step at a time. We began by designing an on-line, real-time passenger reservation system for the Delhi area. When that was done, when we had trained hundreds of railway operators, when we had streamlined operations, we moved to other cities. Today, IMPRESS systems are operational in Delhi, Bombay, Calcutta, Madras, Bangalore and Hyderabad. We're now setting them up in other cities. And plans to create an all-India network are well underway.

Flash in the pan? Fluke? Hardly. That was just the beginning. In 1988, we made a pitch for a prestigious World Bank-funded contract, against inter-national competition. It was for a real-time Container

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

...at leadership is nothing but the infinite patience ...e impossible. Bit by bit. Every single day.

...minal Management System for the ...harlal Nehru Port at Nhava ...a. We got the job. They wanted it ...e in 41 weeks.

...was the same story. 41 weeks to ...plete such a mammoth and ...plex system? You must ...t of your mind.

...e said.

At least our work get some foreign help. We designed it. Entirely by ourselves. In 41 weeks.

The people at the Port of ...ouve in England saw our work ...eva Sheva, and immediately ...d us to design a Ship Discharge ...oded Planning System for them. ...e better proof of the quality of than to get orders from the advanced countries? But for CMC that's no big deal. What we never forget is that our mission is to continually venture into the unknown, into new and unexplored fields.

Take the critical Message Switching Systems we've designed for the Directorate of Civil Aviation. The Load Despatch Systems for the National Hydroelectric Power Corporation and the Tamil Nadu State Electricity Board. The Games Management System for the 10th Mediterranean Games in Syria. All of them firsts. Just like the computerised system we're currently designing for the country's biggest and busiest stock exchange in Bombay. Or the train scheduling system for the world's oldest and most complex subway, the London Underground.

Enough. You've got the picture. Anytime, anybody, whether in India or abroad wants the latest information technology in frontier or traditional areas, we're ready.

Because at CMC we have to prove ourselves every day.

CMC Limited

(A Government of India Enterprise)
1, Ring Road, New Delhi 110 014.

Pratibha/CMC-3/89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

WHAT DO YOU SAY TO YOUR FRIEND ARRIVES

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

TO YOUR WIFE WHEN YES A JEEP?

Be prepared: She might just throw up her hands. But then, this man cannot but elicit sharp reactions. He conforms to no known stereotypes: He's at once elegant and energetic, at once urbane and primitive.

Will she be impressed if you tell her how many "Entrepreneur of the Year" awards he's won? Or why he's considered one of the best software designers in the business?

Maybe, may be not. Your job will certainly be easier, though, when he starts talking lovingly about his Jeep. He will confess to be driven by a passion for civilised power. Or his need for a friend whom he can trust through thick and thin. "The Jeep demands so little", he will say, "and gives so much." He might even mention in passing how as a software designer he loves the hard facts of the Jeep's economy (25 paise per kilometer)*.

Soon your wife will realise the obvious: This man has been able to reach for and grab a handful of stars precisely because he's so down to earth.

And be forewarned, she might even demand that both of you go with him for a casual 'chakkar' around town. "After all", she will say ," what are friends for?"

Mahindra
Jeep MM 540
DIESEL

DRIVEN BY A PASSION...FOR COMMON SENSE

*At current diesel prices. Fuel consumption: 15 km/lit. at 40 km/hr under test conditions.

LINTAS MM P7 2537

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE CASE BASED ON SCIENTIFIC EVIDENCE!

No jumbled words. No rasping. Never ever the phone went dead during last so many months.

No wrong numbers. No trace of water seepage.

Crystal-Clear communication at all times ... EUREKA EUREKA

AMA-VT-40 X

Manufactured in collaboration with Ericsson Cables AB, Sweden.

Invariably the monsoons upset the telecommunication network in India. For, rainwater seepage has always proved a menace to telephone cables that are laid underground. Now, Vindhya jelly filled telephone cables are here to change the picture.

The jelly filled cables by Vindhya can not only resist the water seepage but also act as moisture barrier. Often the telephone cables are laid alongside the power cables. Here again, Vindhya telephone cables perform an important task of preventing electrical interference from outside.

And therefore, Vindhya jelly filled telephone cables is an obvious choice of the telecommunication industry.

Vindhya Telelinks

JELLY FILLED TELEPHONE CABLES

VINDHYA TELELINKS LIMITED

Registered Office & Works:
Udyog Vihar, Rewa 486 001 (M.P.) INDIA.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Cartoon by AJIT NINAN

Poll Punting

Elections set off a betting wave

IN Bombay, Sumedh Shah, director of the Professional Management Group (PMG)—the sports feature syndicate—decided to set up a wager. He contacted 40 friends and business associates who agreed to contribute Rs 50 each. The bet: how many seats the Congress(I) would win in the Lok Sabha elections, the winner getting Rs 2,000. Far away, in New Delhi's Sadar Bazar too, some hard betting was on. Wholesale trader Ashok Talwar and 20 other traders wagered Rs 10,000 each, on the number of seats the Congress(I) would win, the winner raking in a cool Rs 2.10 lakh. And in Calcutta's central business district, five leading Marwari industrialists bet Rs 5,000 each on who the country's next prime minister would be.

Suddenly, last month, amid the fever of the elections, the country found itself afflicted by a different sort of disease—wager fever. In backrooms and boardrooms, in media and government offices, businessmen, public sector executives, journalists, civil servants and organised betting industry men furiously placed or accepted bets, ranging from just a few rupees to lakhs, on the outcome of the Lok Sabha polls. And like any stock-market scrip, the wagers reacted to news outside. As newsmen speculated in print and pollsters penned their forecasts, the wagers took note and the odds moved up and down.

Nowhere was this more in evidence than in Bombay, where betting is a major business controlled by a handful of principal operators. No reliable figures exist on the money that changed hands, but punters stood to win or lose lakhs of rupees. With betters widely dispersed, operators made every attempt to be close to the customer. Friendly neighbourhood bookies set up shop in important betting centres. Example: a suburb like Bandra had 14 of them. Each was part of a larger, superbly organised operation. At the bottom of the ladder, the small locality bookie accepted bets and placed them on the bookie who controls the entire area. To cite one instance, Mukesh Malad, who operates from Malad in north Bombay, accepted bets in that region, then placed them with the city's big daddy, Mamma Kamathia. Kamathia is not a mere city bookie; his reach extends far outside Bombay. Punters from Gujarat, Rajasthan and New Delhi phone in with wagers.

The betting began soon after November 2, the last date for withdrawal of nominations. Bets were mostly accepted only for the number of seats the Congress(I) would win. None of the opposition parties merited a bet, according to Inder Kumar Bagadi, a keen observer of the business.

In the first week of November, bookies in Bombay were offering stakes of 20 paise on every rupee bet on the Congress(I) winning 200 seats. Put another way, this meant that bookies would fork out 20 paise on every rupee bet if the punter won. By mid-November, the rates fluctuated wildly. As reports hit the front pages of newspapers that Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi's meetings were attracting thin crowds, the Congress(I) was hardly a hot favourite. Bookies pay less for favourites and more for the underdog because the underdog's prospects of winning are bleaker. So the odds went up to 60 paise for the Congress(I), and then to as much as Rs 1.25. Clearly, the Congress(I)'s fate had by then been sealed among the punting class. If the betting industry were regarded as a sort of stock exchange, then the ruling party scrip was going pretty cheaply—and its value falling by the day.

At the local level, Murli Deora, the Congress(I) candidate for the prestigious South Bombay seat, was in the spotlight. On election day, punters were wagering 30 paise on every rupee on Deora. He won the elections by a comfortable margin. In contrast, the odds on Congress (I) candidate Gurudas Kamat bagging a seat in Bombay were initially 20 paise. By election day, when his prospects looked none too bright, the odds went up to 90 paise per rupee. Kamat lost the election.

Yet, winning a big pot of gold wasn't always the main consideration. PMG's Shah, for one, said last fortnight that BBC's New Delhi correspondent Mark Tully, The Times of India Editor Dileep Padgaonkar, cricketer Sunil Gavaskar, and The Afternoon Despatch and Courier Editor Behram "Busybee" Contractor had joined a "friendly bet".

Punters' forecasts ranged from Talwar's 180 seats for the Congress(I) to a few Commerce Ministry officials' 190 seats, to a Rediffusion—the agency that handled the Congress(I)'s controversial election advertising campaign—team's more optimistic 250. One Rediffusion executive even predicted 300 seats, according to Shah.

As the poll results started trickling in, bookies began the process of settlement, or valan as it is known in local parlance. And immediately after, they started accepting bets on who the next prime minister would be. The candidates in the betting fray: Devi Lal, Chandra Shekhar, V.P. Singh and Rajiv Gandhi. Betting closed on Wednesday, November 29. By then, there were few takers.

—S.N. VASUKI with bureau reports

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

REVISED PRE-QUALIFICATION CONDITIONS

LAND FOR 5-STAR AND 5-STAR DELUX HOTELS IN DELHI

DDA is planning to dispose of hotel sites in Delhi/New Delhi for construction, setting and running of 5-Star Hotels/5-Star Delux Hotels with all related facilities conforming to standards laid down by the Ministry of Tourism & Civil Aviation, Govt. of India.

Land will be made available by the DDA with defined terms of tendering/auction/collaboration.

Pre-qualification Notice for Disposal of Hotel Sites

For this purpose it is proposed to draw a select list of renowned professional Hotel Groups with specific background and experience and from parties having collaboration (a tie up) with reputed Indian/international hotel chains possessing adequate expertise in the setting up and running of 5-Star/5-Star Delux Hotels. The parties fulfilling any one or more of the following qualifications will be considered for enlistment :

(1) The Indian 5-Star Hoteliers having atleast one well-known established 5-Star Hotel/5-Star Delux Hotel.
The condition of minimum annual turnover of Rs. 25 crores since deleted.

(2) 5-Star Hoteliers who are foreign based should have at least 5 established 5-Star Hotels/5-Star Delux Hotels in different parts of the world.

(3) Indian entrepreneurs who are having arrangement/ collaboration with the Hoteliers satisfying conditions stipulated above in (1) or (2) or both.

(4) Non-resident Indians who are willing to make investment in the country by arrangement/ collaboration with the Hoteliers satisfying conditions stipulated above in (1) or (2) or both. They would be required to remit foreign exchange for financing the project as required/permissible under the Rules.

The applicants are required to give necessary data in support of their financial soundness, proven track record in any organised industry and trade, standing in the hotel industry, collaboration with the reputed world chains of the hotels and arrangement of financing the project including foreign exchange etc.

The selection will be made from the offers received in response to this advertisement and only those who are found eligible would be allowed to participate in the final tenders/auction/collaboration for disposal of the hotel sites.

DDA reserves its right to exclude any or all the applications without assigning any reasons whatsoever for the purpose of drawing up the select list of eligible hoteliers.

The Bio-data complete in all respects may be sent to the undersigned (by name) by or before 15th December, 1989 either personally or through registered post so as to reach by the due date.

(M.G. GUPTA)
FINANCE MEMBER,
DELHI DEVELOPMENT AUTHORITY,
VIKAS SADAN, NEW DELHI-110 023

DELHI DEVELOPMENT AUTHORITY

Proudly we build the Capital of India.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Grasim Worsted Suiting

An exquisite
Terene/Wool
Worsted Suiting
collection.

GRASIM
GWALIOR SUITING
IN A CLASS OF ITS OWN
A PRODUCT OF GRASIM INDUSTRIES LTD.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

AYODHYA

Communal Time-Bomb

Dealing with the ominous communal stances that Ayodhya's Ram Janmabhoomi-Babri Masjid imbroglio has thrown up will be the most urgent task of the new government. An in-depth account of the subterfuges and bungling that marked the Government's past handling of the potential powder-keg.

A mere hole in the ground, 7-ft long, 7-ft wide and 7-ft deep, may become the graveyard of communal harmony. And the 15,800 sq m plot of land, number 586, in Ayodhya where the hole has been dug has the potential to become a perpetual powder keg setting off communal fires across the country. It has already taken a bloody toll, rekindling Hindu-Muslim tensions in Bhagalpur, Badaun, Kota, Meerut, Varanasi....

The November 9 shilanyas ceremony at Ayodhya only ended Act one of the sordid drama. To the fundamentalists, the communal bloodbath of the last few months matters little. Ashok Singhal, general secretary of the Vishwa Hindu Parishad (VHP), makes it clear that no amount of blood-letting will stop his cadres from constructing the Ram temple at the controversial site which includes a 16th century mosque. According to the VHP, the shilanyas has taken place at the singhdwar (main entrance) and the sanctum sanctorum of the temple will be inside the mosque's building (see diagram). Says Singhal: "If the Government thinks it has been bulldozed into allowing the foundation-stone laying ceremony, we can bulldoze them further. The awakened Hindus will not stop now."

Act two will unfold after the January 26 Allahabad meeting of sadhus, who will decide the future course of action. But Singhal says he already knows their decision: "They are going to demand that the building of the mosque be shifted or a satyagraha (agitation) will be launched."

The aggressiveness of the Hindu fundamentalists is understandable. They have tasted blood. On the shilanyas issue, they succeeded in forcing the Government to capitulate. With elections hovering close, the confused Congress(I) leadership let the tension mount to a dangerous point. With Bajrang Dal activists threatening to storm the shrine, the Government did not take any chances. The town of Ayodhya was full of khaki-clad paramilitary forces. The shrine was secured with two barbed wire fences, and sandbags. Expecting trouble, more than 200 Indian and foreign mediamen descended on the spot and recorded the Government's capitulation firsthand resulting in protests throughout the Islamic world, significantly in Saudi Arabia, Iran and Pakistan.

What had heightened the fears of large-scale violence was the VHP's determination to go ahead with the shilanyas and Home Minister Buta Singh's assurance in Parliament a month ago that the Government will not allow any illegal activity in Ayodhya. In a resolution, the Congress(I) had announced that it will go by the orders of the Lucknow bench of the Allahabad High Court on the matter.

On August 14, the five cases dealing with the mandir-masjid legal battle were clubbed together and the high court gave an interim order to maintain the status quo. It said: "The parties to suits...shall not change the nature of property in question." The main parties to the suit were the Sunni Waqf Board, the state Government, Ram Janmabhoomi Nyas represented by Ashok Singhal, former judge and VHP leader Deoki Nandan Agrawal and various Hindu and Muslim priests.

But the VHP declared it would not abide by any court order since it believed the issue went beyond the judicial process. Buta Singh tried to dissuade them from laying the foundation-stone of the temple. The state Government took the view that the proposed site of the VHP

R.K. GUPTA

Diagram by B.K. SHARMA

1. Idols inside the shrine.
2. Shilanyas spot.
3. Ram Chabootra.
4. Police post.
5. VHP exhibition.
6. Ram bhajan group.
7. Hanuman temple.
8. Main gate opened in 1986.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ceremony fell under plot number 586 which was claimed as a graveyard by the Sunni Waqf Board in its 1961 suit and was therefore disputed land. At this point, Buta Singh embarked on a dangerous game of political brinkmanship. But he was up against a wily VHP leadership.

On September 27, Buta Singh, along with the Uttar Pradesh Chief Minister, N.D. Tiwari, met the VHP leaders to forge an accord. The Government offered the first concession to the VHP by laying down in writing the conditions for the shilanyas yatra (procession of consecrated bricks), proposed by the religious leaders. Says Faizabad District Magistrate R.S. Srivastava: "At every meeting with state officials, we had warned that once the bricks were here, the shilanyas could not be averted." But the Government ignored these fears.

Clearly, the Centre and the state governments were bulldozed by the VHP in finding a face-saving explanation by misinterpreting and twisting the high court's order.

Instead, Buta Singh pinned his hopes on an accord with the VHP which gave an undertaking that it would "abide by the directive of the Lucknow bench of Allahabad High Court given on 14.8.89 to the effect that the parties to the suit shall...not change the nature of the property in question and ensure that the peace and communal harmony are maintained". This document was signed by VHP leaders Singhal, Mahant Avaidyanath, Nritya Gopal Dass and Dau Dayal Khanna in Buta Singh and Tiwari's presence. But once the VHP got the go ahead for the shila yatra, the accord for them was a mere piece of paper. About 1.5 lakh bricks landed in Ayodhya in the first week of

THE AYODHYA DEADLOCK

Area demanded by VHP for temple

JOGINDER CHAWLA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar
Digitized by eGangotri Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Just 72 hours back, this was an old, worn out floor.

Spartek floor tiles. The most sensible re-flooring option you have.

For instance, they are more economical than marble. And much more convenient than out-dated mosaic.

Being lighter, Spartek tiles can be laid over your existing floor. And will be ready to walk on in just 72 hours.

What is more, Spartek floors are reistant to fire, acid and stains. And give you over 80 elegant designs and colours to choose from.

So, don't settle for anything less. Re-floor with Spartek.

SPARTEK
Ceramics India Limited
52.Chamiers Road, Madras 600 028.

Don't just replace your old floor, Spartek it.

Sparteking your floors? Contact any of the following regional offices or your nearest Spartek dealer.

❑ Madras : 52, Chamiers Road, PIN : 600028. Tel : 455473/456495/452780 ❑ Bangalore : 22, 1st Floor, SNS Plaza, 41, Kumarakripa Road, PIN : 560001 Tel : 3319433 ❑ Bombay : No. 205, B Wing, Dalamal Towers, Nariman Point, PIN : 400021. Tel : 2873727 ❑ Delhi : 207, Prakash Deep Building, 7, Tolstoy Marg, PIN : 110001.

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

November, increasing the VHP's bargaining power.

The Government now tried to wriggle out by finding legal lacunae in the writ petitions. The Sunni Waqf Board's suit which claimed 23 plots in the vicinity of the mosque did not mention plot number 578 which is in the same area (see chart). So the Government requested the VHP to lay the foundation-stone on this plot. Thus it hoped to placate both communities: the Hindus, by allowing the shilanyas, and the Muslims, by not allowing it on the disputed land.

Ram Gopal Dass, who is in possession of this piece of land, was even persuaded by the administration to give the VHP a written invitation to conduct the shilanyas ceremony on the undisputed plot number 578. The VHP initially agreed. But having been given a yard, it now saw the possibility of snatching a mile. It went back on its word. On November 2, Bajrang Dal activists hoisted a saffron flag on plot number 586. Clearly, they intended to conduct the shilanyas there.

JOGINDER CHAWLA

A militant Hindu procession: putting pressure

Wary of antagonising the Hindus on election eve, Buta Singh and other Congress(I) bosses decided not to question VHP leaders for not keeping their word.

Diagram by B.K. SHARMA

THE state Government was taken aback. It again approached the high court and demanded a clarification on whether the spot was technically under dispute. The state counsel pleaded that according to the Sunni Waqf Board's suit, the disputed areas were described by two annexures—a list of 23 plots which included number 586 and a notional sketch map of the site which described the built space as ABCD surrounded by EFGH denoting a graveyard. In its application the Government also said that it considered the spot where the flag had been hoisted to be a disputed one. It stated: "The district authorities have advised the VHP that their actions in hoisting the flags and barricading the land are in clear violation of this court's interim order dated August 14, 1989."

The three-judge bench which comprised acting Chief Justice, K.C. Agrawal, U.C. Shrivastava and S.H.A. Raza, gave a four-page order. On the third page they clearly said that the Sunni Waqf Board suit included 23 plots. They elucidated: "Our injunction should be read to be operating to these plots, more specifically described by letters ABCD, which is included in the larger boundary described by letters EFGH in the site plan attached to the plaint." The order ended by stating: "We clarify that the order dated August 14, 1989, was in respect of the entire property mentioned in the suit, including plot number 586, in so far included within the boundary described by letters EFGH in the site plan." In effect, the order termed contents of both the annexures listing 23 plots and the structure of the mosque as disputed property.

The order again put the Government in a fix. The VHP had already identified the site of the shilanyas and district officials admitted that it was impossible to shift it without bloodshed. Buta Singh asked state officials to carefully examine the order. Chief Secretary Shiromani Sharma in turn asked the State's Advocate General S.S. Bhatnagar to give his opinion and explain the concluding paragraph of the court order more clearly.

Instead of interpreting the entire order, Bhatnagar concentrated on the concluding paragraph, ignoring specific mentions on page three which clearly listed each plot under dispute. He thus introduced a new element: since the notional sketch map was rectangular, the property in dispute too was rectangular—something never mentioned in court. By superimposing the notional sketch map on the disputed area, he formulated an interpretation to bail out the Government. His argument was that, going by the scale of the map, the spot of the shilanyas fell outside the disputed land. Another explanation was that because the adjacent plot 578 was not disputed, the outer boundary of plot 586 too must be beyond the disputed area. So, according to the new interpretation, plot 586 was bifurcated into two parts: one disputed, another undisputed.

Thus, the Government managed to declare as "undisputed" a spot which it had argued was under dispute only a day before in the high court. The Government had given the list of 23 plots which the Sunni Waqf Board laid claim on; the district administration's letter had informed the home secretary that the saffron flag was hoisted on "disputed land"; and the Government had itself admitted that the district authorities had told the VHP that hoisting the flag and barricading the area were clear violations of the court's order on which it had sought a clarification. Clearly, the state administration was bulldozed by the VHP into finding a face saving explanation by stretching the court's order.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Predictably, Muslim leaders were outraged. Says Zafaryab Jilani, convenor of the All India Babri Masjid Action Committee (AIBMAC): "It is a mockery of the judiciary. The same Government calls it disputed land on November 6 and undisputed the next day. We will prove that the Government committed contempt of court." According to Jilani, who is also the Sunni Waqf Board lawyer, the Government's tactics of dividing plot 586 into two sections—one under disputed and the other undisputed—was faulty as the plot had not been so decimated in any of the documents earlier submitted to the court. Says he: "There is only one plot 586 which is a graveyard."

Faizabad lawyer, Mohinuddin Ahmed Siddiqui, accuses the district magistrate of not giving Muslims an opportunity to explain their point of view before giving the VHP the go-ahead for the shilanyas. Adds Azam Khan, of the AIBMC: "The courts can only give judgements. It is the executive's work to implement them fairly. The Muslims have been cheated by the Congress(I) Government."

Clearly, the controversy has not died yet. The VHP leadership says that it had put the matter on the backburner only for the duration of electioneering. With the BJP—the only political party openly supporting the hand over of the mosque—getting stronger in the Parliament, it is likely that pressure will be put on the new government too. Says VHP leader and former IPS officer S.C. Dixit: "If the Nehru cabinet could take a decision to rebuild Somnath temple, why can't the present government take a similar decision."

THE further fear is that much of about Rs 30 crore raised by the VHP for the Ayodhya temple can now be diverted to their communal campaign aimed at dividing the two communities. Commented a senior Home Department official in Lucknow: "On this issue, everyone—the lawyers, bureaucrats, teachers, policemen and politicians—is as divided as the Hindus and Muslims. During the judicial proceedings, you can see Muslim and Hindu lawyers sitting on different sides of the courtroom."

Even the three-judge bench saw fit to mention in its order that "it is doubtful that some of the questions involved in the suit are soluble by judicial process". A sign, surely, of how the judiciary is trying to avoid committing itself on the issue. In the process, it is strengthening the VHP's contention that the matter is beyond judicial purview.

The new government is now faced with a tricky situation. It is pitted against the neo-theocrats of the RSS led VHP who are not deterred even by the revolting prospect of digging up a graveyard. Says Singhal: "If there is a graveyard, it should be removed with the mosque."

As the BJP—the only party openly supporting the handing over of the mosque—has emerged much stronger, the issue is likely to simmer and strain the party's relationship with its allies.

Such extreme views of the VHP prove that the problem is beyond solution by negotiation, which V.P. Singh and Janata Dal had been propagating. The Opposition has reaped the electoral fall-out of the controversy with the Janata Dal getting the Muslim votes and the BJP strengthening its position. But more vacillation on the issue will prove dangerous.

The present crisis over Ayodhya is similar to what the country has seen in Punjab. Once again the Government has actively encouraged marginal fundamentalist groups with the intent of embarrassing religiously-oriented political opponents only to end up creating a Frankenstein. The problem is, once fundamentalists get this kind of credibility they acquire larger than life proportions that slowly marginalise the religious parties and threaten their very mentors.

That the last government burnt its fingers by playing ball with religious fundamentalists is abundantly clear. Hopefully, the new government will not make the same blunder. It's first priority must be to put out the fire at Ayodhya so that the heat waves of communal frenzy it radiates does not take the entire nation, and even the new government in its sweep.

—PANKAJ PACHAURI

Countdown to the Shilanyas

January 1885: A Hindu priest asks a Faizabad sub-judge permission to build a temple outside the mosque.

February: Sub-judge disallows construction of temple "since it is so close to existing masjid".

March 1886: The district judge too declines permission.

November: The judicial commissioner dismisses the appeal, saying: "There is nothing on record to show that the plaintiff (the priest) is in any sense the proprietor of the land."

March 1946: A civil judge decrees the mosque is a Waqf property shared by both Sunnis and Shias.

December 1949: Hindus forcibly put Ram's idols inside the mosque. The main gate is locked.

January 1950: The Government takes over the disputed property, but allows prayers by Hindus in a restricted area. The matter is declared sub-judice.

December 1961: The Sunni Waqf Board moves court demanding possession of the mosque and the graveyard around it.

June 1984: The VHP launches Ram Janmabhoomi Mukti Yagna Samiti with sadhus to liberate the site.

February 1986: The district judge orders the opening of locks, allowing unhindered access to Hindus.

March: The Babri Masjid Action Committee is launched.

February 1989: The VHP and sadhus call for building the temple.

August: The high court issues a directive to maintain status quo.

September: The VHP signs an accord with the Government to abide by the directive.

November 2: The VHP puts up a flag at site termed disputed by the Government.

November 7: The high court clarifies that the site is disputed.

November 9: The Government allows shilanyas at the same site and now calls it undisputed.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

GO FOR THE GOLD

Novino Gold

The only penlite battery with a metal jacket.

Virtually 100% leak-proof.

Novino launches a new era in penlite batteries... with Novino Gold. A battery made with the latest zinc chloride technology.

Now you can forget those awful fears of damaging your expensive equipment. Novino Gold is virtually 100% leak-proof. It is the only penlite battery with a metal jacket and a one-piece thermo-plastic seal. So you can be sure your equipment gets total protection.

A pack of two that packs in the power of four!

In high-drain equipment, Novino Gold gives you twice the power of conventional batteries. Use it in your camera, walkman, dictaphone or your kid's electronic toy. See the difference. Novino Gold lasts twice as long... and more! In a camera flash, for instance, you get 110 flashes, not just 50.

In low-drain applications (calculators, pocket radios, hearing aids...) Novino Gold gives you the same life as conventional batteries. However, even here, its leak-proof qualities make it the ideal choice.

Only Novino could have done it all!

First, we brought you Novino Hyper and Novino Special. Both far ahead of the rest.

Now it's Novino Gold.

To bring it to you, we went to Japan to get the latest zinc chloride technology from Matsushita. Makers of the world-famous National and Panasonic products.

We commissioned a new plant near Indore at a cost of Rs. 16 crores.
We've spared no effort. We've saved no cost.
And here's what we have to offer you.
A penlite battery like no other...
Novino Gold. Go for it.

National NOVINO GOLD PENLITE

A REAL TRIUMPH OF TECHNOLOGY

Lakhanpal National Limited. Makers of Novino Hyper, Novino Special and Novino Gold.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Sista's-LNL-227

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE RIGHT
FOR T
FOR T
FOR T

bajaj group

When you're operating in flashpoint atmospheres, improper lighting could mean the difference between safety and danger...

TRUST BAJAJ TO DESIGN LIGHTING SYSTEM, RIGHT SITUATION, RIGHT RESULT.

Bajaj brings you a range of luminaires and lighting systems. Designed by computers to suit virtually every lighting need. Be it for industries, commercial institutions or street lighting.

Each made to our own demanding standards. As well as to the stringent specifications of the Bureau of Indian Standards, Commission Électrotechnique Internationale and of other international organisations.

For our advisory service on lighting and/or lighting installation design, write to. General Manager (Lighting). Bajaj Electricals Limited. 51, Mahatma Gandhi Road. Bombay 400 023., or contact our nearest regional/branch office.

bajaj

bajaj LUMINAIRES

Spreading Light – scientific

Heros BE-10/85

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SOME FACES, AS YOU CAN SEE, HAVE CHARACTER.

BORN OF A LINEAGE AS ILLUSTRIOUS AS HMT. TECHNOLOGY, GRACE AND SINCERE AFTER SALE CARE DISTINGUISHING THE FINEST FROM THE REST.

CHARACTER TELLS.

hmt QUARTZ

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SRI LANKA

Big Breakthrough

Wijeweera eliminated, but JVP attacks continue

THIS is the kind of breakthrough counter-insurgency forces often dream of but rarely achieve. Last month, the Sri Lankan security forces accomplished the near-impossible: the elimination of the top leadership of the Sinhalese extremist group, Janatha Vimukti Peramuna (JVP). In the most successful offensive since the security forces launched "Operation Liberation" against the Tamil militants in the Vadamarachchi area of the northern Jaffna peninsula in 1987, the JVP has been left nearly leaderless and anchorless.

The charismatic founder-chairman of the rebel group, Rohana Wijeweera, 46, was shaving in the morning when commandos of the crack Rapid Deployment Force burst into his new bungalow at Ulapane in central Kandy district. A nervous colonel leading the troops placed a revolver on his head and asked: "Oyaa Rohana Wijeweeradha? (Are you Rohana Wijeweera?)" The JVP leader, who went underground in 1983, admitted his identity before he was bundled into a vehicle and rushed to army headquarters in Colombo.

More than 24 hours later, Foreign Minister and Minister of State for Defence Ranjan Wijeratne announced the 'arrest and subsequent death' of the JVP leader. With the possible exception of Wijeratne, none in the Government, including President R. Premadasa, was aware of Wijeweera's arrest until long after his cremation. According to insiders, the President was "furious" when he was informed that Wijeweera had been killed, and ordered a high-level inquiry into his death. At a public function, he later said that the JVP leaders had dug their graves with their own hands by not heeding his repeated appeals to surrender. Incidentally, information extracted from Wijeweera led the army to his deputy, Upatissa Gamanayeke, who too was killed.

While the two killings in less than 24 hours were received with relief by the general public—some even bursting fire-crackers to celebrate—many refused to believe the Government's story.

Yet, it seems that the team assigned to carry out the operation was a highly professional one—they made sure that the JVP leader's pregnant wife and five children remained unharmed. In fact, when the raiding officers were leaving with their prize catch, they advised Wijeweera's wife Chitrani to leave the bungalow since the house was no longer safe. Fortunately, she left hurriedly—for as soon as the news of Wijeweera's arrest spread, anti-JVP killer squads reached the bungalow looking for his family. Later, she made a highly-publicised surrender to the army commander. The President promised her and the children full protection.

Wijeweera: dangerous legacy

Though few believed the official version of Wijeweera's death, most received the news with relief.

According to army officials, Wijeweera 'sang like a canary' after his arrest. Besides betraying the whereabouts of Gamanayeke, he also issued an appeal to the country's youth to give up violence. The video recording of the appeal was shown by the state-controlled television, Rupavahini. Whether it was issued voluntarily or under duress, the appeal was perhaps the last act of the rebel who had led thousands of Sinhalese youth to their death since he launched his abortive insurrection.

Meanwhile, the state media fully exploited the fact that the rebel leader was living in style in his newly acquired bungalow under a false name. For example, it said that Wijeweera who had asked the people to boycott Indian goods and medicines had a stock of Indian drugs and a Sumeet mixer in his kitchen.

Soon, there was concern about the JVP's future. With the death of Wijeweera and Gamanayeke, seven of its nine politburo members had either been captured or killed. One member, Somanwangsa Amarasekara, was still at large. The mantle has reportedly fallen on Saman Piyasiri Fernando, alias Keerthi Wijebahu, till now commander of the Deshapremi Janat Viyapraya—the military wing of the JVP.

It was to display his control over the military wing that he ensured that killings continued despite the set-backs to the JVP leadership. The key question, however, is if he can keep the momentum and reorganise his demoralised cadres. As Food and Agriculture Minister Lalith Athulathmudali said: "As far as the JVP goes, the worst is over."

But for the hapless nation, if there was some relief on the JVP front, bad news came in from elsewhere. Ampara district in the east, recently vacated by the IPKF, was rocked by disturbances. Bloody clashes broke out between the Sri Lankan Army and the Tamil paramilitary forces, raised and trained with Indian help but paid for by the Sri Lankan Government. And as the Sri Lankan Government accused India of interference, and India retaliated with strident denials, it was evident that things were far from getting normal in the north-east despite the IPKF's gradual withdrawal.

In Colombo, however, the attention is now focused on New Delhi. It is widely believed that the new government in India will follow a much softer policy on Sri Lanka and help bail out Premadasa from his continuing discomfiture.

—P. JAYARAM in Colombo

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SOVIET PERIODICALS FESTIVAL SEASON OFFER

SOVIET UNION

An Illustrated monthly journal in colour

Glimpses of a fascinating country

Its significance lies in its virtuoso coverage of the new life which has sprung up in the Soviet Union creating conditions and new stimulants for human fulfilment.

With editorial virtuosity and literary finesse, the journal has a wide international reach. For, it's published in 20 languages of the world, including English, Hindi, Urdu, Bengali and Tamil.

12 issues free SAVE 33%

Take advantage of special offer NOW for THREE YEARS YOU PAY FOR THREE YEARS AND SAVE 33% YOU GET 12 ISSUES FREE OFFER VALID TILL NEW YEAR

Enclosed is my DD/MO receipt for SOVIET UNION
Your Choice
☐ 3 Years (36) issues only Rs. 60.00
☐ 1 Year (12) issues only Rs 30.00
(Please strike out whichever is not applicable)

My Name .....
Address .....
.....

Send this advertisement and payment to :

NAVCHETAN BOOKS (P) LTD.
5-E, Rani Jhansi Road
New Delhi-110 055.

MANISHA GRANTHALAYA (P) LTD.
4/3-B, Bankim Chatterjee Street
Calcutta-700 073.

NEW CENTURY BOOK HOUSE (P) LTD
41-B, Sidco Industrial Estate
Madras-600 098.

VIJAY ASSOCIATES
Commissariat Building, 1st Floor,
231 D.N. Road, Fort, Bombay-400 001.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

BHAGALPUR

A Haunted City

In the aftermath of the fierce Hindu-Muslim bloodletting, fearful images of death, destruction and horror continue to haunt the town.

Photographs by PRASHANT PANJIAR

A scarred eight-year-old Agni Kumari with her mother; and a relief camp

THE town of Bhagalpur, wrote English administrator Francis Buchanan in the first decade of the last century, meant the abode of refugees and was "a very sorry place". Almost 200 years later, the town, with 30,000 refugees of communal mayhem in relief camps, was an even sorrier place—a virtual ghost town.

While the madness appeared to be spent, fearful images of death, destruction and horror continued to haunt the city. Typifying the nightmare was Mallika Begum, one of the few survivors of the massacre at Chanderi where scores of Muslims were killed after being assured of safety. She said with eyes glazed with shock: "Mera to vishwas uth gaya" (I have lost my faith). And there was eight-year-old Agni Kumari who lay stunned on her mother's lap in hospital, her face grotesquely swollen after a splinter of a bomb hurled by miscreants in Gaurachakki sliced her cheek.

For days after the 24-day-old curfew imposed by the administration was withdrawn, panic-stricken residents continued with a self-imposed curfew after dusk. And even those who began to creep out of their forced captivity, found themselves emerging into a town split in two parts. But ruled by the same emotions: fear and distrust.

Symbolic of this were rickshaw-puller Mohammed Jahangir of Habibpur, who would not venture into Hindu mohallas of the town, and rickshaw-puller Lallan Sah of Naya Bazaar, who would not go to the Muslim areas. The reason was the same: "Dar lagta hai" (I am frightened).

The tragic theme replayed itself when the district administration organised a peace march on November 21. Not only did it fail to draw more than a few hundred people, but it had to be escorted by armed policemen and followed by army jawans in battle fatigue. The processionists refrained from visiting Muslim-populated areas. Says businessman Aziz Nasiruddin Khan Mani: "In my relief camp there are scores of widows and at least a hundred children who have lost their fathers in the rioting. It will take a long time to heal the wounds."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

And the scars, it is obvious, will remain. Today the victims of the mob fury, who belong to both communities, helplessly survey the ruins of their carefully nurtured lives. Says Mohammad Shameem of Parbatti, whose house and loom were burnt by rioting mobs, in disbelief: "I am the ninth generation of my family living here. In my wildest dreams, I never imagined this could happen to me."

Barely 50 yards away, an agitated B.N. Mazumdar explodes: "Look at what they have done. The Red Cross is sacred even in war, but they did not spare my clinic." Heera Devi and Raju Sah of Maskan-Bararipur search futilely through the debris of their two stalls that were looted by frenzied mobs. Says Heera Devi through her tears: "My husband is blind. This shop was my only means of livelihood."

Mohammed Bahram, a wealthy silk trader, has decided to move to West Bengal.

The 'silk town' of Bihar has been paralysed on yet another score. The weaving industry, which sustained at least a lakh families in Bhagalpur district, is in a shambles. Most of the looms have been burnt while some lie idle as workers have left their homes for safer places.

According to Mohammed Bahram, a prosperous silk trader of Hussainabad, silk worth Rs 15 crore is exported from Bhagalpur. Bahram himself was in New York scouting for export orders when the riots broke out. Says he: "I rushed back home after turning down an order worth a crore of rupees."

Pointing to the bundles of yarn lying in his house, Bahram says: "For one month, no weaver has turned up to take the yarn for weaving. It will take us months to recover." And Bahram has taken a decision. He has decided to migrate to West Bengal for he "cannot live in this lawless state".

Fear continues to prevent Hindu weavers from going to work in Muslim

215 R PIP • 53 cms Full Square Picture Tube • Picture in Picture • Dynamic On-Screen Display • Action Freezing Facility • 32 Function Remote Control • Digital Technology

CORE 208 E • 51 cms Blackstripe Picture Tube • Auto Contrast & Brightness Control. (Bright or dark, the picture stays sharp) • 12 channels with HI-Tec features

5151 • 51 cms Large Screen Colour TV • Crystal Clear Picture & Sound • 8 channels with built-in SMPS & many more facilities

CORE 210 R • 51 cms Blackstripe Picture Tube • Hi-Tec Directional Sound System • Remote Control CTV with a host of features • Off-Timer • On-Screen Display & Mute

2087 R • 51 cms Blackstripe Picture Tube • Hi-Tec STEREO styling • Features like-High Sound, On-Screen Display, On/Off Timer & Clock, all in one CTV • Multi System Facility

212 R • 53 cms Corner to Corner Excitement • Full Square Picture Tube • Increased Contrast ratio with Superb Image Depth in picture • Off Timer • On-Screen Display & Remote Control Facilities

POUSH VC 119 89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

areas. Suresh, who worked for Moeen Ansari of Nathanagar, has not reported for work since October 24, the day the rioting broke out. Similarly, Mohammad Shababuddin at Nathanagar does not know how to start work on his five power looms. Says he: "My workers have disappeared and I have no raw material left. I cannot even go out of the area to collect my dues from traders, mostly Hindus, to whom I sold my stock."

The mutual distrust has got the better of reason. Nearly everyone in the town predicts another round of rioting when colleges reopen. While colleges are not likely to reopen this year, the fear persists—stemming from rumours in circulation that marauders in police uniform had killed hundreds of Hindu students.

The SP of Bhagalpur, K.S. Dwivedi, describes the stories as baseless. Says he: "The rumour that gangsters were caught in police or army uniforms is totally false. What may have happened is that we had given police escorts to many Muslims. This may have sparked off the rumours. I have personally talked to at least a dozen students who were said to have been hacked to pieces. However, I do not rule out a few students having fallen victims." But the administrators admit that even legitimate absence of students from college could lead to suspicion and unwarranted tension.

After rioters looted her shop, Heera Devi has lost her sole means of livelihood.

Questions have also been thrown up about the SP's indirect complicity in the violence that ravaged the town. According to residents, the police's eye remained shut to the orgy of arson and rioting triggered off by the October 24 bomb attack on the Ram Shila procession. Dwivedi, who was deserted by his bodyguards when the crude home-made bombs were thrown, gave instructions to the police to open fire on the crowd. Later, sceptical of the Muslims' claim to innocence, the SP arrested professionals such as Naseemul Haque, a professor of physics, and Kaleemur Rahman, a medical practitioner, on the ground that bombs had been recovered from their houses.

BRING HOME THE LEADER VIDEOCON

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Apparently, it was on Dwivedi's insistence that the district administration allowed the procession to go through sensitive Muslim-dominated areas. Though an alternative route was available, the administration said no community could have zamindari rights over a particular stretch of road. Dwivedi, of course, claims he was ignorant of the route the procession was to take.

Reinforcing Dwivedi's dubious role was the anti-Muslim label tagged on to him after the police eliminated in July eight so-called members of the Samua gang—believed to be innocent by Muslims. Dwivedi shrugs off this charge, saying: "I am here for policing and am not bothered about religious convictions."

Police chief Dwivedi's role in the riots has been dubious, raising several questions.

Most of the violence was apparently perpetrated by the criminal community of Gangotas—belonging to the backward caste—who live on the banks of the holy river Ganga. And in many areas of Bhagalpur, the people have built makeshift bridges over canals and rivulets to facilitate the movement of Gangotas into the town. Says a Bhagalpur resident, Aloknath Ghosh: "The bridges have become both an escape route and an offensive mechanism."

WITH tension palpable, the decision to hold elections predictably confounded the people of the riot-torn district. Says schoolteacher Arun Kumar Mishra: "The election was responsible for the unprecedented phenomenon of the town being put under curfew for 24 days." And the administration's decision to withdraw forces from some areas for deployment on election duty further sparked off panic.

The man who is likely to pay a heavy price, is the sitting MP and former chief minister, Bhagwat Jha Azad, who claims his advice to the state Government was not heeded. Says he: "I am certain that the riots were part of a grand design at destabilisation." But he justifies the decision to hold the polls, saying: "The Bhagalpur Lok Sabha constituency is not confined to only Bhagalpur town. The riot-affected areas comprise about 15 per cent of the electorate."

Azad's anxiety stems from a need to clear himself of the charges against him. He claims he has been made the scapegoat for the rioting. Cartoons and graffiti reviling him have come up all over the town. Ironically, the wrath of both communities has been unleashed on him. The Hindus feel Azad interceded on behalf of Muslim gangsters. Says a nurse scathingly: "Woh to Jha ke naam par kalank hai" (He is a blot on the image of Maithil Brahmins).

The Muslims, on the other hand, are convinced that men close to Azad—Kameshwar Yadav and Mahadev Singh—fomented the violence. Neither Yadav nor Singh, they point out, has been arrested, despite their open encouragement to the rioters. While Yadav was said to have organised the violence, Both communities are angry with sitting MP and former chief minister Bhagwat Jha Azad.

Singh, a businessman, is said to have financed it. Says M. Aneesur Rahman Quasmi: "Tension in the town had been brewing. Slogans like 'Gau hamari mata hai/ mian usko khata hai' (The cow is our mother, but the Muslims eat it) were being raised. And the final straw came when the administration could not even prevent the release of Yadav who had been arrested in August for inciting communal violence."

The district officials' claim that both Yadav and Singh are 'absconding' does not cut ice with the people. Pressured by the mounting criticism, the administration has instead arrested businessman Puranmal Bajoria for making inflammatory speeches.

Amid all the bloodletting, there were scenes of Hindu-Muslim amity. Says Parvez Ahmed, the town Youth Congress(I) president who lost his mother, aunt and a servant in the carnage: "Many Hindus helped us. Families of Munna Singh, Pratibha Sinha and Sanjeev Jha went out of their way to shelter many of us. And Munna Singh himself met the police and told them we were hiding in his house. But no help was forthcoming from the police. And when the mob came there was little that our Hindu friends could do."

Clearly, the anguished town needs the healing touch. But none is in sight and politicians have shied away from relief measures. Rajiv Gandhi's announcement at a poll meeting in Patna that Bhagalpur would be placed under the army seemed to instil some confidence among the people. The officials, however, had no clue how the process could take place. Said an official: "Unless martial law is declared, the army cannot take over the powers of the civilian authorities."

Meanwhile, the Yadavs, who fled Jamaalpur when a mob burnt the village, are returning to harvest the standing crop. Others are also leaving the relief camps. But life in the town remains paralysed, with buses continuing to avoid the town and Muslims scared to use the few public transport available. The memory of the communal fire that took a toll of over 200 lives is an agony etched in their minds. And Bhagalpur seems destined to burn with suffering in the days to come.

—UTTAM SENGUPTA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Thermax expertise
Babcock & Wilcox experience

Combining diverse strengths to offer you a matchless range of boilers – 15 to 300 tph

Thermax Babcock & Wilcox. A joint venture of Thermax, India, and Babcock & Wilcox, USA. This meeting of minds introduces a range of boilers not offered by any other manufacturer in India. Thermal systems covering 15 to 300 tph steam requirement, operating up to design pressures of 130 kg/cm^2 and temperatures of 540°C; including state-of-the-art fluidized bed combustion boilers; and incorporating cost-effective technology.

The company also manufactures package boilers from 10 to 82 tph, either shop-assembled or semi-assembled and site-erected. Their unique membrane panel construction optimally combines heat transfer efficiency with maintenance accessibility.

Thermax, India At the forefront of Indian thermal engineering for 23 years. A leader in process heat equipment with many 'firsts' to its credit. Possesses a track record of over 8000 boiler and allied equipment installations. Introduced revolutionary fluidized bed combustion boilers to India and has commissioned over 40 of them.

Babcock & Wilcox, USA The first name in steam generation with 122 years' experience. Innovating technology in the areas of basic and applied research in combustion, heat transfer and natural circulation. It's where the world goes for energy solutions – over 60% boilers globally being either designed or manufactured by B&W.

THERMAX BABCO
Thermal engineering the inte

Mudra : P : TB&W : 2436 : 1 : R

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Thermax Babcock & Wilcox
also offers

- For the first time in India, revolutionary life-extension technology which adds 20 to 30 years to aging mega boilers.
- Fluidized bed combustion retrofits that can double a boiler's output at half the cost of a new one.
- Boilers for co-generation systems that generate steam for process heating and captive power requirements up to 65 MW.
- Efficient after-sales service and ready availability of spares for all Babcock as well as Thermax boilers in India.

THERMAX BABCOCK & WILCOX
B&W
INDIA

WILCOX
al way

For detailed information, write to us at Chinchwad, Pune 411 019. Tlx. No. 0146-234 TMAX IN c Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

DOORDARSHAN

Winning Top Billings

TV poll show enthrals

PRASHANT PANJIAR

Roy, Dua, Karunakaran; and (left) the backup team

AS the election results poured in, the biggest winner was the medium that brought the message. By Doordarshan's shoddy standards, it was breathtaking. The high-tech news show anchored by Prannoy Roy not only had the numbers rolling in fast and slick, it took the nation right to where its history was being made, looking over the shoulders of party bosses and shooting questions at them, swift and sure. Suddenly, a captive propaganda machine flipped to become the eyes and ears of the people.

Viewers loved every moment of it, as interviews crisply followed panel discussions after spot reports that followed results. After the weak-kneed censorship which had opposition parties boycotting poll broadcasts just three weeks earlier, it hardly seemed possible that an Ajit Singh could sit there in the studio and tell an Anand Sharma that Bofors at any rate would not be part of a National Front government's programme. Roy pulled no punches. Even trenchant government-baiters like Ram Jethmalani were handed a live mike. And there was Janata Dal leader Yashwant Sinha accusing Doordarshan—on Doordarshan—of suppressing the news of Chandra Shekhar's victory.

In these uncertain days, history was made on the small screen. When L.K. Advani said his party would not ally with the Congress(I) because the BJP was determined to finish dynastic rule, commentator Pran Chopra pounced on that as a message that if the Congress(I) dumped its chief, the BJP would back it. That was soon on BBC news. Then there was B. Shankaranand of the Congress(I) making obsequious overtures to CPI(M) leader Harkishen Singh Surjeet in the studio. From the anchorman came vignettes like: "Ajit Singh's supporters are trying to persuade him to become the chief minister of Uttar Pradesh." Suddenly, prognosis had become part of Doordarshan's vocabulary.

The programme, for which Roy had been preparing since June, kept two steps ahead of Doordarshan's parallel bulletins by declaring leads as counting progressed, instead of waiting for final results. Studio two—the Delhi centre's biggest—was a beehive as dozens of youngsters bustled around phones, teleprinters and computers behind the bank of five cameras. Roy's wife Radhika kept him informed of upcoming graphics and OB link-ups through a ear-phone. The team worked like a well-oiled machine. A round table in one corner became the epicentre during breaks, as key team members joined Roy to format the next show ("Mathews hopes to have Chenna Reddy at 18:40. Shall we use that first or this recording of N.D. Tiwari? And, Itu, that map didn't work. Could you darken the shading?"). Hindi interpreter and co-anchorman Vinod Dua paced the floor, working out his lines, and political heavyweights gingerly mounted the set while Director-General Shiv Sharma and Advisor (Information & Broadcasting) Suman Dubey kept an eye.

Roy seemed the only one not bowled over by the show, giving it "six out of ten". He had wanted five times as many reporters in the field to feed a round-the-clock telecast. But that would have cost the earth. Already, Doordarshan had spent Rs 2.7 crore (Roy's share: Rs 16 lakh).

"This is the largest thing we've done so far," said Additional Director-General (News) Shashi K. Kapoor. About 3,000 of the staff were involved. Top-notch producer Abhijit Dasgupta—of Reliance Cup coverage fame—was brought from Calcutta. At a cost of about Rs 2 crore, 97 hot lines were hired to link the nerve-centre master switch room with state capitals, chief election officers and key constituencies, allowing "hot switching" to 15 outdoor broadcast vans with reporters across the country.

Roy had brought in Paul McKee, former deputy chief executive of the British Independent Television News, for a workshop with Doordarshan engineers and reporters on November 17 and 18. Over the next 10 days, some of the reporters—from among Bhaskar Ghose's crop of 'glasnost' recruits—became overnight stars. That they delivered so competently puts Doordarshan on test. Having tasted blood, the viewer wants more. Madhu Dandavate spoke for the nation as he closed the show with the hope that next time they would meet on an autonomous medium. —DAVID DEVADAS

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

TYPE APPROVED DOT

The perfaxtionist

EC FAX 4618 ◢ The only indigenous facsimile ◢ From India's electronics giant, ECIL ◢ Ready to deliver ◢ Manufactured to triumph in trying Indian conditions ◢ With the expertise of the world leader, NEC, Japan ◢ Matching international quality standards ◢ Supported by the trusted ECIL after-sales service ◢ EC FAX 4618 ◢ The perfectionist ◢ Flashes A4 sized documents in a mere 16 seconds ◢ Handles documents of upto A3 size ◢ Enables clear half-tone reproduction of photographs ◢ Auto-transmission with password verification for confidentiality ◢ Multiple polling ◢ EC FAX 4618 ◢ The perfect office machine ◢ For the modern office ◢ Contact today for more details:

Electronics Corporation of India Limited ◢
(A Govt. of India - Dept. of Atomic Energy - Enterprise), Communication Systems Group, Hyderabad - 500 762 ☎ 850131. Ext. 450 ◢
Telex: 0425 - 7033 ECAN-IN ◢

Fax: (0842) 851606 ◢
Bombay ☎ 4302333
New Delhi ☎ 602696
Calcutta ☎ 295523
Madras ☎ 450749
Bangalore ☎ 77072 ◢

इकाEC

ECIL 989.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Chennai and Le Gangotri

ANOTHER BREAKTHROUGH

• Rights Issue of fully convertible debentures of Jindal Strips Ltd. open from 7/11/89 to 9/12/89 •

JINDAL

GH JINDAL

First in the private sector to manufacture DD and EDD grade mild steel wide strips.

Great deeds are the work of those who look for challenges, who strive ceaselessly, who actively pursue the discovery of breakthrough products and processes.
In steel, Jindal is one strong example. Jindal is the first in the private sector to have mastered the technology for producing Deep Drawn (DD) and Extra Deep Drawn (EDD) grade cold rolled steel.

This is just one instance of breakthrough Jindal R&D and technology at work.
Other Jindal breakthroughs include: a fully integrated stainless steel plant, large diameter submerged arc welded steel pipes, ferro-chrome and direct strip casting of aluminium.
Jindal. Looking for challenges. And meeting them. With skill and determination. Ahead of the rest.

JINDAL

Where there's a challenge, there's Jindal.

chrome • Stainless steel plates, sheets & coils • Cold rolled M.S. sheets & coils • Carbon steel plates arge diameter submerged arc welded steel pipes • Aluminium sheets and coils • Paints • Tea

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ISPAT ALLOYS

Hi-tech products that will earn vital foreign exchange

ISPAT ALLOYS

- ★ Entering the highly profitable area of Charge Chrome to utilise country's rich chrome ore deposits – simultaneous implementation of domestic unit and 100% Export Oriented Unit to meet the growing worldwide demand.
- ★ New projects with thrust towards import substitute products and exports – to result in substantial foreign exchange savings and earnings.
- ★ Export of high value-added products with an added marketing advantage through Ispat's International connections – earning valuable foreign exchange for the country.
- ★ A strategic Rs.132 crore expansion and diversification scheme under implementation – first phase already commissioned.
- ★ Incorporation of world's finest Chrome Ore Pelletisation and Preheating technology from Outokumpu Oy of Finland for substantial energy savings and low operational costs.
- ★ Captive power plant for uninterrupted power supply – first phase already commissioned.
- ★ The fastest growing Ferro Alloys Company with a phenomenal annual increase of 127% in profits and 41% in sales for the year 1988-89. Now poised for a quantum leap in assets, turnover and profitability.

ISPAT ALLOYS LIMITED
'Park Plaza', 71 Park Street, Calcutta 700 016

PRESSMAN

Where there's ISPAT, there's FORESIGHT

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Promises to Keep

ARE we on the verge of a new dawn of a free radio and television voicing diverse views and being held accountable for lapses? Of a press unburdened by steeply rising newsprint costs? Of newspapers free to import newsprint? Of a freedom of information act after the US model? Of an explicit constitutional right to freedom of expression? Of government advertisements placed in newspapers on merit?

If the protestations of the Janata Dal, the National Front and BJP are taken at face value, yes. All this and heaven too.

Steeped as the two Indian communist parties are in the Stalinist mould, such bourgeois freedoms are of little importance to them. The CPI makes a bow to an autonomous corporation for radio and television under parliamentary supervision as the last point of its 33-point manifesto. The CPI(M) treats the subject with contempt; it does not figure anywhere in its 16-point manifesto.

Manifestos traditionally luxuriate in promises, their ringing tones promising all things to all men. The Editors Guild of India, therefore, decided to test the parties and asked them to stand up and be counted.

Each major party was asked six questions. Was it for one or more autonomous corporations for radio and television, and for separate channels for states to be run as corporations? Should the implicit freedom of expression be made explicit? Should there be a freedom of information act? Should there be a drastic revision of laws on defamation, official secrets and contempt of court? Should there be a non-official mechanism for deciding newsprint policy? Should a non-official agency determine the policy and procedures for placing government advertisements?

The Congress(I) greeted the guild's questions with total silence. Predictably, the two communist parties did not want to indulge in such games. Media for them are tools of the party in power, and of "progressive forces" where it is not. The Janata Dal replied enthusiastically. The National Front sent the four paragraphs contained in its manifesto without bothering to answer the questions posed. The BJP was specific in its response while referring to its manifesto.

As far as promises go, one could not have asked more from the Janata Dal. "Within one year of assumption of office by the new government", it promises to: establish autonomous corporations for radio and television under a parliamentary charter supervised by an independent board of governors; enact a freedom of information act; remove curbs on free debate which is at present inhibited by arbitrary notions of parliamentary privilege and contempt of court laws; remove harassing requirements for journalists' presence in courts; hold the electronic media accountable for defamatory statements; give priority to domestic newsprint production and curtail duty on newsprint; permit direct import of newsprint by newspapers; appoint regular wage boards for journalists.

The Janata Dal signs off its "declaration on the media" with a flourish: "With us a free press and an autonomous electronic media are not a matter of policy. They are a faith, a commitment." Bravo!

As behoves its image, the BJP is more pithy and to the point. It is for separate, autonomous corporations for radio and television. It would consider whether there should be separate channels at state levels. It is for specifying freedom of the press and for a freedom of information law. It wants a radical revision of defamation, official secrets and contempt laws. It opposes STC monopoly on newsprint imports and is for duty reduction. A non-official commission should oversee personal appearance in courts.

Highly satisfying as these protestations are, where do they take us? Newspapermen are a hard-boiled lot, though given to emotional reactions in stressful moments such as during elections. In the cold light of the post-election scenario, scepticism reigns. The non-Congress-ruled states are not shining examples of a keen desire to uphold the canons of a free press. If the Janata Dal's media declaration was to be placed next to the performance of the Dal-ruled Haryana, it would be a strange juxtaposition.

Editors' expectations are, therefore, pitched low. There will perhaps be autonomous corporations for radio and television. How truly free they will be is another matter. The cynics will say the one-year time limit the Janata Dal has given itself to transform the state-owned media, is a safe bet as the party's life span could be shorter.

But the guild's exercise is well worth the candle. It takes the debate one stage further in talking about specifics, rather than general principles subject to varying interpretations and waffle.

Whatever final shape the new government takes, there is a new bench-mark to assess policy. But it is well to remember that even the Janata Dal talks of a free press and autonomous electronic media and it retains the Congress Government's unhealthy addiction to wage boards for journalists as to the welfare of smaller newspapers.

The Congress(I) greeted the Editors Guild's questions on media freedom with total silence.

For the communists, media freedom seems to matter little.

The Janata Dal insists that a free press and autonomous electronic media are a "matter of faith".

The BJP is for separate and autonomous corporations for radio and television.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

More than a name
An institution in packaged power
Always ahead in technology

ARTIG - 819

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

In-house R&D recognized by the Department of Science and Technology, Government of India. The only battery manufacturer with the largest number of patents to its credit. Development and adaptation of technology to suit Indian conditions continues on priority.

Unparalleled range. Over 100 types in Polypropylene and Hard Rubber in Exide, Dagenite and Index brands to suit every consumer need in the automotive, industrial, agricultural and defence sectors.

Developed India's first tamper-proof Polypropylene batteries in 1970. 20 years later, still the best.

The first choice for supply of PP batteries to Maruti as OE fitment. Still, Maruti's number one source for batteries.

The only battery manufacturer supplying batteries as OE equipment to ALL car, bus, truck, tractor, 2-wheeler, LCV and HCV manufacturers.

The only supplier of Planté Standby Batteries—internationally acclaimed for their longevity and high performance — to India's one and only Rapid Transit System — Metro Railway, Calcutta.

Chosen after stringent tests to supply fail-safe, heavy duty batteries for the Indian Navy's new generation submarines.

Committed to total quality—consumer confidence proved by nearly 2 million batteries sold in 1989.

Largest manufacturer- exporter of storage batteries. Current level of exports Rs.25 crores. 100% growth expected over next two years in line with national objectives.

Chloride Group's World Centre for Solar Research.

Rs.50 crore modernization plan under implementation to meet India's demand for world class products.

CHLORIDE

Committed to Excellence
Dedicated to Service

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

GUESS WHAT HAPPENS TO PUMAPLY IF YOU BAKE IT FOR ONE HOUR IN AN OVEN AT 200°C ?

NOTHING. ABSOLUTELY NOTHING.

Water boils at 100°C.

Pumaply can take more. Much more.

Because it is 100% Heat Resistant.

Think of what this means for your kitchen cabinets exposed to the continuous heat of ovens, pressure cookers, toasters and everyday frying and cooking.

And, yes ! Pumaply is also Termite Resistant.

No wonder, it is the ideal plywood to use in your homes and offices—wherever long life is of prime importance.

So, the next time you're making furniture, ask for Duro's Pumaply. And be 200% sure of plywood that's virtually indestructible.

DURO PUMAPLY ™

FROM THE MAKERS OF DUROBORD

VIRTUALLY INDESTRUCTIBLE !

Sarda Plywood Industries Ltd. General Sales Office: 1/7, D.B. Gupta Road, New Delhi 110 055

Regional Offices: Bombay, Ph: 343891/332058 • Ahmedabad, Ph: 398534/9035 • Madras, Ph: 31358 • Bangalore, Ph: 215451

DPS/SP-891

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ATHLETICS

On the Right Track

Meet throws up hope for Indian track and field

SUDDENLY, 30,000 people were on their feet. Electrified, they watched a slim, dark figure surge forward like an unstoppable stallion. A huge roar swirled around the vast stadium as, inch by gritty inch, Arjun Devaiah, 26, his sinewy legs pumping rhythmically, head thrown back, teeth clenched, closed the gap between himself and the Japanese, Y. Tachi, during the last lap of the 4x400 m relay. Then, like a concert of human power and speed, the two blurred at 30 km an hour, until Tachi simply hurled himself across the finish line. And the crowd erupted.

Indian athletics came of age last fortnight amid the pageantry of the eighth biennial Asian Track and Field Championship in New Delhi. Long used to being a poor cousin of cricket and hockey, athletics made a spectacular splash this time, dominating the sports pages for five consecutive days even as an India-Pakistan cricket Test was on. Suddenly, people were talking about batons and hurdles instead of wickets and maiden overs. Outside the stadium even members of the Indian men's relay team, whom no one seemed to have known earlier, were being mobbed for autographs much in the fashion of the cricket stars. Taxi-drivers asked whose election symbol the butterfly mascot was, and three-year-olds lined up pillows before their TV sets to do hurdles.

The crowds that streamed into the stadium were knowledgeable about the sport. At the first permit meet at the same stadium a year ago, national high jump champion N. Annavi had looked despairingly at spectators who didn't recognise him. This time, they were roaring in approval.

And no wonder. The harvest of seven gold, nine silver and six bronze medals was India's best ever at an Asian championship. It was far smaller than the haul of Asia's reigning champions, China—43 medals, 22 of them gold—but undoubtedly, India stood head and shoulders above the rest.

After three years of humiliation, Usha re-established her reign as queen of the Asian track.

▼ P.T. Usha, 26
Best Asian woman athlete. Golds for 400 m (51:9 sec), 200 m (23:27 sec), and 400 m hurdles (56:14 sec).

▼ Bahadur Prasad, 24
Best male athlete in Asia. Gold in 1,500 m (3:45:77) and a silver in 5,000 m (13:58:93).

Bahadur's string of successes marks a revival of India's traditional middle distance strength.

Photographs by PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

FOR SOME MEN A FAULTY TIE-UP COULD STRIP THEIR IMAGE TO SHREDS.

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

BUT SOME MEN CARE. ABOUT THEIR NECK-WEAR. THEY WEAR PARK AVENUE TIES. MADE OF POLYESTER AND SILK. WITH EXCLUSIVE DESIGNS. LIKE STRIPES. FLORALS. PAISLEY. POLKA DOTS. THE FABRIC IS IMPORTED. PARK AVENUE'S ALSO GOT CRAVATS, SCARVES AND BOW-TIES. THE STYLE IS UNMISTAKABLE.

A·C·C·E·S·S·O·R·I·E·S

by

Park Avenue

by Raymond's

... it never goes out of fashion.

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

▶ Balwinder Singh, 28
Shot put gold (18:16 m)

With a little more effort, the veteran could well be in the running for a medal at the next Asiad.

Throwers mature late and at his age, the consistent improvement he has shown signals a bright future.

◀ S.D. Eshan, 23, shot put bronze (17:71 m)

A resurgent P.T. Usha dominated with her insuperable grace, power and speed. She set a new meet record in the 400 m (51:9 seconds) and 200 m (23:27), followed to the silver by Shiny Wilson in the first event and Ashwini Nachappa in the second—both running their best timings to date. And, unexpectedly, young Kavita Garari, who was unknown till the meet, chipped in with a silver in the 10 km walk.

But the real surprise came from the Indian men. If the award for best woman athlete went to Usha, the best male athlete of the meet was the pleasant railway ticket checker, Bahadur Prasad, 24, who brought in a gold in the 1,500 m and a silver in the 5,000 m. In the metric mile, he was closely followed by team-mate Ram Niwas, an equally promising runner. In the past India had always had one or two good middle distance runners at the Asian level till the the drought of the past half-decade. The breach is now seemingly being filled. What is even more important, Ram Niwas and Bahadur are so close in their performances and capabilities that they provide each other ample competition, something Usha could have done with in the women's sprints.

The sensation of the second day was havildar Dina Ram, who put on a heroic burst after the water pit in the last lap of the 3,000 m steeple chase. Carried on the wings of wild cheering, he swept past Saudi Arabia's Mohammed Al Dosari and Qatar's Mohammed Salimene, straight to the gold. Balwinder Singh's shot put (18.16 m) was enough to fetch another gold. The favourite, Ma Yongfeng of China, was relegated to fourth place while S.D. Eshan of Bangalore took the bronze medal with a throw of 17.71 m.

As it turned out, medals were not the most encouraging feature of the meet. In any case, this meet, at which not a single Asian record was broken, by no means establishes Asian dominance. What it did prove was that the improvements at recent domestic meets were neither flashes in the pan nor manipulated timings. And it made obvious that India is in contention for at least a few golds at the Beijing Asiad, which seemed pretty doubtful just a few months ago.

▲ Arjun Devaiah, 26, anchor of the silver medal winning 4 × 400 m relay team (3:07:22 sec: new national record)

Devaiah's spectacular effort in the last lap was the toast of the meet, showing that Indian men can still sprint.

Most encouraging is the systematic, target-oriented approach of some of the athletes. Bahadur Prasad and Ram Niwas should have come off the tracks elated at having won the 1,500 m gold and silver. Instead, they were shaking the sweat and the unhappiness off their faces: "It was a bad race. We ran for the medals, not the best timing." The dissatisfaction with their performance was heartening—a sign that India's athletes are now looking beyond the medals—to the challenge of Asia's best.

The meet also revealed a new responsiveness—both positive and negative—of athletes towards their coaches. An angry Bahadur Prasad insisted he was not going to work with any coach but his mentor, Hargobind Singh. "If Usha can have her personal coach, so can I," he declared. But Devaiah was all praise for his coach: "(Uday) Prabhu sir had worked so hard for me. Just for him, I had to run despite my injury." There is also far greater depth in such events as the shot put. Said shot putter Bahadur Singh: "At the 1982 Asian Games here, I was the only one doing 18-plus metres. Now there are four of us."

India's athletics records, some of the most endurable in the world—a dubious

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE NO. 1 AUTO BELT. FOR A NUMBER OF REASONS.

1 ROBOTIC TECHNOLOGY

Powerflex Raw Edge Cogged Belt is the result of Robotic Technology. Ideal for any car, truck, tractor and all mopeds.

2 MADE BY THE NO. 1

Powerflex is from Fenner. The No. 1 in power transmission. Undisputed leader for 60 years.

3 LASTING VALUE FOR MONEY

Powerflex is a superior quality Cogged Belt designed and tested successfully for flawless performance. Minimum slippage for maximum fuel efficiency. And a life span close to 100,000 kms.

4 NO. 1 IN SALES

Powerflex is an original part in every new Maruti, Contessa, Premier 118 NE, Tata and Leyland truck and most of the technologically advanced mopeds. The international quality of Fenner Powerflex has made it India's first choice.

everest/S89/453

POWERFLEX
RAW EDGE COGGED BELT
DON'T DRIVE WITHOUT IT

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Hospitals. Banking & Financial Institutions. Airlines & Shipping Services. Business Houses. Software Exporters. Libraries. Universities. Construction Companies. Research Organisations. etc. etc.

More than 1500 Data bases at your fingertips:

On a wide range of topics.

In this world of exploding information, it is important to have access to international data base.

Videsh Sanchar Nigam has tied up with Telebase Systems Inc. of Philadelphia, U.S.A. who have nearly 1500 data bases in their network. And with this agreement, Indian subscribers to this facility can have access to all of them.

This revolutionary facility will be of immense use to many private and public sector organisations, libraries, research institutions, etc. Information which could take you weeks to get, will now be at your fingertips.

What's more, all you require is a computer. No infrastructure. No clearance. No lengthy procedures. And best of all, payment in Indian Rupees. Our expert consultants will also guide you in utilising the facility in the most cost effective manner. International Telephones, Telex Facsimile. And now this database facility. Videsh Sanchar continues its efforts to bring the most sophisticated communications facility to India.

VIDESH SANCHAR NIGAM LTD
(A Govt. of India Enterprises)
Registered Office: Videsh Sanchar Bhavan, Mahatma Gandhi Road, Fort, Bombay 400 001.
Tel: +91 (22) 271819 Telex: +81 (11) 2429 Fax: +90 (22) 954321

PRESSMAN

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

distinction—have now begun to fall. At the permit meet in September, Bahadur Prasad broke Edward Sequiera's 3:43:7 minute record, set in 1966 on a cinder track. Bahadur, earlier a 10,000 m runner, had only switched to training for the shorter event a couple of months before the permit meet. His record now stands at 3:43:4 minutes, and is being pushed by Ram Niwas, who has also clocked 3:43:43.

But, India has a long way to run to catch up with the continent's best. Records like Milkha Singh's 45:73 seconds in the 400 m will become 30 years old next September. Devaiah's best is 47:10 seconds. His sterling performance helped the 4 × 400 m relay team to set a new national record at 3:07:22 minutes, but that is still five seconds behind Japan's 1986 record of 3:2:33 minutes. Balwinder too at 18.16 m is far behind China's Ma Yongfeng's best throw of 19.09 m but in field events performances can vary a great deal from one meet to another and if he continues to improve Balwinder could well be a serious contender for an Asiad medal.

While there might still be miles to go, the hard work and investment of the last three years has obviously been worthwhile. Commented John Holt, secretary-general of the International Amateur Athletic Federation: "The ethos, the structure, the state associations, the coaching—India's infrastructure is now among the best in the world."

Coaching camps have become a regular feature. Indian athletes are participating in more competitions and coaching camps abroad—such as the one in Glasgow last June. The work of foreign coaches like Briton Harry Wilson and East German Georg Ramlow, who have been the focus of sniping between their sponsors, the Sports Authority of India (SAI) and Amateur Athletic Federation of India (AAFI), was vindicated at the meet by the performances of their proteges—among them Dina Ram, Bahadur Prasad, Shakti Singh and Eshan.

Enterprise is also evident in such coaching programmes as the Bangalore-based SURE of husband and wife duo, Sunil and Reeth Abraham. To top that, "the incentives available to Indian athletes are not there in any other Asian country", says Maurice Nichols, general secretary of the Asian Amateur Athletic Association. A gold medallist at this meet was promised Rs 1 lakh from the Government, Rs 50,000 from the AAFI, and a bunch of smaller cash awards. Even a bronze medallist could hope to take home over Rs 80,000.

Generating commercial support is the biggest contribution to athletics of Suresh Kalmadi, president, AAFI. So he was comfortably able to run up a tab into seven figures, with entrance free and no government support—so far achieved only by cricket. "Our effort," he said, "has been to glamorise athletics."

Purists, however, complained that a sports meet had been turned into a carnival. There were prancing yaks at the opening, dancing horses at the closing, camel rides and snake-charmers at evening parties at the athletes' village in the Haryana tourist complex of Surajkund. Not content, Kalmadi roped in Sharon Prabhakar and a team led by Alyque Padamsee for a song and dance routine, which turned out to be a hangama, Bombay style.

Now, the athletes' focus is entirely on the Beijing Asiad in 1990. On current form, Usha looks good for two golds (400 m and relay) and, with luck, even in her pet hurdles. More than her four gold and two silver medals at this meet, her timings were heartwarming: 56:14 seconds in 400 m hurdles (her best: 55:42); a meet record of 23:27 seconds in the 200 m; 51:90 seconds in the 400 m (her best: 51:61 seconds), and 3:32:95 minutes in the long relay. Significantly, it is after more than four years that she has sprinted 400 metres in less than 52 seconds and if the fire in her eyes was any indication she could indeed better her record by the Beijing Asiad.

Usha's flaw has been her slow start, but this time she just exploded off the

Despite winning, the duo were unhappy at their slow timing—the will to clip microseconds is back in Indian athletics.

▼ Bahadur Prasad, and Ram Niwas, gold (3:45:77) and silver (3:46:53) medallists in the 1,500 m

▶ Harry Wilson, British coach

Fine displays by Wilson's proteges vindicated the work of foreign coaches.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

MULTIPLE BENEFITS UNDER ONE ROOF.

Rather than run around from place to place, you can come to Everest and find multiple roofing solutions under one roof.

The largest range of roofing sheets and accessories to begin with. Free consultancy from a team of experts in our Customer Service Cell on design and installation. Assistance in selection of the right roofing sheets and accessories. And custom-made accessories for your special requirements.

The assurance of quality proven over 50 years. Through a 'no compromise' policy, beginning with our R & D Centre which has access to the latest international technology from our parent company, Eternit Group of Belgium. A specially developed fibre-orientation technology that ensures unmatched strength and durability. And testing standards higher than ISI.

And it's these benefits that have kept our list of discerning clients like J.L. Nehru Port Trust (Nhava Sheva), Godrej, L & T, MRF, Essar, (the list is endless), multiplying over the years.

EVEREST

FIBRE CEMENT PRODUCTS

50 YEARS WITHOUT COMPROMISE.

EVEREST BUILDING PRODUCTS LIMITED. HEAD OFFICE: Ashok Bhawan, 93, Nehru Place, New Delhi 110 019. Tel: 643 2568, 643 5416. Telex: 031-65318, 031-71002, FAX: 011-646 4006. ZONAL OFFICES: NORTH – JABALPUR – Tel: 25216/7 Telex: 765-211. SOUTH – COIMBATORE –Tel: 862816/7/8, Telex: 855-215. EAST – CALCUTTA – Tel: 45 2002, 45 3454, Telex: 021-8093. WEST – BOMBAY – Tel: 493 6784, 493 8234, Telex: 011-73766, FAX: 022-494 9718.

Enterprise/D/EBPL/317

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

blocks. Cured finally of her heel ailment by homoeopathy, she ran to coach O.M. Nambiar's new tactics for the 400 m, accelerating earlier than she normally does. "She had to be ahead at 250 metres," said a grinning Nambiar.

Her triumphant showing began at the hurdles. She missed her 15-stride rhythm only in the fifth and sixth hurdles, China's Chen Juying drawing abreast on the right. For a moment it even seemed that the great Indian hope would be left behind. Then pushing her gazelle-pace in a final lunge, she was home. Her timing: 56:14 seconds; Juying's: 56:24. Chi Cheng of Taiwan, who has held the Asian record for the 100 m and 200 m since 1970, says: "Usha hasn't realised her potential. She is more talented than me."

IF Usha maintains this scintillating form at Beijing, and if Vandana Rao—who was kept out of this meet because she did not participate in the Madras nationals—were returned to the fast track, the women's relay team might knick a second off its own 3:31:55 minute Asian record. However, milers Bahadur Prasad and Ram Niwas might be the only other Indian medal winners at the Asiad.

For in Beijing, the Chinese juggernaut will be on home ground. The Japanese, who came without their champion javelin thrower Mizo Guchi and pole vaulter Yamadah, brought a young team—which will no doubt be gearing up for better performances at the Asiad. So will many others. "We are here mainly to see what the field is like. We are keeping our best for Beijing," said Boughatolas Salem, athletics official from Qatar.

Even Usha—and 100 m silver medallist Ashwini Nachappa—will probably be faced next year by Filipino Lydia de Vega, who missed this meet since she recently had a baby. De Vega's 200 m best (23:35 seconds) stands above Usha's best (23:44), and now there is also the Chinese Zhang Xiao Qiong's 23:41. Shiny's forte, the half-mile, is now dominated by two Chinese, Sun Sumei (1:58:56 minutes) and Feng Yanbo (2:1:29 minutes), well ahead of the Indian record of 2:3:16 minutes.

But even if this Asiad does not cause the champagne to be uncorked, it is enough that the sport is on the right track. While the athletes take a breather, the AAFI's attention has moved on to the more distant future. "Now the thrust of the athletic federation is going to be only on junior athletics," said Kalmadi.

The federation has evolved a six-year rolling plan. Between 40 and 50 men (17-18 years old) and women (16-17 years old) are to be selected for intensive training, after zonal and state meets around the country. The first crop is already in and their training is to begin this summer. The idea is to have a four to six week vacation camp and periodic two week camps later. Some of them will be exposed to competition at the Asian junior championship next year, and will form the core of the Indian team at the 1994 Asian Games.

A new crop will be picked up every two years so that the cycle continues. And, "by the year 2000, I want to have our crop of world champions", says Kalmadi. If the government-controlled SAI and the AAFI can put their best feet forward in tandem, there should be no stopping Indian athletics.

—DAVID DEVADAS with BINOO K. JOHN

ASHOK VAHIE

▲ P.T. Usha, Mercy Kuttan, Shiny Wilson and K. Saramma, Women's 4 × 400 m relay team, Gold medal and meet record (3:32:95)

Though the established line-up in India's favourite event was broken, the girls were still far ahead of the field, evidence of tremendous depth among women sprinters.

▲ Dina Ram, 25, gold medallist in the steeple-chase (8:48:16).

A game trier, he could bring back traditional Indian strength in the gruelling event.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

There's always been a premium on consistency

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Consistent, Stronger, Optimal-Setting.

VIKRAM
Premium
CEMENT

Vikram Cement. A unit of Grasim Industries Limited.

Nexus/GIL/2a

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

dinesh

Exclusives ▲ Suitings ▲ Co-ordinates ▲ Safaris

The choice of leading fashion houses, internationally.

Authorised dealers: DELHI: Jainsons • Jainsons Westend • Sri Ram & Sons • CHANDIGARH: T. R. & Sons • KANPUR: Gopaldas Sarab Dayal • Mohan Bros. • Pahoolal Vedprakash • LUCKNOW: Bhashi Agencies • H. Sughanmal & Co. • Sahu Cloth Emporium. (IT/2)

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Serene Touch

Alter's fiction flows subtly

RENUKA
by STEPHEN ALTER
Andre Deutsch
Distributed by Rupa & Co
Pages 216; Price: Rs 295

AFTER wandering in limbo for 170 years, the spirit of Jane Austen decided to be reborn in modern India. So she looked around for a suitable setting where she could write once again about the love that lies in the bosoms of secluded spinsters. Ooty and Kunoor seemed promising, but she decided against reincarnation there. The Nilgiris were nice, but the proximity of General Sundarji reminded her too much of the very Napoleon her novels had so completely invalidated. The Dehra Dun-Mussoorie region looked better. Allan Sealy, Ruskin Bond and Nayantara Sehgal lived here. The birds said Salim Ali had been around. Something of Amitav Ghosh was still sniffable around the Doon School. Then she saw Stephen Alter. Yes, he would do very nicely as a new avatar.

Written with a pleasant mixture of quiet inspiration and feminine feeling, Alter's latest novel is set among Mussoorie's upper class spinsters, housewives, tea-tables and cook-books. It is successfully Austenite, however, precisely because it is neither tea-tablish nor restricted to coffee-tables. Love, lust, lesbianism and lucre are now neither sleazy nor scandalous. They percolate out of Alter's Mussoorie kitchens and living rooms. They make one believe that an isolated world of good food and fellow feeling is as real, more human, and very much more interesting than that of Sundarji versus Rajiv G.

The first-person narrator, Rachel, is the wife of an American psychiatrist-missionary who arrives in India in 1960. Husband and wife are both carefully distinguished from stereotypes: he has left the US because "it was a little disgusting to think that somebody could make money from other people's anxieties". So he disappears to recover his sanity, and that of his patients, within a Ranchi asylum. Rachel and her two teenage sons move to Mussoorie. Here the boys go to school, while Rachel writes the novelistic-diary that is Renuka. The early bits of the novel read like the musings of a pleasant colonial woman humanely describing the native country to her brethren back home.

Anglicised ladies on a lonely hilltop can play mahjong, gossip about each other, and form a women's club to discuss recipes. Rachel has too much cooking within her own self to be sucked into the mindless patter of the various female evangelists who surround her. She prefers the company of Renuka, an extraordinary Bengali woman who has fled family tyranny to write poetry within Mussoorie's "verdurous glooms and winding mossy ways". Renuka is almost six feet tall. She is repulsed by the thought of marrying a man. Sensitivity and imagination make her a quiet rebel against the hideous masculinity that dominates society and culture in India. Rachel and Renuka are both, in fact, Austenite rebels against social ideologies that are aggressive and repressive—most particularly in relation to singular women. The emotional bonds that develop between these two lonely women on a hilltop are described with a subtlety and delicacy unusual in Indo-Anglian fiction. The unhurried and unmelodramatic flow of Alter's prose attractively matches the values his novel upholds.

The appealing softness of the world that comprises this novel is upset by the arrival of Renuka's brother from Calcutta. His presence causes a fine development within the plot, as well as an emotional climax which disturbs our settled ideas about the heterosexual basis of human love. A small range of other characters—Rachel's sons and their girl-friends, baptist ladies hunting for heathens to convert, the occasional servant woman and her problems—further enliven the central story.

All things considered, this novel makes particularly fine reading within our 'macho' social context. For it is a context which Alter's novel correctly, and most aesthetically, repudiates.

—RUKUN ADVANI

Alter: feminine feeling

EXTRACTS

Renuka was always unpredictable and impulsive. She would exhaust me with her enthusiasm, talking constantly about some book she'd read or some memory which had been jogged in her mind. When I was with her there was an irresistible excitement to her words, her imagination. If I hadn't known her better, I might have called it childishness, the way she threw herself upon me without restraint. She had a way of overcoming my inhibitions. I don't think there is anyone who could make me feel as happy and lighthearted as Renuka.

Epic Spoof

A send-up of modern history

THE GREAT INDIAN NOVEL
by SHASHI THAROOR
Penguin
Pages: 423; Price: Rs 95

HAD this book not been so funny, its delicious irreverence so unpartisan in its sweep of the pantheon of Indian politicians, it would have sent its author down the Rushdie path, and triggered off an avalanche of protests. Revered leaders, even Mahatma Gandhi, fall like nine pins in this novel. Shashi Tharoor has taken the Mahabharat as a blueprint and filled it with a contemporary cast for his witty send-up of independent India. A sort of India revisited with the dramatis personae of the epic getting quite a bruising.

Penguin, in fact, has been rather smart by keeping the print so tiny—it needs a magnifying glass—and the book so long that it will keep away all but the ivory tower lot, not generally prone to taking to the streets. For those who make it through the, at times, windbag wordiness and the too-smart puns—Sir Richard Churchill, with Attenboroughian characteristics, describes Gangaji (Gandhi cast in the role of Bhishma, the celibate obsessed with "toilet cleaning") as "Public Enema Number One"—the insights into both current politics and the epic are reward enough. And sometimes the puns take off marvellously: he refers to the engineered birth of the Pandav Five as "heir-conditioning"; one of the chap-

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

EXTRACTS

Ved Vyas to Ganapathi:

"Karna was not much of a Muslim but he found Gangaji too much of a Hindu...Karna found the Kauravas under Gangaji insufficiently secular, and this made him paradoxically, more consciously Muslim....When the Mahaguru, in one of his more celebrated pronouncements, declared his faith in all religions with the words, 'I am a Hindu, a Muslim, a Christian, a Zoroastrian, a Jew,' Karna responded darkly: 'Only a Hindu could say that.'"

"At the end of it all, Priya Duryodhani stood alone amongst the ruins of her old party, having smashed to pieces all the pillars that had supported her. Alone, but surrounded by the recumbent forms of newly-elected supplicants prostrating themselves amidst the rubble, the ciphers whose empty heads collectively gave Duryodhani a bigger parliamentary majority than even Dhritirashtra had ever enjoyed."

ter headings is "The Rigged Veda".

But the touch of genius is in the casting. Dhritirashtra is the blind, aristocratic disciple of Gangaji with a weakness for Fabian Socialism and a fatal charmer for the ladies of Bloomsbury. Later he becomes the country's first prime minister. But on his single-minded way there he manipulates the shafting of his "pale" brother Pandu—the one who has celibacy thrust on him—who storms off, fed up of the non-violent ways of his mentor, to Germany and Japan, allowing the author literary licence to surge into verse: "Away with Tolstoy, Ruskin, Buddha: Their ideas make little men littler. No more 'truth-force', only yuddha—it's time to learn from that chap Hitler." The two struggle for the leadership of the Kaurava Party which after independence splits, one side going over to Priya Duryodhani, Dhritirashtra's only child with the famous "arched brow" who, when only 12, poisoned her cousin, Bhima, and threw him into a lake. Later, as prime minister, she was to impose a "siege" on her country.

Then there is Mohammed Ali Karna, "adopted son of a rich man's driver"—he has a sun-like glow on his face and likes cocktail sausages. The dapper lawyer-disciple of Gangaji and bright light of the Kaurava Party becomes the founder of Karinistan. A country which Priya Duryodhani will later help split further and form Gelabi Desh. A touch of genius is Draupadi Mokarasi (get it: referred to often as D. Mokrasi), born on January 26 as a result of the union between Dhritirashtra and Georgina Drewpad, wife of Viscount Drewpad who oversees the partition of the country.

Tharoor takes us right down through all the trysts with destiny with other characters like Jayaprakasha Drona and bearded socialists. And in the end the narrator, Ved Vyasji wakes up to the India of the day: "a land of computers, corruption, of myths and politicians and box-wallahs with moulded plastic briefcases... muddling chaotically to the twenty-first century." And wants to dream again.

—MADHU JAIN

Song of Shakti

Homage to the Indian woman

TEMPLE
by JAYANTA MAHAPATRA
Dangaroo Press
Pages: 58; Price: Rs 138

THERE is no woman/ who is not alone,/no woman who is sure/she has found her way/to her real purpose of life,/ no one who doesn't return to the idea/that there is something more fitting/than release...."

That may not approximate to the Indian concept of the divine force, the female shakti, but for Jayanta Mahapatra it is one gleaming shard of truth in the kaleidoscope of alternating images that is Indian womanhood. The woman as the oppressed and the oppressor, as the destroyer and creator, as the all powerful and weak, as Sita and Putana (pure and vile). Cliched, but continually pregnant with poetic promise.

With Temple, Mahapatra fulfils an obligation every Indian poet must bear: plumb the agony and the enigma of the Indian woman, "an autumn of longing, moving backward in her solitude, moving slowly, a riddle on its pedestal". And he pays homage at length; and he does it impressively. His 50-odd pages of free verse are pegged on two news items—one of a suicide and the other of a gang-rape—that portray the plight of the Indian woman, who cannot shut out "the bursts of pain that keep coming to sting her from the dust of lies and the scabs of myths".

Our minds were tied to the myth that womanhood was pure, one with the repose of the gods, our eyes soiled with the infinite,
our hands smeared with ash to hide their touch from men.
But had I no right to my dream?
Which happiness is mine, if not this one?
Whose harsh spit sputters my race?
Who fills my village with voices?
And when the flames engulf me, which inner light will vindicate
my happiness?

Mahapatra writes in the measured cadences of a finished hand—his post-modernist pen almost Eliot-like in its incantatory spells—and the imagery, typically, is arresting: "Now like a mound of freshly steamed rice/ she sits, in the white-haired vapour/ of a new hour, an ambiguous presence/ on a reed mat..." But every now and then the images—paddy, rivers, earthen lamps, temples, breasts, ashes, light, darkness—pile up so much as to numb. You have to jerk yourself to attention and start all over again.

The poem is hallucinatory and dreamlike, and escapes succumbing to the triteness of the subject matter because it neither agitates nor rails. It operates at a plaintive decibel, mixing, and unmixing myth, illusion and reality, as the flow of the images demands. And this the poet makes clear in the opening lines: "This memory is strange as a taunting memory/ shifty as the wind...."

The first few pages also make it clear that once again Mahapatra is not out to provide recreational material for the hours between the reading of the evening newspaper and the switching on of television. Temple is not for the poetry buff; this is stuff for the devotee.

The Rockefeller Foundation grant that Mahapatra used to write this poem appears well-spent. And not only is his obeisance to the Indian woman done, but Temple adds fair weight to the impressive corpus he has been accumulating over the last 15 years. Now to await a purchasable edition of the work.

—TARUN J. TEJPAL

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

th

n?
is one?
race?
s?

of the ut out ning to nd the easured is post-in its nagery,

like a
he sits,
a new a reed en the lamps,
dark-
b. You on and y and ing to ter beails. It

nixing, reality,
s. And pening as a nd...."
t clear out to or the e eve-g on of poetry

grant poem is his done,
e im-nulatwait a

EJPAL

Performance.
As if life depended on it.

ONIDA VCR

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

What makes Hitachi a hot name in refrigerators...

Nippon Denro Ispat Introduces To In
For Refrig

Indian refrigerator manufacturers have often experienced a freeze in production because of the inavailability of the required gauges, widths, lengths or grades of world-class cold-rolled steel in the country.

They can now play it cool: Nippon Denro Ispat Ltd. offers, for the first time in India, the assurance of quality cold-rolled steel on a regular basis.

Nippon's cold-rolled steel comes in gauges from 0.15 mm to 2.00 mm; widths upto 1250 mm; lenghts between 1000 and 4000 mm, and grades: ordinary, drawing, deep drawing and extra-deep drawing.

The equipment and technology used comes from three Japa experts in the field – Hitachi, Taiyo Steel and Nippon Denro Mfg. Co.

Hir B entire rang gh Nippon means th e sure of a like their r
ON.

Central Marketing Office: 'GUMAN' 6th Floor, 77 'Residency Road, Sadar, Nagpur – 440 001; Phone: 25742, 25750. Telex: 0715-426 NDIL IN. Fax: 0712-331

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

and how KELVINATOR, GODREJ, ALLWYN & VOLTAS can now play it cool.

Hi-Performance Cold-Rolled Steel Bodies.

entire range of cold-rolled steel is available round the year gh Nippon Denro Ispat's extensive distribution network.

h means that, from now on, refrigerator manufacturers in India e sure of avoiding production freezes.

like their renowned Japanese counterparts.

NIPPON DENRO ISPAT LTD.

Park Plaza (Ist Floor), 71, Park Street, Calcutta–700016

THE NEW BREED OF STEEL

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Mudra:D:NDIL:7379

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

NAMAS BHOJANI

Sheena: chips to couture

◆ From selling computers to selling couture is not a long way off. At least not for leggy, six-footer Sheena Singh who made it in the length of a ramp. The 25-year-old who has been chosen to model Yves Saint Laurent haute couture, from amongst hundreds of stunning aspirants, is a major in marketing and database management. She is working with a public relations firm in Bombay. And to complicate matters, she is not only fluent in Russian, she also wants to finally become a chief executive. Says she: "I always believed that I'll never exploit my looks. I have always worked with my brain." But who says rubbing strapless shoulders with the glitterati of Paris takes a toll of the good ol' grey cells.

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

Sharon: boxed in

◆ She was billed as the froth on the champagne at the 8th Asian Track and Field Meet, but in the end she wound up as a jack-in-the-box, with the lid closed. When Sharon Prabhakar exhorted the spectators to "come sing with me" the Tracks of Friendship, not a voice quavered in response. So she went for the hoi polloi heart: Ek, do, teen,... Not one watcher added on. Worse was to come as the hydraulic lift sucked her back into the cardboard cake. Unscheduled items extended the closing ceremony, and the singer was left entombed. And she'd counted ek, do, teen hundreds of times over before the exit could be made.

Merchant and Ivory

◆ The producer: Ismail Merchant. The director: James Ivory. The scriptwriter: Ruth Prawer Jhabvala. Must be a film with an Indian bent, or a classical source? Surprisingly, it's neither. This one is based on a best-seller, Mr and Mrs Bridges by Evan Connel; it is set in Kansas city; and it's about marriage and the domestic detail that follows it. And its a casting coup. The blue-eyed superstar Paul Newman plays the lead, and in the film he beds his real wife, Joanne Woodward. Typically, Merchant says: "This is a great project." And, yes, the old homeland connection survives: Woodward's name in the film is India Bridges.

◆ For a month, the post of the secretary to the President was hung. Then while handing over power, the Rajiv Gandhi government also found time to hand over P. Murari to President R. Venkataraman. In time-bound cliche, the secretary, information and broadcasting, declared: "I consider it my privilege and honour to work with the President." Considering how crucially important the President's advisers are going to be now, at least one supercrat of the outgoing regime, 'Bob' Murari, retains his pre-eminence.

Murari: high office

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

SHARAD SAXENA

Sinha: savvy spokesman

◆ Just as the elite were despairing of the Janata Dal's country yokel image, there came cause for cheer. The new party spokesman, Yashwant Sinha, captivated on the poll talk shows with his easy charm and suave turn of phrase. But about his new charge the former IAS officer sounded apologetic: "Even a mild-mannered man like me now has to react, very sharply sometimes." But why worry? The public's reacting all right.

HEMANT PITHWA

Babi: sad return

◆ She was more Zeenie baby than Zeenie herself, and the mystery she left behind brooked no ravelling. Well six years later, '70s sex-bomb Parveen Babi, who even made it to Time's cover, is back. And it's poignant. A shadow has resurfaced: cheeks puffed, hair scraggy, mind ravaged by trauma. She harangues about a megastar who's been conspiring to kill her, and calls it "the greatest story in the world". And there are no takers. Certainly, a return more sorry than the vanishing.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

IN FOCUS THIS FORTNIGHT

Promising Start

The new Government got down to business with surprising smoothness and purpose. The kidnapping of the home minister's daughter created an unforeseen crisis, but overall it was an encouraging start. Both the appointments to the ministry and the new policies unveiled on several fronts were greeted with approval.

COVER STORY 26

Purges and Plans

As the once all-powerful Congress(I) recovers from its shock defeat at the hustings, there are signs that the Old Guard is reclaiming its old importance. Veterans have taken over as chief ministers. And as the party looks for scapegoats, the coterie that surrounded Rajiv Gandhi is now the target of attack.

SPECIAL REPORTS 52

Abduction Anguish

The tragic abduction of Rubaiya, daughter of Home Minister Mufti Mohammed Sayeed, by Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Front members stunned the nation. While condemnation of the militant action was universal, it served to spotlight the turmoil in the state and the alienation of the chief minister.

SPECIAL REPORTS 62

Leaning to the Left

Days after assuming office, the new Government spelt out its economic policy which has been generally welcomed. But whether it can succeed in implementing that policy depends not on good intentions but on its ability to untangle the economic knots it has inherited from the previous regime.

BUSINESS 96

The Fading Glitter

Benazir Bhutto completes one year in office with a no-confidence motion hanging over her head and general criticism of her style of functioning. Because of various pressures, she has not been able to make fundamental changes. As yet, there is no real threat to her government. But the problems are piling up.

NEIGHBOURS 139

Back on the Front Foot

Underdogs India emerged from the gruelling cricket series against Pakistan with their honour restored. The highest laurels undoubtedly go to Sanjay Manjrekar, but his was only part of a great joint effort. The players' fighting spirit and teamwork contributed a great deal to the comeback.

SPORTS 157

CONTENTS

COMMENT 11
CAPITALOOK 14
VOICES 19
INDIANOTES 20
THE FORTNIGHT THAT WAS 25
COVER STORY
New Government
Promising Start 26
SPECIAL REPORTS
Congress(I) Leaders:
The Powers that Were 40
Congress(I): Purges and Plans 52
Punjab: Cautious Optimism 58
Jammu & Kashmir:
Abduction Anguish 62
CURRENT EVENTS
Uttar Pradesh: A Bitter Beginning 69
Maharashtra: A Saffron Swathe 75
Tamil Nadu: The New Empress 83
Haryana: Land of the Rising Son 84
Bottomline: Force of Habit 89
STATENOTES 90
TRADE WINDS 95

BUSINESS
Economic Policy: Leaning to the Left 96
Larsen & Toubro: Full Circle 104
Europe 1992:
More Opportunity, Greater Risks 109
Mafatlals: Spreading Out 115
Finance Companies:
Burgeoning Business 118
Computers: Price Friendly 123
The Markets: Boom Time 124
THE ECONOMY MONITOR 129
SPECIAL FEATURE
The New Lok Sabha:
An Explosive Mix 131
NEIGHBOURS
Benazir Bhutto: The Fading Glitter 139
MEDIAWATCH 155
SPORTS
Indian Cricket:
Back on the Front Foot 157
THE ARTS
Festival of France:
A Palatable Pastiche 164

LIVING
Design: Closet Fantasies 167
BOOKS
A Trail of Discovery 172
Petty Prattle 179
Sloppy Fare 179
AMONG BOOKS
A Many Splendoured Thing 182
CHANGING SCENE
Snake-Charmers: Losing their Charm 187
EYE-CATCHERS 192

Cover photograph by PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Bushillusion.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

BUSH TV Feel the picture.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE LOOK OF YOUR PRESENTATION OFTEN DECIDES HOW YOUR CLIENTS LOOK AT YOU.

[illegible] moment. You're handing the presentation document to your client. And what's the first thing he notices?

A crooked clip?

A page slipping out of the bind?

Imagine on the other hand what his impression would have been had you given him a document like the one featured on the right.

A document dressed up by a GBC Binder. In your office. In a matter of minutes.

The look of a leader. With a GBC Binder.

[illegible] presentation is ready, all you [illegible] in the GBC Binder. [illegible] perfectly. [illegible] a real [illegible]

Of course, GBC binding is sturdy enough to protect all your important documents – plans, proposals, reports, surveys, manuals or directories – against years of handling. And mishandling.

In addition, GBC offers you an amazing choice of covers and spirals. And the facility to get your company name and logo or design printed on the cover.

After all, GBC Hi-Tech (India) Ltd. is the undisputed Indian leader. And an affiliate of no less than the world leader and pioneer in binders and laminators, General Binding Corporation (USA).

And we believe that if your book is going to be judged by the cover, the cover needs to be as good as the book. Doesn't it?

 Also available GBC 419 LM and GBC 426 LM Laminators. And an exclusive range of laminating sheets.*

- Please send your representative to see me.
- Call me up to fix an appointment.

Name : .....

Designation : .....

Address : .....

..... Tel : .....

Mail to 'Marketing' at Corporate Office.

GBC

BINDERS & LAMINATORS

SMART BUSINESS SENSE FOR YOUR OFFICE

GBC HI-TECH (INDIA) LTD. CORPORATE OFFICE : A-216, Okhla Indl. Growth Area, Phase-I, New Delhi-110 020. Tel : 683742, 635142, 6830857, 6842529. Telex : 031-75146. Fax : 011-6830936 • D/2, Basement, 6 Sirifort Road, New Delhi-110 049 • Chandigarh, Tel : 42655 • Bangalore, Tel : 220313 • Bombay, Tel : 6365814, 6363475 • Pune, Tel : 660784 • Calcutta, Tel : 432768. Telex : 021-7820 FTCI IN. Fax : 033-444614 • Madras, Tel : 452996 • Vadodara, Tel : 326440 • Hyderabad, Tel : 842895

Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

INDIA TODAY
THE COMPLETE NEWSMAGAZINE

VOLUME XIV NUMBER 24
FOR THE FORTNIGHT DECEMBER 16–31, 1989

EDITOR
AROON PURIE

EXECUTIVE EDITOR INDERJIT BADHWAR
DEPUTY EDITOR DILIP BOBB
SENIOR EDITOR PRABHU CHAWLA
PICTURE EDITOR RAGHU RAI
FEATURES EDITOR SHEKHAR GUPTA

CORRESPONDENTS
CHIEF CORRESPONDENT RAJ CHENGAPPA
NEW DELHI MADHU JAIN
PARANJOY GUHA THAKURTA
SIMRAN BHARGAVA
DAVID DEVADAS
PANKAJ PACHAURI
SURAJEET DAS GUPTA
BHASKAR ROY
HARINDER BAWEJA
SUDHIR SHARMA
AHMEDABAD UDAY MAHURKAR
BANGALORE CHIDANAND RAJGHATTA
BHOPAL N.K. SINGH
BOMBAY M. RAHMAN
SALIL TRIPATHI
S.N. VASUKI
SHIV TANEJA
RAGHUNANDAN DHAR
CALCUTTA FARZAND AHMED
HYDERABAD AMARNATH K. MENON
LUCKNOW DILIP AWASTHI
MADRAS KAVITHA SHETTY
PATNA UTTAM SENGUPTA
TRIVANDRUM RAMESH MENON
NEWS COORDINATOR SANDHYA MULCHANDANI

ART EDITOR SHIRLEY JOSHUA

CARTOONIST AJIT NINAN MATHEW
CARTOGRAPHER B.K. SHARMA
LAYOUT ARTISTS PEALI DUTTA GUPTA
PRABAL MANDAL
KAMINI SINGH

ASSISTANT PICTURE EDITOR BHAWAN SINGH
PHOTOGRAPHERS PRAMOD PUSHKARNA
PRASHANT PANJIAR
NAMAS BHOJANI
SHYAM TEKWANI

COPY EDITOR TARUN J. TEJPAL

COPY DESK SABA NAQVI BHAUMIK
NANDITA SARDANA

MARKETING DIRECTOR MOHINI BHULLAR

REGIONAL MANAGERS ADVERTISING

BOMBAY NEENA MONGIA
NEW DELHI NAGINDER RISHI
CALCUTTA MEERA PAUL

ADVERTISING MANAGERS

MADRAS R. ANAND
BANGALORE S.J. NAIDU

EDITORIAL OFFICE LIVING MEDIA INDIA LTD. F-14/15, CONNAUGHT PLACE NEW DELHI 110001. PHONE: 3315801-4. TELEX: 31-62634 INTO IN CABLE: LIVMEDIA. NEW DELHI ● SUBSCRIPTIONS: LIVINGMEDIA INDIA LIMITED, POST BOX 706, FARIDABAD-121001, HARYANA ● TRADE CIRCULATION: INDIA TODAY CIRCULATION MANAGER, F-14 CONNAUGHT PLACE, MIDDLE CIRCLE, NEW DELHI. PHONE: 3313076-8. TELEX: 31-62634 INTO IN ● BOMBAY OFFICES: 28 A&B JOLLY MAKER CHAMBER II, NARIMAN POINT, BOMBAY-400021. PHONE: 2026152, 2029326. TELEX: 11-5373 THOM IN. CABLE: LIVMEDIA, BOMBAY ● 7 CHOWRINGHEE ROAD, CALCUTTA-700016. PHONES: 3321123 AND 3321273. TELEX: 31-62124 THOM IN. CABLE: LIVINGMEDIA ● FAGUN CHAMBERS, 26 COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF ROAD, MADRAS-600105. PHONE: 477188, 479163. CABLE: LIVINGMEDIA, MADRAS ● 74/1 ST. MARKS ROAD, BANGALORE-560001. PHONE: 213037, 212448; CABLE: LIVMEDIA, BANGALORE ● 46C, CHOWRINGEE ROAD, CALCUTTA-700016. PHONE: 447198, 447726, CABLE: LIVINMEDIA, CALCUTTA ● COPYRIGHT: LIVING MEDIA INDIA LTD. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD. REPRODUCTION IN ANY MANNER IS PROHIBITED. PUBLISHED BY AROON PURIE FOR LIVING MEDIA INDIA LTD. NEW DELHI AND PRINTED AT THOMSON PRESS INDIA LTD. FARIDABAD HARYANA ● INDIA TODAY DOES NOT TAKE RESPONSIBILITY FOR RETURNING UNSOLICITED PUBLICATION MATERIAL ●

DAUNTING TASKS

Removing corruption and bringing down the mounting prices of essential commodities should be among the new government's top priorities ("Turbulent Transition", December 15). Only then can it retain the trust of the people who voted for it.

Vadodara — DHIREN BHATT

■ An important message sent by the voter in the present elections is that no politician should underestimate the might of the electorate. Those who are in power should not live in ivory towers and take the support of the people for granted.

Essex, England — B.N. SHARMA

■ If V.P. Singh fulfils his promises, he may, perhaps, be able to clear the 'misty dawn' looming on the Indian horizon and make the sun shine on the masses once again.

Sonepat — K. GOPAKUMAR MENON

■ The confidence placed by the electorate on the National Front is very reassuring. But what is needed most at this juncture is collective leadership, stability and honesty at the Centre. And by asking the cabinet ministers to declare their assets, V.P. Singh has taken a step in the right direction.

Delhi — V.A. MENON

ASTONISHING ACCURACY

I am astonished at the accuracy of your poll predictions ("A Vote for Change", November 30). You predicted that "a hung Parliament seems to be an inevitable outcome with the next government needing the support of either the BJP or the CPI-M (or both) to form a government" and "the Congress(I) will remain the largest single party". Both predictions have proved true.

Bangalore — BIPRADIP BANDOPADHYAY

■ Congratulations for achieving a hat trick of successful opinion polls on the general elections.

Ranebennur, Karnataka — DR P.S. BANAGAR

■ Your accurate opinion polls have added a new dimension to the elections.

Mathura — RAJIV KUMAR TRIPATHI

■ The real winners of the 1989 elections are not the newly-elected MPs and MLAs, but psephologist Prannoy Roy and MARG.

Yavatmal — S.N. PANDHARIPANDE

■ Kudos to INDIA TODAY, Prannoy Roy and MARG for predicting the election results accurately. Your opinion poll will raise your magazine's popularity to new heights.

Daltonganj, Bihar — A.S. WALIA

■ Your state-wise election analysis and poll predictions have demonstrated that no government can ignore the importance of the media.

Trivandrum — A. JACOB SAHAYAM

■ INDIA TODAY has been very successful in predicting the mood of millions of Indian voters. V.P. Singh has indeed forged ahead to prime ministership and Rajiv Gandhi has been forced to sit on the opposition benches. The predictions are a milestone in media forecasting.

Pune — DR VASANT GOKHALE

■ The accurate prediction that the Congress(I) would win just 195 seats was good work on your's and Prannoy Roy's part.

Incidentally, Poll Talk was hilarious and made good reading.

Bangalore — G.V. GURUDUTH

■ Whatever the results of the ninth Lok Sabha polls, your 'election special' issue is indeed a collector's item.

Bhubaneswar — DHANANJAY PATRO

■ The election reports were a real eye-opener. The press has done a wonderful job of analysing the political atmosphere and informing the people of the trends in the country. This is important for the success of democracy and your magazine has played a vital role in ensuring this.

Indore — PRABHAKAR S. HARSOLE

UNIMPRESSIVE THEATRICS

Our leaders have adopted a hedonistic style to woo voters ("The Chariot Brigade", November 30). How can mature and educated voters fall for such

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

gimmicks? The scene looked more like a 'rath' rally than an election campaign.
Meerut P.N. BANERJI

A MARKED DIFFERENCE

"Frantic Pace" and "Making Waves" (November 30) brought out the difference between the two contenders for the prime ministerial post—one desperately lacking in confidence, and the other brimming with it. A close-up of Rajiv Gandhi with puffy eyes and a fading smile was in complete contrast to the smiling and calm V.P. Singh.
Varanasi AMBRISH SAHNI

■ It is unfortunate that the Congress(I) resorted to 'divide and rule' politics to win favour with the people. Its blatant attempts to arouse communal feelings combined with the existing problems of unemployment and corruption made a travesty of the slogan: Mera Bharat Mahaan.
Godda, Bihar SAJJAN KUMAR THAKUR

A DISTURBING TREND

It was disturbing to note that various political parties allowed criminals to contest the elections ("Day of the Don", November 30). With Indian politics becoming dirty, it appears that the people will now have to accept the underworld dons as their true representatives.
Madras ROBIN PALARAMB

A CLARIFICATION

In "A Close Contest" (November 30), you have wrongly described Ramesh Chennithala as a Christian. He belongs to the Nair community and contested the Lok Sabha elections on a Congress(I) ticket from the Christian-dominated Kottayam constituency.
Trivandrum V. KRISHNAMOORTHY

LIMITED POWERS

"Tortuous Task" (November 15) brings out the insufficient powers of the Election Commission. The new government should provide the commission with adequate staff and improved facilities so that it can check electoral malpractices effectively.
Mathura V.G. PANDE

SORDID AFFAIR

The alleged molestation of environmental activist Mukti Dutta by former Union minister Z.R. Ansari in his office ("Shock Charge", November 15) is a glaring example of the gross misuse of power. One wonders how the minister went unpunished and even managed to get a Congress(I) ticket for the elections without any hitch.
Bhagalpur DEEPAK KUMAR JAYASWAL

■ The women's liberation movement in the country received a big jolt with the report of the alleged assault on Mukti Dutta by Ansari. A similar incident occurred last year when the Director-General of Punjab Police K.P.S. Gill allegedly patted the rear of a woman IAS officer, Rupan Deol, at a party. Gill has remained unpunished so far. Similarly, Ansari has managed to escape scot-free.
Meghalaya SUJIT PAUL CHOUDHURY

■ The shocking incident involving Ansari goes to prove once again that those in power cannot be brought to book for any misdeed.
Bangalore ESTHER NATHANIEL

A NOBLE GESTURE

Prakash Chand Joshi's work among the orphans in Punjab ("Rescuing an Orphaned Future", November 15) shows that humanism is still alive in the state. More people, irrespective of caste, creed and religion, should come forward to complete this Herculean task.
New Delhi M.L. NARAYANAN

HEROIC EFFORT

When Miandad blasted Chetan Sharma for a six on the very last ball of the innings in the Australasia Cup, Sharma was called the 'villain of the Indian cricket team' ("A Gruelling Battle", November 15). Now that he has scored a ton in just 93 balls against England during the Nehru Cup and also has a hat trick to his credit, should not he be renamed the 'hero of Indian cricket'?
Ranchi UPMA & PAVAN PRAKASH

WRITERS' HAVEN

Although Indians' writing in English has moved up a few notches on an individual's shopping list ("Finding a Niche", November 15), the '80s have yet to throw up an experiment like P. Lal's Writers' Workshop in the '50s and '60s. It welcomed anybody with a writer's itch. The point is not how many literary reputations were created by Lal, but the fact that he gave writers an opportunity to express themselves.
Taiwan MURLI MELWANI

UNFORTUNATE SILENCE

Seymour Hersh's willingness to apologise to Morarji Desai and settle the case out of court clearly showed that he conceded the doubtful validity of his story ("Disappointing Verdict", October 31). In spite of this, the jury decided that the arguments of Desai's lawyers did not meet the requirements of the US libel laws. Unfortunately, even the Indian Government found it more expedient to sit silent and abet this gross calumny against a former prime minister known for his honesty.
Pondicherry B.G. PATTEGAR

DEPLORABLE TREATMENT

N.L. Patel's harrowing experience in Nadiad ("In the Dock", October 31), shows that 40 years of Independence have done nothing to improve the judicial situation in India. If the chief judicial magistrate is subjected to such treatment from the police, one can imagine the plight of the common man at the hands of these people.
Barrackpore ABHIK DAS

FATAL FALL

The crash of a Mirage 2000 aircraft and the tragic death of Wing Commander Ramesh Bakshi ("Disastrous Display", October 31) have been a blow to our defence services. But sentiments apart, it is the duty of the air command to explain how the officer exceeded his brief and attempted the unscheduled roll.
Pune SURENDRA MOODLIAR

■ How can the Indian Air Force organise air-shows just to amuse a handful of people? Such displays should be banned immediately.
Kathmandu N.N. PANDEY

■ If an experienced pilot could make an error, one shudders to think of the fate awaiting younger pilots with less skill and experience.
Shillong ANGEL XAVIER

SUCCESS STORY

"The Big Push" (October 31) justifiably showers praise on Dhirubhai Ambani. But as far as service to the nation goes, the Tatas are unmatched by any industrial house in the country. Ambani's success lies basically in his tact in dealing with the bureaucracy. Laws are made and abrogated to suit his needs and style.
Agra DEEPAK AGARWAL

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE NEW INDIAN CLASSIC

INTRODUCING
THE ONLY SOAP
WITH SANDAL AND GLYCERINE.

A classic blend of natural sandal oil
and pure glycerine.
Let the sandal soften, smoothen
and perfume your skin.
Let the glycerine gently moisturize your skin.
All the year through and specially during winter.
And let your skin be simply divine.

CLASSIC

Hmm... So exclusive. So exciting!

Mudra:Blr:MSC:237:89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

FROM OUR FAMILY TO YOURS WITH

VIDEOCON VCRs. AND VCPs.

Videocon—The household name in home appliances—The mark of quality colour televisions, washing machines and audio systems. The Company has recorded a tremendous growth through hard work and untiring enthusiasm. The Group's turnover for 1988-89 is around Rs. 350 crores.

Videocon—now brings you yet another quality product for your family. Sleek and compact VCRs and VCPs in technical collaboration with Toshiba of Japan.

Toshiba Corporation—The undisputed world leader, ranked 9th in the world in consumer and industrial electronics, electric components and heavy electrical apparatus. Toshiba is the 50th largest company in the world in the "Fortune 500". — Paid-up capital of Rs. 1500 crores and sales amounting to Rs. 42,000 crores—Now, the equity-partner of Videocon.

Videocon VCRs and VCPs—the latest in home entertainment, beautiful, sleek and sturdy—incorporating the state-of-the-art Video technology—with special features like slow motion, playback x 2, frame advance, edit facility-27 function remote control unit—direct drive with 2 system (Pal/Mesecam).

Videocon Toshiba VCRs and VCPs—another quality product from the Videocon family. To yours.

Special Features: *Direct Drive *27 function Remote *Playback X

VIDEO

VIDEOCON VCR LTD. Regd. Office: Auto Cars Compound, Adalat Road, Aurangabad 431 005, Maharashtra.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

TOSHIBA TECHNOLOGY.

Advance *Slow Motion *2 System Pal/Mesecam *Edit Facility

OCON

BRING HOME THE LEADER

CLEA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SHIRTS FROM THE FINEST QUALITY LONG STAPLE COTTON

Ambassador Cotton Classics. Shirts made from soft, luxurious cotton. With superior crease resistance. Styled impeccably. Stitched to perfection.

Now you won't buy your shirts anywhere else in the world.

AMBASSADOR COTTON CLASSICS

AVAILABLE IN SELECT BATA STORES AT DELHI, BOMBAY, CALCUTTA, MADRAS, BANGALORE, HYDERABAD, CHANDIGARH, SRINAGAR, JAMMU AND GANGTOK

JUST WHAT YOU'D EXPECT FROM US

Bata

RANGA AS 8 89

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The Indian Card

IN choosing Mufti Mohammed Syed as India's first Muslim home minister, Vishwanath Pratap Singh has sought to put his money where his mouth is—by demonstrating that notwithstanding the critical support given to his new government by the BJP, he is not afraid of demonstrating his concern for the nation's minorities.

There is little doubt that Mufti's appointment will go some distance in assuaging the fears of India's more than 100 million Muslims, especially in the Hindi heartland, where communal passions were fanned into a militant and violent frenzy before and during the elections. But the bitter aftertaste lingers on. The menace is still with us. Like a coiled serpent waiting to spring into venomous action.

The recent election may have ushered in change and demonstrated once again that the Indian voter exercises his franchise with precision and responds intelligently to national issues when brought before him in a cogent and reasoned fashion. But it also demonstrated that he responds equally vigorously and passionately to fundamentalist hate groups and their campaigns aimed at rejection of vital liberal traditions such as secularism embodied in the national consensus created by Jawaharlal Nehru.

This tendency was manifest in its most socially vulgar and fundamentally crass dimension in several parts of the country where Hindu candidates, backed by fundamentalist parties, openly campaigned on the platform that they did not want a single Muslim vote. That the Muslim vote was irrelevant to them. This has a dangerous portent. The message it seeks to convey to India's minorities is that their participation in a democracy did not matter; that Hindu democracy counted for more than secularism.

More than technical arguments such as repealing Article 370 or reorganising the Minorities Commission, it is this advocacy, so blatantly in evidence during the elections, which reveals the true face of communalism. The concept of a Hindu nation or Hindutva by implication relegates minorities to the position of a sub-nationality, whose votes are dispensable, within India. The consequences of such religious chauvinism are too horrendous to contemplate. The spectre of a permanently alienated minority living like a fifth column in an India whose nationhood still rests on a fragile consensus is a disastrous threat to the very stability of the country. One needs only to harken back to the cruel lessons of Partition.

Central to all this is that once again, the survival of the foundation-stone of Indian democracy—secularism—is on test. And in large measure, none has been more responsible for secularism's decline than the Rajiv Gandhi government. History will surely judge that the decision that ultimately played havoc with the centrist forces—the Janata Dal and the Congress(I)—was taken on November 9, when a vacillating prime minister sandwiched between conflicting advice allowed the Shilanyas in Ayodhya in the hope of playing a last-minute Hindu card.

In a single stroke, ths decision upset the delicately balanced centrist and moderate vote bank, causing Muslims to flee the Congress(I) in large numbers to the Janata Dal to punish the Congress(I), and large numbers of Hindus from both the Congress(I) and the Janata Dal towards BJP-affiliated candidates. In places like Bihar, the communal divide was ominous.

Illustration by AJIT NINAN

Political insecurity and the relentless quest for votes led Rajiv's government to compromise and waffle on issues where resolve, calibrated thinking and bold leadership were of the essence. Decisions taken on merits, and consonant with a professed ideology, no matter how unpopular, are what establish a leader's abilities. And decisions once taken must be credibly explained and ruthlessly enforced.

During his tenure, Rajiv repeatedly failed to be decisive and leader-like. The Babri Masjid-Ram Janmabhoomi war clearly has its roots in Rajiv's support for the Muslim Women's Bill that sabotaged the Supreme Court decision in the Shah Bano case. This produced a Hindu backlash, for the Hindus felt if the Government could subvert the law, they too could refuse to abide by the court verdict on the Ayodhya dispute.

Repeatedly, whenever there was need for swift, decisive action—whether against PAC culprits for their role in Malliana; against perpetrators of the Sati cult; against police excesses in Punjab; against Farooq Abdullah's misrule—there was appeasement in the interest of a Hindu card, or a Muslim card or a Sikh card. It was this that made a mockery of Rajiv's 21st century image. None ever doubted Rajiv's deep and personal commitment to secularism. But the modern mind that his supporters were trying to project through gimmicks and advertising slogans failed to pass muster in the most critical challenge of all: stern leadership against obscurantist forces.

There are lessons in this for the precariously balanced new government. Similar challenges await Vishwanath Pratap Singh. Notwithstanding his own unimpeachable secular credentials, there are still doubts about his oblique political flirtation with the BJP, whose top leaders are moderates but whose rank and file displays fiery religious militancy. He too will be tested, sooner rather than later, in the same infernal crucible as was his predecessor. And his success will depend on his ability to tackle the crisis of secularism head on, by continuing to play not the Hindu card or the Muslim card or the Sikh card, but the Indian card in the supreme interest of revitalising the national consensus.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

IDBI Capital Bonds
An attractive instrument for exemption from Capital Gains Tax.

- Available at par throughout the year.
- Exemption from Capital Gains tax under Section 54E of the Income Tax Act, 1961.
- Exemption from Wealth tax under Section 5(1) (xvie) of the Wealth Tax Act, 1957
- Income tax benefit under Section 80L.
- Interest at 9% p.a. payable half yearly.
- At the investor's option, interest for the full period of 3 years can be paid in advance on discounted basis.
- No deduction of tax at source.
- Outstation cheques accepted and cost of collection will be borne by IDBI.

For further details contact the nearest IDBI office or write to Manager

INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT BANK OF INDIA

IDBI TOWER, Cuffe Parade, Colaba, Bombay 400 005.

Sobhagya-B/IDBI/89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

HOW TO KEEP SMILING WITH YOUR FEET UP.

Now that's a situation none of us would like to get into. But then, one can never tell, can one? A minor accident in a careless moment. Or a major ailment one never dreamt of.

These are contingencies you can easily prepare for. With Mediclaim from New India. A Hospitalisation and Domiciliary Hospitalisation Benefit Policy that offers you and your family a range of medical benefits. Including cover for hospitalisation at home, under special circumstances. For a premium as low as Rs.200 per annum (at the minimum). It also offers you a family discount and a tax rebate.

Show how much you love and care for your family. Get New India's Mediclaim Policy. It offers you so much for so little!

Premium per annum	Hospitalisation	Domiciliary Hospitalisation
Rs	Rs	Rs
200	10,500	3,100
250	17,600	—
350	25,500	—
600*	37,750	5,250
840*	52,750	7,400
1300*	82,500	11,500

Age limit: 5-70 years. * Personal Accident cover available on payment of additional premium.

NEW INDIA ASSURANCE
A subsidiary of the General Insurance Corpn. of India
1919 1989
BORN TO LEAD

MEDICLAIM

CONTOUR ADS-NIA-160D/89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Diplomatic Muddle

● During any period of governmental transition, controversies, chaos and confusion are bound to mushroom within the key ministries. Hardly had the new cabinet been sworn in, when the foreign office found itself embroiled in a ticklish situation over who should be the guest of honour at Republic Day.

This invitation is usually reserved for a foreign potentate of some standing and also symbolises the nation's foreign policy directions. Before the elections, Rajiv Gandhi had been consulted on the issue, a shortlist prepared—from which Rajiv chose the name of A. Jugnauth, prime minister of Mauritius, a country with a sizeable and influential Indian population.

But as soon as V.P. Singh was elected prime minister, his advisers were of the opinion that some heavyweight like Gorbachev or even Benazir Bhutto ought to be invited for the occasion as a fitting gesture to the new prime minister's first Republic Day function.

But this request caused considerable embarrassment within the Ministry of External Affairs, which had already sent informal feelers to the Mauritian Government. And even as a new Indian foreign minister was being sworn in, senior ministry officials were going around in circles, trying to figure out some diplomatic solution to the problem.

Relaxed Bonhomie

● The defeat of the Congress(I) has ushered a new air of easy conviviality into the nation's capital. This was immediately apparent when the National Front and the Janata Dal convened their first meeting in Parliament's Central Hall to choose the new prime minister. Gone were the armies of Black Cat commandos, the heavily guarded VVIPs, and the arsenals of Sten guns. Inside the hall, people mingled and chatted freely.

The same air pervaded V.P. Singh's swearing-in at Rashtrapati Bhawan. Even Rajiv Gandhi, who attended with several of his former ministers, was relaxed and approachable. Taking advantage of this cordial atmosphere, a slim, bespectacled young man brushed past several VIPs standing near Rajiv, and extending his hand, exclaimed in a clipped Oxford accent: "Mr Gandhi, my name is Ajeya Singh." Rajiv's smile froze on his face when Singh added loudly: "I'm the son of Mr V.P. Singh." A journalist standing nearby joked: "He should have invited Rajiv for a holiday to St. Kitts."

Cartoons by AJIT NINAN

A Nice Turn

● A leading cartoonist had predicted during the election campaign that there would be a sympathy wave for Rajiv Gandhi—but after the elections—implying, of course, that Rajiv would lose. And lose he did, exactly as the cartoonist had foreseen. As for the sympathy wave, while there's no wave as such in evidence, there's a palpable sense of nostalgia for the balding young former chief executive with his shy smile.

And a lot of it has to do with the power of television. On November 29, the entire nation watched Rajiv's brief appearance on TV in which he said he accepted "the people's verdict with all humility", adding: "As I demit office, I wish to thank the people of India for the affection they have showered on me with such abundance."

It was proper, perfect, with just the right note of sentimentalism. Mr Nice Guy was back. And noticed. And suddenly a lot of Rajiv baiters were saying, well, he was not such a bad guy after all.

One group of advisers had been pressing Rajiv Gandhi to take on a harsh, confrontational tone during that speech. But the view that finally prevailed was that of Gopi Arora who helped draft the text.

V.P. Singh's first televised address to the nation, incidentally, was in contrast, entirely his own work.

Crossed Signals

● The release of Simranjit Singh Mann and his associates from Bhagalpur jail in Bihar was not without some crossed signals. On November 30, former home minister Buta Singh ordered that not only should the conspiracy case implicating him in Mrs Gandhi's assassination be withdrawn against them, but also the sedition case registered in Bihar.

But former minister of state for home affairs P. Chidambaram tried to bung a spanner into the scheme. He issued instructions to former Bihar chief minister S.N. Sinha that Mann be released only on bail.

When Singh discovered this, he was livid. He made an angry call to Sinha and said that not withdrawing the case was tantamount to countermanding one of the last major decisions of the outgoing prime minister. Sinha issued an immediate directive releasing Mann, and informed Singh: "As desired by you, I have issued orders for the withdrawal of the Bihar case against Sri Mann and all of his associates, and their subsequent release from judicial custody."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

For the first time in India, presenting the Cera BathSuite in International style.

The Golden Rhapsody motif on the Crowne Collection.

CERA DECORATOR COLLECTION SANITARYWARE & TILES

Some Exclusive Motifs.

Golden Swan

Daisies

Water-Lily

Cera Decorator Collection is yet one more expression of our endeavour to provide you with innovative ideas in bath decor.

We were the first to introduce Designer BathSuites. A range of colour and design coordinated sanitaryware that is today known across India as the Cera BathSuite collection.

We were the first to experiment with colours and textures to give you the widest choice of shades.

What's more, today we're further expanding our range of tiles to give you greater freedom to mix and match with our motifs and designer sanitaryware.

Yes, at Cera innovation has become a way of life. Because the way you live today makes yesterday's bathroom outdated.

We make dreams come alive — through innovation.

CERA

Ceramic Division

Madhusudan Industries Ltd.

E-15, NDSE — [illegible]

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Contrary to popular belief, some Contessa Clas

You'll find them on weekends at the golf course. Happily manoeuvring their two-wheeled golf carts in the sunshine. Enjoying their game as much as they enjoy driving their Contessa. With its internationally acclaimed, fuel efficient, 1800 cc Isuzu engine that matches their power drive. With an independent suspension as smooth as their swing. With an impressively responsive steering that places them in total control of a situation. With 5 synchromeshed forward gears, including an overdrive gear, that makes cruising at 120 kmph. an effortless exercise.

Accessories shown in the picture are not part of standard equipment.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

essa

e sunshine.

engine that that places

120 kmph.

Classic owners also enjoy using a two-wheeler.

And, added are the refinements that keep them from getting all hot and bothered when they haven't played to their handicap: electronic ignition; electronic fuel pump; automatic choke; and, of course, the option of an air-conditioner. But why not get in touch with us. Because there's much more to the Contessa Classic than we've been able to say. And that's no golfer's tale.

A Limousine to every other car

Contessa Classic 1.8 GL

Contract HM 21464

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The Ranutrol Hansa Aqua Mixer. The world's most elegant way of mixing water, with pleasure.

Flawless to the minutest detail. Functional adornments in the finest settings in over forty countries.

An exquisitely crafted range with the distinctly superior ceramic cartridge technology. Pioneered and perfected by Hansa Metallwerke AG of West Germany. Brought to India by the Ranutrol Group. For the discerning few.

RANUTROL HANSA
AQUA MIXER
From Hansa Metallwerke AG, West Germany.

TECHNOLOGY QUALITY SERVICE RANUTROL GROUP

For a free booklet, write to: Auto Controls Pvt. Ltd. (A Ranutrol Group Company), Home Improvement Division. Corporate Office ☐ F-85, Okhla Indl. Area, Phase-I, NEW DELHI-110 020. Tel: 683 6001. North Zone ☐ NEW DELHI – Tel : 63 3494. East Zone ☐ CALCUTTA – Tel : 29 1755. South Zone ☐ MADRAS – Tel : 86 7121. ☐ BANGALORE – Tel : 21 2846. West Zone ☐ BOMBAY – Tel : 492 0297, 23 4424.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eG

• After a long and dark night, the day has dawned but it is still a misty dawn.
■ V.P. SINGH

• I have been worrying for the last five years, now it is Vishwanath's turn to worry.
■ RAJIV GANDHI in The Telegraph

• I had wanted to perform the role of a Tau (elder uncle)—I will now do so from within.
■ DEVI LAL, on his appointment as deputy prime minister

• If the Government is the accelerator and the Opposition the brake, we are in a position to press both.
■ L.K. ADVANI addressing a public rally in New Delhi

• People's mandate is not for settling personal and political scores. I am against revenge.
■ CHANDRA SHEKHAR

• He (Rajiv) was taxed with a weakness for western and yuppie ways and for corrupt and elite cronies, and never got much benefit from these tendencies—a technological surge or comfort of good counsel.
■ The Washington Post

• The only thing Rajiv Gandhi has managed to do quite successfully is to break up the Congress Party, and that takes some doing to destroy a 100-year-old party.
■ ARUN NEHRU

• Rajiv or no Rajiv, we support the Congress(I).
■ JAYALALITHA

• We have created a vacuum, now we have to fill it.
■ KANSHI RAM, on the performance of Bahujan Samaj Party in The Telegraph

• Now I can sleep. I have had a long innings.
■ N.D. TIWARI, after quitting as chief minister of Uttar Pradesh

• While Rajiv Gandhi was the creation of the electronic media, V.P. Singh is a paper horse, essentially a creation of the Indian Express, The Hindu and The Statesman. In this battle, the paper hero has won, the electronic hero has lost.
■ GIANI ZAIL SINGH in The Indian Post

• My critics should eat their words. Usha is still the best in Asia.
■ O.M. NAMBIAR, P.T. Usha's coach, in Sportstar

• All that I had access to at the House of Commons were free football tickets.
■ PAMELLA BORDES on London television, quoted in The Times of India

SEE BETWEEN THE LINES

Even after
you've heard about it all
and read about it all – see it all
on India's first newsmagazine on video cassette – NEWSTRACK.
Press the play button and you're
on the ringside seat –
to people, places, events, issues –
incisively covered like on no
other medium ever before.

▶ ONLY ON NEWSTRACK ◀

New rates effective November 15, 1989

SPECIAL OFFERS

SINGLE CASSETTE
• Current Issue Rs. 145/- and a money-back guarantee.
• Back Issues Rs. 135/- each.

SUBSCRIPTION
• Annual Rs. 1380/- and a FREE INDIA TODAY YEARBOOK* 1990 worth Rs. 250/-

*Offer valid up to December 31, 1989. Year Books will be home delivered at your given address by the year end or early January 1990.

Mail a DD/Cheque favouring
Living Media India Limited to P.O. Box No.29,
New Delhi – 110 001.

For more details contact
Delhi: 3320689. Bombay : 2027867.
Madras : 479163.
Calcutta : 445398. Bangalore : 210834.

Home delivered by courier or Registered Post

India Today Presents
NEWSTRACK
▶The newsmagazine to watch◀

MILESTONES/IT/236

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Cartoons by AJIT NINAN

PRIME PANTOMIME

■ It isn't difficult to find instances of the former prime minister's gaffes. But this one by him at an election meeting in Pilibhit was a real howler.

From the word go, the situation was satirical. As his entourage arrived in three helicopters, the make-shift platforms and pandals, set up for the meeting, were blown off and the crowd blinded by a cloud of dust raised by the choppers' propeller blades.

Then Rajiv began to trip up. First, he mispronounced Beesalpur, an assembly segment, as Vishalpur. Then he addressed the local MLA hopeful, Babu Ram, as Ballu Ram. As if this wasn't enough, he even shook hands with the wrong man. An obviously affronted Babu Ram then set things straight by shoving aside the wrong man and clasping the prime minister's hands with both his hands. The crowd loved it all, bursting into laughter.

Moral: putting your best foot forward always helps. Even as others put theirs into their mouth.

BALLOT BRIBE

■ Counting agents had a few surprises in store for them during the recent elections. For along with the customary stamp on the ballot paper, some innovative voters had added other things too. For example, a lady voter left a mark on the paper definitely more colourful than the indelible ink—her lipstick imprint.

However, what took the cake was a Rs 20 bill that suddenly fluttered out of a ballot sheet during counting in Shimla, Himachal Pradesh. Caught totally off-guard, the astonished agents opened the sheet to discover that the bill came with a message: the money was to be divided equally between the President, the prime minister, the election commissioner and the chief minister of the state. The irreverent voter had yet another request: please get my work done now.

Obviously, it's a voter totally unaffected by the screaming campaign against corruption.

PRISON PASSIONS

■ The life and times of Charles Sobhraj don't raise much dust any more. But his partner in crime, Narendra Singh, certainly does. Having spent the last 22 months confined in a Lucknow jail, he has made an unusual request to the local additional sessions judge: he wants to watch the popular teleserials, Ramayan and Mahabharat, on a video cassette recorder.

His reason: being behind bars has alienated him from mainstream Indian culture. Besides the alienation from popular culture, he thinks that a little entertainment will certainly go a long way in relieving him of the monotony and tension of prison life. And he also fervently believes that watching the religious serials will surely have the necessary reformatory effect on him.

Though it remains to be seen whether the authorities grant his request or not, one thing seems certain: his prison term cannot outlast the never ending saga of the Mahabharat.

RAZOR YOJANA

■ After the Free Egg, Free Meal and Free Tooth Powder schemes, there seemed to be another freebie up for grabs: razors. A group of villagers crowded outside a nationalised bank in a village near Bangalore recently, demanding free razors for all under a so-called government-sponsored programme. Bank employees were puzzled for they weren't aware of any such programme.

The reason for the misunderstanding was finally traced to Doordarshan's recent publicity blitz on the Jawahar Rozgar Yojana. Given the last government's penchant for pre-election magnanimity and its westernised image, the villagers had mistaken the word rozgar for razor.

Obviously their inability to figure out the not-quite subtle difference between the words razor and rozgar show that the status of Hindi is on the razor's edge.

BOMB TEASE

■ The presence of all those Black Cat commandos, sniffer dogs and metal detectors has created a sense of paranoia in the capital. As a result, its residents tend to be a rather high-strung lot. Their nervousness was aggravated recently when they spotted a cord dangling suspiciously from a brief-case lying on the steps of a city building.

A panicked group of persons immediately called the bomb disposal squad who arrived on the explosive scene with amazing speed. Using their expertise, they gingerly prised open the brief-case. In an anticlimactic end, what was presumed would be a detonator turned out to be nothing but a bottle of rum and an underwear whose cord was innocuously dangling outside. The bomb-happy squad personnel had no other option but to disappear from the scene discreetly, a sheepish grin on their faces.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

New! Aqura from Titan. Get ready to get noticed

Put an Aqura on your wrist. And take centre stage.

Aqura is the new range in Titan's international collection of fine quartz watches: contemporary, bold, distinctive.

The looks range from the vibrantly colourful and sportily luminous to those with neo-classical flair. Rugged and water-resistant, an Aqura is ready to go anywhere.

With over one hundred designs to choose from, you'll find it easy to pick at least one that's right for you. And Aqura's price tag is as surprising as its looks: from Rs. 370 to Rs. 450.

Aqura comes with the Tata assurance of reliability and a 2 year guarantee.

Aqura is everything you'd expect a Titan to be. Wear one. You'll get used to the attention.

TITAN
QUARTZ
aqura

O&M2953

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

When Dunlop, FACT, Godrej, GAIL, Madras Refineries, IPCL, Hindustan Lever, HPF, BILT and many others needed...

TAYLOR · PACE SETTERS IN P

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

...with established expertise to master-mind process control systems, for any conceivable process...

...Only Taylor's comprehensive resources were trusted.

Most successful companies in the country, have one thing in common — an unstinted ability to single out extraordinary resources.

They singled out Taylor.

Right from the smallest to the largest. From private to public sector. From Parle Beverages to Bhilai Steel. JCT to ACC. For ISRO's most advanced propellant fuel plant and MRF's massive tyre plant, only Taylor's proven expertise could be trusted. Because, only Taylor offers a unique package of comprehensive resources :

Total Range — of over 4,500 products.

World Class Technology — that stems out of its association with Combustion Engineering, USA.

Unequalled Experience — of over 25 years, satisfying every conceivable process control requirement. For mega- crore investors like ITC, NDDB, BHILAI STEEL, IPCL, GAIL, BAYER, GEB, FSL. . . .to name only a few.

So, whatever the process control need, Taylor India has designed it, equipped it, built it, operated it, upgraded it, modernised it, serviced it, and maintained it at peak efficiency.

In fact, you name it — Taylor controls it.

TAYLOR

WE MAKE INDUSTRY

PROCESS CONTROL

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

At TransAsia,

we start with the wooliest New Zealand sheep.

Add the nicest colours in nature.

To give you the finest wall-to-wall carpets in India.

TransAsia brings you a range of all-wool and wool-nylon wall-to-wall carpets you just can't walk away from. Made with premium New Zealand wool. Dyed in a stunning spectrum of eye-catching shades. To add a dash of colour & luxury to every decor.

TransAsia Carpets are machine tufted,with a secondary backing. And evenly sheared, for sheer pleasure.

All of which helps TransAsia Carpets last for years and years. While reducing noise-levels and maintaining dimensional stability. Of course, TransAsia Carpets resist stains, occasional fires and sundry moths. And the all-wool carpets carry the Woolmark assurance. Which makes TransAsia the finest carpeting you can buy in the country.

Walk on one at your nearest dealer today. And see for yourself.

The TransAsia range:

Wool-Nylon	:	Dynasty Velvet "Deluxe" & Dynasty Velvet
Pure Wool	:	Galaxy & Top Notch
Synthetic	:	Superlon, Superleen & Evergreen

Write in for our detailed product literature.

TransAsia Carpets Ltd.

In collaboration with Besmer of West Germany.

A-7, Ring Road, NDSE-I, New Delhi - 110 049.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Mudra:D:TACL:7418

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Promise of Change

THIS was the fortnight that was. A disorderly transition turned into a quiet political triumph; a cabinet dispensation that is difficult to fault; the sidelining of potential trouble-makers and an atmosphere of unobtrusive authority. Even the tragic hostage-taking of the home minister's daughter by Kashmir terrorists failed to dampen the increasingly upbeat mood as the new Government slipped silently into gear. V.P. Singh's 'misty dawn' seems to be clearing with each passing day to reveal a subtle but significant difference in style and substance.

"India likes to be governed, and not ruled," says a Bombay businessman elsewhere in this issue. And that is the crucial difference now. India is being governed and no longer exists under the imperial rule that characterised the final Rajiv years. The sudden lifting of the oppressive veil of security is merely one example. But it is a crucial one. The sight of the prime minister riding through Amritsar, the crucible of terrorism, in an open jeep is just the kind of reassuring signal that the country—and Punjab—needs.

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

The prime minister's visit to Amritsar was a reassuring signal.

The dispensation of the Cabinet by V.P. Singh was difficult to fault.

PRASHANT PANJIAR

Much of the credit belongs to V.P. Singh. Gone is the wimpish image that has hobbled his political career, the indecisiveness that had become his political signature. The office seems to have transformed the man. If the selection of a Muslim as home minister and his Punjab visit were uncharacteristically bold initiatives, it is equally obvious that he has stamped his style on the functioning of his government. The message is unmistakable: continuity and subtle change.

The promise may turn out to be illusory. After the Rajiv Gandhi experience, there is a wariness about putting too much faith in India's political leadership. But already, barely a fortnight after coming to power, the fund of goodwill for the new prime minister has increased in considerable measure. Unlike Rajiv, V.P. Singh has come into office with the lowest of expectations. That is an advantage that he has exploited with unusual skill and tact.

There has been no witch-hunt or show trials, no attempt to denigrate the previous government or blame it for the problems that plague the country. The security around Rajiv has been increased rather than decreased, as many had falsely feared. That is a sign of maturity and grace, attributes that seemed to have been lost forever to Indian politics.

There is, undoubtedly, a long way to go before this government can establish its credentials on the basis of political and parliamentary security. But certainly, in the eyes of the people, V.P. Singh's mandate has already acquired a legitimacy that goes beyond its numerical strength in the Lok Sabha. That is as much a tribute to his own values and commitments, as it is to the sagacity of the illiterate Indian voter who saw in him the return to sobriety and decentralisation of power.

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

The abduction of Sayeed's daughter failed to dampen the upbeat mood.

The Indian cricket team transformed itself into a fighting unit.

PRADEEP MANDHANI

The challenges are daunting. But no longer do they seem insurmountable. The faults are in the system. That is what requires change. It is a system where a Farooq Abdullah can ignore his people's problems while jaunting around the world and still continue as chief minister though he has lost his mandate many times over.

That is the greatest promise that V.P. Singh brings; the promise of sober change. It is perhaps fittingly symbolic that the Indian cricket team, perennial underdogs, has welded itself into a fighting unit capable of upsetting any odds. Judging by its initial start, the National Front Government holds out a similar hope for the future.

—DILIP BOBB

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

NEW GOVERNMENT

Promising Start

FOR the nation's first fur-capped prime minister, it was a fortnight of perpetual motion. Of action. Decisions. Long-term strategies. Of forming a government. Playing honest broker between ambitious colleagues. And the most harrowing task of all, overseeing the nerve-shattering five-day negotiation that led ultimately to the release of Home Minister Mufti Mohammed Sayeed's kidnapped daughter, Rubaiya, by Kashmiri extremists (see Special Report).

Within three days of his swearing-in, V.P. Singh had not only put together a balanced and workman-like 18-member cabinet, but also managed to iron out major conflicts in the allocation of portfolios. And even as the kidnap ordeal convulsed the Government, it barely slowed it down. Mufti himself attended a half-dozen cabinet panel meetings to clear appointments of senior civil servants including the lieutenant governor of Delhi. At week's end Singh was confidently preparing to prove his majority support in the Lok Sabha in the forthcoming mandatory confidence motion. The prime minister was taking charge. There were no back-seat drivers in the front seat. This was evident not only from the allocation of ministries, but also from his dramatic visit to the Golden Temple—a decision he personally made just a day before the actual visit. Says Santosh Bharatiya, a newly-elected member of the Janata Dal from Uttar Pradesh: "Though we believe in collective leadership and no hero-worshipping, in running the Government it is the prime minister who has to take the initiative. And V.P. Singh has shown that quality during his first week in office. He has emerged as consensus politician."

Formation of the Cabinet was the first major test of Singh's own credibility. For it would reflect whether Singh meant business when he talked about integrity, ethics and a practical approach to governance. He meandered carefully, and with

V.P. Singh in an open jeep in Amritsar: positive signals

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

DEVI LAL, 75, DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER, AGRICULTURE

It's been a long ride for the 75-year-old Devi Lal from his Teja Khera farmhouse in Sirsa to 3, Race Course Road, the residence of the deputy prime minister. Also minister for agriculture, Lal outlines his plans for the agricultural sector:

"Smooth supply of water and electricity to all farmers is my first priority. Our farmers are under tremendous financial debt which is why we promised to waive loans up to Rs 10,000.

"I also want to increase support prices. Then, irrigation facilities have to be improved.

"Under no previous plan did the expenditure on the agricultural front go beyond 34 per cent. I am going to ensure that it goes up to 50 per cent. Disparity between the rural and the urban sector has to be removed."

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

the native shrewdness that is becoming his hallmark, he consulted all top leaders but kept the ultimate choices close to his chest. And the Cabinet that finally emerged was that of Prime Minister V.P. Singh. Power brokers were accommodated but weren't allowed to dominate or overwhelm the structure. Of the 18 ministers, 14, including four from the other electoral partners, are personally loyal to Singh, not to any other Janata Dal leader. The remaining three are Devi Lal loyalists.

The loyalty factor taken care of, Singh also took into account another key consideration in forming his cabinet—giving his government an ideological balance. Madhu Dandavate, George Fernandes, Sharad Yadav, Nilamani Routray, M.S. Gurupadaswamy and Ram Vilas Paswan are former socialists. K.P. Unnikrishnan and I.K. Gujral are known for their left-of-centre leanings. And right of centre are leaders like Arun Nehru, Arif Mohammed Khan, Devi Lal, and Ajit Singh. V.P. Singh told INDIA TODAY: "While selecting members of the Cabinet, I had in mind background, stature and political experience. To each, according to his liking and thinking, has been my basic consideration."

NEXT, the allocation of key departments was the outcome of careful planning in terms of competence and image-projection. The new Cabinet, whatever may be the drawbacks, cannot be criticised for planting square pegs in round holes. Contrary to general expectations that Singh would retain the finance department, he sprang a surprise by choosing for the slot Madhu Dandavate, highly-respected parliamentarian with an unblemished record of integrity. On this critical portfolio rests the survival and credibility of the Government. Dandavate is expected to produce a "pro-poor" budget. But equally important, Dandavate will be called upon to lead an assault against black money and big business privateering in consonance with Singh's election promise—to delink big money from the electoral process while putting the fear of god into economic offenders protected under the ancien regime.

What observers call a master-stroke is the US-educated Ajit Singh's selection as industry minister. There were several hopefuls for the post, including Fernandes. But Singh stuck to Ajit because he is not dogmatic, is capable of handling multinationals, and represents a practical approach to industrial modernisation. Since industrial policy is likely to be more liberal than fiscal and monetary policies, Ajit, himself a liberal, is bound to feel at home. Says he: "There's a big mess here that needs cleaning. There is a general perception that this ministry kills entrepreneurship and creates monopoly. But we'll change this image soon."

MADHU DANDAVATE, 65, FINANCE

PRASHANT PANJIAR

Unassuming and soft-spoken, Madhu Dandavate has come a long way since his days as a teacher of physics in a Bombay college. As finance minister, he is among the most powerful men in the country. Still, the tasks before him—reducing the trade and budget deficits, increasing foreign exchange reserves, checking inflation—are many and the options few. His views:

"My top priority is to check the rise in prices of essential commodities. Then, to create more jobs, we will ensure that goods that can be made by small units are not produced by large units.

"The foreign exchange position is serious. But if we are forced to borrow from abroad, we won't accept any humiliating conditions dictated by lenders like the IMF. We will try and stop the reckless import of non-essential items."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ARUN NEHRU, 45, COMMERCE & TOURISM

As Union Minister for Commerce and Tourism, Arun Nehru's task is to reduce the trade deficit and encourage tourism. A former corporate executive, Nehru brings considerable managerial expertise to his job. As minister of state for energy and internal security, he successfully handled tricky problems. Characteristically, he plunged into his job, meeting officials and personally visiting offices to review the situation. His plans:

"From now on export promotion will be the major thrust of the Government. Our policy framework is clear: raise exports and minimise imports.

"We will ensure that agencies like the State Trading Corporation (STC) do the job of exports. I can assure you that STC imports will be reduced by over Rs 1,000 crore by next year, and that non-canalised exports will rise by an equal amount.

"Tourism will be the leading foreign exchange earner. The India Tourism Development Corporation will, instead of running hotels, provide management expertise and go out of the country in search of new markets."

RAGHU RAI

Similarly the appointment of Fernandes as railway minister has placed the fiery trade union leader in a position where, to ensure the success of his government, he will have to extract responsible behaviour from railway trade unionists rather than mollycoddle them. And no one understands the turbulent trade union politics better than Fernandes. Because of Gujral's lengthy experience as a diplomat, he was a natural choice for the post of foreign minister.

The only fix in which Singh found himself was finding a portfolio for Devi Lal whose supporters had lobbied vigorously for his appointment as home minister. But Singh chose to make him the agriculture minister. This too was a sound political decision. As home minister Devi Lal would have brought a slightly blighted look to the new Government because of widespread fears that his son Om Prakash Chautala would try and manipulate him for personal ends. As agriculture minister, the "Tau" of Jat politics inherits his most natural political constituency—the farmers. And in his capacity he will be able to do on a national scale what he did in Haryana—writing off peasant loans and also taking credit for the allocation of 50 per cent of the budget to the rural sector.

THE selection of Mufti Mohammed Sayeed as home minister was also acclaimed. The choice of a Muslim for this post was a reassurance to Muslims in the Hindi heartland and to the alienated militants in Kashmir that notwithstanding the Janata Dal's truce with the BJP, their interests would be protected. Also Mufti is expected to tread cautiously in dealing with Hindu fundamentalists. But there was another reason for Mufti's choice. Traditionally, because of the lesson of the challenge to Jawaharlal Nehru from home minister Sardar Patel—this portfolio has been reserved for someone without national ambitions. Mufti fits this bill. Like Buta Singh, he has no base of his own from where he can mount any national political challenge. Says Mufti: "To fight communalism and extremism is my first motto. While we believe that there is no problem which can't be solved through negotiations, we will never compromise with those who divide the country."

Though the cabinet formation is yet to

I.K. GUJRAL, 70, EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

SHARAD SAXENA

Inder Kumar Gujral's first day in office brought an immediate reminder of the delicate diplomatic course the new Government has to chart: a high-level Sri Lankan delegation was waiting to see him about the pull-out of Indian troops. Gujral, former ambassador to the Soviet Union, was easily the most suitable choice for foreign minister. On foreign policy priorities, he says:

"The priorities will be determined by our party's manifesto which emphasises improved relations with our neighbours, primarily Sri Lanka and Nepal. We have inherited a certain situation. History can't be undone.

"Given the type of goodwill we are trying to express, we hope to receive a similar response from all our neighbours. We want our relations with Pakistan to be warmer and closer. On China, it is possible to further the relationship. Then, we would like to see an Afghanistan that is independent, democratic and non-aligned.

"The Soviet Union has been a reliable friend. With the United States, we would like to open our doors and windows in order to improve further on our relationship."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

MUFTI MOHAMMED SAYEED, 53, HOME AFFAIRS

A lightweight Kashmiri politician, Mufti Mohammed Sayeed must never have imagined that he would be the nation's first Muslim home minister. His mild manners and secular image won him the coveted post. But his North Block office, vacated by Buta Singh, will not be a bed of roses. The shocking kidnapping of his daughter soon after he assumed office was evidence of that. His mettle will be further tested in the months to come. Says Mufti about his assignment:

"We have to bring the various communities together. The politics of hatred and the gun have to to be replaced by harmonious relations. We would rather sit in the Opposition or on the road than exploit religious sentiments.

"We will not let blood flow in the sacred land of Ayodhya, which is a testimony to our secular traditions. We will solve the Ram Janmabhoomi problem by involving the people of Ayodhya.

"While extremism will be dealt with firmly, we will never encourage terrorism. We believe in winning the hearts of the people and not in scoring a victory by eliminating anyone physically."

SHARAD SAXENA

be completed, the overall message is clear. V.P. Singh and his 'A' team—comprising Nehru, Khan, Mufti, Gujral and Fernandes—have kept the key portfolios. Nehru was chosen for the most important commerce department—which controls Rs 60,000 crore worth of foreign trade. Khan was inducted to deal with the high-profile civil aviation and energy departments. It was clear that Singh proposes to run the Government with the active participation of younger elements like Nehru, Khan, Paswan and Yadav who were all dealing with both economic and infrastructural portfolios.

Singh kept defence and personnel because the two departments will play the most significant role as the new Government's mission begins to unfold. Singh is committed to find out the names of the Bofors pay-off recipients and this can be done through the Defence Ministry and the CBI which comes under the personnel department.

IF Singh succeeds in tightening the screw on defence purchases, he will score a major victory over the defence agents responsible for his ouster. Additionally, elimination of kickbacks and irregularities in defence purchases will also ultimately control the runaway defence budget to which Singh is committed in order to divert money from defence expenditures to a pro-poor budget.

The caste orientation of the new Cabinet did reflect the caste domination of the Janata Dal which had 14 of 18 ministers excluding the prime minister. As against one Thakur, there were three Jats—Devi Lal, Ajit Singh, Nathu Ram Mirdha—giving it a totally rural orientation, two Muslims and two Scheduled Caste members. To minimise the north-south divide, over 25 per cent cabinet-level representation was given to the south, even though it threw up only three party MPs.

Another buzzword doing the rounds of the new Government is decentralisation. Following strictly the cabinet committee system, the prime minister constituted five important panels to deal with basic issues like price rise, Panchayati Raj, autonomy to the electronic media, Punjab and Jammu & Kashmir, right to information and a committee on right to work. The panels have been given time

AJIT SINGH, 50, INDUSTRY

SHARAD SAXENA

When Ajit Singh returned from the US in 1986 to take over his father Charan Singh's position in the Lok Dal, few gave him even an outside chance in the bad, bad world of Indian politics. Less than four years later, he has confounded all his critics, by making it to the Union ministry. Oddly enough, for the son of a man who was known as the champion of the rural areas, Ajit Singh is industry minister. His views:

"Industry has to produce more goods but at the same time it has to generate more jobs. In all developed countries, the proportion of workers in agriculture has shrunk but not in India. The trend has to change.

"Big business houses will have to meet their export obligations. If small and cottage industries can export, why not large corporations?

"About Maruti, I am not saying that efficient cars are not needed. But the Rs 500 crore in scarce resources invested in it should have been spent on improving the public transport system."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE PRIME MINISTER

Refreshing Openness

THE next time you see a car sail past you on a New Delhi road and the man in it seems to resemble the prime minister, take a second look. It may be the prime minister.

For the first time ever, the country's head of government will be driving around the city like an ordinary man. The customary dozen bullet-proof Mercedes and Contessas have been got rid of. The air-conditioned ambulance will stay home. There'll be just three escort cars. And, this is only the beginning of the dismantling—ordered by Prime Minister Vishwanath Pratap Singh—of the Rs 50-lakh-a-day security apparatus that once cocooned Rajiv Gandhi.

For starters, the contingent of over 400 special securitymen forming the elaborate three-ring security circus has been pared down to a detail of about 15. Singh has a handful of guards in the inner ring and a bare dozen for the outer one. No barricades block the roads leading to his house on 28 Lodhi Estate. Visitors are only required to pass through a metal detecting frame outside.

Also missing from Singh's house are the expensive X-ray machines for checking visitors' belongings. The ferry cars used to carry ministers to the prime minister's house have been dispensed with. Visitors can now park their vehicles outside. They won't be towed away. A house next door has been acquired to function as his office.

Singh made his intentions clear immediately after assuming office. A day after, when over 500 well-wishers and political colleagues descended on his three-bedroom house, a dozen guards of the elite Special Protection Group (SPG) threw a ring around him. Singh was furious. "Please don't try to keep me away from the people," he said. "They are my best protectors. The prime minister's chair is temporary but people are permanent." That was the first hint of the sea change to come.

The new prime minister has refused to wear a bullet-proof jacket arguing that he isn't on anybody's hit list. His family too has declined to use bullet-proof cars and escorts. His wife Sita Devi, his sons and his daughter-in-law go out in ordinary official cars, accompanied by two armed guards. Traffic on the road along which Singh travels won't be blocked for more than five minutes. And all other roads on his route will be kept open till the last minute. Securitymen haven't yet recovered from the shock of the new rules. But when Singh ordered that policemen should not line the route, they put their foot down.

SHARAD SAXENA

Singh with supporters: accessible

Other changes, however, are being carried out. The new prime minister has ordered that the 1,200-strong SPG, which costs over Rs 2 crore a month to maintain, be either disbanded or reduced in numbers. Senior officers on deputation from the army or the states are to be sent back. The one concession Singh has made relates to Rajiv Gandhi. He will be allowed to retain the personnel he requires for his personal security.

But easily the most obvious change is at the Prime Minister's Office. Visitors are still frisked but the corridors leading to the office are not crowded by brusque Sten gun-toting guards. Even a deputy secretary who served Rajiv in the Prime Minister's Office and who is now awaiting transfer orders admitted: "There's a fresh air blowing through the whole place, a sense of freedom."

Rajiv's ministers and Congress(I) MPs would envy the access their Janata Dal counterparts have to the prime minister. They don't have to wait for the telephone operator to locate the prime minister's private secretary for permission to put through calls even to low-level personal staff members. Singh's new private secretary, H.P. Sharma, himself picks up the phone. And he has been instructed not to refuse calls without informing the prime minister of the identity of the caller. Says Singh: "If people can walk into any office without fear, they will be the most powerful check on the Government."

The difference between the old order and the new seems to be that while Rajiv revelled in the elaborate security set-up, which even now continues to burgeon, Singh despises it, as he does pomp in his life style.

—PRABHU CHAWLA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

GEORGE FERNANDES, 59, RAILWAYS

Way back in 1974, George Fernandes led a nationwide rail strike, in the process paralysing the ministry he now heads.

The former industry minister is determined not to be a passenger in his ministry. He spent the firs days "sinking his teeth int the problem" and came up with a mouthful:

"The passenger service sector is running at a tremendous loss. We should decide whether the state should subsidise superfast air-conditioned express travel or do something about the ordinary man who is forced to sit on the roof and travel.

"The railways are facing a resource crunch. I'm toying with the idea of involving local people by floating bonds and getting states to share the financial burden.

"Our freight revenues are showing a decline. We have to do something about the powerful truck operators' lobby that cuts into our business."

SHARAD SAXENA

limits to submit their proposals for implementation. In fact, the first Cabinet meeting decided to give priorities to issues on which there will be hardly any opposition from even the Congress(I). The subjects likely to be discussed in the short Parliament session are:

- Bill seeking autonomy to Doordarshan and All India Radio;
- Legislation recommending far-reaching electoral reforms;
- Bill to appoint a Lok Pal which will be empowered to look into corruption charges against cabinet ministers, including the prime minister.
- A comprehensive bill for Panchayati Raj incorporating the changes suggested by the DMK and the Marxists.

The prime minister wants to achieve these objectives with the active involvement of all ministers. Unlike his predecessor who accumulated a high level of power concentration in the Prime Minister's Office (PMO), Singh has made it clear to the ministers and the officials that he would not like his office to intervene in any ministry. He has also begun the process for pruning his own office as well as the all-powerful Cabinet Secretariat which controls half the Government and has been serving as a parallel cabinet without any direct responsibility and with unlimited funds at its disposal.

SINCE senior government secretaries had become used to dealing with the PMO directly, many of them tried to follow the same track after V.P. Singh took office and sought appointments with the prime minister for seeking his direction. They were quietly told that they would have to deal with their own ministers and Singh would meet them in groups if there was any need. Even in the selection of senior bureaucrats, Singh has given total freedom to the ministers and other leaders. For example, when the question of choosing a new chief secretary for the Punjab Government came up for discussion, various people suggested numerous names. But Singh made it clear that the decision should be left to the new Governor Nirmal Mukherjee who had to deal with the situation. Similarly, there was a lot of pressure on Singh to rehabilitate Bhure Lal who suffered at the hands of Rajiv's clique as director of enforcement. But Singh made it clear that only the finance minister would decide the assignment for Bhure Lal. And finally, in the selection of a civil servant for a key ministry like Information and Broadcasting, the decision was left to the new Minister P. Upendra. Singh told INDIA TODAY: "The PMO should not be involved in taking decisions in areas which are the

ARIF MOHAMMED KHAN, 38, ENERGY & CIVIL AVIATION

For the past three years Arif Mohammed Khan stood solidly behind V.P. Singh as he took on Rajiv Gandhi. Now, as the youngest cabinet minister in charge of both civil aviation and energy, he faces a different challenge—of restoring the credibility of the airlines system and ensuring sufficient power. His priorities:

"We will remove the manmade shortage of power in the country. We will see to it that none of the industries suffers in production due to the lack of power supply in the central sector. If all goes well we will be able to create a corporate adline: If there is a light in a remote corner of an Indian village, think of us.

"In civil aviation, we would like to create a situation where people set their watches by the flight timings. I have told the airline officials that the Goverment does not mind giving them the best service conditions. But they must deliver or else...."

JAGAN NEGI

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

MANEKA GANDHI, 33, ENVIRONMENT & FORESTS

The towel-clad model of the '70s is now a minister. Maneka Gandhi has emerged from the traumas of her personal and political life—her husband Sanjay Gandhi's death, her subsequent rejection by the Gandhi family, the tragic death of her father, a humiliating defeat in the 1984 polls at the hands of brother-in-law Rajiv Gandhi—and finally acquired an identity of her own. As a prolific columnist, the Janata Dal general secretary has earned the reputation of being a forceful advocate of environmental issues. That ensured her a berth as Minister of State in the Ministry of Environment & Forests. Says she:

GOPAL SUNGER

"I see my new appointment as a victory for environmentalists. It is too early to say exactly what my approach will be.

"We haven't implemented environmental laws properly. On the Narmada project controversy, I have to go into the details of the project before making a categorical statement.

"Although I view the Green Party as a concept, right now I am not into it. Instead, I will try to re-green the country. We will seek more support from voluntary agencies and ensure that they are heard at all levels."

responsibilities of the ministers concerned. My office should be dealing with major policy directions and monitoring and leave it to others to contribute in a government which means business."

Singh was also determined to telex yet another message: that he would adopt a reconciliatory and not confrontationist approach on national political issues. This was immediately reflected in his first televised speech to the nation, a speech he wrote himself. Though parts of the speech sounded like a script from a Hindi film, it did have an emotional poetic impact on the audience. He said: "Sarkar ki tijori khali hai, dilon me aag lagi hui hai, zameen lahu se rangeen hai aur keematon ne insaani jaane sasti kar di hai. Hamare paas do hi taakaten hai: apni himmat aur aap ka vishwas" (The Government's coffers are empty, there is a fire raging in our hearts, the earth is stained with blood and high prices have made human lives cheap. We have only two strengths: our courage and your faith). Said Shatrughan Sinha, the film star who campaigned actively for the Janata Dal and other opposition candidates during the elections: "For me it was Raja Saheb's new face. His delivery and tone of each word was so effective that it would need actors like us to practise for over a month to create that kind of impact with the masses."

So far Singh's reconciliatory approach has kept his party hawks at bay. They had been attempting to prevail on him to dissolve all the state governments where the Congress(I) has lost badly, remove immediately all senior civil servants like the cabinet secretary, the officials in the PMO, heads of both the CBI and the Intelligence Bureau (IB) who were key political players during the Rajiv era, launch prosecution against Lalit Suri, Satish Sharma, Amitabh Bachchan and compulsorily retire Congress(I) governors. But Singh put his foot down even on the immediate sacking of IB chief M.K. Narayanan. Singh's view is that if the new Government wants to create a clean record, then it should not follow the vindictive and extra-legal practices of the Rajiv Gandhi government. Officials who had become the former government's political handmaidens and the executors of its vindictive policies, Singh avers, should simply be ignored and left to repent on their own. So, during his first days in office, he ignored the press secretary to

M.S. GURUPADASWAMY, 67, PETROLEUM & CHEMICALS

With the Janata Dal almost wiped out in Karnataka, V.P. Singh's choice for a cabinet member from the state fell on the stern-faced M.S. Gurupadaswamy, a Rajya Sabha member.

Gurupadaswamy was a member of Mrs Gandhi's cabinet from 1967 until 1969, when he parted ways with her. Now, 20 years later, he finds himself a central minister once again, this time in charge of petroleum and chemicals. His priorities:

SHARAD SAXENA

"Oil, gas and chemicals are important to the economy. This ministry must act as a catalyst for economic growth.

"Adequate quantities of kerosene and cooking gas must reach the consumers. We will get states to streamline the distribution system. We will do our best to increase oil production. And try to simplify procedures and rationalise systems to make them more functional.

"The issue of allowing drugs banned elsewhere into the country is a grey area. Not all of them might be harmful."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SHARAD YADAV, 44, TEXTILES & FOOD PROCESSING

Sharad Yadav, union minister for textiles and food processing, looks uncomfortable in his newly painted office in Udyog Bhavan—which handloom department officials are working overtime to decorate. An engineer from Jabalpur, Yadav is happier in Hindi than in English. His priorities:

"We will stress on handicrafts and the handloom sector. This is our priority area. We will try and speed up the new textile policy paper under Abid Hussain. If the Abid Hussain Committee cannot recommend anything, then we will set up another committee.

SHARAD SAXENA

"Our party had opposed Pepsi. I have asked for the Pepsi file. We will review it. We will look at how the project benefits farmers. We will have to look into its advantages and disadvantages before taking a decision.

"Our policy on food processing is two-pronged. We will give a new thrust to deep-sea fishing. Secondly we will develop cheap food for pregnant mothers. Till now the department was encouraging elitist foods like soft drinks which poor people can't even relate to. We will not encourage multinationals to come into food processing."

the prime minister, G. Parthasarthy, hardly bothered to consult T.N. Seshan, Montek Ahluwalia and refused to seek any advice from the RAW and IB chiefs. But then a few symbolic sackings were made. Finance secretary Gopi Arora was replaced with Bimal Jalan, Romesh Bhandari was moved out from Delhi, and S.S. Ray forced to resign from Punjab.

But even as the new Government was sliding into gear, it was not without a sense of the enormously weighty problems it faces. Some of them come from within his own government. There's the irrepressible Devi Lal to contend with. He loves to keep a high profile and to speak out on sensitive policy, political and governmental issues without consulting party colleagues. And irresponsible utterances can serve to embarrass or even destabilise the precariously-balanced National Front Government. For example, seven hours after his swearing-in as deputy prime minister—a post which he chose himself—he demanded that he be flown to Madras in an IAF plane to attend the wedding of Tamil Nadu Chief Minister Karunanidhi's daughter.

THIS was in sharp contrast to the new image of austerity that V.P. Singh's Government was trying to project. So, while the prime minister travelled in an Indian Airlines plane, the deputy prime minister was given a BSF aircraft and the whole incident became the object of public ridicule.

If that wasn't enough, Devi Lal made a public announcement in Madras that the Centre had decided to release an extra 50,000 tonnes of rice for Tamil Nadu. It was done without anyone's knowledge. And to make matters worse, no department had at that time been allocated to him. Later, the shoot-from-the-lip Jat spat out another embarrassing projectile. He announced that the Government would like to restrict the reservations for Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes to one member per family. Under current rules all members qualify. And what made matters worse was that the new Government during its first cabinet meeting had agreed to extend the current policy by another 10 years.

And the defeated, but still aggressive, Congress(I) has been quick to attack whenever it got an opening. Says Congress(I) spokesman Anand Sharma: "The true colours of this crippled government

MURASOLI MARAN, 52, URBAN DEVELOPMENT

A Tamil script-writer and producer of repute, Murasoli Maran, the amiable DMK Rajya Sabha member, is the ideologue of his party and editor of Murasoli, a party organ. As Minister for Urban Development, Maran will handle 36 subjects ranging from housing and central public works to the administration of four Delhi markets and the Nehru Rozgar Yojana. A monumental task. His plans:

"Gandhiji said the real India lives in the villages. That situation is changing fast. Now one out of three Indians lives in urban areas. We have to focus on building other nodal cities to relieve the pressure on the major metropolises.

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

"We will recast the Rozgar Yojana and make it less of a give-away programme or a loan mela. We need not jettison it.

"In housing, the Government alone can't do all the funding. Co-operative ownership must be encouraged in a big way.

"Urban transportation will be a priority area."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

RAM VILAS PASWAN, 43, LABOUR & WELFARE

Ram Vilas Paswan, his rural pronunciation notwithstanding, is clearly at home in his plush office in Shram Shakti Bhavan where he presides as minister for labour and welfare. He warmly embraces visitors and solicitously orders coffee for them, while struggling to turn away an ex-minister from Rajasthan waiting to see him. On his priorities, he says:

"Under the Labour Ministry, my first and foremost priority will be to evolve a time-bound programme to abolish bonded labour all over the country. I'm also keen to bring about labour participation in management.

"Concrete measures to stop the exploitation of unorganised labour including agricultural and migrant labour will be taken.

"As promised in our manifesto, we will not dereserve any seats—60 per cent reservation will be given to Scheduled Castes and Tribes, physically handicapped and women.

"Implementing the Land Reforms Acts is among my priorities. We will also launch a three-pronged attack on the drug menace."

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

are coming out now. Not only was it born out of deceit, but the greedy rulers will finish it before it takes a final shape." But the Janata Dal leaders dismiss this as wishful thinking. Says Khan: "We are a democratic party and not a party of slaves and masters like the Congress(I). Here everyone's point of view is considered useful, but finally consensus is the principle and not dictatorship."

But the party does have a very real problem in this area. Because it has no structural organisation like the AICC(I), it has no real party spokesman who is able to react quickly to counter either disinformation or the mounting attacks by the Opposition. The Congress(I) was quick on the uptake right from the start. Following V.P. Singh's televised address in which he said the "nation's coffers are empty", former finance minister S.B. Chavan immediately reacted denying this. But no response was available from the National Front.

Devi Lal and his group are not the only problem. While the cabinet-making was relatively smooth, it still left key partymen sulking. Because of the meal-ticket compulsions of the minority government, most MPs wanted either chief ministerships or cabinet posts.

AND many are still sore. Maneka Gandhi and Chandra Shekhar protege Yashwant Sinha were unhappy over their role in the new Government. Both were expecting cabinet posts. Sinha simply decided to keep out of the Government.

V.P. Singh will continue to feel the pulls and pressures of these forces. Leaders like Ajit Singh, Chandra Shekhar still claim the support of a sizeable number of MPs capable of switching allegiances should some major crisis erupt. According to Janata Dal sources, Devi Lal, with about 25 MPs, has the largest chunk of followers; Ajit about 20, and Chandra Shekhar about half a dozen. But these leaders don't pose any immediate threat to Singh, because the three groupings—while they have come together to form the Janata Dal under V.P. Singh—are unlikely to come together for unified support to any of the other leaders. But they constitute more than a third of the Janata Dal and can be of great nuisance value to Singh in case the party does not fare well in the assembly polls.

Moreover, the prime minister's real

DINESH GOSWAMI, 54, STEEL, LAW & JUSTICE

Dinesh Goswami entered public life on a Congress ticket in 1971. After he lost the 1977 election, he joined the Congress(S). He entered the Rajya Sabha in 1978, and continued as an independent after resigning from the Congress(S) in 1979. Later, he joined the Asom Gana Parishad.

Now, he has to prove his administrative abilities in the Ministry of Steel and Mines as well as that of Law and Justice.

Citing the appointment of Sabyasachi Mukharji as chief justice of India, Goswami said:

PRASHANT PANJIAR

"We are determined not to break conventions, except in exceptional cases.

"We will pay a lot of attention to electoral reforms. The objective is obviously to reduce the blatant influence of money and muscle power.

"Other matters calling for attention are the strengthening of the Election Commission, providing state funding for elections, and sundry matters such as whether an election needs to be countermanded if an independent candidate dies."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

SONY

New from Sony... VHS video decks

Quality and performance from the leader in audio and video

Sony, the video expert, presents the X10. VHS video with world-famous Sony quality. The quality that makes Sony the choice of professionals around the globe. Plus the convenience of features such as the new Super Access Mechanism. To give you the picture on-screen in less than a second. Instead of the long wait with conventional VHS video decks. So now, there's really only one word you need to know to get the best in VHS video. And that word is... Sony.

•HQ •AutoVolt • 3ch-4ch • Compatible with locally produced CTV • 2 System (PAL SECAM)

VHS

PAL

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

K.P. UNNIKRISHNAN, 53, SURFACE TRANSPORT & COMMUNICATIONS

"I am calling from the residence of the minister of communications. This phone does not ring. please send someone immediately." That was the private secretary to K.P. Unnikrishnan, the new minister for surface transport and communications. Obviously, there was no need to emphasise to Unnikrishnan the enormousness of the task at hand.

A seasoned politician, Unnikrishnan has been a prominent and able parliamentarian since 1971 and he took command immediately, asserting his authority over telecom whizkid Sam Pitroda as soon as he took charge. Says he:

PRASHANT PANJIAR

"Everyone's contribution is welcome but they will have to function within the structure. There is only one minister, one prime minister and one council of ministers responsible to the people through Parliament.

"Transport and communications are the lifelines of any country and crucial to the very existence of a nation. But resources have had to be thinly spread and a serious problem might arise during the eighth plan. The rural areas also need roads. They also need telephones. My priority, however, will be the development of national highways."

tightrope-walk between the communists and the BJP has only now begun in earnest. The flashpoint will arrive when the BJP demands the restoration of Ram Janmabhoomi to the Hindus and repeal of Article 370. In addition, there are senior elected BJP partymen who are insisting that they be given a more meaningful role in the new Government. Some of them are miffed that they were not invited to go to the Golden Temple with Singh. Tensions are already beginning to show.

Right now Singh remains confident that these are teething problems. And since he has accomplished so much through negotiations with disparate groups whose umbrella support he enjoys, Singh will continue to find solutions to the problems through negotiations. The assembly elections, even though they may cause more feuding between the Janata Dal and the BJP, will, conversely, Janata Dal leaders hope, further cement the Janata Dal factions together because if they are to perform well they must remain united. Says Nehru: "The very fact that we are in a minority and depend on others will keep our government going for the next five years. In fact we will consolidate our position after the assembly elections."

BUT so far, the party is hardly ready, in an organisational sense, to face the coming electoral contest in various states. With most party leaders having received ministerial berths at the Centre, and now glued to their chairs, there is hardly any political activity in the Janata Dal headquarters that suggests intensive preparations for the next battle in less than two months time.

It's a tough row to hoe. But so far V.P. Singh's best bet has been his performance—decisive, leaderlike and politically savvy. In a few short weeks, without the help of gimmicks, ad slogans, or well-orchestrated party propagandists, he has been able to transform his public image of a waffling, wishy-washy, reluctant leader to that of a man of action. If he is able to sustain the momentum and continue to perform in a manner that adds to his stature as a national leader of a stable government, there is little doubt that he will be able to continue to be his party's lion vote-catcher in the assembly elections. In that eventuality, the threats to his government from within—and without—are bound to diminish. For strength flows from strength.

—PRABHU CHAWLA

P. UPENDRA, 53, INFORMATION & BROADCASTING, PARLIAMENTARY AFFAIRS

Parvathaneni Upendra's devastating wit ("Should I take this opportunity to welcome our prime minister on his latest visit to India?") made him a popular member of the Rajya Sabha. Now, as minister of information and broadcasting, he has to finalise the modalities of granting autonomy to the electronic media. He is also in charge of parliamentary affairs. His priorities:

BHAWAN SINGH

"On the question of autonomy for Doordarshan and All India Radio we are looking at the BBC model. I have to prepare a paper for the Cabinet and we will decide by the coming parliamentary session.

"Doordarshan is already more free, even before autonomy. I have told the director general not to accept requests from ministers. Everything will go by merit. Even the prime minister will only be shown if the item has news value."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

INTAC

The power of a new generation

INTAC inherits more than 50 years of Caterpillar dependability to give you diesel engine power you can trust. When it really counts.

INTAC

DIESEL AND GAS ENGINES YOUR ASSURANCE OF CATERPILLAR ECONOMY, DURABILITY AND DEPENDABILITY

INTAC engines represent the last word in diesel engine technology. Continuing research by Caterpillar has led to the development of better fuel injection and combustion techniques, lowered emissions and improved fuel economy. The use of tough and durable construction materials increases engine life, reduces wear and tear and facilitates engine rebuilds again and again after extended use.

The INTAC range of diesel engines – from 144 kW (180KVA) and up – will match your needs, ranging from gensets to workhorse applications in the petroleum, marine, earth moving and locomotive industries.

CAT PLUS – A worldwide commitment to product support. Extending the Caterpillar tradition of excellence in product support, Hindustan Powerplus dealers will ensure that service support adds value to every INTAC engine.

INTAC engines and gensets powered by INTAC engines are now available through our dealer in your area.

For more details, please fill in the coupon and mail it to us.

GMM CO GENERAL MARKETING AND MANUFACTURING COMPANY LIMITED

Anil Pewekar
Divisional Manager (Engines)
Maker Bhavan No. 2, 2nd Floor,
New Marine Lines, BOMBAY-400 020.
Tel: 257411, 253921 Tlx. No: 011-5738/2315

TIL Limited

Ranabir Chaudhury
Engine Sales Manager
1, Taratolla Road, Garden Reach,
Calcutta-700 024.
Tel: 455771/5, 454962, 451861
Tlx. No: 021-8072/8101

Name: _____
Designation: _____
Company: _____
Nature of Industry: _____
Address: _____
_____
_____
Pin Code: _____
Tel: _____ Tlx: _____
(a) Please send me a detailed brochure.
(b) I would like your representative to call on me.
(c) Indicate your KVA requirement: 180, 225, 275, 320, 500, 590, 856 KVA.

DEPENDABLE POWER FROM INTAC

Caterpillar, CAT and CB are Trademarks of Caterpillar Inc., U.S.A.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

None can beat us in range, quality and precision. After all, we are the pioneers in India and leaders too. We are fully geared to solve your problems right from selection to manufacture of the right equipment.

ALLROYD 'S'

WORM REDUCTION GEAR UNITS

ALLEN-MAX

HELICAL SPEED REDUCERS

OPTIMAX

GEARED MOTORS

SEAMAX

MARINE GEAR UNITS

VARIMAX

VARIABLE SPEED UNITS

ALLMAX

CURVED TOOTH GEAR COUPLINGS

CENTRIMAX

CENTRIFUGAL CLUTCH

FLEXIMAX

PINTYPE FLEXIBLE COUPLINGS

GEARS OF ALL DESCRIPTION

BOMBAY OFFICE:
Phone: 23-0232,23-1808
Gram: ALLENBERRY
Telex: 11-5662 NAWB
BANGALORE OFFICE:
Phone: 56-4759
Gram: GEARBOX
NEW DELHI OFFICE:
Phone: 33-21646,33-20516,33-21934
Gram: ALLROYD
Telex: 3161017 NAWD
HYDERABAD OFFICE
Phone: 23-7109
Gram: ALLENBERRY
KANPUR OFFICE:
Phone: 210331 Gram: OPTIMAX
MADRAS OFFICE:
Phone: 52-7721
Gram: ALLROYD Telex: 41-6963 NAW

Gear-fully yours

naw

NEW ALLENBERRY WORKS
PROP. DEEPAK INDUSTRIES LTD.
62, HAZRA ROAD, CALCUTTA 700 019
PHONE:753651 (3 LINES) GRAM:GEARBOX
TELEX: 21-3239 NAW IN FAX: 033-289382

—Rest assured, they are the latest and the best

PPS/NAW/89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Beautiful ideas for a beautiful home!

Classic workmanship. That tells the story of expertise handed down through generations to inspire you to decorate, furnish, and dress-up at your imaginative and appealing best!

NAA/D/UPEC-89

GANGOTRI

At: New Delhi, Bombay, Calcutta, Bangalore, Hyderabad, Nagpur, Bhopal, Allahabad, Agra, Lucknow & Kanpur.

UPEC

U.P. EXPORT CORPORATION LTD.
(A Govt. of U.P. Undertaking)
B-27, Sarvodaya Nagar, Kanpur-208 005 (India)

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CONGRESS(I) LEADERS

The Powers that Were

The once all-powerful Congress(I) stalwarts are now confronting a life without power and adjusting to new routines. While some have taken the defeat in their stride, others demonstrate hurt pride. But for most, it's sabbatical time.

RAJIV GANDHI

Darshans continue but the imperial glitter has faded

THE December morning cold chills to the bones. And the lethargic mist curls around the windowpanes, subduing the day. But for the occupant of 7, Race Course Road, there are a host of memories to provide warmth. Of a silvery grey Mercedes and a rust-coloured Range Rover that he drove with abandon. Of fleets of airplanes and helicopters that took to the air at the nod of his head. Of a country of 800 million that ran to his writ of having spent 40 of his 45 years in the prime ministerial house.

Yet it is not memories alone that provide Rajiv Gandhi with solace. For though he may have lost his sceptre and his fangs, several trappings survive. Before the morning mist has dissipated people have gathered outside the house of the leader of the Opposition.

Among them: Congressmen from Gujarat and Himachal Pradesh, Tibetan Buddhist monks, Mahila Congress(I) workers from Jammu and a dozen-odd students of Jawaharlal Nehru University. Around 8.30 a.m. the security personnel start frisking the visitors in. The aura of power and privilege still hangs over the place. The Special Protection Group (SPG) is still on guard. And members of the staff still ask: "Want to meet the PM?" And laughing apologetically, still hand out the "PM's house group meeting pass".

> Defeat has not changed him: he still finds it difficult to relate to the immediate context.

Inside, on the sprawling lawn, mattresses have been laid. Between two trees hangs the banner of the Dalit Sahitya Academy. Dapper in kurta-pyjama and an ash-coloured windcheater, Rajiv appears for the morning darshan with folded hands at 9:05 a.m. Meandering across the lawn, he meets the visitors in groups. In an impromptu address to the academy delegates, he dwells on his pet subject—a new education policy which he tried to implement. "You know the kind of education they give at government schools, and how many people can afford to send their children to public schools?" he orates. Defeat has not changed him any: he still finds it difficult to realte to the immediate context.

Photographs by BHAWAN SINGH

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Meantime Darbara Singh, Bhajan Lal, A.R. Mallu and Pratibha Patil arrive. Satish Sharma is nowhere to be seen. Is this the return of the old-guard? Rajiv shuttles between the groups. Defeated fire-brand from West Bengal, Mamta Banerjee, requests him to visit the state. Urdu litterateur and Rajya Sabha member Bekal Utsahi, presents him a copy of his latest book, Rang Hazaron Khushbu Ek.

Photo sessions abound. Combined with the strengthening sun, it all makes for a holiday atmosphere. Rajiv moves to the next enclosure. Hare Krishna monks—ISKCON—from Bombay lie in wait. Mahamantra Das presents him the Bhagavad Gita which will endow "the leader with a rare moral and spiritual strength". Some party leaders petition for the exclusive ear. Rajiv takes them aside. MPs, AICC(I) functionaries mill around.

But there is no denying the fact that the imperial glitter has faded. That the lack of panic conceals as much resignation as confidence. It is Rajiv Gandhi's smile that is the accurate pointer: it hangs unchanging, tired and inane. Inertia sits heavy. Though Bhubaneswar Prasad Gupte, a freedom fighter from Sunbhadra in Uttar Pradesh tells Rajiv, "You must fight back, we are all with you", no one seems to be ready to march out to join battle.

Rajiv's day still begins at 6.30 a.m., but the study contains no files to flip through. No papers to sign. Substitutes now are: a walk in the garden, or a few hundred pedals on the exercise bike. The phone still rings. But gone are the RAX and the PABX. The sing-song female voice, "Good morning, Mr Rajiv Gandhi's residence", has been replaced by a male's, "Yes, 3014481". Those privy to his personal number now hear daughter Priyanka answer the phone. And Rajiv has time to take December 9 off to celebrate Sonia's birthday.

Certain practices persist. Two to 4 p.m. is a two-hour break when he returns home to spend time with his wife and the children. But as usual he is late in leaving. The bearer arrives with the lunch: the usual tomato soup. Meetings run on till one in the night. Says an aide: "The PM seems to need only 90 minutes of sleep. The man is so full of energy."

There is irony here. The energy has little chance of escape. Confined as it is within the walls of his fortress. The bouquets are still opened. And the visitors are still frisked. Rows of policemen still line the roads when he moves out. And high on the hit list, Rajiv had stepped out only three times in the first week of December.

December this year is different in more ways than one. Traditionally, it has been a month for holidaying. But this year there are problems of security, the weight of defeat. He is yet to visit his farm house in Mehrauli, if only to see how the plants are doing or for a swim in the pool. His eyes, say aides, are now set on the assembly elections due in March.

It is the swing of the pendulum, demanding an equilibrium. Rajiv Gandhi, once the high-flying, hyper-active prime minister, circumambulating the country and world tirelessly seems suddenly circumscribed by the barricaded boundaries of 7, Race Course Road.

K. NATWAR SINGH

No withdrawal symptoms as books keep him occupied

TILL the other day, Natwar Singh, savvy diplomat turned suave minister for external affairs, had his hands full meeting foreign dignitaries in India or abroad. Now, suddenly he finds himself unemployed for the first time in 37 years. Call it chance, call it what you will, but Singh has retirement thrust upon him at what is considered just the right age—his 58th year.

"At the moment there are no withdrawal symptoms," claims Singh, relaxing comfortably on his ornate sofa. But then, as he reflects, he was never a routine-minded person, "not even when I was in the Government."

Pointing to Han Suyin's, A Share of

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Loving, lying at his feet, he says: "I am busy reviewing this book. Travel, reading and writing have always been an obsession with me."

And that's what they will remain for some time. Singh's currently working on his book, Diplomacy, Old and New, while chalking out an itinerary for lectures abroad. Then there are the book reviews for the Financial Times, London.

His new role will be that of a full-time columnist. Says he: "Historic events are taking place in eastern Europe. I plan to base myself there for a while and send in articles to different publications."

Now that there are no delegations to occupy him, no files to peruse, he is also looking forward to his game of tennis. In the last 10 months, Singh, who is president of the All India Tennis Federation and a former Delhi University champion, says he hasn't had the time to hold a tennis racket. And that's a matter of regret for a man who's shared a game with Davis Cup captains Sumant Mishra, Narendra Nath and Prem Pandey.

So it will be Gymkhana Club in the evenings for a game of his favourite sport. And in the mornings, it will be yoga and a walk in the garden with his five dogs. And as for his family—wife, a son and a daughter—"I've just had no time for them or for myself for that matter," he says with obvious unhappiness. But he has taken a decision: "From now on I'm going to practise the French saying, Etre bien, avec soi (Be on good terms with yourself)."

He's not overly concerned about the withdrawal of personal staff, cars, security guards. "At least I can now walk into a book shop and not feel like a criminal being taken to jail," he laughs. All he needs now is to hire a stenographer to type out his articles. The retinue of servants has always been there.

Singh owns a palatial house in Delhi's affluent Vasant Vihar locality. Says he with a smile: "I had tenants there, but fortunately the lease expires on December 31." The cars—a Toyota and a Maruti Gypsy—are there too. "Not a bad existence, after all, is it?" he asks.

But he pontificates: "An austere existence is very good for the soul, body and mind. Power comes and goes. I am not one to moan and groan. I get a lot of kick out of life."

As for the kick out of politics, he has taken it in his stride. "It's quite an experience to be at the receiving end," he says, as he prepares to set off to the hills. For a long overdue holiday to Dochi and Chail (in Himachal Pradesh) with the family.

PRASHANT PANJIAR

SHEILA DIKSHIT

She is now back to being a "fastidious housewife" and enjoys it

SHIELA Dikshit, the all-important minister of state in the Prime Minister's Office, known to be often barking orders into two telephones at the same time, now finds herself in the role of a "fastidious housewife".

Says she: "I'd become a lady at large in the last three years." There was the chauffeur to drive her around. Just a buzz and the personal assistant would get any number she'd want. The typist who'd have letters ready in a jiffy.

Soon to be stripped of all personal staff, Dikshit is looking forward to driving her own Maruti, dialling the telephone. Even typing herself. "I manage with one finger," she says. The mornings seem brighter. With fewer telephone calls to disturb her, she can sleep on for an extra half hour.

> "I was so surrounded by officialdom, I'd become less of a human being."

Warming her hands in front of the heater in her ethnically decorated room, she says: "I like changes. Being out of

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Where there's smoke, there's fire. Where there's steelage fire-resisting equipment, there's security.

Funny thing about fire. It teaches a lesson too late! What remains are the ashes of one's dream, built by sweat and hard work. Fortunately, most things one values in life are insurable. House, office building, factory, plant and machinery, jewellery. All these are replaceable.

But some things are irreplaceable.

Paper for one.

Title deeds, documentary proof, research papers. Just think of one precious paper or document in your possession. Is it replaceable? At what cost?

Business is built on paper and today on computer data. Loss of records – such as account books, stock records, sales ledgers and customer lists – results in break in trading. Cash flow stops. You don't know to whom you owe money. Worse, you don't know who owes you money. And how much!

Fire-fighting readiness alone isn't enough. It makes business sense to have fire-protection readiness, too, Steelage.

Firebrand Fire-Resisting Cabinet

Firebrand Fire-Resisting Filing Cabinet

Dataguard-Fire-Protection Computer Data Cabinet

Micro Cabinet for storage of floppy disks

How fire-resistance is created
Every frame in the construction of the cabinet is perfectly aligned, to the precise fire-resistance standards.

The walls and doors of the cabinet are lined with tested fire-resistant materials. This insulates the interior against strong heat.

The heat-resisting insulation is solid and stable and can also withstand fall impact at high temperatures.

Chubb-tested fire-resisting material
The fire-resistance technology of Steelage is the result of continuous, on-going R&D effort of over 100 years by Chubb. The fire-resistance material presently used is specially developed by Chubb to retain solidity and stability and does not deteriorate with age.

Steelage wins the CBRI certificate in fire-fighting fitness
Instead of pouring the fire-resisting material, these are now lined along the door and walls of the cabinet. The fire-resisting material itself is far superior and there are other areas where the fire-resisting quality has been enhanced to the latest international standards. Steelage fire-resisting cabinets and filing cabinets have successfully passed the CBRI, Roorkee test for both fire-resistance and impact.

Steelage Industries Limited
Opp. P.O. Mazagaon, Bombay 400 010.
Phone: 851 2960/61, 851 2952.
Fax: 9122-851-2954 Telex: 011-75728
Cable: STEELAGE

Steelage Offices (Tel. nos.):
- Bombay 2042429
- New Delhi 5727822/5719358
- Madras 479068/475965 • Calcutta 266787
- Lucknow 665610 • Bangalore 233774/75
- Hyderabad 235499 • Bhopal 66432
- Jaipur 77393 • Bhubaneswar 57078

Keep a step ahead of fire

Be 100% security conscious with Steelage

Dattaram-SA 23A/89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

power is a professional hazard. But I'm no ten-to-five office person. And I certainly don't miss files. I want to be myself. And now's the time." There's certainly time to weed the garden, to listen to music.

"I was so surrounded by officialdom, I'd become less of a human being. Security guards following me all around, I didn't even enjoy my shopping. I'd go to the vegetable market, once in a while, just to get back to earth," says Dikshit, almost heaving a sigh of relief.

Soon, the politician in her surfaces. Says she: "There's so much party work to do. It's been two weeks since I've washed my hair. I still haven't had a Sunday off."

Her house, she admits, is coming back to being what she calls "a normal house". Earlier, there were scores of visitors. One person was constantly making tea.

Now it'll just be her, daughter Latika and father-in-law (Uma Shankar Dikshit). "There'll be much less expenditure. We'll manage on the pension, Rs 500 mine and Rs 2,300, my husband's." As an afterthought, she adds: "We won't be poverty-stricken."

Its the thought of shifting from a spacious bungalow to a cooped-up flat that is giving Dikshit sleepless nights. "I may not even have a garden," she exclaims. Her brow creased with worry, she elaborates: "Married to an IAS officer, I've lived in a government house all my life. Imagine, I sold my own flat just a year ago. I'm negotiating for another house in Nizamuddin, but the deal hasn't come through yet." And that is the reason why her daughter has applied for hostel accommodation in the Delhi School of Social Work where she is doing her masters.

Yet, in her own way, Dikshit is preparing herself for the upheaval. "I want to see what it feels like to live in a flat. And when I'm bored I hope we (the Congress-I) are back," she says. And smiles.

A holiday to take her away from her worries? "Holiday, my god, I have so much packing to do," she sighs. And smiles again.

JAGDISH TYTLER

Shocked by his defeat, he spends time with the birds

FROM Youth Congress(I) vice-president to minister for food processing—it has been 18 years in politics for Jagdish Tytler. And being in power was a feeling of constant high. Out of it, he's extremely uneasy. Still bewildered, he says: "I never thought I'd lose the election. I'd put in so much of work..."

Unable to accept his defeat, Tytler was back in the field soon after the results were announced, asking the people: "Why didn't you vote for me."

The electoral dust hasn't settled yet. Not for Tytler at least. One evening he was at the jhuggi jhopdi colony in his constituency, sharing the inmates' dinner. The next day he was at Nehru Vihar—an area where the votes went against him even though he had granted them a plot worth Rs 500 lakh for just Rs 2 lakh. And, he is coming alive to the reality around him.

> "My own house is not secure. I will ask them to let me retain this accommodation."

The fear of the bullet is eating into him. The Black Cat commandos still stand guard. Visitors are still frisked at the gate, but he's worried they'll be withdrawn.

Being high on the hit list ever since two public bodies accused him of an active role in the November '84 riots, does Tytler fear reprisal from the present government? "God knows, I'm not guilty," he says. Sikhs are his brothers, he adds. But to buy security, he plans to visit each Sikh home in his constituency.

Out of Parliament, Tytler will have to leave the safe confines of his ministerial bungalow and move to his Karol Bagh house. "That house is not safe for me. I'm going to meet the home minister and request him to allow me to retain this accommodation," he says.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SIEMENS

Sweet Nothings

Doing away with outmoded methods of sugar manufacture, Siemens have moved into process automation of sugar plants. This ensures faster through-put and fuller utilisation of the plant, better grades of sugar at lower prices for people across the country. Machines to release man from manual labour and highly intricate consoles designed to think for him as well. Automation is a sign of our times, evidence of the application of scientific knowledge to practical problems.

High technology with a human face. Whether it is control and automation systems or railway signalling equipment, medical electronics, switchgear, switchboards, drives, motors or new dimensions in telecommunications, Siemens focusses technology on human problems, human needs. Its close association with Siemens AG, W. Germany, helps keep Siemens in India in the frontline of international technology. With 120 years of experience in the country, Siemens is committed to India's progress and shares its hopes for the future.

As technology changes the face of the future, Siemens will be one of the foremost companies helping India keep pace with the world.

Siemens Ltd.,
P.O. Box 6597, Bombay 400 018

Siemens. Where international technology meets human needs.

UNTAS SM 159 2720

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

This year, Boeing jetliners will carry more people than live in the world's 100 largest cities.

Boeing jetliners will carry the equivalent of 12% of the world's population this year.

That's more people than live in Tokyo. New York. London. Beijing. Mexico City. Paris. Bangkok. Rio. Sydney. Cairo. And nearly a hundred other major cities.

The actual number of passengers will be about 675 million.

That sounds, of course, like an unbelievably large number.

But when you consider that Boeing airplanes take off or land about a million times a month, an

2BCI – 065

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

like an that land nth, an

unbelievably large number becomes largely believable.

Boeing. We don't just deliver a lot of airplanes. We deliver a lot of people.

BOEING

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

UPTRON SL8109 TELEVISION CONSOLE IT'S TRULY SENSATIONAL!

Sleek. Smart. Sophisticated.

The Uptron SL8109 Television Console, styled on the lines of tomorrow with extra space for your VCR and tapes.

Feast your eyes on its stunning looks ... you'll know why black is beautiful.

Treat your ears to mind-blowing sound. Pouring out of its four-way speakers.

And rest assured, you're getting the greatest value.

UPTRON SL8109. Entertainment will now be measured by this unit.

UPTRON
TELEVISIONS

SL 8109 Console-A TV and trolley unit

ULKA-D-UIL-731-ENG

COMPUTERS • SOFTWARE CONSULTANCY • COMMUNICATION SYSTEMS • COMPONENTS • CONTROL SYSTEMS • INDUSTRIAL ELECTRONICS • TELEVISIONS

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

In his free time, Tytler now accommodates his 10-year-old son, Siddharth. "He's practically grown up without me," he says, relaxing for the first time.

What's his day like? "Oh, I get up in the morning and spend time talking to my birds." Tytler's a bird lover and he has two macaws and an Australian bird in a huge cage in his lawns.

It's also back to reading for Tytler, who earlier didn't have the time to even glance through a book. "I'm reading about Napoleon's life," he says smiling.

Earnings? "I've never been financially weak," he says. About Rs 10,000 comes in from two houses that he has given on rent. Then he has shares in two companies. "Not Reliance," he smiles. "My son has shares in Reliance, not me."

The personal assistant comes in and Tytler gets up. "I've got people waiting in the other room." From one room to another. Tytler seems like one of his caged macaws as he disappears behind the curtain.

RAJESH PILOT

Swimming, horse-riding and quiet evenings with old friends

A huge crowd, jostling to get past security. A dozen vehicles parked outside. It was a familiar sight at the 3, Safdarjang Road residence of Rajesh Pilot, former minister for surface transport. Till recently.

The crowds are still there, but the number has come down by at least as much as half. Earlier the crowds came with sheafs of applications. For truck and scooter licences. Now they come to sympathise.

But even this is taken well. "Fortunately, the people are still coming," says Pilot with a laugh. The defeat, at the hands of Vishwinder Singh, a 27-year-old first-timer, has certainly restored Pilot's sense of humour.

And his style. The bandgala coat and dhoti have been discarded. And clad in casual shirt, trousers and a pull-over, Pilot looks very much the squadron leader he was until he left the Indian Air Force in 1979.

And it's yesterday once more. Quiet evenings, once in a while, with old friends at the air force mess or the Defence Service Officers Institute. The clinking of glasses and the munching out of bowls of peanuts.

Then there's the swimming at the Gymkhana Club with children Sachin and Sarika. There's also time now to go horse-riding in the President's Estate and what the children look forward to most—dinner at Ashok Hotel's Frontier restaurant once a month—a promise he could never manage to keep as a minister.

> "I have a lot of goodwill. The people still come. I'll survive."

If there's a worry, it's about a roof over his head. He has two houses, but in Dehra Dun and Ghaziabad. Coming to his rescue are friends who have won seats in the south. "Touch wood, I have a lot of goodwill. A lot of them have offered me their MP accommodation," says Pilot. So it'll be out of 3, Safdarjang Road to another government house. "Till the children are through with their examinations," he says.

The goodwill seems to have come in good measure. Pilot was pleasantly surprised when a group of farmers, who recently came to see him, told him that the panchayat of Miragpur village (Muzaffarnagar district) had decided to bear his monthly expenses as he'd not be earning a monthly salary any longer.

From a salary of Rs 9,000, it's down to a pension of Rs 500. "I'll survive," jokes Pilot. With both his houses given on rent, he gets enough to match his previous salary.

His plans for the future? Well, he wants to keep in touch with the farmers. And for that there's the Jai Jawan Jai Kisan Trust which looks after war widows and coaches farmers' children for competitive exams like that of the IAS,

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

WHEN DO YOU WISH YOUR COURIER WAS DHL?

WHEN

YOUR CLIENT IN DUBAI

IS RAISING A STINK

BECAUSE

THE FRUITS ARE

ROTTING IN PORT

BECAUSE

THEY COULDN'T CLEAR

THE CONSIGNMENT

BECAUSE

THE BILL OF LADING

HADN'T ARRIVED

BECAUSE

YOUR COURIER WASN'T

DHL.

RAKA:2767:89:E

THAT'S WHEN.

BECAUSE DHL HAS MORE OFFICES WORLDWIDE THAN ANY OTHER COURIER, YOU'RE IN SAFE HANDS ALL THE WAY.

DHL WORLDWIDE EXPRESS®

DHL THE COURIER DIVISION OF AIRFREIGHT LIMITED.

To contact us, please refer to your Telephone/Yellow Pages Directory.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

the IPS and the NDA.

Says the never-say-die politician: "I will go back to the people and earn their trust. They are my generator."

"And I'll continue to fight the Opposition. Oops, the ruling party," he corrects himself hastily. A welcome change from handling striking transport unions? Or dealing with a Tikait sitting on dharna?

BALRAM JAKHAR

After a holiday, he plans to go back to farming

ORDER, please. Order, order. Silence. Expunged. I'm on my feet. Silence. The honourable prime minister will now make a statement," former Speaker Balram Jakhar would scream in the Lok Sabha, flinging his arms in the air.

The honourable Speaker is now leading a relaxed life. Sitting in the lawns, chewing leisurely on sugarcane, cut into small pieces by his assistant. "It's good for health. Eat sugarcane, build strength and jump right back into the political battle-field. That's my policy," he says, stretching his legs.

The farmer from Ferozepur, Jakhar now plans to go back to his fields for a while. To the 40 acres of agricultural land where wheat has been sown. To the 200 acres of orchards—peach, malta and grape orchards. "I've been named cotton king and grape king in Punjab," says he proudly.

But before he goes to Ferozepur, he's heading for the snow-capped hills of Manali. "I'm waiting for the snow to get thicker," before he and his family pack their bags.

A father of five and grandfather of nine, the 66-year-old Jakhar has taken defeat in his stride. "So what. It's a part of the game. The skies haven't fallen, aa jayenge phir vapas (we'll return)," he says.

> "Eat sugarcane, build strength and jump back into the battle-field. That's my policy."

"I built myself from scratch. Ab baithen hain aram se (now I am sitting relaxed)" Jakhar is happy being at home. He wakes up to the rising sun. Takes a walk in the garden. The masseur comes for the morning massage. A tall glass of milk and lots of fruit. And he settles down in the sun with a heap of magazines. "I'm a voracious reader," he says. But he's still catching up with Time and Reader's Digest. The books will come later.

Lunch-time is family time, when everyone sits together for a meal. "Lots of lassi, ghar ka makhan (home-made butter) and ghee with my daal and subzi," he says. After which, it is only natural for him to take a nap. A recently acquired luxury which he couldn't afford when Parliament was in session.

A house, cars, servants, money? They're not things Jakhar is worried about. "I have a house in NOIDA (bordering Delhi). We'll go there. My sons have cars, they'll give me one." The servants were always there. The agricultural farm provides the money. "Tankha seh kya banta tha (The salary was not enough)?"

The placidity conceals any sense of panic over facing harassment by the new government for his involvement in the fodder machine scandal. As for being out of power, there is the attempt at matter-of-fact philosophy: "We were not always in office. We won't remain out of it for ever." Shrugging his shoulders, he begins to tackle another piece of sugarcane. —HARINDER BAWEJA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CONGRESS(I)

Purges and Plans

The old guard returns as party takes stock of situation

THE analogy between the two situations is compelling. As in 1977, the Congress Party once again finds itself out of power at the Centre. This time too the rejection has come most decisively from what is called the Hindi heartland. The south, in a repeat performance, has stoutly endorsed the party in a seemingly psychic reaction to the north's indictment of Rajiv Gandhi's leadership.

But the parallel, at least on surface, seems to end there. Because unlike the panic that gripped the party in 1977, there is no collective manifestation of a major panic at hand. In fact, the Congress(I) appears to have adopted an aggressive strategy, as evidence its reactions to V.P. Singh's Punjab initiative, and to the Government's statement that its coffers were empty. But this is perhaps because the horror may not have sunk in, yet. Part of the reason for this is that Congressmen still stick to the belief—as an article of faith—that the new Government will collapse in no time under the weight of its own contradictions. And unlike his mother, who had sought to strengthen the party by splitting it, Rajiv is trying to pull everybody along. Says AICC(I) General Secretary V.N. Gadgil: "The party is solidly behind Rajiv and there is not even the remotest possibility of it breaking up."

In the immediate aftermath of the election, that may hold true. But what will seal the fate of the party and its future leadership will be the outcome of polls in 12 states and Union territories. Right now the Congress(I) is in power in 15. But there is the real possibility, in the context of its recent electoral performance, of it losing as many as seven—Gujarat, Madhya Pradesh, Rajasthan, Himachal Pradesh, Orissa, Bihar and the Union Territory of Delhi. This would wipe out the party from the nation's heartland, reducing it to a regional group with pockets of influence beyond the Brahmaputra and below the Vindhyas.

But for now, as the next major political test looms ahead, the party is looking for scapegoats. And the coterie that has surrounded Rajiv is drawing the maximum flak. Senior partymen whose access to the leader was effectively blocked by the caucus are most vocal now. Buta Singh has been singled out for mishandling the Ram Janmabhoomi issue as the Union home minister. "Our fate was sealed on November 9 (the day of the shilanyas for the temple)," says a Congress(I) Rajya Sabha member. Next in the dock are Rajiv's political and media advisers such as M.L. Fotedar, R.K. Dhawan, M.J. Akbar, and his personal buddies like Captain Satish Sharma and Mani Shankar Iyer.

Says party parliamentary board member and Madhya Pradesh PCC(I) chief Arjun Singh: "Certain people who were given authority and responsibility tried to create the impression that they alone matter. The only mistake Rajiv Gandhi committed was that he could not restrain them." In an oblique reference to Rajiv's dependence on bureaucrats another party veteran, Darbara Singh, says: "Your English may be better than mine, but that does not necessarily mean you understand politics better." Partymen have also resented the abrasive style of functioning of Vishwajit Prithivijit Singh and some other close associates of Rajiv who were in charge of the poll logistics.

There is a general feeling among the traditional Congressmen that the computer has been their undoing. Their tendency to vent anger on the 'computer-walas', however, is not always justified. Manorama Singh, defeated party candidate from Bihar, gave vent to her frustration the moment she met S.S. Ahluwalia, party MP who prepared computerised biodata of probable candidates early this year. "I lost the election because of your damned computer," she complained. "My computer," retorted Ahluwalia, "had wanted to deny you the ticket."

Indeed, it was the party policy to persist with most of the sitting MPs, at a time, when the mood was decidedly for a change, that proved a real disaster. Then there were the complaints about distribution of campaign material from the AICC(I). The party has taken a decision that from now on instead of creating a

NEW CHIEF MINISTERS

Rajiv's experiment with a new political ethos has clearly come a full circle with the installation of party veterans as chief ministers in as many as four states.

S.C. Shukla

H. Biswal

Jagannath Mishra

M. Solanki

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE COTERIE

As the next political test looms ahead, the party is looking for scapegoats. And it is the coterie that has surrounded Rajiv which is drawing the maximum flak.

Vishwajit P. Singh

Satish Sharma

R.K. Dhawan

M.L. Fotedar

Buta Singh

Mani Shankar

central pool the state units will be given charge of poll logistics. There is an overwhelming feeling in the party that it is the yuppies, with their idiosyncrasies and lopsided priorities, who led the party to its second defeat in a general election.

Rajiv, according to party insiders, too has realised the 'mistake' and is trying to distance himself from his cronies. Satish Sharma, who has been held responsible for the rigging fiasco at Amethi, is conspicuously absent at Rajiv's residence these days. Following the debacle, the advice of Buta Singh and P. Shiv Shankar to Rajiv to make an effort to form the Government by engineering defections from the Janata Dal, was repudiated by the party old-guard.

Significantly the Congress(I) Parliamentary Board (CPB)—the forum which was defunct during the past five years—is now holding informal meetings frequently. It is the CPB which took the decision to change chief ministers and PCC(I) presidents in the states where the party was routed. Rajiv is now consulting Darbara Singh, P.V. Narasimha Rao, K. Karunakaran and V.N. Gadgil more than ever before. Undoubtedly, the old-guard is trying to reassert itself at a time when the coterie stands totally discredited.

ALREADY, the reactivated CPB has taken some important decisions. As soon as the change in leadership is over in half-a-dozen states, the party's organisational set-up at the central level will be totally revamped. A new team of AICC(I) office-bearers comprising the seasoned and experienced will takeover. Those who had helped Mrs Gandhi during 1977-80 may once again be recalled. A.R. Antulay and Pranab Mukherjee, once discarded by Rajiv as power-brokers, are poised for a come-back. Mukherjee, recently appointed as the chief of the AICC(I) economic cell, is coming to the party headquarters regularly. Indeed, Rajiv's experiment with a new political ethos has come full circle with the installation of Jagannath Mishra as Bihar chief minister. Further recognition of the veterans has come in the recall of Harideo Joshi from the Assam Raj Bhawan to take over as the Rajasthan chief minister, only a year after his ignominious ouster from that post.

The party is closely watching V.P. Singh's minority government. Its dirty tricks department has already circulated a letter purportedly written by Singh on October 30 to the Shahi Imam of Jama Masjid in which he allegedly promised to open the mosques under the supervision of the Archaeological Survey of India for prayer. The intention is clear: drive a wedge between the BJP and the Janata Dal. Since the Government has had a good start, the Congress(I) is planning to make communalism its major slogan in the months before the assembly elections. "The communal divide that the BJP has engineered for purely political objective should be made our only campaign issue," says Arjun Singh. This concern for secularism, however, is hypocritical. While in Punjab it is playing the Hindu card, provoking the BJP to take a stand against the Janata Dal, in Uttar Pradesh it is indulging in another dubious communal game. It is urging the Hindu fundamentalist elements to keep up the clamour for the Ram Janmabhoomi and at the same time pointing out to the Muslims their mistake in voting for the Janata Dal.

Despite his success in thwarting any immediate challenge to his position, Rajiv

THE OLD GUARD

The old guard of the party is now making a determined attempt to reassert itself taking advantage of the fact that the old coterie stands totally discredited.

K. Karunakaran

Darbara Singh

Arjun Singh

V.N. Gadgil

Narasimha Rao

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

faces the test again during the assembly elections likely to take place in February. The new chief ministers in Rajasthan, Bihar, Orissa, Madhya Pradesh and Gujarat will have an uphill task in reversing the trends so soon after the party's rout in the general election. Rajiv naturally will be the major campaigner for his party in these elections. Another failure, and he will find it difficult to prove his relevance for the party. The 68-year-old Joshi, at the time of assuming office for the third time last fortnight, could not hold out any promise. Knowing full well he would have to deal with an apathetic bureaucracy and a faction-ridden party, he prudently said: "I will give top priority to restoring communal amity and peace in the state." That has been interpreted as an indication of the party's line of attack on the BJP, the major opposition party which is sure to make a bid for power in Rajasthan.

In the communally surcharged atmosphere of Bihar, Mishra is now the party's best bet to woo back Muslims. Despite his sullied image, he claims to enjoy the confidence of the minorities. At a time when the Rajputs, Yadavs and Kurmis have rallied behind the Janata Dal, Mishra, the party hopes, will be able to win over the traditional Congress(I) vote-bank comprising the Brahmins, Harijans and Muslims. In a shrewd move he had criticised the state Government's failure to contain the riots in Bhagalpur. But the resentment Mishra faces from within the party manifested itself on the very day he returned to Patna from Delhi to take oath as chief minister. At the airport he was greeted by supporters of outgoing chief minister S.N. Sinha, shouting: "Jagannath Mishra wapas jao" (Go back Jagannath Mishra).

FACTIONS owing allegiance to Sinha, Bindeshwari Dubey, Bhagawat Jha Azad and Tariq Anwar have expressed their opposition to Mishra and are unlikely to cooperate with him during the assembly polls. Azad makes no bones about his disapproval. "The Congress(I) in Bihar reminds one of a candle that is burning at both ends," he cynically remarks. And Mishra is complicating matters by rewarding and rehabilitating his own supporters. He has appointed his protege Kamalnath Singh Thakur as the chief whip of the Congress(I) Legislative Council, and has filled his cabinet with the loyalists who remained with him during his six years in wilderness. All this, before the crucial assembly election, is bound to further antagonise rivals. On the positive side, Mishra means business. Says a bureaucrat: "Now one sees that there is a government."

In Orissa, the proverbial mountain did finally move but not before a cyclone had shattered its crest. Indeed J.B. Patnaik, with the blessings of Fotedar and other confidants of Rajiv had straddled Orissa as if he were the state's very destiny. Despite most senior party leaders in the state opposing him, Rajiv, had continued to back J.B. Patnaik. Hence, to Orissa observers, the Congress(I)'s worst electoral performance did not come as a surprise. After taking over the PCC(I) presidentship, Nandini Satpathy has been trying to put up a brave front. "We have to regain the confidence of the people," she says. But there is cynicism about her ability to turn the tables, considering that in the general elections the Congress(I) could manage to outpoll the National Front only in 17 of the 147 assembly segments.

It is evident that unless the Congress(I) improves its performance it is not likely to bag more than 25 seats. Says one of Satpathy's aides: "She is confident but she cannot perform a miracle." Making things more difficult for her is the fact that a large number of the party MLAs are J.B. Patnaik's men. And the truth is that he would see a stint of chief ministership by Biju Patnaik as a lesser danger than the return of Satpathy to power. Apprehending a total sabotage of the

ANDHRA PRADESH

Uphill Task

MARRI Chenna Reddy arrived at the state secretariat last fortnight to a triumphant welcome. But behind the euphoria lay the challenge: of fulfilling the people's expectations.

With his initial moves, Chenna Reddy made it clear he was conscious of the hopes raised by the Congress(I)'s come-back to power after seven years. In his first speech, he detailed his priorities—provide a responsive and quick administration; rework the Rs 2 a kilo rice scheme for the poor; expedite the scheme to build houses for the poor; and explore ways to raise resources to expand irrigation facilities, build power supply stations.

Predictably, he made a cautious start to his ministry-making exercise. While forming a 19-member ministry, Chenna Reddy retained the most important portfolios—including law and order, industries, irrigation, education, home, excise, commercial taxes, health, civil supplies, municipal administration, forests and information.

SHARAD SAXENA

Chenna Reddy: cautious beginning

But trouble surfaced right away. Soon after the swearing-in, supporters of Ratna Kumari, widow of former Congress(I) MLA Vangaveeti Mohan Ranga Rao, killed by Telugu Desam supporters last December, demanded her inclusion in the ministry. Also by inducting five other Reddys in the ministry, he lay himself open to the charge that the Congress(I) was a party of Reddys as opposed to the Telugu Desam led by the Kammas. Regional representation also proved imbalanced. While 10 ministers are from the coastal Andhra region, six are from Telengana and three from Rayalaseema. Says Chenna Reddy: "The expansion, in a couple of months, will take into account all aspirations."

However, various factions will not allow him to call the shots for long. Former chief minister J. Vengala Rao is likely to press him to include his son, Jalagam Prasada Rao, in the ministry. As will former Central ministers P.V. Narasimha Rao and P. Shiv Shankar for their sons, P.V. Ranga Rao and P. Sudhir Kumar. Says a member of the party's state executive: "If we make the mistake of admitting even one of them, the Congress(I) cannot accuse Rama Rao of nepotism."

But it seems inevitable that Chenna Reddy will have to accommodate the factions to ensure his government's stability. And, inevitably so, fail one of the crucial tests posed by the electorate.

—AMARNATH K. MENON

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

party's chances by the J.B. Patnaik camp, Hemanand Biswal has been selected chief minister as a compromise candidate with the understanding that Satpathy would lead the party at the hustings. Biswal, who as chairman of the Public Undertakings Committee had unearthed the multi-crore mustard oil scandal involving the Patnaik family, had been unceremoniously dropped from the state cabinet three years ago. By selecting Biswal, the state's first tribal chief minister, the party high command essentially wanted to achieve two objectives: keep the strong anti-J.B. Patnaik feelings from translating into a vote against the Congress(I), and appease Harijans and tribals who constitute over 40 per cent of the state's population.

In Madhya Pradesh, the Congress(I) high command has had to execute another tightrope walk. Arjun Singh, despite his intense lobbying, has not been rewarded with the chief ministership. S.C. Shukla has replaced Vora, while Arjun Singh has been made PCC(I) chief. The aim is to ensure the cooperation of all factions in the assembly polls. Says Shukla: "I am sure all Congressmen will work unitedly to ensure the party's victory." But this sounds a bit wishful. In the Lok Sabha elections, the Congress(I) led only in 76 of 312 assembly segments. Besides, the return of Arjun Singh to state politics has left faction leaders like Madhavrao Scindia and Vora grumbling.

The fact is that as soon as Vora tendered his resignation, Scindia staked his claim. The Arjun Singh camp vehemently opposed his candidature. It pointed out that his mother, Vijayaraje Scindia, a BJP vice-president, was already being projected by her party as the future chief minister of the state. Also, Shukla and Arjun Singh have a history of mutual hostility, though they now claim to have buried the hatchet.

THE selection of both, in any case, only goes to confirm that the Congress(I) leadership is once again depending on battle-scarred veterans and political animals rather than novices. Accordingly, the astute Madhavsinh Solanki has replaced Amarsinh Choudhary who had made several administrative blunders as the Gujarat chief minister. Here again, the hope is that the veteran will be able to give a new direction to the party.

The one man who has been able to make a virtue out of this losing scenario is wily Maharashtra Chief Minister Sharad Pawar. Though four of his nominees lost in the November polls, he has been able to convince Delhi that he alone can now steer the party through the assembly polls in which the BJP-Shiv Sena combine will be making a serious bid for power. Consequently, the central leadership is making PCC(I) chief Pratibha Patil a sacrificial lamb by asking her to resign in view of the party's bad showing. But the prospects of the Congress(I) remain bleak. The apprehension is that dissidence can result in many lower level Congressmen switching to the Shiv Sena. Warns a Congress(I) MLA: "If dissidence is not kept down, the Sena-BJP alliance can walk away with a lot of seats."

The smooth leadership changes in all these states have established that Rajiv's authority in the party has not yet been eroded. Like Mrs Gandhi in 1978 he can consolidate his position by winning some of the state assembly elections. He has already decided to tour the entire country raising the slogan of "secularism in danger".

From next month he will have to plunge into another gruelling poll campaign. Whatever be the profiles of the state leaders, he will be looked upon by the party as its deliverer. Another debacle in February is bound to put a big question mark on his leadership. And then there will be no more scapegoats.

—BHASKAR ROY, UTTAM SENGUPTA and N.K. SINGH with bureau reports

KARNATAKA

Firm Start

VEERENDRA Patil last fortnight celebrated his return to power after 18 years by forming a ministry that revealed an assertive and unorthodox stamp.

It was an exercise that surprised political pundits and outwitted his opponents. The 64-year-old Patil, chose an 11-member ministry out of a legislative party strength of 177, leaving many aspirants disgruntled. Moreover, he ignored accepted norms of regional and caste representations—his team has no members, barring himself, from the sprawling north Karnataka region, which has elected a third of the party MLAs. He also gave short shrift to the dominant communities, while leaning heavily on the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes.

Besides, Patil, who declared his family and personal assets soon after taking office, advised his colleagues to do the same; dispensed with every sign of ostentation like police escorts; and dropped the ad hoc system of transfers, the main source of patronage for MLAs. Said a supporter: "The steps will make him unpopular among partymen. But the people will appreciate it."

SHYAM TEKWANI

Patil: asserting himself

Known to be scrupulously upright, Patil is an anachronism in a state ravaged by corruption and indiscipline. Says a colleague: "Patil has an uncompromising nature. He is totally out of tune with the time." Patil admits: "Contemporary politics is difficult for me to swallow. I belong to a generation in which one walked around with a resignation letter in one's pocket."

In the ministry-making exercise, Patil got a free-hand from the party high command. With nearly 35 former ministers present among the ranks of the legislators, his task was a difficult one. While allotting the key finance portfolio to his trusted friend Rajashekhara Murthy, Patil used his current clout with the party high command to sideline detractors such as S. Bangarappa, K.H. Patil, and S.M. Krishnar. Patil also downgraded the status of Veerappa Moily, who was number two in the Gundu Rao cabinet.

Says a ministerial aspirant: "Patil's bravura will not last long. He is asking for trouble." Patil's immediate threat comes from Bangarappa, the fiery ex-minister who believes that he has been gypped out of chief ministership several times. So despite a whopping four-fifths majority, Patil has no joyride before him. The course he has charted for himself could lead into dissidence-infested waters.—CHIDANAND RAJGHATTA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SPECIALLY CREATED FOR PEOPLE WHO WORK HARDER

Your whole day is a race against time. Deadlines. Meetings. Work pressure.

No wonder you feel drained by the time you get home.

The natural way to cope with today's hectic pace.

Just a spoonful of Chyawanshakti taken twice a day goes a long way. Right through the day, in fact. To keep you fit and active. Its natural ingredients have been proven by Ayurveda to result in all round fitness.

Amla, the major ingredient in Chyawanshakti, is the richest known source of Vitamin C. This not only prevents coughs and colds but also revitalises your body tissues.

Its action is fortified by Ashwagandha which helps you combat mental and physical stress. Saffron – which acts as a stimulant to keep you active throughout the day. Draksha – which prevents gastrointestinal troubles. And Akarkara – which keeps your nervous system toned up.

All this goodness is enhanced with rich, natural honey which also acts as an excellent nutritious diet supplement.

So that you stay fighting fit – day after day after day.

CHYAWANSHAKTI

FROM THE MAKERS OF DABUR CHYAWANPRASH

DABUR INDIA LIMITED
HARSHA BHAWAN
'E' BLOCK,
CONNAUGHT PLACE
NEW DELHI-110 001.

ENRICHED WITH DRAKSHA, HONEY AND SAFFRON

everest/d89/DIL/228

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

MITASO®

IS : 2082

Storage Water Heaters
Your all time hot favourite..

Features:
- Pressure Release Valve
- ISI mark heating element.
- Thermal insulation to ensure higher efficiency & lowest heat loss.
- Thermal cutout to save heating element & electric shocks.
- ISI Mark Thermostat - 30°C to 85°C
- Fusible plug assembly.
- Available in Stainless Steel & wide range of pastel colours to suit your decor.

Range: Instant - 1, 3, & 5 Hrs capacity.
Storage - 6, 10, 15, 25, 35, & 50 ltrs capacity.

Horizontal & Short Models also available.

MITASO®

IS : 4760

COOKING RANGE

Unmatched in quality & performance

Highlights:
- 4 Hi-efficient brass burners.
- Rear splash tray-cum-lid.
- Thermostat & imported Timer.
- Stainless steel top plate.
- Sizeable grill
- Vitreous enamelled oven
- Double toughened glass door panel
- Hot case cum dish warmer.

24 MONTHS GUARANTEE

Manufactured by:
MITASO APPLIANCES LIMITED
Plant I: Plot No. 63, Sector 6,
Faridabad-121 006.
Tel: 8841906, 8842583. Telex: 0343-341 SAE IN

everest/d89/DIL/228

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

PUNJAB

Flicker of Hope

V.P. Singh's visit to Punjab has achieved what earlier efforts failed to do—it has generated goodwill and admiration. But the euphoria could be premature. The harsh political realities of Punjab call for long and sustained efforts.

IT was a simple and touching move, and one loaded with hope and expectation. Less than 48 hours after swearing-in the Union Cabinet, Prime Minister V.P. Singh, accompanied by cabinet colleagues Devi Lal, Inder Kumar Gujral and Mufti Mohammed Sayeed visited the Golden Temple for what was described as a religious—not political—visit. In the course of their day-long sojourn, they prayed in the key Sikh and Hindu shrines of Amritsar, mingled freely and joyfully with surcharged crowds and even drove through Amritsar in an open jeep.

But those who tended to read too much into it were shutting their eyes to the political realities of Punjab. For even as the Central leaders trod hallowed ground in Amritsar, several militant factions were emitting signals that augured continuing troubled times.

Yet, even though the visit offered no immediate or long-term political solutions, it generated what earlier efforts could not: goodwill and admiration. V.P. Singh's visit immediately drew comparisons to Mrs Gandhi's in 1984 in the wake of Operation Bluestar. Muttered an elderly Sikh as he watched V.P. Singh wade through the tumultuous crowd in the Golden Temple: "She came to see the damage. He has come to mend it."

Singh's visit attained significance only in the light of the release of Simranjit Singh Mann, the former IPS officer, who has quickly emerged as the new focal point in Akali politics. Mann, incarcerated for waging war against the state, was freed by the outgoing government soon after his landslide win from Tarn Taran. Though he did not meet V.P. Singh during his visit to Punjab, the prime minister's gesture seemed to have gone down well with the entire spectrum of Akali politicians. The Shiromani Gurdwara Prabandhak Committee (SGPC) appointed Jathedar of the Akal Takht, Professor Darshan Singh, declared it was the first time the Central Government had made

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

Mann in Golden Temple: widespread welcome

S.S. MANN

"I pray to all to help the Government"

FOR Simranjit Singh Mann, 45, it has been a tumultuous homecoming. And at the end of a week of felicitations, the bespectacled public school-educated former IPS officer still seemed a bit dazzled by his new role as Akali Dal president. He spoke to Principal Correspondent KANWAR SANDHU during halts on a tour of Punjab villages. Excerpts:

Q. Do you propose to bring about unity among the Akali Dal factions?

A. It depends on my party. There is a strong section against having any truck with the old Akali leaders.

Q. What place will the Damdami Taksal and the AISSF have in your party and government if you come to power?

A. A very important place. The victory was possible because of their co-operation. In the Vidhan Sabha polls, we will coordinate with both the organisations to set up candidates.

Q. What relationship will your party have with V.P. Singh's Government?

A. An amicable one. I pray to all civilised souls to help the Government. The Government must be sincere in resolving the issue.

Q. How will you remove the insecurity among Hindus and Muslims growing from the Akali Dal's alliance with the AISSF?

A. There should be no feeling of insecurity. The RSS wants Hindu Rashtra which is the equivalent of Khalistan. If the BJP can take inspiration from the RSS, what is wrong with our getting help from the AISSF?

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

BHAWAN SINGH

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

S.S. Barnala (left); and P.S. Badal: hazy future

a genuine effort to provide a healing touch to Punjab. The Mann group, reluctant to publicly applaud the prime minister's visit, because of its tie-up with the All India Sikh Students' Federation (AISSF), privately hailed the gesture. "V.P. Singh has acted like a statesman," said one of them.

Mann, by bringing some focus to Akali leadership has come as a harbinger of hope. But as he enters the vortex of Sikh politics, he faces perhaps the most arduous phase of his life. He finds himself surrounded by what has brought several other Akali leaders to grief: defiance and conflicting aspirations. The headline in a local newspaper following his release: "Takhte ton takht tak" (from the gallows to the throne) was too much of a simplification. For now, Mann's path seems to be paved with thorns.

Mann faces the difficult task not only of managing the militants but also of tackling the Badal and Barnala factions of the Akali Dal.

Foremost, Mann faces the unenviable task of managing the militants, while at the same time neutralising moderate rivals. For the moment, the AISSF has tried to snatch the initiative by asking the newly-elected MPs of the party not to take oath in Parliament until five pre-conditions are met. These include the Centre seeking forgiveness for Operation Bluestar and punishment for those guilty of the November 1984 riots. Though the Mann group has rejected this directive, the newly-elected MPs have been abstaining from official functions.

On the moderate front, Mann faces the difficult task of tackling the splinter Akali groups of Prakash Singh Badal and Surjit Singh Barnala, besides fringe groups of the families of Jarnail Singh Bhindranwale and Amrik Singh. The haze in Akali politics thickens, for though Badal—a leader with genuine grassroots support—has been released, the total rout of his faction in the Lok Sabha elections virtually invites his sidelining. Mann admits a section within the party is against any truck with the old Akali leaders. And the Mann faction is wary of dealing with the Centre, particularly Devi Lal, as it feels the avuncular Jat leader will try and foster Badal—an old friend—as either the chief minister or the Akali Dal president. Warns former minister Sucha Singh Chotepur: "The Centre must allow Akali politics to take its own course."

But a section within the Mann group feels an understanding has to be reached with Badal, particularly since his faction controls the SGPC. What also needs to be resolved is the crucial issue of who is the Akal Takht jathedar, the temporal head of the Sikhs. While the Badal group recognises Professor Darshan Singh, the Mann group accepts Jasbir Singh Rode as the jathedar. Mann also faces the delicate task of keeping Baba Joginder Singh (Bhindranwale's father) and Manjit Singh (Amrik Singh's brother) in good humour because they epitomise "supreme sacrifice", a crucial factor for Sikhs. To thrive politically, Mann has to ensure the militant Damdami Taksal's support.

With most militant groups thrown into disarray following the entry of their members into the electoral fray, it is to be seen how many of the 700-odd terrorists (police estimates) choose to remain on extremist ground. Mann is yet to display an ability to take them all under one umbrella. Though he has stated

Q. What do you think will fulfil Sikh aspirations in Punjab?

A. Our aim is to have our grievances redressed within the Constitution. I know there is enough room in it to meet our demands. Had the Constitution been honestly implemented by the Congress(I) government, such a situation would not have arisen.

Q. How about those demanding Khalistan?

A. After Bluestar, a certain ideology has infected the youth, because some people embraced martyrdom. Now, fake encounters are creating new martyrs.

Q. But how will you deal with the terrorists?

A. Sikhs are not terrorists. They are fighting for a cause. They have been forced to take to arms because of the Government's policies. I am going to seek the views of those demanding Khalistan. For a solution, their cooperation is essential.

Q. Does that mean you appreciate Pakistan's role in providing shelter to the Sikh youth there?

A. Pakistan has been giving shelter to Afghans on humanitarian grounds. We provided shelter in 1971, when the Pakistan Army committed repression in East Pakistan. Seeking shelter from terror is provided in the UN Charter.

Q. How were you treated in jail?

A. In Bharatpur, I was stripped naked. They gave me electric shocks by putting one terminal on my toe nails and the other on my genitals. At Bhagalpur, they put me in a lunatics' cell for four days. In Bombay, I was in a cell whose walls were plastered with faeces. This would have gone on, if my lawyers, Ram Jethmalani and Dr B.L. Wadhera, were not breathing down their necks.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Why Ramco guarantees the performance of industrial roofing systems.

Project: Regency Ceramics Limited, Yanam, Kakinada.

"The Regency Ceramics factory is located on the banks of the Godavari river, where it joins the sea. The corrosive, saline sea breeze causes deterioration of civil jobs. We needed a roofing material that was highly corrosion-resistant. We chose Ramco AC Sheets because we found this property in them."

– N.N. Associates, Architects & Engineers

Ramco AC Sheets.

They have the strength, the durability and the consistency in quality, essential to meet high performance standards set by architects and professional builders. Because Ramco uses the world's most technologically advanced process of production.

The finest portland cement and imported chrysotile fibres are mixed, blended, formed, cut and corrugated into high quality sheets using a totally automated process – the 'Ramco Hi-grade Process'. It's given Ramco strength that's unsurpassed, even corrugation and a breakage rate that's amongst the lowest in the world.

It's also made Ramco the name that's specified by professionals all over India. Every time you specify a sheet, do the same. Make Ramco AC Sheets your automatic choice.

Ramco
Advanced technology reaches the roof

Ramco Industries Limited
'Apex Plaza', 3, Nungambakkam High Road, Madras 600 034. Phone: 473770.

Sales Offices/Depots: • Delhi • Gurgaon • Ghaziabad • Indore • Raipur • Kadodara (Surat) • Ahmedabad • Bombay • Mira (Bombay) • Kolhapur • Nasik • Nagpur • Pune • R. Sumandi (Orissa) • Vijayawada • Hyderabad • Yanam • Bangalore • Madurai • Coimbatore • Trivandrum • Cochin

FOUNTAINHEAD-RIL-A-2-61-89-RL

CC-0. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

categorically that he will strive for a solution within the Constitution (see interview), many terrorist organisations continue to voice their commitment to "Khalistan".

The one person who is throwing the spanner into Mann's and the Centre's works is Harminder Singh Sandhu, AISSF general secretary, who was released by the outgoing government just before it handed over power. Sandhu, who had turned approver after Bluestar, has in a surprising volte face been declaring that the goal of the Sikhs remains "Khalistan". The timing of his release and his pronouncements are making political observers refer to him as a saboteur of possible peace initiatives in Punjab.

The Mann group, meantime, at a working committee meeting in Amritsar on December 10, passed a resolution defining its political aims. The resolution demanded "an autonomous Sikh region" in the north as an integral part of the Union of India entitled to frame its own internal constitution, and having all powers except foreign relations, defence, currency and general communication. Such a region would include the Sikh inhabited areas of Haryana, Rajasthan, Chandigarh and Himachal Pradesh that are contiguous to Punjab. This is a reiteration of the draft by the late ICS officer, Kapur Singh, which later became the basis of the Anandpur Sahib Resolution of 1973.

If the militants continue to demand "Khalistan", the Mann group may suffer some splintering. The walk-out by 12 party members, including three MPs, from the Amritsar meeting was the first ominous indication of such an exodus.

Yet, momentarily, a positive atmosphere has been generated. The Government has sent out signals of a fresh policy initiative by packing off Governor S.S. Ray (see box). In view of the proposed all party meet and the appointment of a panel on Punjab, the Centre is likely to review Ray's recommendations about early elections to the state Assembly and to the general house of the SGPC. Sources say the Government would like to reach an understanding with the political groups in Punjab before announcing dates for the Vidhan Sabha polls. The three-year term of President's Rule—the maximum possible—ends on May 11, 1990. Hope is certainly flickering in Punjab again, but it can be as easily snuffed out, as it can be built into a flame of reconciliation and peace.

—KANWAR SANDHU

PRASHANT PANJIAR

Ray: dubious legacy

S.S. RAY

Acrimonious Departure

WHEN he was appointed governor of troubled Punjab in April 1986, he brought a ray of hope. Last fortnight, when Siddhartha Shankar Ray laid down office, it was amid hopes of a different kind—that with him gone, the difficult situation in the state could be retrieved. The response reflected the hardline policy that Ray, the state's sixth governor since 1984, ruthlessly implemented over three years.

It was clear that any Punjab initiative by the new National Front Government would have to begin by removing Ray from office. He obliged by quitting. In his place, Nirmal Kumar Mukherjee, a Punjab cadre ICS officer who retired as cabinet secretary, was appointed.

In fact, soon after V.P. Singh took charge, Ray flashed him four messages in 72 hours seeking immediate directions on dealing with anti-national elements like AISSF General Secretary Harminder Singh Sandhu who had issued a pro-Khalistan statement. In one message, Ray spoke of the "considerable nervousness among the people".

If Ray expected the Centre to pursue a knee-jerk hardline response, he was disappointed. Singh ignored the messages and decided to go and see things for himself. What he found in place of the projected nervousness was unbridled enthusiasm.

At the time of quitting, Ray also said that the state was just three months from a solution. His reckoning seemed to be: if the new Government did bring about a solution, he could take credit for it; if it didn't, he could blame it on the new "soft" policy. Essentially, he was playing a Hindu card, trying to drive a wedge between the BJP and the Janata Dal. The BJP did not swallow the bait—General Secretary Krishan Lal Sharma has, in fact, sought an inquiry into Ray's role during the polls in Punjab.

His actions during his last week in office too have been questioned. He hastily closed the case against former Batala SSP Gobind Ram charged with beating up sarpanches publicly. Then, he recommended elections to the Assembly. And ordered the release of various leaders, including Sandhu. Former chief minister Surjit Singh Barnala termed the recommendation on early assembly elections a "mischief to create an adverse situation for the new Government". V.P. Singh had to finally tell Ray not to announce any new policy decision without consulting him.

What legacy does Ray leave behind? Ray himself is immodest: "What I achieved in three years, people will find difficult to do in three times that time." Few would agree. His policies alienated vast sections of the Sikhs. His reign saw the eclipse of the civil authority with serious complaints about police excesses.

And though a large number of alleged terrorists were killed, they only seemed to multiply. According to official sources, in May 1987 (when Ray took over from Barnala), the number of hardcore terrorists was 90 and that of other terrorists was 225. On the eve of his exit, police records showed 150 hardcore terrorists and 550 other category terrorists.

Four days before he quit, Ray said philosophically: "Let posterity judge me." That it will. And going by the reaction until now, not very generously.

—KANWAR SANDHU

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

RUBAIYA SAYEED

Abduction Anguish

After five tense days, Kashmiri militants released Rubaiya, daughter of Union Home Minister Mufti Mohammed Sayeed, in exchange for five colleagues.

MERAJ-U-DIN

Mufti with Rubaiya and her sister; and Abdul Hamid Sheikh: gruelling ordeal

IT was cloudy that Wednesday afternoon and Rajouri Kadal in downtown Srinagar was nearly deserted. At 3.04 p.m., two Ambassador cars halted in the chowk and five dishevelled men emerged. One of them limped, leaning on two of the others. They got into two waiting auto-rickshaws, which disappeared into the bylanes. The only sign of anything unusual was the distant noise of fire-crackers. An hour later, Zafar Meraj, a well-connected journalist, received a telephone call from the Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Front (JKLF) spokesman, Javed Ahemed Mir. The voice was excited: "We have received our boys. It's good. The girl will be with her parents soon."

On New Delhi's Akbar Road, crowds surged to house number 10. The resident, Mufti Mohammed Sayeed, his white locks ruffled, shook every hand and hugged visitors, whispering: "It's all the grace of the Almighty." After six agonising days, his daughter, Rubaiya, 23, had been released by JKLF militants in exchange for five incarcerated colleagues.

As much as being a personal crisis, Rubaiya's kidnapping was the Mufti's first challenge as Union home minister. And an attempt at paralysing the new government. Ironically, the abduction took place even as the Mufti was holding his first meeting with ministry officials. Around 3.25 p.m. on December 8, he was explaining the nuances of the Kashmiri psyche to juniors. At about the same time, his daughter, Rubaiya, stepped out of the Lalded Memorial Women's Hospital on Iqbal Park Road, where she is an intern. She boarded a local transit van, JKF 677—coming from Lal Chowk and headed home for Nawgaon on the city's outskirts. But a routine ride down the main Chanpore Road in the Bagatkalipura area suddenly turned into a nightmare when three men, travelling in the same van, stopped the vehicle, held Rubaiya at gunpoint and packed her into a blue Maruti outside. The operation took 20 to 25 minutes.

The chilling news of Rubaiya's abduction was broken to her family by an unidentified caller about two hours later. The kidnappers' demand: the release of separatist movement kingpin, Abdul Hamid Sheikh; a Pakistan-based militant, Sher Khan; and three other extremists facing charges of anti-national activities, Noor Mohammad Kalwal, Altaf Ahemed and Javed Ahemed Jargar.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

In the capital, it was IB hotlines that broke the news in the evening. As the stoic Mufti received the news at home, visitors began pouring in. Among the first were Prime Minister V.P. Singh, Union Energy Minister Arif Mohammed Khan and Tourism and Commerce Minister Arun Nehru.

The bureaucracy swung into action with Nehru in charge. A cabinet subcommittee, consisting of Nehru, External Affairs Minister I.K. Gujral and Arif Mohammed Khan, directed bureaucrats and assessed the political dimensions of the crisis. The elite National Security Guards was put on stand-by.

Soon after, political parties, Muslim organisations, voluntary groups, and even the Muslim clergy, denounced the abduction. Said Imam Abdullah Bukhari of Delhi's Jama Masjid: "There is no place in Islam for such actions." Even Pakistan, accused of encouraging the JKLF, condemned it.

In response, the JKLF issued a press release rebuking critics for not protesting when security forces harassed "the mothers and daughters of Kashmir" during the crackdown on militants and cited the detention of Hamid's old mother in a police station before his arrest.

The abduction also swung the spotlight on Chief Minister Farooq Abdullah. It was evident that after 32 months of incompetent rule, he stood alone. Alienated from his people; condemned by the Centre; and heading a floundering government in a troubled region. Particularly shameful was his government's ineptitude in handling the affair. While Abdullah was away to the US for treatment, the National Conference seemed paralysed with fear. Said the Mufti, who now chairs the cabinet subcommittee on Jammu and Kashmir: "I think the state is in more turmoil than Punjab. We need a fresh beginning immediately" (see interview). And the National Conference Legislature Party, which condemned the abduction on the first day, later remained silent on the issue, apparently because of threats from militants. Srinagar, in fact, seemed completely in the grip of fear.

Large crowds raised anti-India slogans, sang and danced in the streets after the militants were released. One slogan: Jo kare khuda ka khauf, Utha le Kalashnikov. (All God-fearing men should pick up a Kalashnikov.) As rumours ran rife, the city was overrun by paramilitary forces.

The delay in securing Rubaiya's release can be squarely blamed on the state administration. Its inertia resulted in the loss of crucial hours soon after the abduction, giving the kidnappers time to rally. Then, the intelligence wing of the state police proved so inefficient it could not even suggest the names of some militants to mediate a negotiation. Ultimately, the negotiations were handled by M.L. Bhat, a Allahabad

Photographs by PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

Stop where Rubaiya boarded van

The scene of kidnapping

Mufti's house in Srinagar

More than anything else, the kidnapping highlighted the ineptitude of the Farooq Abdullah Government and its utter alienation from the people.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

High Court judge; Abdul Ahad Guru, the doctor attending on Hamid Sheikh at the Soura Hospital where he was recovering from injuries sustained in an encounter with the police; Mir Mustafa, an independent MLA; and Mirza Abdul Quayum, a local citizen. Bhat showed tremendous courage in offering to be locked with Rubaiya for the two hours before the militants received their colleagues.

When the Abdullah administration finally woke up, it delayed matters in deciding the logistics of the militants' release. Only when Arif—specially flown to Srinagar with Gujral—gave him a dressing down, was the final settlement forged.

The Mufti, expecting trouble, had asked his teenage son, Nikki, to avoid going out alone. On the day of the abduction, the 14-year-old had not ventured out. The family assumed that no harm could befall the women folk.

Information about JKLF activists is scant. Ego clashes among the leaders have left the organisation with no well-defined hierarchy. But it is clear that its chairman is Amanullah Khan, who operates from London, Amsterdam and Rawalpindi. Home Ministry sources feel the kidnappers may have belonged to fringe groups, led by Azim Iqbali and Mushtaq Latram, both working underground in the valley. While Iqbali is described as "an educated and mature" militant who preaches secession, Latram is said to be an impulsive firebrand who is lionised by younger elements in the JKLF.

Photographs by PRASHANT PANJIAR

Abdullah: isolated and floundering

Top officials feel Latram's group was behind the abduction. The fast changing demands seemed to indicate that. The list of men-to-be-released changed many times. First the abductors wanted the release to be in 'Pakistan Occupied Kashmir', then they wanted it to be in Iran—with potential international implications. But consistent throughout was the demand for Hamid's release.

Politically, the episode established the alienation of a section of the valley's youth. The Abdullah administration's tough tactics are creating a reaction which needs to be handled boldly. The kidnapping evoked a chorus of protest which should help the Central Government deal with the Kashmir problem. Says MP Manvendra Singh, the Mufti's associate from his Jan Morcha days: "The massive outcry against the abduction has established the secular credentials of our government. This will help sort out the problem in future." The Centre has to cling to this silver lining while tackling the dark clouds hovering over Kashmir. The hostage drama has, momentarily at least, rallied the country behind V.P. Singh's call of dilon-ko-jodna-hai (hearts have to be brought together).

—PANKAJ PACHAURI

MUFTI MOHAMMED SAYEED

"I had the whole nation behind me"

WHILE the nation waited anxiously for news of his daughter's release, Mufti Mohammed Sayeed, 53, was both the anguished father and the worried home minister. Hundreds of supporters lined up outside his residence every morning to share his grief. Mounds of files waited in his North Block office. And Mufti played both roles with fortitude. In the end, the man, who resigned from Rajiv Gandhi's cabinet on the issue of communalism, was in no mood for compromises. Soft in speech but tough on issues, he spoke to Senior Correspondent PANKAJ PACHAURI last fortnight. Excerpts from the interview:

Q. How do you view this abduction politically?

A. The mishandling of the situation by the previous (Centre and state) governments by their alliance politics alienated a large section of the population, which got inspired by the militants. The 1987 assembly elections were rigged and the people lost faith in democratic institutions. The youth of the valley turned to violence. Neglected economic development, unemployment, corrupt administration and the Centre's indifference accelerated the process of the people's disgust towards the authorities.

Q. But how did it transform into militancy?

A. Kashmir has always been a hotbed of international intrigue. A section of the people was not agreeable to the accession, but it was always a passive section. The people, seeing no alternative to the present situation, are looking forward to militants. There is a total collapse of administrative machinery and other institutions. The law and order machinery has lost authority. I think it is in more turmoil than Punjab.

Q. What is your gameplan for this?

A. We believe that it is not just a question of administrative measures to restore normalcy, but one of restoration of people's faith in democratic institutions. The people who believe that Kashmir is a part of India are scared to air their views. Their hands have to be strengthened. People need good dispensation, good administration and economic measures. Our first priority will be to fight unemployment among the youth and restore the state's authority.

Q. Will this abduction mean that the low security policy of the new government will be abandoned?

A. No. We are against ostentatious security. There will be security, but we will not let it become a status symbol.

Q. The last six days must have been torturous.

A. I was never alone. I had a whole nation with me. And I am proud of that nation.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Get to the splendour of Ashok

A hotel that remains singular in its grandeur

An imposing white edifice embellished with sandstone canopies. Resplendent in red and gold, scintillating with marble and mirrors.

The Ashok. A metaphor for magnificence. Built on grand lines unparalleled so far. Sprawling rooms with an ambience of luxury. Suites evocative of royal ways, each designed around a distinct theme.

And all the facilities a distinguished guest expects of a fine hotel. A glittering shopping arcade. A well-appointed exhibition area. A mirror-like swimming pool. Emerald putting green. And soon opening a new business centre and a well-equipped health club.

Ashok has a distinct aura of splendour. And a touch of grandeur that belongs to the glories of history.

Ashok Hotel
Chanakyapuri
New Delhi 110 021
Tel 600121, 600412
Cables ASHOKAHOTEL
Telex 031-65207 ASHOK IN 031-65647 ASOK IN

Dining and entertainment
Durbar : Indian and Mughlai cuisine. Samovar : 24-hour coffee shop. Burgundy : French food. Frontier : Food from the North-West Frontier. Garden Bar, China Town : Szechwan and Contonese specialities. Tokyo Restaurant : Authentic Japanese cuisine.
Cake Shop: For the finest in confectionary.
Conference and banquet
Convention Hall : Seats 2500. Simultaneous translation in 6 languages for 500 persons. Adjustable stage with lighting arrangements. The hall can be divided into three separate sound-proof sections.
Banquet Hall : Seats 350. Committee Room : Seats 15-17, Conference Room : Seats 125. Foyer : Seats 150-300. Party Rooms : Seats 50-200.

The Ashok Group

India's host to the world

AKSHARA/ITDC-3232

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE PORTRAIT OF A WINNER

THE language of success requires the accent of clothing perfection. Only a certain breed of successful men appreciate this.

Their insistence begins with the fabric.

Worsted Woollens from Vimal. Obviously the result of choosing the finest Merino wool. The sixty fours blend. Spun with the best man-made fibres on sophisticated worsted systems.

To bring you the exclusive Worsted Woollen range. Quite naturally from Vimal.

VIMAL®

WORSTED WOOLLEN

& POLYRICH SUITINGS

THE FINEST IN FABRIC HIERARCHY

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Mudra:A:RIL:4969

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Trust has so many reasons

Godrej. A name that's synonymous with quality and technical expertise. Today, its modern, automated plant with state-of-the-art technology has developed a truly international class refrigerator. Little wonder then, that people insist on Godrej. When they want a name they can trust.

COOLGUARD

Cooler, stronger, cleaner. 100% Polyurethane insulation—putting it on par with world class refrigerators. This superior insulation keeps the Godrej cooler for longer periods. The polyurethane adds strength and rigidity, making the refrigerator sturdier. The insulation keeps in the cold, keeps out the insects.

MEGA FORCE

The robust and energy-efficient compressor with the capacity to withstand a wide range of voltage fluctuation. Along with Coolguard, it ensures faster cooling and lower power consumption.

SPECTRUM

A never-before range of exclusive colours. Desert sand. Dusky blue. Electric red. Spring green. Cool blue. Classic white and Misty grey. All in epoxy powder coated finish that is durable, attractive and long-lasting, with unique colour matched table tops.

ULTRASPACE

The Godrej 165 litre refrigerator has the largest vegetable tray. There's better organised shelf space. And its ingeniously designed door panel provides more room for bottles and eggs.

HTA 1643 R

TRUST Godrej®

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Photographs by R.K. GUPTA

Ajit Singh with Yadav: arch rivals

UTTAR PRADESH

A Bitter Beginning

Yadav wins, but all is not well

FOR years, they maliciously belittled his political abilities. They even had a sarcastic quip for his chief ministerial ambitions: "Mungeri Lal ke haseen sapne." But last fortnight, as he took over as chief minister of India's most populous state, it was Mulayam Singh Yadav's turn to laugh at his opponents.

Still, the path to what is widely regarded as the second most powerful office in the country was not free of bumps. Before he found himself there, Yadav had to engage in several days of hectic lobbying. And even so, he finally had to take on his arch rival, Ajit Singh, in a contest for the leadership of the Janata Dal state Legislature Party.

Initially, there were hopes that Ajit Singh would opt out of the race on V.P. Singh's request. But that was not to be. In fact, Ajit Singh seemed sure that if it came to a showdown, he would triumph. Some time before the legislature party meeting, he told newsmen confidently: "I am looking forward to a situation where there is no contest. But if it becomes unavoidable, I do not have any problems."

There was reason for Ajit Singh's confidence. He commands a sizeable following in the Assembly, roughly equal to Yadav's. And he believed that, if it came to the crunch, the 30-odd members of the Jan Morcha group would help him tilt the scales.

The day of the contest found thousands of supporters of both groups gatecrashing into the secretariat's Tilak Hall where the legislature party meeting was held. Finally, they agreed to clear out and leave the legislators to begin their meeting, a half hour late.

Each of the party's 204 MLAs and eight MLCs was given a slip of paper on which to indicate his preference. Three central observers—Madhu Dandavate, Mufti Mohammed Sayeed and Chimanbhai Patel—oversaw the proceedings. Though they declined to disclose the details, there were indications that it was a very close contest. Some said Yadav edged home by just 11 votes. After the vote, the central observers announced that the ballot was only to ascertain preferences. The choice, they said, was unanimous. But the show of unity was clearly only a facade.

The contest over, it is time for Yadav to get down to governing Uttar Pradesh—a difficult task at the best of times. And these are not the best of times.

Foremost among the problems which will engage Yadav's attention is the growing communalism. The state has been racked by riots. And the Ram Janmabhoomi-Babri Masjid issue that has deeply divided Hindus and Muslims continues to be a potential tinder-box. Worse, with the BJP having 57 members in the Assembly, Yadav can expect to be buffeted by tremendous pressures.

The first challenge for Yadav will come on January 27, if not sooner. That is the day on which the Vishwa Hindu Parishad plans to begin construction of a temple at Ayodhya.

Less than 10 days after the polls, the BJP made it clear that there would be no backtracking on its hardline stand. On December 6, Rajendra Kumar Gupta, the new state chief, and Kalyan Singh, the legislature party leader, reiterated two demands: that Ram Janmabhoomi be handed over to the Hindus, and that the Act making Urdu the second language be withdrawn.

With pressures from the BJP, his own partymen and the bureaucracy, Yadav has a rough path ahead of him.

But if Yadav was perturbed by the BJP's tremendous clout, he showed no signs of it while forming his cabinet. In a bold move, he enlisted Mohammed Azam Khan, convener of the Babri Masjid Action Committee. The action has raised a lot of eyebrows, for Azam was a vocal opponent of the Vishwa Hindu Parishad in the previous Assembly.

The BJP apart, Yadav also faces pressures within the party. Ajit Singh may have lost the battle for chief ministership, but his acrimonious war against Yadav continues.

Some of those internal pressures were evident in the constitution of the ministry. Three Ajit Singh supporters figure in it. But significantly, they do not include a single Jat, the dominant community in the Ajit Singh group.

Otherwise, the ministry held no surprises. Most of the new ministers seemed obvious choices. With an expansion around the corner, it is too early to comment on the regional, factional or caste representation. But among the first ministers, the Brahmins were well represented with four members, followed by Muslims with three, and the Scheduled Castes with two. The Thakurs, the Kurmis, the Bhumihars and the Gujars had one each.

All party factions too were repre-

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

sented—the erstwhile Lok Dal(B) group had six members, the Ajit Singh group three, and the Jan Morcha group and the Janata Party two each.

The balancing act won't end with the formation of the ministry. The Janata Dal has 204 MLAs, and with the 14 independents that it claims could not be given the party symbol in time, it has an absolute majority. But just about. If one faction decides to rock the boat, Yadav could be in deep trouble.

He could also face opposition from bureaucrats in the state who are not quite sure what to expect from the new chief minister. Remarked a senior official: "With people like Mulayam Singh Yadav around, you just do not know what kind of orders you are going to get and in what tone."

With pressures from the BJP, his own partymen and possibly the bureaucracy, Yadav has an obstacle-ridden path ahead of him. And the Congress(I) will be waiting for him to trip. As N.D. Tiwari, former chief minister and now leader of the state legislature party, put it: "I wish the new government success. But I would like to tell them that we will observe their functioning like very keen watch-dogs."

And bite if the opportunity arrives.

—DILIP AWASTHI

Yadav: humble origins

MULAYAM SINGH YADAV

"I will not be reduced to a mere clerk"

IT'S easy to see why Mulayam Singh's rivals underestimate him. His restlessly shifting tiny eyes suggest a nervous personality, a little out of place in the rough and tumble of Uttar Pradesh politics. And his disarming smile has a touch of innocence to it. But make no mistake. The man is well-versed in the game of politics. His origins are humble. He has tended cattle and milked cows, a fact he takes great pride in. From there to the chief ministership of Uttar Pradesh has been a rough path. That he has survived—and triumphed—is testimony to his political skills. The 50-year-old stocky politician spoke to Senior Correspondent DILIP AWASTHI after his swearing-in. Excerpts:

Q. How long will your government last?

A. The full five-year term. I mean it. Have you seen the public support which the Janata Dal had in today's oath-taking ceremony? People are looking forward to us and we are looking forward to deliver the goods.

Q. But given the leadership struggle at the very start, don't you think there will be more controversies in future?

A. When the leader is decided in New Delhi, you say he has been forced on the MLAs by Delhi. When the MLAs choose their own leader by the most democratic process, you say there is infighting.

Q. How do you assess the state's situation?

A. It is a difficult situation. The treasury is empty, communal feelings are running very high, corruption has touched abysmal depths. And besides, there is price rise, poverty and unemployment.

Q. How do you plan to cope with the situation?

A. Just give us six months and do not ask us bad questions. I will prove to you that we can do it.

Q. Do you think the administrative machinery is in tune with the way you want to run this state?

A. That is another problem area I have to deal with immediately. The administrative machinery is badly entangled in the Congress(I) culture which has been very bureaucratic and anti-people. We will have to bring about a change in the system so that everybody who is part of the administrative machinery feels directly responsible to the people, more than anybody else. The red-tape has to go.

Q. How much time will you reserve for the people?

A. Let me assure you that the Janata Dal chief minister will not be reduced to a mere clerk. I will be available to the people and at the same time I will expect my administrative machinery to deliver the goods.

Q. How do you plan to handle the Ram Janmabhoomi-Babri Masjid issue?

A. Give me some more time before going into specifics but I can assure you that we will be able to come out with a solution which will be acceptable to all. Let me settle down first.

Q. In your first press conference after being elected leader of the Janata Dal Legislature Party, you had said that corrupt and inefficient officials would be retired compulsorily. Would you elaborate?

A. We are not going to tolerate inefficiency and corruption at any level. We will work out the details of how we should go about it. But the black sheep in the bureaucracy will definitely be weeded out.

Q. What do you feel about the criminalisation of politics?

A. The Congress(I) was responsible for this in a big way and we are determined to fight the criminals in politics. I had said that all my ministers would have a perfectly clean image. You can see the present set for yourself. In future too, it will be the same.

Q. What about your own image, the charge that you were hand-in-glove with criminals and that you were protecting them?

A. That was a Congress(I) canard against me. They wanted to defame me for obvious reasons while they themselves were inviting criminals in the party. I have never believed in politics backed by criminals. Nobody can cite one example to prove this allegation.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

There's someone who can keep your fresh and nutritious for a lifetime.

Issued in the public interest by ITMA Indian Tinplate Manufacturers' Association, 721, Indra Prakash,

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

our reakfast

Does he still belong to your family?

Remember the tin can ?

The one that protected your vegetable oil ?

The one that sealed your baby's food ? Or the one that kept your vegetables fresh and nutritious ? If you don't see the tin can around your home anymore then maybe you should read this ad very carefully.

Because tinplate has the power to prevent air, light and moisture from ageing your food. The power to keep food pure, fresh and nutritious. The power to form an impregnable barrier between germs, bacteria, insects, rats and the food you eat.

The power to be stable across and not react to an almost infinite variety of foodstuffs.

The power of tinplate.

Would you trust your family's food to anything less ?

Trust in food when it's packed in tin

akash,

1, Barakhamba Road, New Delhi 110001

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

IFB and Bajaj together produce 1 million secure mothers.

IFB Quality

is what works for you, everytime you start your scooter.

IFB's fine blank components are used in the critical assembly system of every Bajaj scooter—its transmission system.

And Bajaj trusts these critical components only to IFB quality. Because IFB's components are precision components.

Accurate to the most exacting specifications. Consistent and well-finished.

Every little groove is minutely examined. Checked for dimensions.

And the final finish.

After all, we can't afford to take chances with your scooter's transmission system.

And that's why other big names also trust IFB.

Telco. Larsen & Toubro. Escorts-Yamaha. Hero-Honda. TVS-Suzuki. Mahindra & Mahindra. Siemens. SKF. And many more.

And that's why 1 million mothers are secure mothers today.

IFB
Industries Limited
(formerly Indian Fine Blank Limited)

Regd. Office :
14 Taratolla Road, Calcutta 700 088

The name big names trust.

IFB P1 2517

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

LEONARD AARONS/Indian Post

BJP and Shiv Sena MPs with Thackeray: fruitful alliance

MAHARASHTRA

A Saffron Swathe

Sena, BJP throw the gauntlet at Pawar

THE message at the mammoth victory rally at Bombay's historic Shivaji Park last fortnight was clear—the Shiv Sena and the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) had emerged for the first time as a major political entity in Maharashtra. As a spectacular pyrotechnic display enthralled thousands of jubilant supporters, Sena chief Bal Thackeray and BJP General Secretary Pramod Mahajan appeared on the stage along with 14 newly-elected MPs, all draped in saffron. And from amidst a sea of saffron flags, the gauntlet was flung at Congress(I) Chief Minister Sharad Pawar, who now has to defend his party's bastion in the forthcoming assembly elections against the strong challenge from the rightist Hindu political alliance.

The performance of the Sena and the BJP in the Lok Sabha poll was remarkable by any yardstick. The Sena has never had an MP and has only one MLA in the present Vidhan Sabha, whose term expires next March. The BJP was routed in the 1984 poll—in fact, the last time anyone was elected to the Lok Sabha from Maharashtra carrying the saffron flag was in 1957, when the Jan Sangh won two seats. In the 288-member state assembly, the BJP has only 15 MLAs. Neither party has ever had a significant political presence at the state level. Yet in last month's parliamentary poll, 10 BJP and four Sena candidates were elected.

The Hindu alliance was unaffected even by the fact that in a majority of the constituencies it fought three-cornered contests with the Congress(I) and the Janata Dal or Ambedkar's Republican Party. "We have shown that the Opposition can also win in three-cornered contests. This is the major lesson from the poll," declared BJP's Ram Naik, who humbled Janata Dal leader Mrinal Gore and the Congress(I) in Bombay North.

Furthermore, Sena and BJP candidates came second in another 15 of the state's 48 Lok Sabha constituencies, polling substantial votes and pushing aside other opposition parties to an ignominious third position. In six of the constituencies, where the alliance came second, it lost by narrow margins. Thus, while the Congress(I) polled more than 45 per cent of the votes cast and the Janata Dal got nearly 11 per cent, the alliance grabbed more than 28 per cent—about 24 per cent to the BJP and 4.4 per cent to the Sena.

For the Sena especially, initially reluctant to enter the fray for the Lok Sabha, winning two-thirds of the seats it contested was no mean achievement. Having polled more than 4 per cent of the votes, the Sena will now get recognition from the Election Commission, and exclusive right to its bow-and-arrow symbol in Maharashtra. This will be to its advantage in the assembly poll, which is the Sena's primary target. Said an elated Thackeray: "The Lok Sabha poll was just a stepping-stone. Our ultimate objective is to come to power in the state."

Thackeray's claim can no longer be taken as an empty boast. The BJP-Sena alliance has cut a saffron swathe across the map of Maharashtra, from Bombay and Thane on the Arabian Sea to Bhandara and Chimur in the eastern extremity. Observed Mahajan: "In Madhya Pradesh or Rajasthan, the Hindutva wave was already there, but in Maharashtra it had to be created. The Lok Sabha results have given a great boost to our pro-Hindu line."

For Mahajan, the architect of the right-wing alliance, the Lok Sabha success is a vindication of his political strategy. The BJP leader had lobbied hard for a tie-up with the Sena against strong opposition within his party. Opponents of the alliance argued that unlike the BJP, with its roots in the RSS tradition, the Sena lacked a political ideology and a disciplined cadre. It was a party of riff-raff, and its blatantly anti-minority thrust would alienate large sections of voters. The Sena's only asset was Thackeray's charisma, Mahajan's opponents maintained. But BJP supremo L.K. Advani backed Mahajan, and the alliance was forged shortly before the elections were announced. Said Ram

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CELEBRATING
ANOTHER FIRST FROM THE MANUFACTURERS OF

MAFATLAL

Royal Hunt - Relief from the Palace of Assurbanipal at Nineveh (ancient Iraq).

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Mafron®

INE'S CHEMICAL DIV. BAGS Mafron® TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER CONTRACT FROM IRAQ.

On December 3rd in Baghdad, Navin Fluorine Industries – Chemical Div. of Mafatlal Fine, signed a contract with SEIDACC – the State Engineering Company for Industrial Design & Construction of the Govt. of Iraq.

The prestigious 14-million U.S. dollar (Rs. 250 million) contract for setting up a sophisticated high-tech chemical plant in Iraq – was awarded to NFI in the face of stiff international competition.

With the world class technology of Mafron® and valuable support of EXIM Bank of India, State Bank of India and ECGC, the Chemical Div. of Mafatlal was able to offer Iraq a turnkey package unmatched by any other country.

When the 30-million U.S. dollar project is completed under NFI supervision in the next 22 months – the Chemical Div. of Mafatlal Fine will be first among chemical companies in India to demonstrate the capability to export technology of such complexity.

Another kingly conquest for Mafatlal. Another first for the manufacturers of Mafron®.

MAFATLAL MF FINE NF

Navin Fluorine Industries
Chemical Division of:
THE MAFATLAL FINE SPG. & MFG. CO. LTD.
Mafatlal Centre, Nariman Point,
Bombay 400 021.
Phone: 2024547. Telex: 011-4241 MGMC IN
Fax: 22 2024625. Gram: 'MAFINISED'

FERREIRA ASSOC./NFI/MF/632/89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Naik: "Our performance proved Mahajan's strategy was correct. This victory was possible because BJP and Sena volunteers worked as one group. Reservations about the two parties being incompatible because of the difference in political cultures were proved wrong. The alliance went down to the grassroots." In fact, where traditional rivalry between the two parties could not be overcome, as in Ratnagiri, the alliance lost to the Congress(I).

Though a hotly contested claim, the BJP-Sena alliance may have attracted a section of the Muslim and Dalit votes also. Asserted Naik: "Muslims did vote for us, even if not in large numbers. And it's a myth that Dalits voted whole hog for the Janata or the Republican Party." Added Abdul Alim Khan, BJP state general secretary and minority cell chief: "We're still analysing booth-wise figures, but there is enough evidence that our party also got Muslim votes." But Thackeray has obviously written off the Muslim vote, for at the victory rally he attacked the minority community again, and raised a hornet's nest by declaring that Muslims would be banned from praying on streets or using loudspeakers in mosques. Nevertheless, the BJP has to contend with criticism that it has only ridden the Sena tiger to victory, and that the results do not demonstrate its own organisational strength in the state. On the contrary, as happened earlier to the Praja Socialist Party, the BJP faces the danger of losing its cadres to the more militant Sena.

TILL the BJP national convention in Bombay in October, BJP and RSS leaders assiduously avoided Thackeray, who often mocked them in public. Even now, Thackeray remains irrepressible. After the poll, he jeered at Atal Behari Vajpayee for suggesting a government of "national reconciliation" and attacked the RSS for its pro-Brahmin focus. Said he: "The RSS and the Vishwa Hindu Parishad have worked hard, but I brought militancy to Hinduism. I don't believe in tufts and sacred threads."

Mahajan: successful strategy

To upset the Congress(I) applecart, the BJP-Shiv Sena alliance has to garner support in the crucial sugar belt.

But BJP leaders reject the claim that their success is Sena-inspired. Observed Alim Khan: "Our best victories were in Vidarbha where we have worked hard for the last three years among farmers and youth. The Sena is coming up there only now." Bombay is another place where the BJP-Sena alliance staged a major coup, winning four prestigious seats. A city which in the past has been with the Congress(I) or the Left, now appears to be turning to the saffron Right. "In Bombay we have demonstrated that it is the BJP and not the Janata Dal which is the natural heir of the old Janata Party," declared Naik.

Even though the BJP-Sena alliance performed spectacularly across the state, it failed completely in one crucial region. It did not win a single seat in the rich sugar districts of western Maharashtra, home to the ruling Maratha clans and the bedrock of Congress(I) supremacy in the state. Said Thackeray: "We didn't have enough time. If I had held meetings there, the picture would have been different. The sugar belt soil is fertile, and we will exploit it for the Vidhan Sabha poll." According to the Sena chief, many Congress(I) sugar barons are unhappy, and will play a major role in upsetting the ruling party's fortunes. But for now, the only prominent Maratha from the Congress(I) who has sided publicly with Thackeray is the former chief minister Babasaheb Bhosale, who does not have a base anywhere in the state.

Support in western Maharashtra is crucial if the alliance is to upset the Congress(I) applecart. According to traditional political wisdom, no party can rule Maharashtra without controlling the sugar belt. But ironically it was in this region—the heart of what was once Chhatrapati Shivaji's empire—that the Hindutva wave failed to roll. "The Hindus here constitute a confident ruling elite, and will not be swayed by slogans," confided a BJP leader.

However, there was no denying that elsewhere in the state, especially in Vidarbha and Marathwada, the alliance was helped considerably by the Ram Janmabhoomi campaign and the Shilapujas. Alim Khan, who defied police bans and himself organised pujas at some places, observed: "The campaign reached 17,000 villages in the state. The BJP derived a lot of benefit. We planted the flag in villages where even five years hence we did not have a hope of establishing ourselves."

But even before the BJP and the Sena can consolidate their newly acquired following across the state, negotiations have resumed over the sharing of seats for the Vidhan Sabha poll. Earlier, the Sena wanted to fight from 200 constituencies, leaving the rest to the BJP. But with its spectacular performance in the Lok Sabha poll, the BJP is more assertive. Furthermore, efforts are on by Janata Dal leaders like the newly-elected MP Babanrao Dhakne for greater opposition unity. Said the Dal's Sadanand Varde: "We lost at least eight Lok Sabha seats because there was no seat adjustment. We will have to take a fresh look at the alliance. But if they insist on Hindutva, there is no question of going along."

With Ayodhya far from the state's borders, and the Janata Dal dominant in Delhi, the alliance may decide to soften the pro-Hindu line for the assembly poll. Otherwise, three-cornered contests with a more resourceful Janata Dal and the ruling Congress(I) will become inevitable. And though the BJP-Sena alliance has emerged with flying colours from the latest electoral battle, the Hindu Right may not yet be in a position to come to power in Maharashtra all on its own.

—M. RAHMAN

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

An exclusive start to a new decade

SLIM-LINE DIARY 1990
Code: IT 102
Size: 82 mm × 177 mm
Price: Rs. 65

INDIA TODAY YEAR BOOK 1990
Code: IT 101
Size: 222 mm × 289 mm
Price: Rs. 250

POCKET DIARY 1990
Code: IT 103
Size: 79 mm × 127 mm
Price: Rs. 35

India Today Diaries and Address Book

The India Today Yearbook 1989 established distinctive standards which were widely appreciate by discriminating users, for meticulous attention to production and the quality of information offere This year's edition, the India Today Yearbook 1990 upholds these fine standards and comes with comprehensive range of exclusive pocket diaries and an address book produced with an eye to detail a hallmark at India Today.

INDIA TODAY YEAR BOOK 1990

Much more than just a diary, this yearbook puts invaluable information on your desk where it belongs.

The information includes a statistical overview of the Indian economy, a political profile of India, a complete travel guide, city guides, International Time, and 16 pages of full colour maps.

The diary section is laid out with busy executives in mind. The easy-to-read, easy-to-write format includes: a week-at-a-glance, hourly slots for appointments, current and forward year planner, ample space for notes, address and phone number section.

Attractively produced with a burgundy red cover, gold leaf embossing, gilt-tipped pages and a handy ribbon marker, the India Today Yearbook 1990 belongs on your table.

DELUXE MINIATURE DIARIES.

To match the diary on your desk, there is now a slimline for your jacket or the briefcase and a pocket diary specially designed to be car on your person. With these miniatures, you can now carry all the day-to-day information you need with you. Alongwith provision f space for your appointments, you get 35 pages of invaluable information like India at a glance, Conversion Tables, ISD and STI codes, International Times and a 3-year Calendar 1989-1991.

Make your selection now and send in the order with coupon given overleaf.

More from India Today overle

Personalize these beautiful diaries.

Whether you're ordering for yourself, friends or favoured clients, give these diaries a personal touch. For a nominal sum of Rs. 10 per diary, you can have upto 3 initials printed in gold-leaf on the cover of the India Today Yearbook 1990, Slimline diary 1990 and the Pocket diary 1990. If the order for any of the three sizes individually is 10 copies or more, the facility of gold embossing of three initials on each diary, is free.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Elegance & Quality Forever...

...Address Book from India Today

This year INDIA TODAY brings you an attractive address book which features upto 8 pages to each letter of the alphabet, personal information section, emergency phone numbers, International Times, ISD & STD codes, and a ready reference ABC index.

ADDRESS BOOK
Code: IT 201
Size: 139 mm × 216 mm
Price: Rs. 65

Elegantly bound in real herring bone tweed, this address book will be appreciated for its classic styling and for the amount of space provided for names, addresses and phone numbers.

Make your selection now and send in the order with coupon given below.

Diaries will be home-delivered at your given address by the year end or early in January 1990.

IF THE ORDER FORM IS MISSING
Just mail your enquiry/order to Living Media India Ltd., P.B. No. 29, New Delhi-110001

Your order should be accompanied by remittance drawn in favour of 'Living Media India Ltd'. (add Rs. 5/- to outstation cheques, i.e., outside Delhi).

Please add Rs 10/- per diary for each set of upto 3 initials to be printed in gold leaf

---

ORDER FORM—1990

Product Code	Product Details	Price (Rs.)	Qty Ordered	Total Amount (Rs.)
IT 101	India Today Yearbook 1990	250
IT 102	India Today Slimline Diary	65
IT 103	India Today Pocket Diary	35
IT 201	Address Book	65
			Total (in Rs.)
	Gold Embossing of Initials @ Rs. 10 per Item facility available for diaries only.
			Total Amount of Order (Rs.)

*Please give maximum of 3 initials per diary ordered, on a separate sheet.

I enclose my crossed cheque/DD for Rs. _____ (add Rs. 5/- for outstation cheques, i.e. outside Delhi) payable to 'Living Media India Ltd.' Please send the diaries and address books, as listed in the coupon, at the following address:

Name _____

Address _____

_____

_____

_____ Pin _____

Mail your order to:

Living Media India Ltd.
P.B. No. 29,
New Delhi-110001

FREE DELIVERY

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

In its warp, in its weft, in its weave...

India. Primordial, deep, faceted. The wellspring of countless creative impulses. Palpably alive, to this very day. Strikingly and most colourfully manifest in the handspun magic of its fabrics. The handlooms of India. Resplendent, intricate, patterned, rustic, sophisticated, earthy, ethereal. In Indian handlooms rests India's very soul.

...India lives.

andloom House's entire ational Design Collections at specially subsidized prices – ht through the year.

handloom house

Sarees ○ Dress Materials ○ Readymades ○ Furnishings ○ Carpets ○ Bed, Bath & Table Linen

THE ORIGINAL ONE STOP SHOP

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Ahmedabad • Bangalore • Baroda • Bombay • Calcutta • Chandigarh • Coimbatore • Delhi • Ernakulam • Gorakhpur • Hyderabad • Imphal • Jaipur
Madras • Madurai • Patna • Ranchi • Secunderabad • Surat • Vijayawada • Vishakapatnam

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

How to turn an investment in a house into a tax concession.

As a businessman or an executive, you must be constantly looking for tax relief options.

And chances are, you are also wishing to invest in a house — for yourself or your children.

For people like you, here's a rare opportunity to do both things at the same time.

A unique financial instrument that offers you tax concessions on one hand, and the prospects of owning a house on the other !

The Home Loan Account Scheme. A unique double-benefit option.

The HLA Scheme is unique in this respect. As an account holder, you are eligible for a loan for acquiring a house/flat anywhere in India, irrespective of the place of opening the account.

After saving for a minimum of 5 years, you become eligible for a Home Loan that's a multiple of your accumulated savings.

Best of all, your HLA savings earn interest and are simultaneously eligible for attractive tax concessions !

Attractive tax benefits .

★ Savings under HLA qualify for tax concession under Section 80C of the Income Tax Act —just like insurance premia or provident fund.

★ Your savings will earn interest at 10% per annum. This is treated as reinvestment in the account and is also eligible for tax relief.

★ Accumulated savings together with interest are exempt from wealth tax under Section 5 of the Wealth Tax Act.

And that's not all. You can avail of all the usual concessions that are linked to a housing loan:

★ Repayment of the principal of the loan is a permissible deduction — up to Rs. 10,000 per annum under Section 80C.

★ Interest on the loan is deductible in the computation of income from house/property under Section 24 of the Income Tax Act.

★ The interest is fully deductible in case the house is rented out and up to Rs. 5,000 per annum in case of self-occupation.

HOME LOAN ACCOUNT SCHEME

Open an HLA today.

Even if you own a house, you can open HLAs in the name of your spouse or your minor children — and still avail of all the attractive tax concessions !

We suggest that you pick up more details of this exclusive scheme from any of the banks listed here.

Where to open your account :

Allahabad Bank, Andhra Bank, Bank of Baroda, Bank of India, Bank of Maharashtra, Canara Bank, Central Bank of India, Corporation Bank, Dena Bank, Indian Bank, Indian Overseas Bank, New Bank of India, Oriental Bank of Commerce, Punjab National Bank, Punjab & Sind Bank, State Bank of Bikaner & Jaipur, State Bank of Hyderabad, State Bank of India, State Bank of Indore, State Bank of Mysore, State Bank of Patiala, State Bank of Saurashtra, State Bank of Travancore, Syndicate Bank, UCO Bank, Union Bank of India, United Bank of India, Vijaya Bank.

Bank of Karad Ltd., Bank of Madura Ltd., Bank of Rajasthan Ltd., Bareilly Corporation Bank Ltd., Benaras State Bank Ltd., Bharath Overseas Bank Ltd., Catholic Syrian Bank Ltd., City Union Bank Ltd., Dhanalakshmi Bank Ltd., Federal Bank Ltd., Jammu & Kashmir Bank Ltd., Karnataka Bank Ltd., Karur Vysya Bank Ltd., Lakshmi Vilas Bank Ltd., Lord Krishna Bank Ltd., Nainital Bank Ltd., Nedungadi Bank Ltd., Punjab Co-op. Bank Ltd., Ratnakar Bank Ltd., Sangli Bank Ltd., South Indian Bank Ltd., Tamilnad Mercantile Bank Ltd., United Western Bank Ltd., Vysya Bank Ltd.

Abhyudaya Co-op. Bank Ltd., Development Co-op. Bank Ltd., Kalupur Comml. Co-op. Bank Ltd., Saraswat Co-op. Bank Ltd., Sangli Urban Co-op. Bank Ltd., Shamrao Vithal Co-op. Bank Ltd., Surat Peoples Co-op. Bank Ltd., Bombay Mercantile Co-op. Bank Ltd., Kerala State Co-op. Bank Ltd., Orissa State Co-op. Bank Ltd., Uttar Pradesh Co-op. Bank Ltd.,

CHAITRA-D NHB 989C

NATIONAL HOUSING BANK (Wholly owned by the Reserve Bank of India)
Hindustan Times House (6th Floor), 18-20, Kasturba Gandhi Marg, New Delhi-110001.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

TAMIL NADU

The New Empress

Jayalalitha rides rough shod over partymen

I am the leader of this party and it is my utterances alone that are to be considered, not irresponsible statements made by others in the party.
Jayalalitha at a post-election press conference in Madras.

IF there were any doubts about who wears the pants in the All India Anna Dravida Munnetra Kazhgam (AIADMK), they've been laid to rest. It's Jayalalitha. And just in case any in the party haven't yet got the message, Jayalalitha is rubbing it in. Publicly.

Not surprisingly, party leaders aren't delighted. They're wearing long faces, worried about what sort of political future awaits them in the party.

The answer rests in Jayalalitha's hands. A fact she made clear when, in a move that took everyone by surprise, she appointed S.R. Radha as leader of the Opposition in the state Assembly to take her place. Radha, a former minister, is a low-profile political lightweight and seemed a little dazed by the honour. "No," he said. "I did not expect it at all."

But if Radha was dazed, he was also pleased. Not so Thirunavukkarasu, deputy leader of the AIADMK Legislature Party. Logically, he should have succeeded Jayalalitha. But he had committed a sin by violating Jayalalitha's blanket ban on senior party leaders addressing election meetings. That was a privilege she reserved for herself.

The blanket ban was one example of the sort of absolute rule Jayalalitha has imposed on the party. It was meant to convey to party leaders that so far as the electorate was concerned, only Jayalalitha mattered. And now that the poll results—a complete wash-out of the ruling Dravida Munnetra Kazhgam (DMK)—have vindicated her, she's hell-bent on riding rough shod over any opposition in the party.

> Senior leaders complain that Jayalalitha does not consult them while making decisions.

One notable victim is K. Ramachandran, the party whip in the state Assembly. During the days when the AIADMK was split into two factions, Ramachandran was the target of an acid bulb attack, allegedly masterminded by Tamaraikani, a former AIADMK MLA of the Janaki faction. Now that the two factions have come together, Jayalalitha wants Ramachandran to withdraw his case against Tamaraikani. Ramachandran reportedly refused. The result: he has been totally sidelined. On one occasion, he and Thirunavukkarasu were even reportedly reprimanded in the presence of other leaders.

Thirunavukkarasu and Ramachandran are not the only victims of Jayalalitha's imperiousness. Other senior party leaders complain that she neither consults nor confers with them while making political decisions. Even meeting her is difficult. Appointments are fixed by her aide, Natarajan, and all too often his answer is: "Amma oorile ille" (she's not in town).

SHYAM TEKWANI

Still, an open revolt is not on the cards. The last assembly and Lok Sabha elections have clearly shown that she is the only vote-catcher in the party.

Meanwhile, Chief Minister M. Karunanidhi is pulling up his socks. He has reshuffled his ministry and the administration. He's also created a new department for backward classes. And on the foodgrains front, the Centre has bailed him out—by increasing the monthly allocation of rice. Whether that will be sufficient to stop the onward march of Jayalalitha is not yet clear.

Jayalalitha faces a different problem. With a National Front Government at the Centre, it's unlikely that the DMK Government will be dismissed. So she will need to demonstrate her staying capacities and keep the party in one piece while the spoils of power are out of reach. Her recent actions, however, don't point in that direction.

—KAVITHA SHETTY

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

HARYANA

Land of the Rising Son

Chautala succeeds father

WHEN he came onto the stage for the swearing-in ceremony at the capital's Haryana Bhawan, he was wearing a triumphant smile. And he had every reason to do so. For in the tradition of dynastic rule, Om Prakash Chautala, the son of Haryana strongman Devi Lal, had just 'inherited' the chief minister's gaddi after six hours of high drama. So sudden was the transfer of power from father to son, that even the central leaders of the Janata Dal party and the BJP—a partner in the state Government—were taken aback.

The drama began early in the morning. Three hours before Devi Lal was sworn in as deputy prime minister, he and his son requested state Governor H.R. Barari to fly up to Delhi the same afternoon. There was a sense of urgency in the operation: wireless messages were sent to district SSPs and district collectors, asking them to track down legislators so that they could all reach Delhi by 2 p.m. Devi Lal's Political Secretary, Deepak Kumar, sat glued to the telephone in Delhi as he tried to get through to the 60 Janata Dal MLAs.

Soon after, Devi Lal was sworn in as deputy prime minister—though he still held the post of chief minister. After the swearing-in ceremony, he returned to Haryana Bhawan to tackle Ranjit Singh, his politically ambitious younger son, and the one man who could have upset his plans to anoint Chautala as chief minister. To ask Ranjit to support Chautala was a particularly difficult task because Ranjit Singh commanded the majority support amongst the MLAs.

Devi Lal wanted his younger son to propose Chautala's name and Irrigation and Power Minister, Veerender Singh (also Ranjit's man), to second it. An unwilling Ranjit Singh accepted his father's diktat to ensure the unanimous election of Chautala, but refused to propose his name. Finally, in a meeting presided over by Devi Lal himself, Chautala's name was proposed by Kishan Singh Sangwan, the party's state secretary, and seconded by Rao Narbir Singh. After which, Devi Lal, in a tone of finality, informed Ranjit: "Chautala will be sworn in at 5:30 p.m."

BHAWAN SINGH

Chautala (left) being sworn in; and Ranjit Singh: uneasy truce

> Unhappy over the blatant perpetuation of dynastic rule, the BJP has refused to continue to be a partner in the Haryana Government.

PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

But Chautala's problems were far from over. A sulking Ranjit Singh preferred to sit on the Haryana Bhawan terrace rather than attend the swearing-in ceremony. Worse, the BJP, now refused to continue to be a partner in Chautala's government. Though it declined to share power, it did promise to lend support from outside.

Chautala, however, after having achieved his long-nurtured ambition of becoming top dog in the state, was now not to be deprived. He made an all-out attempt to cross all hurdles. Faced with the uneasy task of constituting the Cabinet, he made a surprising, but politically astute move: he retained the existing team of ministers, most of whom were Ranjit Singh's men. That fetched him a certain amount of goodwill. Remarked a minister: "He has made a sincere beginning."

Most taken aback by Chautala's political sagacity were the state MLAs and the state administration with whom he has long had the reputation of being tyrannical, a "danda administrator". The IAS and IPS officers had, in fact, been apprehensive that with Chautala formally in power, the situation could only get worse. However, the new chief minister made overt attempts to allay their fears, by actively propagating "free and frank discussion" in an address to the officials.

But behind the promising beginning lay rumblings of discontent. The most alarming signals came from the BJP. Though disarmed by Chautala's personal invitation to BJP President L.K. Advani for the swearing-in ceremony, the party decided not to continue as a partner in the Government. While Atal Behari Vajpayee attended the ceremony, the party was resolute about not sharing power—a major decision considering the fact that six of its 17 members were ministers in Devi Lal's government.

Advani's excuse: "We want to concentrate on organisational work and strengthen our base in Haryana." The fact is that the BJP was unhappy over the blatant perpetuation of dynastic rule—the very slogan that Devi Lal had acrimoniously used against the Congress(I) during his election campaign. The party was also sore with Devi Lal over the loss of both its parliamentary seats from the

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

NIPPON DENRO ISPAT
IS ADDING A NEW DIMENSION TO STEEL.
COLOUR.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Central Marketing Office: GUMAN' 6th Floor, 77, Residency Road, Sadar, Nagpur – 440 001 Phone: 25742, 25750. Telex: 0715-426 NDIL IN Fax: 0712-33194 Cable:

Digitized by Arya Samaj F

INTRODUCING COLOUR-ENGINEERED STEEL SHEETS FO INTERIORS, EXTERIORS, FURNITURE, APPLIANCES & AUTOMOBILES

Steel. A material without which few things would be possible. The backbone of industry. The one constant in a changing world.

Steel. Strong and versatile. But also dull and boring.

Now, Nippon Denro Ispat adds a new dimension to steel: exciting colour. By introducing a wide range of pre-coated steel sheets, unheard of in India until now.

Colour-coated steel sheets. PVC-coated sheets. And steel sheets coated with different organic substances for durability.

Steel sheets that add to the life of the end-product. And make hitherto functional objects beautiful, too. Steel sheets that can be used for false ceilings, wall panelling, railway coach interiors, roofing, cladding, furniture, bus bodies, car bodies, two-wheeler bodies..... and a host of domestic appliances.

Colour-engineered steel sheets from Nippon Denro Ispat Ltd. Stronger than ever. More versatile than ever. And more beautiful than you ever imagined.

ISPAT

NIPPON DENRO ISPAT LTD

Park Plaza (Ist Floor), 71, Park Street, Calcutta-700016

THE NEW BREED OF STEEL

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

4 Cable:

IPPON'.

Mudra:D:NDIL:

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

NEW Amul CRUNCH milk chocolate

so c-c-c-crunchy

so m-m-m-munchy

so very tasty

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

BUS/AMC/4-88

Marketed by Gujarat Co-operative Milk Marketing Federation Ltd. Anand 388 001.

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

state. The Janata Dal-BJP alliance trailed in 40 out of the 90 assembly segments, which the BJP now ascribes to the "corrupt and pro-Jat" image of the Devi Lal government.

This is the image that Chautala has to shed. And this may prove a fairly formidable task, for he has to establish himself as a popular leader and shrug off the pro-Jat label before the assembly elections are held. Making the going more difficult will be dissidents Kirpa Ram Punia and eight other MLAs, who have recently been sacked for anti-party activities. Punia is more than a distinct threat. As the one-time right-hand man of Devi Lal, he can stake his claim to be leader of the Opposition if he manages to win the support of two more MLAs. Chautala, of course, is trying his best to prevent such a possibility. He has even offered to take back the erring MLAs, if they send in an apology.

Chautala justifies his elevation to the number one post in the state, by declaring: "I am proud that I have Devi Lal's blood in my veins. But I am a politician in my own right—I have put in 36 years in this line." Fortunately for him, the other one who could make similar claims and upset his apple-cart has for the moment declared peace. Says Ranjit Singh, somewhat falsely: "There is no dispute in our family." Even so, Chautala—hemmed in by an adamant BJP and a rejuvenated state Congress(I)—has a tightrope walk ahead.

—HARINDER BAWEJA

BOTTOMLINE BY D. BUNKER

Force of Habit

OLD habits are hard to kill. The trappings of power acquired over five years of ruling 800 million people can become pretty addictive—the bullet-proof Mercedes; the three-ring security circus; the obeisance; the fate of political bosses in your hands; and, above all, the comfort of advisers that allows others to do your thinking for you. Rajiv Gandhi can, thus, be cheerfully forgiven for being made to believe that he is still the prime minister taking a short break. Here's the post-election scene at Race Course Road.

Mani Iyer: Sir, there are people waiting outside to congratulate you on your victory.

Rajiv (puzzled): Victory?

Mani: In Amethi.

Rajiv: Oh, that one.

Mani: And the moral one, sir. You are still the prime choice for prime minister. These opposition chaps are not like limpets. They will never be able to cling on to their seats. We..., I mean you, will be back in South Block in no time.

Satish Sharma: Yes. Just think of this as a short holiday. We can always fly in a couple of dolphins from Lakshadweep to play with in my swimming pool. It even has Italian tiles.

Mani: Just look at the crowds. There must be 50,000 people there at least.

Rajiv: Which means 10,000. By George, that's still a lot.

George: Not by me, sir. By H.K.L. Bhagat.

Satish: Actually 2,000 are security guards, but that's still a lot.

Rajiv: Two thousand? But I only had 1,000 when I was prime minister.

Mani: It's like this, sir. V.P. Singh has 1,000. We asked for double. After all, your life is even more valuable now. Without you, how can we, I mean you, come back to power? In any case, we have to give the impression that we are still in charge. We must cling to the aura of power like...never mind.

Rajiv: You're right. I'm going out to meet the people.

Satish: I suggest you greet them from the roof. We must give the impression that we are on top of the situation.

Mani: George. Tell Doordarshan to get a camera crew here at once.

George: They say that Rajiv is not news any more.

Rajiv: Hum nani yaad dila denge.

Mani: That's the spirit. Remember the Doon School motto. Never Bend Over. You must keep up the appearance of still being the prime minister. It's all a matter of psychology.

Satish: That's right. Get in that chap Prannoy Roy.

Mani (patiently): That's psephology.

Satish: Whatever. We, I mean you, must keep acting like you are PM.

Rajiv: How?

Mani: There are six chief ministers waiting to see you for the last week. They are waiting for you to appoint their successors.

Cartoon by AJIT NINAN

Rajiv: Really. Why wasn't I told?

Satish: As Mani said, it's all a question of psephology. You kept them waiting when you were PM, so you must continue to act like one now.

Rajiv: You're right. Keep them waiting another week. By George, I'm really beginning to feel like the prime minister again. What would I do without you chaps?

R.K. Dhawan (sotto voce): You would still be prime minister.

George (excitedly): Sir, Mr L.K. Advani is at the gate. His driver says he wants to see the prime minister.

Rajiv: Then it's really true. I'm still the prime minister!

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

MAHARASHTRA

High-Tech Paradise

● EVEN if there is a big question mark over the fate of the Reliance Industries empire, work goes on apace at the 12-storey mansion in Colaba—which Dhirubhai Ambani's family is to occupy.

For more than a year after it was sold by the Tatas, reportedly for Rs 9 crore, Sea Wind has been under extensive and expensive renovation. The finest granite, marble and teak are trucked daily to the unoccupied building as craftsmen convert it into a palace fit for one of India's richest business families.

While the Ambanis insist they have purchased the brand new building for housing company officers, the fabulous renovation fools nobody. According to the Bombay grapevine, Sea Wind will house the entire Ambani clan—two floors each for Dhirubhai and sons Mukesh and Anil, one floor each for the two daughters when they are in Bombay, a floor for family guests, and the remaining for various R & D facilities.

If the massive satellite dish which was recently installed on the building is any indication, Sea Wind, when fully renovated, should be a high-tech paradise.

The Sea Wind Building

GUJARAT

Winning Verdict

● JUDICIAL servicemen across the country had cause for cheer last fortnight. Reason: the inquiry report in the case of the police assault on Nadiad chief judicial magistrate N.L. Patel had vindicated their stand.

The 140-page report by Justice R.M. Sahay of the Allahabad High Court, appointed by the Supreme Court, is as much an indictment of the Nadiad police as of the state Government "for its failure to protect the freedom of the judiciary and for shielding errant police officers in the case."

Patel: vindicated

While expressing grave fears about the fate of the common man when even a magistrate was insecure, Sahay recommended that: the cases against Patel be withdrawn; the high court be directed to allow Patel to resume his duties in Nadiad; the state Government be asked to pay suitable compensation for the torture and humiliation caused to him.

More important, Sahay urged that the district superintendent of police, the medical superintendent of the government hospital and two government officials involved in the incident be stripped of their administrative duties and that their department be asked to take appropriate action against them.

Finally, castigating the state Government and administration for their inaction, Sahay said that the Supreme Court may consider taking appropriate action against the Director-General of Police, Keki Dadabhoy.

Says the report: "Crime is contagious. But if the Government becomes a law-breaker, it breeds contempt of law." For the judicial profession, it was a winning verdict.

TAMIL NADU

Language Blues

● IT was business as usual in the shops of the sleepy town of Tiruchirapalli in Tamil Nadu. Until a recent government order decided to take up the cause of Tamil in the state. The Labour Department ordered that all non-Tamil names of shops were to be replaced by new names in Thooya or pure Tamil. The purpose: to perpetuate better Tamil among the masses.

Understandably, there is considerable consternation—pure Tamil is a far cry from colloquial Tamil and not commonly understood either. The word shop itself will be replaced by the words, kadais or angaadis.

While the circular has drawn flak from some secular citizens and political parties, who are objecting to this sudden display of chauvinism, some shopkeepers are also complaining. Reason: they cannot remember the new names of their shops.

WEST BENGAL

Saffron Threat

● THE saffron wave now seems to be threatening to swamp the reds in West Bengal. Emboldened by its impressive showing in the north, the BJP last fortnight threatened to launch a statewide agitation for the resignation of Chief Minister Jyoti Basu. The party, which set up a committee to prepare a charge-sheet against the Left Government, also demanded the scrapping of the Bakreshwar project.

Claiming that the people were disillusioned with the "Marxist misrule", the BJP predicted a CPI(M) wipe-out in the 1992 assembly polls. Said state BJP chief Sukumar Banerjee:

Basu: under pressure

"With its defeat in Kerala and Tripura, the CPI(M) has been reduced to a regional party. Communism is dying everywhere in the world."

Though the BJP failed to secure a single Lok Sabha seat in the state, it registered a 1.3 per cent increase in the votes polled from 0.4 per cent in the last election. For the CPI(M), it symbolises the inroads being made by communalism.

While the Left Government can find comfort in the fact that the electorate voted for continuity rather than change, it clearly cannot afford to ignore the challenge.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

'Made for each other' Diary 1990

Travel and togetherness perfectly matched!

The 'Made for each other' Diary 1990. Created specially for two people for who life is a romantic adventure, which takes off with dream holidays in fascinating destinations. Because this week-at-a-glan diary is full of twosome travel ideas.

Exclusive holidays for two

Romantic river cruises. Wildlife adventures together. High excitement sports. Sunny island honeymoons. Sharir the festive spirit in far-away lands. Even lazy armchair holidays through travelogues, foreign melodies and video voyages.

Feast your eyes on splendour

An imaginative visual treatment which captures the magic of these 'Made for each other' places.

Tips on travelling

Travelling tips. Holiday planning suggestions. Foreign travel etiquette. Th art of hotel-hunting. What goes into a safari-kit. Even a quiz on how good a holiday mate you are.

A diary to treasure

A 'Memorabilia' section to fill with mementos, souvenirs, photographs whic will bring back the very special moments you've shared together.

Charting out the year togethe

This diary offers convenient, week-at-a glance date pages. And a bright, eye-catching year planner on which the two you can chart a whole new wonderful ye together.

The ideal gift to give your friends on very special occasions like a wedding, an anniversary or the new year.

PRICE RS 190/-
Distributed by Interprint

Mehta House
16A Naraina II, New Delhi 110 028.

Available at Teksons (Delhi), Family Book Shop (Calcutta), Landmark (Madras), Langarams (Bangalore), Intershoppe (Lucknow, Kanpur and Si and other leading bookshops.

WILLS The 'Made for each other' blend

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

ITORY WARNING: CIGARETTE SMOKING IS INJURIOUS TO HEALTH

"For us, energy is not an abstract ideal. It is a target for today and tomorrow."

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Mr A D Baijal, Divisional Manager, Planning. His comment is in fact a commentary on the philosophy behind TISTECH. A unique emphasis on relevance, result and accountability that marks every action at Tata Steel.

Energy is a major concern for TISTECH, for today and for tomorrow. And Tata Steel charted out the future, way back in 1928, when an independent Energy & Economy Department was set up.

Because the world is fast running out of energy reserves and the cost of energy is skyrocketing, Tata Steel has taken steps in the right direction. Today, the Tata Steel Plant has the lowest specific energy consumption among steel plants in India.

From raw materials to steel processing, from ancillary units to auxiliary services, Tata Steel has shown the way in effective and relevant energy management.

Creating sinter from blue dust. Using stamp charging technology to convert low grade coal to high grade coke. Using KORF technology to reduce heat working time in OH furnaces. Increasing blast temperatures to conserve coke. Using international technology to solve national problems.

Today, Tata Steel is concentrating on generating captive power. Generating power from washery rejects using Fluidised Bed technique at Jamadoba is merely one example of how Tata Steel is moving towards being a totally self-sufficient and energy-efficient company.

Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Using Concast as an alternative route to conventional ingot casting, Tata Steel has eliminated an entire stage of energy consumption. By the end of Phase III—Concast will account for over 60% of total production.

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

These are targets that convert precepts into practice, ideals into benefits, potential into performance. Because, at Tata Steel, this awareness is felt and shared by everyone. From the miners to the engineers. From the foremen to the executives.

Because TISTECH ENERGY is more than an energy conservation programme in a steel plant. It is a pioneering attempt at evolving a technology that is relevant and an attitude that is contemporary. TISTECH ENERGY is a deep rooted commitment towards meeting the country's needs of today without compromising its tomorrow.

- Generating 120 MW of captive power by 1990
- Eliminating an entire stage of energy consumption through Concast
- Reducing specific energy consumption to less than 8.75 G cal/t
- Introducing KORF in all open hearth furnaces
- Introducing Energy Optimising Furnaces to reduce energy consumption

TATA STEEL
The first and still the foremost

Recovery and utilisation of waste nitrogen

Stamp Charging in Coke Ovens Battery No. 7

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Grasim Worsted Suiting

An exquisite
Terene/Wool
Worsted Suiting
collection.

GRASIM
GWALIOR
SUITING
IN A CLASS OF ITS OWN

A PRODUCT OF GRASIM INDUSTRIES LTD.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

EXPORT BINGE

THE largest multinational operating in India, Hindustan Lever, is one big corporation which cannot be faulted for being a laggard in exports. While other corporate heavyweights have recently been getting into the act by setting up separate export or trading houses, the soaps and detergents giant already owns nine units producing exclusively for overseas markets. This year's export turnover is expected to exceed Rs 104 crore. Lever has also taken over or leased small, sick enterprises to push exports. The Government recently cleared Lever's bid to take on lease for five years the foodgrains grading and packing unit of the Delhi-based Swadeshi Enterprises which exports basmati rice in small consumer packs. So far, Lever has taken on lease seven garment, castor oil, marine foods and basmati rice units and is considering taking over two more concerns.

WOOING THE RAILWAYS

CROMPTON Greaves Limited is making a concerted attempt to grab a slice of the telecommunications and track renewal businesses farmed out by the Indian Railways. The Rs 320-crore engineering company already produces transformers and switchgear for the railways. It now plans to invest between Rs 50 crore and Rs 60 crore next year on manufacturing solid-state signalling systems, two-way communication equipment—for train guards and station personnel—and shunting locomotives. It also intends revamping existing locomotives and bidding for track renewal contracts. Crompton is busy negotiating with foreign collaborators for transferring technology for these schemes. But there's competition on the tracks. Company sources are expecting tough competition from the state-owned Bharat Heavy Electricals Limited in the area of traction systems and from Siemens India in the area of signalling.

FROM COMPUTERS TO TOURISM

THE Rs 85-crore Madras-based Sterling Computers Limited has been bitten by the diversification bug. Headed by C. Sivasankara (of Siva fame), who scorched the personal computers market, Sterling now has its eyes on new horizons: tourism and real estate. The company has tied up with the public sector ITDC and other hotel chains to market an inexpensive—below US $1,000 (Rs 17,000) per head—package tour for Americans visiting the country. The package includes air fare, hotel and travel expenses and even has a couple of duty-free goodies thrown in. Also on the anvil is a Rs 200-crore residential housing complex in Madras.

MORE MUTUAL FUNDS

INTERNATIONAL merchant bankers are making a bee-line for India. And mutual funds is the new name of the game. The latest entrant is Citibank India which will launch a seven-year, $25 million-odd (Rs 42 crore) mutual fund for NRIs from the Channel Island of Jersey early next year. Bank sources say the entire amount will be invested in a year, much of it in equities of new companies. Five funds are already in the fray—two floated by Unit Trust with Merrill Lynch and one each by State Bank/Morgan Stanley, Cifco/Hill Samuel and ANZ Grindlays. Two funds have been announced by the S.K. Modi group with Jardine Fleming and by Canara Bank with Bank Indo Suez. Ashok Birla's Zenith Limited is waiting in the wings with two more. Clearly, Indian capital markets have become happy hunting grounds for global fund managers.

CAPITAL ILLUSION

THERE'S been an impression that industrial growth in the last three years had been spurred by imports of capital goods—machinery and plant equipment. But official statistics prove that this is not really the case. A recent Industry Ministry study indicates that imports of capital goods haven't risen. On the contrary, they've slowed down. But you have to look closely to see that. In terms of the fast-depreciating rupee, the value of imports do show an overall rise over the past three years (see chart). But convert the figures into US dollars and a different picture emerges. Capital goods imports have come down steadily from $4.8 billion (Rs 6,279 crore) in 1986-87 to $4.4 billion (Rs 6,136 crore) in 1987-88 and $4.3 billion (Rs 6,713 crore) the year after.

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

THE ISRAELI CONNECTION

INDIA is not supposed to be having formal economic relations with Israel. But it is common knowledge that the burgeoning diamond-polishing industry in the country is dependent a great deal on Israeli firms and their associates based in Europe for the supply of rough diamonds as well as for the marketing of finished gems. The extent of the quasi-legal trade between the two countries was recently documented in a journal of the Israel-Asia Chamber of Commerce. According to the publication, Israel's exports to India jumped by 82 per cent between 1987 and 1988—touching as much as $123 million (Rs 197 crore)—while imports from India more than doubled—from just $40 million (Rs 60 crore) to $86 million (Rs 138 crore) in the same period. And around 95 per cent of this business is in diamonds. But what is interesting is that the chamber expects India to become a "promising market" for a variety of Israeli equipment in the fields of electronics, communication, medicine and agriculture. That's called long-term planning.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ECONOMIC POLICY

Leaning to the Left

New government inherits serious economic problems

IS the Government broke? In his first address to the nation, Prime Minister V.P. Singh talked of the Rajiv government having left behind an empty treasury. It sounded dramatic. But there was an obvious element of exaggeration. Even Finance Minister Madhu Dandavate conceded that. The economy is not exactly bankrupt. But there are problems galore.

It is not that the previous government's economic policies were uniformly disastrous. On the positive side, liberalisation ushered in competition in many areas of industry. Sectors such as electronics, telecommunications and petrochemicals were modernised; the licensing red tape was considerably loosened; the capital market grew manifold; sales of consumer goods shot up; and foreign capital flowed more freely into the country.

A few days after V.P. Singh talked of the Government's coffers being empty, in North Block, some international bankers were falling over one another and a Finance Ministry bureaucrat, each wanting to loan to India on finer terms.

On the flip side of the coin are the problems of unemployment, inflation, industrial sickness and inequality. Agricultural production is comfortable because of successive good monsoons. But the situation might change with one drought year since rural investment has slowed down. Even economic advisers of the previous government, like Planning Commission member Raja Chelliah, admit: "We have to give up our preoccupation with industry and concentrate on agriculture."

The top priority of the new Government is to contain prices. Till the first week of December, the wholesale price index was obliging. Next comes the need to reduce budget deficits. The bias will be towards employment generation.

The country's foreign exchange reserves are barely equal to six weeks' imports—as they've been for most of this year. Last year, they were equal to two months' imports and the year before, to three months'. Hard currency will be used to import items like sugar, foodgrains and edible oils should shortages arise.

The levels of internal as well as external debt have touched new heights. The trade deficit has widened despite impressive export growth. Savings rates are stagnant and the public sector shows no signs of picking up despite a creditable performance by infrastructure industries. After four good years which saw industrial production rising each year by more than 8 per cent, large segments of the manufacturing sector have been moving slowly this year (see box). And imports of machinery are down. Says a government economist: "A reduction in imports of capital goods will bring down industrial growth which will affect employment."

It is evident that the new Government has few soft options. For instance, how can it beef up foreign exchange reserves? In the short run, exports of agricultural

ECONOMIC AGENDA OF THE GOVERNMENT

PROBLEMS	OPTIONS
▲ Rising prices of essentials	◄ Use scarce foreign exchange to import sugar, edible oils and foodgrains when world prices are low. Closer monitoring of supplies of tea, kerosene and other items of mass use.
 ▲ Rising unemployment	◄ More investible resources for rural development. Emphasise handlooms. Reservation of production among cottage, small scale and large units. Push labour-intensive technologies.
▲ Foreign exchange crunch	◄ Curb imports of "luxury" goods, including consumer electronic items and automobile components. Step up agricultural exports. Review projects involving hard currency outflow.

PROBLEMS	OPTIONS
▲ High internal debt	◄ Reduce budget deficits by promoting austerity, curbing defence expenditure and government spending on internal security.
▲ Curbing black money growth	◄ Try and prevent government organs, including financial institutions, from becoming instruments of patronage. Step up action against economic offenders without being vindictive.
 ▲ Toning up the public sector	◄ Provide greater autonomy but also have higher accountability. Professionalise the top management and depend less on bureaucrats.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

commodities can be stepped up marginally but then, domestic prices of these items might shoot up.

It is evident that the new Government will try and push exports by large industrial groups. Says Industry Minister Ajit Singh: "Big business houses have received many benefits but unlike small units they have not stepped up exports. If they (large houses) can't fulfil their export commitments, we won't grant them new licences and allow them to expand."

As far as curtailing imports go, the Government's hands are tied. Over 80 per cent of the country's imports—among them, petroleum products and components for imported equipment—can't be reduced without adversely affecting economic growth. So, imports of so-called luxury goods will have to be curbed by imposing high duties. Even Congress sympathisers now admit that unnecessary imports took place. Says S.B. Chavan, former finance minister: "The policies of trade liberalisation have been misutilised and foreign exchange wasted on imports of consumer goods."

THE new Government's attitude towards imports implies that consumer electronics with a high import-content will become more expensive as will the proposed Maruti 1000 car and computers. Despite having spent 17 years marketing computers in the US, Ajit Singh says that given the paucity of jobs, computerisation will have to be "very selective".

The hard currency crunch may also bring about a shift in the approach to foreign investment. Emphasises Dandavate: "As far as possible we will not encourage foreign collaboration."

"Pepsi will be a test case," remarks a western diplomat. Says Food Processing Minister Sharad Yadav: "We will review the policy towards Pepsi." He adds that the Food Processing Ministry won't lay stress on potato chip ventures and "food for the elite". Instead, an ambitious scheme to provide nutritious food to pregnant women is being worked out. Clearly, the stress is on popular programmes.

In the interests of increasing employment opportunities, the industrial policy

AJIT SINGH

"We are all for liberalisation"

HE looks a decade younger than his 50 years. The 17 years he spent in the US hawking computers have left no trace of a Yankee accent. Ajit Singh, the kisan leader, now Union industry minister, decided to settle down in India in 1987, when his father Chaudhary Charan Singh was ailing.

After his father's death in May 1987, he took over his mantle in the Lok Dal. The party then suffered a split and after the Lok Dal(A) was merged with the Janata Party in May 1988, Ajit Singh replaced Chandra Shekhar as the party's president. He became secretary-general of the Janata Dal when it was formed in October last year. Singh outlined his views on the Indian economy to PARANJOY GUHA THAKURTA and SURAJEET DAS GUPTA. Excerpts:

SHARAD SAXENA

Q. What will be your priorities as industry minister?

A. The rate of growth of industry has to go up. We will continue with liberalisation, but will lay greater emphasis on small and cottage industries.

Q. How will you strengthen MRTP and FERA laws?

A. We are for liberalisation. In fact, V.P. Singh as finance minister was largely responsible for it. Liberalisation does not mean concentration of economic power. But, under the past government's policies, that is what happened. Which is why anti-monopoly legislation is needed. Big business houses have availed of so many incentives, yet have not been able to meet their export obligations. We will not allow this to continue. If they can't fulfil their commitments, we won't grant them new licences. As for FERA, we will encourage investment from abroad, but in the right sectors. In the last few years, there has been a lot of investment in low priority, low technology areas. We want to disperse technology and decentralise its impact.

Q. What are your prescriptions for the Indian computer industry?

A. In computerisation, India's strength lies in her people. We have people who are very good at programming and software development. I'm in favour of computerisation in airline and railway reservation. However, here unemployment is a pressing problem, so the spread of computerisation must be very selective.

Q. How will you tackle the problems of the public sector?

A. I think the problem is basically managerial. Also it should be made to face greater competition.

Q. How strictly will you enforce the policy of reservation of production for the small scale sector?

A. My view is that such reservation is needed. If the Government can provide protection to large industrial houses against international competition, then it can surely protect small units from large ones.

Q. What is your opinion of Maruti Udyog, particularly its new car project?

A. I am not very clear on the extent of drain of foreign exchange involved in the new car project. I am also not certain about Maruti's claims of indigenisation. What often goes by the name of PMP (phased manufacturing programme) ends up becoming screwdriver technology, and then label-replacing technology. Personally, I don't think the Government's scarce resources should have been invested in such a venture in the first place. The Rs 500 crore of public money invested in Maruti should have been spent on improving the public transport system.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

too will undergo changes. Production of certain items will be strictly reserved for the small and cottage sectors. "We do not want large industry to encroach on the territory reserved for the small," says Dandavate. Which is not exactly good news for big corporations and multinationals engaged in the manufacture of consumer products like soaps and toothpaste. Yet, Dandavate and Ajit Singh assert that the process of liberalisation won't be reversed. Only the Government's economic priorities will be re-ordered, they insist.

As far as possible we will not encourage foreign collaboration. Only if it is a must, not otherwise.

MADHU DANDAVATE

Thus, to increase jobs in the handloom sector, the textile policy is expected to be recast, says Yadav. Adds Magsaysay Award winner L.C. Jain, who is tipped to become a member of the Planning Commission: "In the last five years, some 18 lakh handloom workers have lost their means of livelihood while the man-made fibres industry has gained to the tune of over Rs 1,000 crore—this has to change."

Winds of change will also blow through the Planning Commission. "In the recent past, Yojana Bhawan has been reduced to a rubber stamp for granting approval to the idiosyncratic wishes of the former prime minister," says Ramakrishna Hegde, former Karnataka chief minister who has now taken over as deputy chairman of the Planning Commission with the rank of a cabinet minister.

For the time being at least, one thing seems apparent: in the annual plan for the next fiscal year, the first of the eighth five year plan, the emphasis will be less on growth as it has been until now, and more on distribution, self-reliance and appropriate technology. "The growth rate of the economy is not so important as planners sometimes make it out to be," says B.S. Minhas, professor at the Indian Statistical Institute. "We have to forget the fetish about a bigger plan being a better plan."

Besides spending more on rural

INDUSTRY

Losing Pace

THE four-year honeymoon is over and Indian industry is slowing down. Production in key sectors like steel, cement, fertilisers, capital goods, sugar and mill-made cloth has decelerated. Says Montek Singh Ahluwalia, economic adviser in the Rajiv government: "The industrial growth rate will be about 6 per cent this year against the projection of 8 per cent." He feels the hike in import duties on capital goods two years ago has had its effect on investment this year.

Industry Ministry sources, meanwhile, point out that the demand for consumer goods is flattening out due to diversion of savings to mega-issues of company stock. Television sales were down 20 per cent, light commercial vehicles by 8.4 per cent in the first half of the financial year. Also:

- Overall industrial growth in the April-August period was only 3.8 per cent this year against 9.4 per cent last year.
- Non-food credit grew by 3.3 per cent between April and June this year compared to 4.5 per cent in 1988.
- Excise revenues till end-October were 2.5 per cent below budget estimates.

So what's the crux of the problem? Explains S.M. Chakravarty, secretary-general, Cement Manufacturers Association: "The Government picked up two million tonnes less of cement than what it was supposed to between April and September." A spokesman for the Confederation of Engineering Industry adds: "Manufacturers of road-building and mining machinery are dependent on government orders which have not materialised." The Government is trying to control the growing budget deficit by curbing developmental expenditure.

Many are questioning the Rajiv government's euphoria about the "record" growth of the manufacturing sector. "Much of the growth between 1985 and 1988 was illusory," argues J.D. Sethi, former Planning Commission member. He claims that, in fact, hidden capacities were legalised in the name of liberalisation, leading to a sudden spurt in industrial growth rates.

Will the slow-down result in recession? Most economists seem to be confident it will not.

—SURAJEET DAS GUPTA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Over 80 beautiful ways to bury an old, worn out floor.

Spartek floor tiles. The re-flooring option that gives you a choice of over 80 elegant designs and colours.

Also, they are more economical than marble. And much more convenient than out-dated mosaic.

Being lighter, Spartek tiles can be laid over your existing floor. And will be ready to walk on in just 72 hours.

What is more, Spartek floors are resistant to fire, acid and stains.

So, don't settle for anything less. Re-floor with Spartek.

SPARTEK
Ceramics India Limited
52 Chamiers Road, Madras 600 028.

Don't just replace your old floor. Spartek it.

Sparteking your floors? Contact any of the following regional offices or your nearest Spartek dealer.

Madras : 52, Chamiers Road, PIN : 600028. Tel : 455473/456495/452780 Bangalore : 22, 1st Floor, SNS Plaza, 41, Kumarakripa Road, PIN : 560001 Bombay : No. 205, B Wing, Dalamal Towers, Nariman Point, PIN : 400021 Tel : 287372 Delhi : 207 Prakash Deep Building, 7, Tolstoy Marg, PIN : 110001. Tel : 3319433

CC-0. In Public Domain. Digitized by Sarayu Trust. https://jcbprint.org/

Digitized by Sarayu Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"I thought our computing needs were too diverse and sophisticated for PCL."

Santosh Pande
General Manager, The Triveni Group.

aj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"Bigger is better, they always say. And for someone working with The Triveni Group that's not hard to believe. With interests ranging from sugar manufacturing, project engineering and power generating equipment to pollution control, oil and gas, we have today an enviable standing in the core sector.

And naturally such a big company with such diverse activities should opt for the biggest computer company, right? Wrong. That's what I discovered when PCL talked their way into our office. And into our hearts.

Not that it was smooth sailing all the way. Initially there were a couple of problems on delivery deadlines. And service. Not surprising, considering the range of our requirements. But what really floored us was their approach and their attitude. They were willing to listen. To discuss. To understand our problems. And their service was personalised then as it is now.

And in no time at all, our diverse computing requirements were provided for. From simple data base applications and word processing, to complex project planning, communication, inventory control and material handling systems. Supported by a service team that's probably the quickest on the uptake. Not just at the head office. But at all our branch offices too.

Today I'm happy to say PCL's range of computer systems is in operation in almost every facet of the company's activities.

And PCL's professional attitude towards the upkeep of these systems has given us no ground for complaint.

PCL may not be the biggest computer company in operation today.

But then, contrary to popular opinion, bigger is not always better!"

PCL

India's fastest growing computer company.

Pertech Computers Ltd.

Corporate Office : F-46/10, Okhla Phase-II, New Delhi-110 020.
Tel : 6847687, 6841864, 6846472, 6837379, 6832307. Telex : 031-75163 PCL IN.
Fax : 6841860.

n. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

everest/d89/PCL/256

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"National sets the trend in audio and video enjoyment...again!"

Mithun Chakraborty

RX-CW55F

TC-AV33XR

NV-MS50E

NV-L18EN

"National is famous for creating new trends in audio and video products. Now they've done it again with an exciting new line-up of TVs, videos and portable stereos that will make you glad you waited to buy National. From Super VHS movie cameras that make video movie making so pretty they nearly rival professional level equipment... to large-screen TVs that incorporate National's Dome Sound System, providing cinema-like listening as well as viewing right in your own home. From "soft" design video cassette recorders that permit NTSC (as well as PAL) playback on PAL-format TVs...to portable stereo double cassette component system that overcome the inherent size disadvantages of conventional portable stereo with the Extra Bass System. Yes, National has done it again. They've set the trend in audio and video enjoyment."

A Note About NTSC Playback:
The playback picture will shrink vertically, and black bars will appear both on the top and bottom of the screen. This is not an indication of a malfunction.
And the playback picture may roll up or down, adjust it with the V-HOLD control on the TV.

RX-CW55F

Portable Stereo Double Cassette Component System

- "XBS"-Extra Bass System
- AFD (Acoustic Flat Diaphragm) Woofers
- 60 Watt PMPO Output Power
- 4-Band FM/MW/SW1/SW2 Radio
- 5-Band Graphic Equalizer
- Double Auto-Reverse
- Digital Clock/Timer

Panasonic NV-MS50E S VHS C 625 VHS PAL

Compact Super VHS Movie Camera

- Super VHS High Quality Picture
- Hi-Fi Stereo Sound System
- Improved Piezo Auto Focus
- AV-9-Head System with Amorphous Pro Heads
- Compact and Lightweight: Only 1.4 Kg

NEW TREND

TC-AV33XR αArt DOME sound system

Type 33 (84 cm) World 17 Multi System Colour TV

- Astonishingly Realistic Dome Sound System
- Built-In 10W × 10W Stereo Amplifier
- 600-Line Horizontal Resolution
- TV/Video Dual Remote Control
- S-Video In Terminal
- Video/Audio In and Out Terminals
- 30-Position Auto Tuning

NV-L18EN VHS PAL

VHS Video Cassette Recorder

- Digital Multi-Screen Functions
- NTSC Playback on PAL TV
- Digital Programme Controller
- Variable Double Super Fine Slow (1/5-1/25)
- 8-Hour Recording and Playback (LP Mode)
- Digital Intro Scan
- "Soft" Design

NEW TREND

National

National

• For Information Only.

National Authorized Service Centres in India

Bombay: Esquire Service Centre Tel: 234226/230311 4131857/4133470 533506
Associated Electrical Agencies Tel: 4930074/4930075
Indus Air conditioning Pvt. Ltd. (For home appliances only) Tel: 4223729/4223737
Madras: Associated Electrical Agencies Tel: 478559
Esquire Service Centre Tel: 479507
Bangalore: Associated Electrical Agencies Tel: 220275/225577
New Delhi: Positive Commercial Co., Ltd. Tel: 262179/268964
Esquire Service Centre Tel: 697285/611327
Calcutta: Esquire Service Centre Tel: 440840
Trivandrum: Master Electronics Co., Pvt. Ltd. (For audio/video products only) Tel: 64262
Cochin: Master Electronics Co., Pvt. Ltd. (For audio/video products only) Tel: 361788

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

development and employment generation schemes, another crucial element of the Government's game-plan is a tougher stance against big business. Which is in line with what the Left wants. Says CPI(M) leader Prakash Karat: "The previous government only helped the corporate sector. Now we want curbs on large industrialists." Adds Dandavate: "The Government and the financial institutions will not become instruments of patronage to favour a few business groups. We have to cleanse these institutions of extraneous elements of political patronage."

Garibi hatao is again in vogue. But much of the socialist rhetoric of the new rulers is meant for the gallery. Even the Rajiv government's economic policies had taken an apparent turn to the left towards the end of his tenure as he tried to correct his pro-rich image by announcing a plethora of populist programmes like the Jawahar Rozgar Yojana. The tilt to the left is likely to become more pronounced in the weeks ahead, at least in public pronouncements if not in practice.

—PARANJOY GUHA THAKURTA
with SURAJEET DAS GUPTA

REACTIONS

Guarded Relief

SCENE one: December 1984. The Congress(I) wins a record 401 seats in the Lok Sabha. Rajiv Gandhi promises a brave new world of reform for industry. It is the best of times. Expectations among businessmen soar skywards with share prices.

Scene two: December 1989. A minority government is at the helm of affairs. The private sector's bete noire, and Rajiv's first finance minister, V.P. Singh is the new prime minister. The great expectations of 1984 have vanished. The business community is cautious and wary, reading between the lines to decipher the new economic policies.

And hard questions are now being asked. Will Singh display his old puritanical zeal and again start raids against big business houses? Will Rajiv's policies of liberalisation be drastically diluted, if not junked altogether? The mood in industry is certainly far from upbeat. But at the same time there are no signs of despair either. Says Keshub Mahindra, chairman of Mahindra & Mahindra: "The voters have given the message that they want to be governed not ruled. I welcome an open government and publicly so."

By last fortnight, however, even the diehard Congress(I) supporters among businessmen had done their somersaults. They had issued mandatory statements welcoming the new Government. But for a while, there was fear as they thought that all had been lost, that George Fernandes would be made industry minister. Says the chief executive of a foreign bank cautiously: "We told our head office to keep all prospective collaborators on hold."

But when the ministerial portfolios were finally announced, industrialists heaved large sighs of relief. The managing director of a computer company gives his positive evaluation of the new lot heading the economic ministries: "Madhu Dandavate is upright, Arun Nehru is another good choice as he understands the needs of business and Ajit Singh with his American degree is on our wavelength. It's a perfect team to do business with."

Not surprisingly, all businessmen want an "atmosphere of trust" and "more liberalisation". Says K.K. Nohria, managing director, Crompton Greaves: "Liberalisation was a halting effort. We sincerely hope the new Government will take all decisions quickly and stop tinkering with problems."

The voters' message is they want to be governed, not ruled. I welcome an open government.

KESHUB MAHINDRA
Chairman, Mahindra & Mahindra

Still, the Janata Dal manifesto does not exactly inspire confidence in industry. The emphasis on agriculture, it is felt, may result in a squeeze on investible resources for industry. Viren Shah, who is chairman of Mukand Iron, president of the Associated Chambers of Commerce and Industry and an active member of the BJP, summed up the contents of the manifestos of various parties before the elections: "They have been written by people who have not created a single paisa of wealth either in agriculture or industry."

But manifestos are not taken seriously and business is more concerned about the signals being sent out and these, by and large, are conciliatory. The consensus seems to be that the new Government has some unpleasant choices. With the soaring trade and budget deficits, the Government has little flexibility. There is a limit to cutting essential and maintenance imports.

The export target for 1989-90 is Rs 40,000 crore. We may expect a trade surplus by 1992.

RAMU DEORA
Chairman, Federation of Indian Export Organisations

Thus, exports have to continue to rise. Says Ramu Deora, chairman of the Federation of Indian Export Organisations: "The export target for 1989-90 is Rs 40,000 crore and at the rate we have been going, we may expect a trade surplus by 1992."

That's a long way off. With two uneasy coalition partners and dissidents within his party to contend with, V.P. Singh's Government is today walking a tightrope. Expectations of businessmen are subdued. They are waiting to be proved wrong.

—S.N. VASUKI

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

LARSEN & TOUBRO

Full Circle

The Ambanis face problems

THE wheel has turned full circle. A year ago, Dhirubhai Ambani was calling the shots at Larsen & Toubro (L&T), the private sector engineering behemoth. The Ambanis then seemed invincible. They had marshalled a 12-per cent stake in the Rs 1,100 crore (1989 sales) company and got two seats on the board, courtesy the financial institutions. The acquisition pitchforked Reliance among the top three business houses in the country. There seemed little reason to doubt that L&T was well and truly in the Ambanis' bag.

Last fortnight though, with a new government at the Centre, a big question mark loomed over the acquisition. Suddenly, the financial institutions—Unit Trust of India (UTI), Life Insurance Corporation (LIC) and the General Insurance Corporation (GIC)—which together hold around 39 per cent of L&T's equity, wanted greater representation on the board of directors. The same demand was voiced by the Industrial Development Bank of India (IDBI) and the Industrial Credit and Investment Corporation of India (ICICI), which have lent money to the company. For corporate observers, the implications of the financial institutions' move were clear: pressure was building on the Ambanis. L&T, it appeared, could be prised out of their grip.

The Ambanis had to face other jolts too. Y.H. Malegam, a partner in S.B. Billimoria & Co, the highly reputed firm of chartered accountants, resigned from L&T's board of directors. Malegam was not available for comment and company officials too declined to speak, saying they would prefer Chairman Dhirubhai Ambani to comment on the issue.

There were also reports that top managers within the company were unhappy with the Ambanis' style of functioning. Last fortnight, there were several changes at the top. B.G.N. Patel who had quit the company to join Reliance for a brief stint, returned as vice-president (finance). Company Secretary Rajadhyaksha and General Manager (Finance) S.N. Shah resigned recently. N. Sethuraman, company secretary at Reliance, is slated to replace Rajadhyaksha. There were also rumours that Managing Director and Chief Executive Officer U. Vasudeva Rao was on his way out though L&T officials deny it. Finally, C.R. Ramakrishnan, who had reached retirement age recently, was appointed joint managing director with a two-year extension. At least some of the appointments seemed to be an effort to soothe ruffled feathers. Said a highly placed company official: "We will run out of designations soon. Any executive who is unhappy has been promoted."

On December 19, the Ambanis were scheduled to face another test—the final Supreme Court hearing of the public interest petition filed by Bombay advocate Harish Jagtiani and chartered accountant S. Mazumdar against L&T and the financial institutions. Until now, the financial institutions and L&T were on the same side. But with the change of government, the financial institutions could change their stance in court.

Certainly, their demand for increased representation in L&T pointed to that. Currently, there are 18 members on the company's board of directors. The financial institutions have three nominees. The Ambanis have four: Dhirubhai, his sons Mukesh and Anil, and solicitor M.L. Bhakta. Several whole-time directors too are believed to be close to the Ambanis.

But the balance could change. The institutions' 39 per cent stake (which will reduce to 29 per cent because they haven't subscribed to the recent mega debenture issue) is far larger than the Ambanis' holding. A spokesman for the institutions says that under existing guidelines, they can ask for proportional representation on the board. As a senior manager of a leading institution explained: "Usually the lending institutions—IDBI, ICICI and the Industrial Finance Corporation of India—and the investment institutions—UTI, LIC and GIC—appoint one nominee each. But depending on our stake, we are free to appoint more people. Everything is done on a case-by-case basis." So the institutions' current strength of three could go up to nine.

The institutions hold all the cards. How they are to be played will be decided by the Government. In the process, it will signal which way the wind is blowing for the Ambanis.

—S.N. VASUKI

Rao, Dhirubhai and Mukesh at L&T meeting

With the financial institutions demanding a greater representation on the L&T board, the Ambanis' grip on the company no longer seems so sure.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

HOW LONG CAN A HAPPY MARRIAGE STAY HAPPY WITHOUT THE RIGHT CONTRACEPTIVE ?

KOHINOOR

PINK LUXURY CONDOMS

It was love that brought you together. The kind of love that deepens and grows with marriage and shared responsibilities. To keep a marriage as happy as the day it began, you need two people who bring to it confidence, trust and intimacy. Two people who care enough for one another to find a contraceptive method that suits them both.

A method that affords you all the pleasure and protection without unpleasant side effects, messy clinical examinations or the worry and tension of counting days and monitoring temperature. A method as simple, sure and safe as the condom.

Kohinoor Confidence

Millions of young couples plan their families and space their children with Kohinoor confidence. Kohinoor gives you the near natural feeling of total pleasure without interfering with the closeness you share. It's made of the finest latex and electronically tested to make it completely safe. By people who understand your need for privacy and protection. Ask for it by name. Kohinoor. And share the Kohinoor confidence.

Available in packs of tens and threes.

Plan your family with Kohinoor confidence

A Product

MAA COMMUNICATIONS 915B

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

A German passion

Now in India

Introducing

europa

Unmatched quality
Well-matched style

Bhor also manufactures polyurethane leather for shoe uppers, shoe lining, bags, garments, brief-cases and sandals.

Contact us for more information.

Regional Offices:
Calcutta: 10/A, Ho Chi Minh Sarani, Calcutta-700 071. Phone: 449194
New Delhi: 4/24-A, Asaf Ali Road, New Delhi-110 002. Phone: 3269813/3271563
Madras: 1st Floor, Ambal Building, 727 Pathare Road, Off Mount Road, Madras 600 006. Phone: 863558.

Authorised Dealers: Bombay Leather Cloth Depot, Shop No. 1 & 2, Kanea Yacub Trust Building, 125/127, Ebrahim Rahimatulla Rd., Bombay-400 003. Ph.: 864244/8723625 ■ Nitesh Sales Corporation, 88/90, Ebrahim Rahimatulla Rd., Bombay-400 003. Ph.: 869659 ■ A K Zainuddin & Company, 140/142, Ebrahim Rahimatulla Rd., Bombay-400 003. Ph.: 863061/865936/864820 ■ East India Trading Corpn., 418, Sardar Patel Rd., Bombay-400 004. Ph.: 358075/364609 ■ Bhor Industries Ltd., Queenie Retail Shop, 11, Giri Kunj, N.S. Patkar Marg, Next to Sah & Sanghi, Bombay-400 007. Ph.: 8227011 ■ Foam Palace, Mohamad Shaffi Bui Kaggi Next to Ghosh Studio, Bandra (West), Bombay-400 050. Ph.: 6428146/6409916 ■ Mody Marketing Corporation, 130/2, Ulsoor Rd., Bangalore-560 042. Ph.: 577981/575581 ■ Sujay Enterprises, 33/1, BVK Iyengar Rd., Bangalore-560 053. Ph.: 72989. ■ M/s.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Bhaffulal Kaggi Collection Khosla Studio

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

- A classic PU leather upholstery material. Made by Bhor, in technical collaboration with Konrad Hornschuch of Germany.
- In ten subtle shades to match your style.
- High resilience allows easy pleating, shaping and ridging.
- Moisture absorbent property makes for better comfort.
- Doesn't stain, crease or peel.
- Affordable price.

2 year guarantee

BHOR europa

Manufactured by BHOR

r Industries Limited, 392 Veer Savarkar Marg, Bombay 400 025. Phone 430 2241

erdecor Pvt. Ltd., 1/1, Vansittart Row, 2nd floor, Calcutta-700 001. Ph.: 28-0672/28-3250/28-6149 ■ M/s. Bombay Leather Cloth Depot, Shop No. D-4/6, Bagree Market, 71, B.R.B. Basu Road ing St.), Calcutta-700 001. Ph.: 25-6924 ■ TRK Dass Agencies, 13/562, Annie Hall Road, Calicut-673 002. Ph.: 65537 ■ M/s. S B S Motors, 609, Sector 18B, Chandigarh. Ph.: 42499. ■ TRK Agencies, 38/1729, Puthokaran Building, Chittoor Road, Kacheripady, Ernakulam, Cochin-682 018. Ph.: 356759 ■ Crescent Enterprises, 719, S.N. Layout Gandhi Puram, Coimbatore-641 Ph.: 44426. ■ Khokhar Enterprises, 15-9-272, Gowliguda Chaman, Hyderabad-500 012. Ph.: 43740/553854. ■ Vishal Plastics, 73, Devaraja Mudali St., Madras-600 003. Ph.: 564075. ■ ent Enterprises, 19, Chunnambukara St., Madurai-625 001. Ph.: 37574. ■ M/s. K K Talwar Fabrics Pvt. Ltd., 2/45, Timber Block, WHF, Kirti Nagar, (Opp. Central Warehouse), New Delhi- 5. Ph.: 5418554 ■ M/s. Polyfab, G-17/3, Rajouri Garden, New Delhi-110 027. Ph.: 529848 ■ M/s. Talwar Fabrics, 71/4, Panchkuin Road, New Delhi-110 001. Ph.: 529899/522185 ■ TRK Dass ies, Court Road, Sultanpet, Palghat-678 001. Ph.: 24282 ■ Bhor Industries Ltd., 401, Ganesh Peth, Laxmi Road, Pune-411 002. Ph.: 26987. ■ TRK Dass Agencies, R.S. Road, Trichur-680 001 4111/22281.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

For people who don't like cluttering up their lives: a VCP with the bare necessities

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

There exist a few people who resist the temptation to clutter up their lives with the unnecessary — the KES 700 is the VCP for them.

Neat, clean lines without any clutter. The only luxuries are the ones you can't do without: auto power-on and play back. And auto rewind, eject and power-off.

Nothing more. Nothing less. Just right.

KES-700 — India's Largest Selling VCP

KRISONS

STAR PERFORMANCE GUARANTEED

Contract 215.77

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

EUROPE 1992

More Opportunity, Greater Risks

India gears up for an integrated Europe

IT'S chilly in Brussels. The winter winds swirl through the broad boulevards, ruffling tree tops and tossing up leaves. Inside the black-stone multi-storeyed building in the heart of the city, however, the heat is on. Officials at the Commission of the European Communities, the administrative arm of the 12-nation Common Market, frequently go into a huddle and furiously prepare papers on one of the most momentous events on the horizon—Europe 1992, the move to integrate Europe into a single economy.

In India, the move's significance is just dawning on businessmen. Last month, a group of castings manufacturers stopped over in Europe to investigate. Earlier, a Punjab, Haryana, Delhi (PHD) Chamber of Commerce delegation visited five European nations. Says Binay Kumar, chairman of the PHD Chamber's foreign trade committee and a delegation member: "The European Economic Community (EEC) is India's largest market, accounting for 25 per cent of our exports. We can't ignore it."

Several firms too are eyeing Europe:

► The Tatas are thinking of investing in Portugal. Among the possibilities being explored: opening upmarket hotels in Lisbon and Porto; a software development centre in London to be set up with Portuguese firms; importing uppers from India to turn into shoes in Portugal; and putting up a forgings and castings unit and an automobile components plant with Portuguese partners.

► Using the UK as a spring board, Pune-based boiler and pollution control equipment manufacturer Thermax Ltd is planning a big putsch into Europe. The Rs 180-crore (15 months' sales) company is negotiating to buy into an undisclosed UK enterprise. Says Chairman Rohinton D. Aga: "We have joined hands with a small but dynamic organisation in the UK to market our products there and later on in other west European countries." Thermax will supply parts to its British partner, which will then buy other parts locally and assemble and hawk a range of Thermax wares.

► Bharat Forge, also based in Pune, is planning to buy a company in Europe. "Yes, we are looking at the possibility," confirms Neelkanth A. Kalyani, chairman of the Rs 234-crore (15 months' sales) company. Bharat Forge has invested about Rs 80 crore to modernise its forgings plant in Pune in a bid to export to a more quality conscious Europe.

Four electrical product manufacturers, including Crompton Greaves, are cobbling together a consortium that will have the financial and marketing clout to sell to the European Market. And the garment industry is readying to improve designs and cut costs by inviting designers from abroad and by pushing for greater mechanisation. Europe accounted for 43 per cent of the industry's total exports of Rs 2,563 crore between January and October 1989.

So why is every other businessman suddenly casting an eye on the European market? Quite simply, because Europe 1992 will throw up tremendous business opportunities.

The European unification programme explains why. Set up by the Treaty of Rome of 1957, a principal objective of the EEC—also known as the Common Market—was to create a European economy. Sure, the EEC has a common agricultural policy and a common currency unit. But separate national markets continue to exist, with varying national technical specifications and standards. For example, tractors must have two seats in West Germany but only one in France. So France finds it difficult to sell tractors to West Germany.

With production largely confined to national markets, European companies don't enjoy economies of scale and can't compete on world markets. As a result, the EEC's gross domestic product has chugged along rather slowly. A European Commission study concluded last year that by encouraging competition and economies of scale, an integrated market would save over Rs 3,300 billion in costs and pare consumer prices by about 6 per cent.

Market integration and competition are to be brought about in several ways. Among other things, expenditure on

Cartoon by AJIT NINAN

A bevy of Indian firms is flocking to explore export prospects and joint business ventures in Europe.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

research and development is to be pooled; radio and television programmes won't be limited to national boundaries; above all, money, goods and services will be permitted to flow freely throughout the EEC. So European companies will be allowed to set up shop anywhere in the EEC.

To be sure, some glitches can be expected. It may, for instance, take years before the EEC arrives at common technical standards for telecommunication equipment. But as a confidential report on Europe 1992 by Indian ambassadors to five European countries points out: "The European Community is well on the way to becoming a fully integrated single market by end-1992."

Apart from triggering off a wave of mergers in Europe, the coming competition has prompted concerns to look for business overseas. In Paris, Banque Indo-Suez First Vice-President Yves Munich said his bank had been talking to Indian financial institutions about floating an offshore mutual fund. Added Bernard de Montgolfier, executive vice-president of France's JS Telecom, which has tie-ups with Escorts and Blue Star: "We have to have a strategy in the fast developing Asian countries."

As European companies gear up to meet the demands of a market that cuts across frontiers, some Indian companies believe that large orders can pour in from Europe. Some analysts, however, believe that European businessmen will prefer to look towards the changing East Bloc. But some large orders for garments could be placed on India. Garment exports are limited by quotas for each EEC state, negotiated at the European Commission level. What will happen after 1992 is still not clear because the Multi-Fibre Agreement—which governs trade in textiles—comes up for renewal in 1991. But it's likely that India will be able to shift its quotas for some countries (Portugal, Spain) which are largely unutilised to other EEC states.

Indian businessmen are also convinced that they'll either have to set up shop in Europe or buy into European enterprises. One reason: even a small customs levy can price out foreign goods in Europe's competitive market. Others want to preempt protectionist tendencies. Argues Bharat Forge's Kalyani: "A physical presence in Europe will be essential after 1992, as I am sure there will be trade barricades."

Increased European protectionism is the big fear. At the Indian Embassy in Brussels, Ambassador G.V. Ramakrishna warns: "A lot of European industry is sensitive to imports. Let alone growing, even existing imports from India can come to a standstill." The former petroleum secretary cites several recent instances of protectionism. Article 115 of the Treaty of Rome permits EEC countries to ask the European Commission to impose a ban on imports. Last October, Ireland invoked the clause against imports of men's shirts from India. Fears have also been expressed that the new European standards may be stiff, and used to keep Indian products out.

In Europe, however, there's much tut tutting about the protectionism charge. In Paris, French Science and Technology Minister Hubert Curien told visiting Indian journalists: "The idea of a single market is not of constructing a fortress." In Brussels, Marc Pierini, a senior official, added: "The Fortress Europe term was invented in the US. There's nothing in Europe 1992 that implies protectionism."

Curiously, such views are echoed in New Delhi. Commerce Secretary A.N. Verma says: "They can't afford to have protectionist tendencies. If they're big importers, they're also big exporters."

Still, Ramakrishna could be right: the climate is protectionist. In granting permission to set up foreign bank branches after 1992, for instance, the EEC will take into account the market access provided to European banks. And in trade negotiations, it has been pushing for the abolition of phased manufacturing programmes and export obligations.

At the local level too, Indian corporations could face problems in investing abroad. The commerce secretary says the Government has taken a policy decision to allow companies to invest overseas if it means higher exports. But what happens if one Indian enterprise floats another one overseas, and this company then launches other companies abroad without bringing funds from India? Will the Government permit this? The Government will also have to decide whether the 30-odd Indian bank branches in Europe should be converted into subsidiaries. These escape the reciprocity clause.

So far, official circles have been slow to react to the challenges of Europe 1992. "Some concrete action is needed. We're still at the talking stage," complains PHD Chamber's Kumar. Fortunately, the Government is expected to formulate a comprehensive policy on the EEC next month. That's late. Too late to miss the European bus?

—PALAKUNNATHU G. MATHAI in Paris and Brussels, with bureau reports

"Let alone growing, even existing imports from India can come to a standstill."

G.V. RAMAKRISHNA
Ambassador to the EEC

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

If European protectionism materialises, India's biggest market might be hurt.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Featured here is part of the Louis Philippe collection in greys.

Louis Philippe. The only shirt with international features:

Exclusive fabric specially designed for Louis Philippe.

Perfect matching of every part for flawless elegance.

Neat, twin-needled sideseams.

French seaming for underarm comfort.

A fused, two-piece collar for a perfect fit.

And buttoned-down sleeve guards to prevent the sleeves from gaping open.

CHAITRA-K MCL 31 G

Louis Philippe
SIGNED DESIGNERWEAR

ALSO FROM THE MAKERS OF LOUIS PHILIPPE, THE Elysée RANGE OF SHIRTS AND TROUSERS.

Louis Philippe and Elysée are designer labels of The British Van Heusen Co., U.K. brought to you by Madura Coats Ltd.

Louis Philippe exclusive Showrooms at: AHMEDABAD: G-7, Amar Chamber, Near Swastik Char Rasta, Navrangpura; BANGALORE: Davidoss Building, Commercial Street; BOMBAY: India House No.2, Kemps Corner; CALCUTTA: 3B, Upper Wood Street; COCHIN: North End, Mr. Okkuda; NEW DELHI: B-43, South Extension I; MADRAS: Rani Seethai Hall, Opp. Anna Flyover.

CC-0. In Public Domain. GBK Kulak Collection, Delhi

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

DO FOR YOUR HOME

INTRODUCING ROYALE

Inspired by the secrets of creation. In a palette of 35 designer shades, created, for the first time, to bring to life the colours of the earth. And the glorious hues of heaven. Give your home the divine splendour of Royale. Supreme luxury acrylic finish. The finest premium among premium emulsions. Perfected on earth by Asian Paints.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

WHAT GOD DID FOR THE EARTH

O&M/5511

ROYALE

THE FINEST WALL FINISH
SINCE CREATION.

asian paints

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ISPAT ALLOYS

The first phase of Rs.132 crore Expansion and Diversification Scheme ALREADY COMMISSIONED

An excellent investment opportunity

THE BOND OF PROGRESS

THE BOND OF TRUST

ISPAT BONDS

Issue of 45,45,454 14% Secured Fully Convertible Debentures of Rs.220 each for cash at par aggregating Rs.100 crores

Debenture Features

- Face Value : Rs.220/- per debenture
- Interest : 14% per annum
- Easy Payment Terms : Rs.55 on application, Rs.55 on allotment and balance Rs.110 on first and final call
- Fully Convertible : Each Debenture comprises of two parts. Part 'A' of Rs.60 and Part 'B' of Rs.160

  Part 'A' will be converted into two equity shares of Rs.10 each at a premium of Rs.20 per equity share at the end of 6 months from the date of allotment

  Part 'B' will be converted into appropriate number of equity shares of a face value of Rs.10 each at a premium as may be decided by CCI between 18 to 24 months from the date of allotment
- High Capital Appreciation : First Conversion at a premium of only Rs.20/- against market price of Rs.70 (as on 15.11.1989 at Calcutta Stock Exchange)
- Fully Secured
- Listing : Calcutta, Bombay and Delhi Stock Exchanges

Ispat Alloys – A close look

- The fastest growing Indian Metal and Ferro Alloy Company – phenomenal increase of over 400% in profits and over 125% in sales in last two years.
- Poised to become India's most versatile Metal and Ferro Alloys Complex
- Entering the highly profitable area of Charge Chrome to utilize country's rich chrome ore deposits – simultaneous implementation of domestic unit and 100% Export Oriented Unit to meet the growing worldwide demand.
- Incorporation of world's finest Chrome Ore Pelletisation and preheating technology from Outokumpu Oy of Finland for substantial energy savings and low operational cost.
- Captive power plant for uninterrupted power supply – first phase already commissioned.
- Thrust towards import substitute products and exports to result in substantial foreign exchange savings and earnings – added marketing advantage through ISPAT's international network.

ISPAT ALLOYS LIMITED
'Park Plaza', 71 Park Street, Calcutta 700 016

Issue opens on 19th December, 1989

Where there's ISPAT, there's PERFORMANCE

PRESSMAN

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

MAFATLALS

Spreading Out

Hectic expansion planned

ON his 66th birthday in October this year, Arvind Mafatlal received a host of congratulatory messages. Indeed, the patriarch of the Rs 1,059-crore Arvind Mafatlal group of companies had much to celebrate. In the decade since he split from brothers Yogindra and Rasesh, he has quadrupled the turnover of the companies in his fold. And most of them are now poised for a spell of dizzy expansion. But the most heart-warming message of all arrived only in the middle of November in the form of government clearance, and the official letter of intent for the expansion and modernisation of the group's flagship petrochemical company, the Rs 482-crore National Organic Chemical Industries Ltd (NOCIL).

The clearance of its naphtha cracker expansion is crucial for NOCIL's survival. Today, the company with its 75,000 tonnes of ethylene per year naphtha cracker at Thane near Bombay, and the public sector Indian Petrochemicals Corporation Ltd. (IPCL) with a 1.3-lakh tonne naphtha cracker in Vadodara are the only players in a sellers' market.

But the situation is in for a dramatic change. IPCL is expanding its Vadodara cracker and building another one at Nagothane in Maharashtra. And the Ambanis' Reliance Industries, Vijay Mallya's UB Group, Rama Prasad Goenka's RPG group and the Gas Authority of India Ltd, among others, are setting up gas and naphtha crackers. All of them will have an ethylene capacity of 3 lakh tonnes a year or more, and so can take advantage of economies of scale. So NOCIL, with its far smaller and therefore uneconomical plant, would have been pushed out of the market.

Now all that has changed. With the increase in the capacity of its naphtha cracker, NOCIL's ethylene production will quadruple from the current 75,000 tonnes to 3,00,000 tonnes. Simultaneously, the company's 28-year-old plant will be modernised and upgraded. The price tag for all this: a staggering Rs 1,800 crore.

Nonetheless, NOCIL's expansion is just one side of the ambitious growth scheme that the Arvind Mafatlal group has on the anvil. The Rs 237-crore Polyolefins Industries Ltd (PIL), manufacturers of chemicals and high density polyethylene (HDPE) used in many plastic products, is planning a Rs 500-crore expansion and diversification programme. The Rs 192-crore Mafatlal Fine Spinning and Manufacturing Company Ltd and the Rs 136-crore Mafatlal Industries Ltd, both of which produce textiles and chemicals, are planning to diversify, within the textile industry and outside. The group is seeking an increased presence in agrochemicals and seeds. It plans to design and eventually manufacture electronic integrated circuits in collaboration with a large US-based manufacturer. Also on the drawing board is a Rs 10-crore venture capital fund—the Indus Venture Fund Management Services Ltd. Finally, the group is launching a major export drive.

Says a confident Arvind Mafatlal: "By the turn of the century, our group of companies will be known world-wide." The move into the fast track is, of course, being led by the NOCIL expansion, cleared despite strong lobbying by environmentalists. But not everyone is as upbeat as Arvind Mafatlal. One industry analyst points out: "From a pioneer in the field, they are now going to be just one among many with their competitive advantage considerably eroded." Vice-Chairman M.S. Patwardhan, however, argues that not all the projects are going to come up at the same time. And he points out: "NOCIL has some inherent advantages over the other projects."

That's true—to some extent. Explains Patwardhan: "We have trained manpower and existing infrastructure. We will be able to execute the project in a much shorter time, and it will be cheaper." An analyst, however, says: "As I see it today, NOCIL's expanded capacity will go on stream just before the Haldia project, which will be the last to come up. The Reliance complex and IPCL's gas cracker will be operational by then."

"By the turn of the century, our group of companies will be known world-wide."
ARVIND MAFATLAL, Chairman

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

But NOCIL has advantages the others don't have. One is its relationship with Royal Dutch Shell Corporation, the multinational petrochemical giant, which owns 33 per cent of NOCIL's equity and is willing to increase this to 40 per cent. Shell's participation in the company's rights issue will cover the entire Rs 400-crore foreign exchange component in the Rs 1,800-crore plan. Says Mafatlal: "When you have international support for a $ 1 billion venture, you are talking about something that goes beyond individuals and companies. It is going to affect the future of the whole country."

In any case, it will affect other companies in the group. PIL's expansion, for instance, is closely dovetailed with NOCIL's. The company intends to raise its HDPE capacity from 50,000 tonnes a year to 1,50,000 tonnes. To do this, it will use 1,50,000 tonnes of ethylene from NOCIL's expanded capacity of 3,00,000 tonnes.

The company also has a series of other expansion plans—to manufacture a whole range of polymers used in

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Commitment to people.

In pursuit of excellence.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Pricol has invested not only in technology and equipment, but has invested even more on its people - to enhance the quality of their lives and performance.

Today, 1800 employees are a part of the Pricol family looking ahead to an era of purposive partnership while fostering individual identity.

From a turnover of Rs. 1 million in 1975 to Rs. 260 million in 1988 for automotive instruments. Present market share of 45% in automotive instruments reflects Pricol's clear lead over the 6 others in the field.

Yes. Pricol has come a long, long way. It is poised for success in the new product lines too.

From Pricol with precision:

- ★ Automotive Instruments
- ★ Electronic Counters and Controls
- ★ Small Machine Tools
- ★ Wind Measuring Instruments
- ★ Electronic TV Tuners
- ★ UPS and SMPS

pricol

Technology At Your Service

Premier Instruments & Controls Limited

Post Box 6331
1087 B/C, Avanashi Road
Coimbatore 641 037, INDIA

Phone : 0422 - 31521 (4 lines)
Cable : PRICOL
Telex : 0855 - 376 PIL IN
Fax : 0422 - 33028

SASI/PRICOL/2/89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

thermoplastics and rubber and to produce 20,000 tonnes of aniline, a raw material for rubber chemicals. The foreign exchange of Rs 100 crore is likely to come from collaborator Hoechst A.G. of West Germany which owns 31 per cent of PIL's equity.

While both NOCIL and PIL are staying close to the knitting, the group's traditional companies—Mafatlal Industries Ltd and Mafatlal Fine Spinning and Manufacturing Co Ltd—headed by Arvind's second son, Hrishikesh, are venturing into virgin territory. Last year, the 34-year-old heir apparent, in partnership with the Gujarat Government and the Hindustan Oil Exploration Corporation, kicked off a Rs 14-crore project to pipe natural gas from the Oil and Natural Gas Commission's fields to consumers in Baruch and Ankleshwar. In the pipeline is a Rs 25-crore project for Surat. And after that? "We have submitted a proposal for Ahmedabad, and after that it could be for the whole of Gujarat," says Hrishikesh.

Since 1984, the two companies have also invested Rs 100 crore with an eye on stepping up exports. The investment has paid off. From Rs 4 crore in 1984, the value of exports will be Rs 75 crore in 1990. The export thrust is not confined to textiles. For instance, before NOCIL got its clearance for expansion, it had committed itself to annual exports of Rs 100 crore on its expanded capacity. Says Patwardhan: "We are on track. This year, we exported Rs 20 crore worth and have scheduled Rs 35 crore by 1994." PIL plans to export Rs 100-crore worth in the next five years.

The exports will come in handy to finance the foreign exchange component of the expansion plans. For rupee funds, the group will rely on rights issues, a public issue of debentures and also draw on its own resources. Says Arvind: "We have a fair idea where the money is going to come from."

Not everyone, of course, shares that confidence. Sceptics point out, for instance, that Mafatlal Fine is going through a cash crunch after it poured money into the recently shut down Mafatlal Engineering, manufacturers of textile machinery. Others say the Mafatlals are lacking in a vital area—an effective lobby in the Government.

Nevertheless, the group has been reporting steadily higher sales and profits. And now, after a steady period of consolidation, all the companies in the Mafatlal covey seem poised for take-off. The engines have long been warming up. The taxiing has begun.

—SHIV TANEJA

FINANCE COMPANIES

Burgeoning Business

Big houses enter the field

ALL at once, the drab world of financing is agog with excitement. Some of the biggest names in Indian industry—among them, the Tatas, the Birlas, the Goenkas, the Mahindras and the Mafatlals—are jostling to set up one-stop shops offering an array of financial products (interest and currency swaps, Euro-dollar loan syndication, leasing and consumer finance) and perhaps even play a role in takeovers.

Deutsche Bank has reportedly taken up a 30-per cent stake in a financial services company being set up along with the three Unilever associates (Hindustan Lever, Ponds and Brooke Bond) in India. The Goenkas are revamping Samudra Leasing, a group company. It will be rechristened Ceat Financial Services Ltd, its share capital base doubled to Rs 2 crore, and its range of financial products radically expanded. The Tatas and American Express Bank have formed a Rs 2.40-crore company, the Tata Industrial Finance Corporation Ltd. In 1986, Standard Chartered Bank bought 28 per cent of the equity of the Murugappa group's Cholamandalam Investment and Finance Co Ltd, with an equity base of Rs 1.60 crore. The Birlas own a financial company, the Rs 1-crore Birla Growth Fund. So do the Ambanis. And Bennett, Coleman and Co Ltd, publishers of The Times of India, is setting up the Times Guaranty Financials Ltd.

The principal target of most of these companies is India's middle class—a market with a potential between Rs 700 crore and Rs 1,200 crore a year.

Others see financial service companies aiming elsewhere. Comments Ram K. Piparaiya, managing director of Aridhi Investment Consultants (P) Ltd: "We are going to witness many more takeovers." The reason: financial service companies can raise up to 10 times their paid-up share capital, so providing big business access to hefty sums of cash.

Right now, only one company could possibly matter in takeover bids—Reliance Credit and Finance Trust, floated by the Ambanis in 1986. It has been sanctioned a share capital of between Rs 100 crore and Rs 125 crore which means it can raise a staggering Rs 1,000 crore.

NAMAS BHOJANI

> "With financial companies able to raise huge sums of money, there are going to be many more takeovers."
>
> RAM K. PIPARAIYA
> Managing Director, Aridhi Investment Consultants

Far smaller are the two private forays into venture capital (which involves buying into new enterprises and unloading the shares later at a profit). Last month, the Rs 10-crore Creditcapital Venture Fund was launched, and the Mafatlals are planning another—the Rs 10-crore Indus Venture Capital Fund.

Will the market support so many players? B.S. Shenoy, general manager (financial services) of Times Guaranty Financials, feels there will be a shakeout: "Many of the small one-product shops will find themselves out of business."

The big boys too could find the going tough. Uday Kotak, managing director, Kotak Mahindra Finance Ltd, a company floated in association with the Mahindras of Mahindra Ugine Steel, points out: "This is a customer-based industry. And big bureaucratic set-ups which do not react fast enough to market moves may find themselves without too many customers."

Right now, companies seem too busy rushing into the field to worry about such eventualities.

—SHIV TANEJA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Industrial establishments

Hotels

Airlines

Railways

Armed Forces

Flight caterers

Ordnance factories

Shipyards

Hospitals

Discover why institutions like these buy quality tea, coffee and spices direct from Brooke Bond's Institutional Business Service

Because buying direct from Brooke Bond's Institutional Business Service ensures competitive prices. And more. One reliable source for all your needs of quality tea, coffee and spices. The widest brand choice in the market with the economy of bulk packs. All with the convenience of doorstep delivery, through a distribution network spread across the country.

So, if you are in the process of tendering for your bulk requirements of tea, coffee and spices, and would like to deal directly with one reliable source, just write to:

P.B. No. 5193, Bangalore-560 001
Tel: 84-2520 (10 lines), 84-2615, 84-2625, 84-2635.
08112-2520 (STD-Whitefield, 10 lines)
Telex: 0845-8506/8518 KORA IN

Yes, I'm interested in
☐ Teas ☐ Coffees ☐ Spices

☐ Call me at (tel. no.).....at the earliest
☐ Ask your representative to call on me

Name: _____

Address: _____

_____

_____

_____

IT(D)

2917

Brooke Bond India Limited Institutional Business Service

Brooke Bond Products. Packed with care. Packed for consistent quality.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

VIMAL

A woman expresses herself in many languages. Vimal is one of them

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Mudra:A:RIL.4912

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

COMPUTERS

Price Friendly

Cheaper PCs storm the market

ET&T's new PC range: making waves

SUDDENLY, the rules of the game in the computer industry have been dramatically rewritten—by a public sector electronics company. As a new market segment opens out, manufacturers are either slashing prices or scrambling to introduce cheaper computers.

The company that's turned the world of bits and bytes on its head is the Delhi-based Electronics Trade and Technology Development Corporation (ET&T). Last fortnight, the Rs 104-crore company launched four personal computer models claiming they were the lowest-priced in the country.

In an industry that considers Rs 30,000 cheap, ET&T is hawking a basic model called the "people's computer" priced at Rs 10,800 (without printer and software). And in the PC-XT segment, the workhorse computer for professionals, ET&T's prices are pegged at Rs 22,900—at least Rs 10,000 cheaper than similar computers in the market.

"We are turning the market into a low-price, high-volume business. It's a gamble no Indian computer firm wanted to take."

PRABHU DEODHAR
Chairman, ET&T

ET&T's strategy is what Chairman Prabhu Deodhar describes as "a numbers game". Says he: "What we are doing is turning the market into a low-price, high-volume business. It's a gamble no Indian computer company wanted to take before."

The state-owned enterprise has been able to launch cheap computers by inducing both Indian and foreign manufacturers to supply parts at almost half the market price and by promising to pick up large volumes. For instance, it persuaded Godrej to invest in developing a printer by offering to buy at least 25,000 of them. As a result, Godrej will be selling ET&T a basic printer at around Rs 5,700—versus the market price of over Rs 9,000.

Certainly, ET&T is taking a big gamble. In an industry where barely 50,000 personal computers are sold annually, the state-owned company hopes to hawk one lakh computers a year, mostly to small businessmen and professionals. "Almost eight lakh computer professionals don't have computers at home," says Deodhar. So far, high prices have been a bar to tapping this market. That may no longer be the case. Deodhar says that about 1,500 computers were booked in the first week itself.

Initially, rival companies scoffed at ET&T's plans of introducing a "price friendly" computer, dismissing it as a "floppy dream". But once the computer was launched, anxiety replaced scorn as companies scrambled to keep pace. The first to react was the Rs 170-crore HCL, the country's largest computer company. Just before the launch, the Delhi-based company cut the price of its popular Busybee PC-XT from Rs 50,000 to Rs 41,000, inclusive of a printer.

Other industry heavyweights too are entering the price wars. In Bangalore, the Rs 40-crore Wipro worked overtime over the past two months to build a personal computer that Wipro President Ashok Soota said "will be of a comparable price range and put us in a position to be a major player in this segment". And in Madras, the Rs 85-crore Sterling Computers plans price reductions. Said C. Sivasankaran, it's director: "Our policy is simple: we will match ET&T in price."

Others like the Bombay-based International Computers India Manufacture (ICIM) opted for a wait-and-watch policy. T.K. Joseph, ICIM's senior vice-president (commercial), says: "We are seeing how the market responds. If need be, we will reduce prices." As prices tumbled, many computer manufacturers discovered to their dismay that confirmed orders were slipping away as customers waited for the dust to settle.

Inevitably, rivals busily ran down ET&T's computers. Many dismissed the Rs 10,800 model as good enough only to play video games with. The company's gambit of cutting marketing costs by selling computers directly to users instead of through dealers came under attack. Said HCL Executive Director Ashok Jain: "It is to be seen whether ET&T has cut corners at the expense of reliability and service." Others doubted whether ET&T would be able keep the prices of its computers low for long.

Deodhar is unconcerned by the volley of criticism: "We have got a good product and we are not skimping on quality. Our chief aim is to act as a catalyst and stir the sluggish computer industry into action."

The big question, however, is whether ET&T's gamble will pay off. With everyone busy slashing prices, profit margins will go down. If the market doesn't catch up, many companies may end up badly bruised. And ET&T will be under severe pressure to hold its own.

The victors then will be those who are able to sustain their quality and service, while keeping prices low—and, of course, the consumer.

—RAJ CHENGAPPA and SURAJEET DAS GUPTA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE MARKETS

Boom Time

Investors display confidence

FRAILTY, thy name is India's stock-markets. On the eve of elections in the second week of November, and after the poll results were declared late last month, stock-markets had slumped and had to be propped up by heavy purchases by the state-owned financial institutions. Now, investor sentiments are buoyant as a gas balloon.

By December 9, market indices shot up—without institutional support. On December 7, Finance Minister Madhu Dandavate said the new government would not conduct a witch-hunt against business houses. Industry Minister Ajit Singh also assured that the liberalisation process would not be reversed.

There were cheers everywhere. At Bombay's Dalal Street, Delhi's Asaf Ali Road and Calcutta's Lyons Range. The next day, The Economic Times(ET) share index had jumped to 415.6, a good 15 points above the previous peak of 400.8 touched on October 26. While the index of the Bombay Stock Exchange(BSE) rose by a whopping 24 points in 24 hours, the BSE's 100-scrip national index also went up, by a modest 11 points to 408.02.

Chart by B.K. SHARMA

The present boom did not come as a surprise. Four days after V.P. Singh became the new prime minister, on December 4, the all-India ET share index had increased to 401.5 from a pre-poll low of 386.6 on November 15.

Still, a question remained unanswered. What led to the dramatic change in the mood of the markets? One view was that Singh's emphasis on "consensus" politics would result in far greater stability than had been presumed. Thus, even as it was conceded that some of the proposed capital-intensive petrochemical projects would be delayed and particular companies, which had recently floated mega share issues, would be disciplined, a feeling gained ground that the new government would not do anything to destabilise the stock-markets. After all, hadn't share prices zoomed during Singh's tenure as finance minister in 1985 and 1986, the pundits asked confidently.

Not surprisingly, the erosion in the Reliance scrip's value continued by Rs 5 during the fortnight ending on December 7. And predictably, the Bombay Dyeing share price gained Rs 38, touching a high of Rs 193 in this period.

After a hectic bout of buying late last month, the institutions took a break last fortnight. But not so SBI capital markets, which was flush with funds after the successful launch of its offshore fund floated in the US. The oversold technical position of the markets in the wake of the elections also helped matters. Those who had embarked on a selling spree in late November, were now anxious to square up their accounts.

All in all, it was a good beginning for the new rulers in Delhi. Investors were clearly reposing their confidence in them. Whether the current spurt in equity values is a flash in the pan will be evident in the next few weeks.

ACTIVE STOCKS

	1989 HIGH	1989 LOW	CLOSE 7.12.89	Change in Fortnight
Ashok Leyland	93.00	61.00	93.00	4.50 +
Associated Cement	345.00	230.00	329.00	20.00 +
Asian Paints	226.25	165.00	210.00	16.25 +
Atlas Copco	53.00	32.00	43.00	1.00 –
Bajaj Auto	450.00	290.00	367.50	38.75 +
Baroda Rayon	837.50	285.00	695.00	25.00 –
Bata India	89.00	60.00	65.00	2.00 –
Bayer	910.00	580.00	800.00	30.00 +
Bharat Forge	202.50	65.00	82.50	5.00 +
Birla Jute	73.75	41.50	47.00	nil
Bombay Dyeing	193.00	104.00	184.00	38.00 +
Britannia Ind.	150.00	89.00	147.50	25.50 +
Brooke Bond	155.00	75.00	115.00	5.00 +
Century Spinning	2865.00	1230.00	2860.00	290.00 +
Chloride India	88.50	72.00	85.50	1.50 +
Colgate Palmolive	371.25	162.50	192.50	15.00 +
Cyanamid	108.75	55.00	97.50	1.50 –
DCM	85.00	31.00	48.00	1.50 +
Dunlop	95.50	62.80	73.00	10.00 +
E.I. Hotels	68.00	50.00	65.00	1.00 +
Escorts	84.00	58.00	81.00	3.00 +
Finolex Cables	430.00	225.00	260.00	30.00 –
Food Specialities	224.00	100.00	112.50	11.00 +
Garware Nylon	57.00	36.00	57.00	9.00 +
G.E. Shipping	53.00	33.75	49.75	3.00 +
G.S.F.C.	195.00	123.75	193.75	13.75 +
Grasim Ind.	137.00	75.00	121.00	14.00 +
Hind. Aluminium	327.50	155.00	277.50	28.75 +
Hind. Ciba	1270.00	600.00	1250.00	275.00 +
Hind. Cocoa	150.00	98.75	141.25	5.00 –
Hindustan Lever	113.50	69.50	105.50	3.50 +
Hindustan Motors	52.50	22.00	23.00	0.75* +
ICI India Ltd.	68.00	39.00	42.50	3.00 –
Indian Organic	54.50	23.00	47.00	3.25 +
Indian Rayon	106.00	75.75	87.00	1.75 +
Indrol	335.00	175.00	195.00	nil
Ingersoll-Rand	425.00	180.00	235.00	17.50 +
ITC	129.00	46.25	64.00	nil
J.K. Synthetics	92.00	55.00	62.50	1.50* +
Kinetic Engineering	395.00	120.00	140.00	12.25 +
Kirloskar Cummins	88.75	54.50	66.00	1.00 –
KSB Pumps	445.00	185.00	202.50	10.00 +
Larsen & Toubro	128.00	69.00	73.50	2.50 –
Lipton	98.00	65.00	93.00	3.50 –
LML Ltd.	28.00	12.50	20.00	2.50 +
Madura Coats	104.00	92.25	101.00	1.50 +
Mahindra & Mahindra	113.50	76.50	88.50	9.50 –
Milk Food	320.00	180.00	290.00	75.00 +
Motor Industries	850.00	560.00	750.00	15.00 +
Mukand Ltd.	145.00	75.00	139.25	1.75 +
National Organic	1525.00	710.00	1525.00	240.00 +
Nirlon	17.00	8.00	16.00	3.50 +
Orkay Silk Mills	29.00	12.50	15.25	1.25 +
Peico Electronics	30.50	16.50	24.50	3.00 +
Pfizer	80.00	58.00	78.00	7.00 +
Ponds	220.00	151.25	200.00	18.75 +
Premier Auto	68.00	40.00	64.50	2.75 +
Raymond	85.00	60.00	78.00	9.00 +
Reliance Industries	158.00	70.00	73.50	5.00 –
Siemens India	95.00	65.00	86.00	13.00 +
Shaw Wallace	103.25	62.00	88.00	8.00 +
Shriram Fibres	94.00	53.50	63.00	9.00 +
SKF Bearings	3020.00	1140.00	1360.00	90.00 +
SPIC	67.00	39.00	56.00	4.00 +
Tata Steel	158.00	102.50	115.25	9.00 +
Telco	1097.50	657.50	1060.00	33.00 +
Vam Organic	178.00	132.50	138.75	20.25 –
Videocon Int.	200.00	55.00	192.50	2.50 +
Voltas	1000.00	470.00	920.00	15.00 –
Wimco	32.00	15.00	23.25	1.00 +

*Spot delivery

WORLD VALUE OF RUPEE

COUNTRY	CURRENCY	UNIT	TT Selling Rates Rs	TT Buying Rates Rs
Australia	Dollar	1	13.3823	13.2348
Austria	Schilling	100	135.3517	134.8116
Bahrain	Dinar	1	45.2889	44.7705
Bangladesh	Taka	100	54.1741	52.7872
Canada	Dollar	1	14.6858	14.5307
Denmark	Kroner	1	2.4678	2.4421
Egypt	Pound	1	6.8534	6.7298
France	Franc	1	2.8694	2.7972
Hong Kong	Dollar	1	2.1842	2.1617
Indonesia	Rupiah	100	0.9603	0.9453
Iran	Rial	100	24.2345	24.1402
Italy	Lira	100	1.3037	1.2885
Japan	Yen	100	12.0048	11.7096
Kenya	Shilling	1	0.7882	0.7766
Kuwait	Dinar	1	57.6515	56.9710
Malaysia	Dollar	1	6.3056	6.2394
Mauritius	Rupee	1	1.1264	1.1113
Nepal	Rupee	1	0.5956	0.5875
Netherlands	Guilder	1	8.4689	8.3748
Pakistan	Rupee	1	0.8126	0.7678
Singapore	Dollar	1	8.8145	8.7206
Spain	Peseta	1	0.1484	0.1466
Sri Lanka	Rupee	1	0.7551	0.7441
Sweden	Kroner	1	2.6756	2.6476
Switzerland	Franc	1	10.7427	10.6272
Tanzania	Shilling	1	0.1004	0.0938
Thailand	Baht	100	66.9210	64.9688
UK	Pound	1	26.8061	26.6134
USA	Dollar	1	17.0648	16.8919
UAE	Dirham	1	4.6486	4.5977
USSR	Rouble	1	27.5018	27.2011
W. Germany	Deutschmark	1	9.7943	9.5511

These rates were supplied by The Bank of Tokyo Limited, New Delhi and quoted between the banks on 7.12.89.

GARMENT COURTESY OF OWM LTD. INDIA
MEMBER OF WOOL CLUB.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

PURE NEW WOOL. SHEER PLEASURE.

GARMENT COURTESY OF OWM LTD. INDIA
MEMBER OF WOOL CLUB

Pure New Wool Knitwear.
It breathes naturally. Shrugs off creases.
Keeps you snug in cold weather, cool in warm.
Feels smooth on your skin. Drapes like a dream.
And never, never goes out of fashion.
Pure New Wool Knitwear. Wear it.

Woolmark

O&M/5540

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

POSITIVELY NO ROCK AND ROLL.

When you buy a Lotto shoe, there's one thing you'll find missing: Uneven grip. Because every Lotto shoe has a unique U-shape Achilles cushion that protects your heel from rolling sideways. And a special non-slip lining that prevents your feet from rocking forward. A system of staggered lacing ensures even distribution of stress on the feet. While fine grain leather uppers ensure better fit. (Leather has the unique ability to adapt to the shape and size of your foot. And unlike synthetic materials, it breathes easily.) And in a truly major step in sports shoes, Lotto offers half sizes in all their models. No matter what your foot size is, you'll find shoes that fit you like a sock.

Achilles heel protector.

WE GOT SOLE. An extra removable insole is mandatory for all Lottos. Its orthopedic design provides additional cushioning and stability. An unwarranted extravagance perhaps, considering many of our shoes have two layers of cushioning in the midsole instead of just one. Besides which, directly below the midsole, there is an extra-tough carbon rubber outsole to prevent wear and tear. And it has a computer-generated anti-skid tread design that provides greater traction.

Anti-skid tread design.

RHYTHM WITHOUT THE BLUES. Years of research into materials have developed a unique compound: Double density EVA. It's remarkably flexible, and has a 'memory'. When your heel strikes the ground, the EVA compresses, taking most of the shock. And the moment you lift your heel, it bounces back to its original shape. Lotto shoes incorporate this revolutionary material into a compact shock absorber at the base of the heel.

If you miss these features in your sports shoe, drop in at your nearest dealer. And step into one of our blue suede shoes.

lotto

Europe's fastest selling sports shoe

A product of collaboration with Lotto S.p.A. of Italy. Manufactured by Consolidated Footwear Ltd. Tanna House, 11-A Nathalal Parekh Marg, Colaba, Bombay-400 039.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ON THE TOP WITH GSFC ACRYLIC SHEETS

Ideal for the creation of elegant and sturdy furniture. Excellent material for interior design & surface decoration.

Available as plain and clear sheets from 10 mm to 50 mm thickness.

GUJPOL-S is also used in the manufacture of streetlight covers, signboards, novelty items.

The GSFC Acrylic Products, a continuity in its plastics range since the merger of PCGL (Polymer Corporation of Gujarat Ltd.) with GSFC in 1983, have proved to be excellent in quality and most suitable for various applications.

GUJPOL-S Quality Acrylic Sheets from GSFC

GSFC—Basic to India's Progress

Chief Marketing Manager (I P)
GUJARAT STATE FERTILIZERS COMPANY LIMITED
Polymer Unit
Giriraj Apartment, Race Course Circle, Baroda - 390 015

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The most disturbing economic concern in the short run is the decline in the industrial output. The consequences could be serious. Unless something is done quickly to boost production, the economy could head for a recession. On the price front too, there was no relief in sight. Prices showed no sign of decelerating their relentless upward climb. Fortunately, the new government has made control of inflation its top priority.

All data are seasonally adjusted. Current trends are computed on the basis of six months' (weekly data) or one-and-a-half years' (monthly data) figures.

Wholesale Price Index

1970-71 = 100

Current Trend
5.7% p.a.

Wholesale prices continued to shoot up last fortnight. The annualised rate of increase worked out to 10 per cent.

Industrial Production Index

1980-81 = 100

Current Trend
3.6% p.a.

There was another bad drop in industrial production last month giving rise to fears of a coming recession.

Money Supply

Rs Crore

Current Trend
19.0% p.a.

Money supply expanded at an annual rate of over 20 per cent last fortnight—more pressure on future prices.

Commercial Bank Credit

Rs Crore

Current Trend
17.01 p.a.

The relaxed commercial credit conditions last fortnight were welcome, given the industrial slow-down.

Electricity Generation

Mill kWh

Current Trend
11.8 p.a.

Generation of electricity registered a sharp increase last month. For industry, it was a hopeful sign.

Manufacturing Index

1980-81 = 100

Current Trend
1.5% p.a.

The primary reason for the industrial decline has been the sharp decrease in the output of the manufacturing sector.

Share Price Index

1984-85 = 100

Current Trend
8.6% p.a.

Share prices witnessed wide fluctuations last fortnight. However, the final level reached reflected confidence.

Closing Gold Prices

Rs per 10 gm

Current Trend
3.51% p.a.

The price of gold continued to remain constant. There were a couple of transactions in the bullion market.

WHOLESALE PRICES

Growth of items in the 1st fortnight of November 1989

	% Growth
Sugarcane	8.01
Jute Textiles	7.97
Groundnut Seeds	6.88
Cement	6.30
Oranges	5.89
Betel-Nuts	5.36
PVC Compounds	5.27
Silk Raw	5.23
Gur	4.81
Logs Timber Bamboo	4.08
Fish	3.71
Synthetic Fibres	3.11
Art Silk & Artificial Fabrics	2.57
Solvent Extracted Oil	2.44
Cars	2.41
Ghee	2.34
Jute Textile Machinery	2.23
Tapioca	2.21
Rice	1.97
Tobacco Raw	1.83
Groundnut Oilcake	1.71
Milk	1.68
Urad	1.57
Soda Ash	1.55
Cotton Cloth	1.52
Coal	1.11
Polythene Moulding Powder	1.05
Board	1.02
Jowar	1.01
Machine Tools	0.96
Handloom & Powerloom Products	0.92
Nylon/Terene and Mixed Cloth	0.91
Cigarettes	0.89
Tubes	0.85
Furnace Oil	0.84
Dairy Products	0.82
Skelp	0.82
Tractors	0.77
Silk & Artificial Fabrics	0.76
Steel Structurals	0.76
Limestone	0.76
Diesel Oil	0.74
Mustard Oil	0.72
Gingelly Seed	0.71
Woollen Cloth & Woollen Khadi	0.70
Atta	0.69
Pesticides & Insecticides	0.69

Of the 137 series considered, 79 of them with a total weight of 55.481 had a positive growth and 56 of them with a total weight of 29.732 had a negative growth.

SELECTED INDICATORS

	1989	1988
Coal
Thousand Tonnes, October	15650	15110
Saleable Steel
Thousand Tonnes, October	786.4	773.5
Cement
Thousand Tonnes, October	3667	3688
Fertilisers
Thousand Tonnes, October	7097	8296
Plant Load Factor
Per Cent, October	53.9	49.2

Compiled by THE POLICY GROUP

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THIS IS THE STORY OF A GOVERNMENT CIRCULAR

THAT SUDDENLY CAME ALIVE IN THIRTEEN DIFFERENT LANGUAGES.

You can get your message across in English.

With as much flair and conviction as you can in Hindi, Gujarati, Tamil, Kannada, Telugu, Malayalam, Sanskrit, Marathi, Bengali and Punjabi. And even in Russian and Greek.

Just about anyone, who wants to make a piece of communication forceful, eyecatching and in different languages, can benefit from using the Quantum Desk Top Publisher, and Linguist—a multilingual DTP Software Package from Blue Star.

For presentation power that adds visual impact to all written documents. And is the fastest, most economical alternative to getting jobs done through professional printers.

Business correspondence or sales reports, product catalogue or company newsletters... the Quantum DTP lets you process text, include graphics, design page formats, vary typefaces, change, shuffle and edit till the very end. Then print out artwork quality material at the speed of up to 8 pages a minute.

The System? The Quantum PC/AT, Hewlett-Packard LaserJet, the largest selling laser printer in the world and the HP ScanJet. The Hewlett-Packard connection gives you the advantage of an unequalled 50-year-old reputation for quality and reliability.

THE QUANTUM DESK TOP PUBLISHER FROM BLUE STAR.

Supported by Software designed for specific applications.

The Quantum DTP from Blue Star is among India's largest selling DTP Systems. With a client list that includes Reliance Industries, Tata Consultancy Services, Hong Kong Bank, ET&T, C-Dot, Bharat Electronics and Exim Bank.

Add to that Blue Star's own Response Centre Support. Offices in 12 major cities have qualified engineers at your service, within hours of calling in.

Please mail in the coupon to the address for a free brochure of the Quantum DTP. Discover the power of presentation which can transform the ordinary ... into the unforgettable.

Yes, I want to know more about the Quantum DTP. Please send me the brochure. TB

Name: _____

Designation: _____

Company Name & Address: _____

_____

_____ Phone: _____

Ashwini Aggarwal,
Hewlett-Packard Division, Blue Star Limited,
13, Community Centre,
New Friends Colony, New Delhi-110 065. Tel: 6834262.

A QUANTUM LEAP IN PRESENTATION POWER.

BLUE STAR
the hi-technology Company

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Rediffusion/BS/7492b

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

NINTH LOK SABHA

A Volatile Mix

In sharp contrast to the previous House, the ninth Lok Sabha contains a wide variety of forceful and controversial voices. With fundamentalists, militants and filibusters galore, this House will be as volatile as it is colourful.

THE English parliamentary expert, Walter Bagehot, once said that each parliament evolves a character uniquely its own. The newly-elected ninth Lok Sabha could hardly have been more different from its predecessor. While the norm is for about 60 per cent of any House to be re-elected, less than 30 per cent of the earlier House is back. Obviously, the voter did not take kindly to the shoddy shenanigans of the last two years, and as many as 371 members out of 525 in the new House were not there in the last.

A hung Parliament, it will be a complete contrast to the previous one—which was taken so casually by a government cocooned within its four-fifths majority. No one can take this one for granted, and the Government will be on an ever more tenuous tightrope as session follows uncertain session. And that rope is made of such variegated strands that it can only make the going tauter. Indeed, parliamentary observers expect this to be an even stormier house than the previous one.

In the House are outstanding journalists and police officers, judges and managers, academics and preachers. On the other hand, almost a fifth of the members belong to parties like the Shiv Sena, the Akali Dal (Mann), the Hindu Mahasabha, the BJP and the BSP, with extreme positions on one issue or another. So if the eighth House was marked by a herd tendency, the ninth is likely to hear a wide variety of voices. And if the heat and dust of the last House was generated largely by sensational newspaper revelations, the members of this one are likely to throw up fundamental issues that could strain the sinews of the Constitution itself. Consensus will be as tough to trap as a rat in a grain godown.

In the first place, there has never been such an array of religious zealots in the House. While the dapper Ghulam Mehmood Banatwala and Ebrahim Sulaiman Sait of the Muslim League have almost become permanent fixtures in the Lok Sabha, their voices have generally been modulated. This time, they will be faced by the fiery president of the Vishwa Hindu Parishad (VHP), Mahant Avaidyanath. Those who have seen him in action say it would be no surprise if he were to rise in the House to challenge members with rhetoric about Hindu blood flowing in their veins. Vying with him in zealousness will be four MPs from the saffron-suffused Shiv Sena.

And they might find enthusiastic supporters in some of the

Cartoons by AJIT NINAN

HEAVYWEIGHTS

The large number of stalwarts will both lend weight to the debates, and prove a restraining influence on conduct.

EXTREME VOICES

The unprecedented array of religious zealots in the House is likely to keep the Speaker constantly on edge.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

If production of a casting weighing upto 9 M.T. in one piece was as easy an exercise as the proverbial lion fighting its own reflection in the water in the well.,

We, at QUALITY STEELS AND FORGINGS LTD., would take an early retirement and a life long vacation...

ANNOUNCING

the production of Carbon Alloy and Stainless Steel Castings and Forgings with latest technology and the best available testing facilities for highly sophisticated engineering and industrial applications...

RANGE OF PRODUCTS

Castings : Carbon Alloy, High Manganese and Stainless Steel Castings with its applications in Cement, Fertilizer, Defence, Machine Building, Power and many other engineering industries with capacity to make a single piece casting weighing upto 9 M.T.

Forgings : Gear Blanks, Shaftings including step down Shafts, Rings, Flanges, Valves, Couplings and Rolls in Carbon Alloy and Stainless Steel with proof machining facilities.

We, at QUALITY, strive to meet your specific requirements in a cost effective manner, ensuring quality on an on-going basis... Today and always.

Because we are building a reputation and not resting on one, we care ...

Business enquiries solicited.

Quality

STEELS & FORGINGS LTD.

Registered Office : 77/76, Netaji Subhas Road, Calcutta-700 001.
Corporate Office : C-1, Jupiter Apartment, Productivity Road, Alkapuri, Baroda-390 005.

Quality - Steel so strong, Diamonds would be put to shame ...

Conceept/G/176

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

BJP members, among whom are such colourful personalities as the ochre-robed young preacher, Uma Bharati, who won from Khajuraho; Harin Pathak, an unabashed communalist from Ahmedabad; and Yadunath Pandey, of the VHP and Bajrang Dal, from Hazaribagh, who was involved in the recent communal riots there.

Even the urbane BJP President, L.K. Advani, making his first appearance in the Lok Sabha, is likely to strike a strident posture on the communal issue, which the party believes brought it so many seats. The party's deputy leader in the House, Vijayaraje Scindia, will pull no punches on the Ram Janmabhoomi theme either.

Then, there are the seven militant MPs from Punjab. Most interesting will be Bimal Kaur Khalsa's face-off with Rajiv Gandhi. The widow of Beant Singh, Mrs Gandhi's executed assassin, she has often drawn the attention of journalists to her little son, toting a toy pistol "to shoot Rajiv Gandhi". While some Akali Dal (Mann) MPs have sworn by the Constitution, Bimal continues to say that "total freedom and nothing else" is her aim.

The Bahujan Samaj Party for the first time has a voice, in fact three, in the House. How their anti-upper caste stance will manifest itself is anybody's guess. The militant leftist Indian People's Front too has a member for the first time—Rameshwar Prasad, from Arrah in Bihar.

If these extreme voices are enough to keep the sharpest of speakers on edge, there are plenty of filibusters to keep the ears abuzz. Some of the last Parliament's noise machines are thankfully out—among them Mamata Bannerjee (who once presented her bangles to Indrajit Gupta) and K.K. Tewary ("V.P. Singh is the Pamella Bordes of Indian politics"). But Kalpnath Rai, so far in the Rajya Sabha, has descended to the lower House, with rings on his fingers and abuse on his tongue. Rai might meet his match in other new Uttar Pradesh members like Ram Pujan Patel, a staunch V.P. Singh supporter, and Ramlal Rahi, who was not averse to criticising his own Congress(I) partymen during the campaign.

LAWMEN

Lodha and Lalit Singh will bring to the law-making body a wealth of experience as executors of the law.

Another member who might exercise his vocal chords to the full is Jai Prakash, the street-smart chief of Devi Lal's green brigade. Lalloo Prasad Yadav is another potential troublemaker, as is K.C. Tyagi of the Sharad Yadav camp and Kalyan Singh Kalvi of Barmer, who vociferously carried his pro-sati campaign from the streets of Jaipur into the Assembly. In the BJP troupe are such aggressive members as Ram Kapse and Ram Naik, both from Bombay.

Fortunately, the House has more than its share of academics, journalists and other professionals to temper the tone and content of debates. Leading the academics is Shakeelur Rehman of the Janata Dal, who has been vice-chancellor of both Bihar University and the L.N. Mishra Mithila University. Then there is Malini Bhattacharya, who won on a CPI(M) ticket. She holds a doctorate from Cambridge and is a professor of English at Jadavpur University. In the BJP benches is S.N. Shrivastava, an articulate leader of teachers' struggles, from Patna.

PROMINENT among the journalists who have been elected are M.J. Akbar, former editor of The Telegraph and a strident anti-communalist, and Inder Jit, editor of Indian News and Features Alliance, who represents the GNLF. Santosh Bharatiya, founder-editor of the Hindi weekly Chauthi Duniya, is a V.P. Singh groupie, while Ajay Singh was editor of Charan Singh's Asli Bharat.

From Begusarai in Bihar comes Lalit Vijay Singh, a former director-general of police, with an impeccable police record—he earned kudos for exposing fellow officers in his report on the Bhagalpur blindings. Members like Singh and Ghumman Mal Lodha will bring to the law-making body their experience as executors of the law. Lodha, who won on a BJP ticket from

ACADEMICS & JOURNALISTS

Fortunately, there are enough academics and journalists to temper the tone and content of the debates.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

A Twist of Elegance

Twist left for blue

Twist right for red

Available in a range of finish – matte black, brown, grey and silver.

Chromatic refills are available in individual tamper-proof cellopoly packs by Luxor.

CHROMATIC

Writes blue. Writes red.

Exciting writing

By Luxor®

Luxor Pen Co.,

229 Okhla Industrial Estate, Phase-III, New Delhi-20

Phones: 633318, 6835607, 6833372, Tlx: 031-75069 SIGN-IN, Fax: 011-635694

Bombay: Ph: 6730251, Calcutta: 250407

CLASHON D 212

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

YOUTH PRESENCE

There are some promising young entrants, but it's difficult to predict which of them will shine in their new role.

Rajasthan, retired recently as chief justice of the Guwahati High Court. He will, no doubt, continue to espouse the Hindu cause in Parliament as he has outside.

By the time this Parliament is dissolved, some of these men, who have earned renown in other professions, will have joined the ranks of able legislators beside such stalwarts as Indrajit Gupta (CPI) and Somnath Chatterjee (CPM). Outstanding National Front parliamentarians like Madhu Dandavate and Dinesh Goswami will, as ministers, not be able to spring up with interjections as frequently as they used to. But they will be ably replaced by BJP leaders like L.K. Advani and Jaswant Singh, who have hitherto shone in the Rajya Sabha.

Though the number of women is down to 26, from 44 in the last House, there are some outstanding personalities among them—including the redoubtable Subhashini Ali, who won on a CPI(M) ticket from Kanpur. And along with Vijayaraje Scindia in the BJP ranks is daughter Vasundhara Raje, both in the House for the first time. The BJP contingent contains seven women, most of them firebrand activists who are unlikely to allow Mamata Bannerjee's shrillness to be missed. Worth watching is former Bihar MLA and Janata Dal member, Usha Singh. Another new entrant is Savithri Lakshmanan, a fiery speaker from Kerala.

On the other hand, socialite Uma Gajapati Raju and film actress Jamuna, both Congresswomen from Andhra Pradesh, are likely to join Vyjanthimala Bali in adding glamour to the proceedings.

There are potentially outstanding young entrants. In the Uttar Pradesh contingent are Anil Shastri, the late prime minister's youngest son, and Ram Sajiwan, an outstanding Hindi orator. From Bihar comes a staunch Jayaprakash-ite, Subodh Kant Sahay. Then there is Nitish Kumar, an engineer and a powerful orator.

Equally worth watching in action will be two youth leaders from Kerala. Ramesh Chennithala, 33, is president of the state Youth Congress(I) and his fluent Hindi should find favour with the BJP. Representing the CPI(M) is A. Vijayaraghavan, president of the Students Federation of India. At 27, M.M. Pallam Raju of Andhra is one of the two youngest members but holds far greater promise than the other 27-year-old, Vishwendra Singh of Bharatpur. The son of former deputy minister for electronics, M.S. Sanjeevi Rao, Raju, a management graduate from the US, returned only in October from abroad.

IT isn't easy to predict which of these prodigious talents will shine as legislators. BJP member Jaswant Singh notes that even eminent lawyers have found it difficult to switch from being interpreters of law to being makers of law and that those who have shone in state assemblies often find the demands of Parliament too exacting. Says Singh: "Parliament requires a different mind-set. The issues that a state assembly deal with are easier to grasp."

As the new members are addressed by veteran MPs in an orientation workshop in the Parliament House Annexe from December 15 to 17, they will no doubt be thinking of the onerous responsibility that lies ahead of them in the days to come. For it is up to them to restore to the institution the dignity that it has lost during the last two years. As Vishnu Modi, who represented Ajmer in the last House, says: "So far as respect for the institution of the Lok Sabha is concerned, this was the lowest ever." Impossible though it might seem, this House carries the seeds of even greater anarchy.

The balance being so tenuous, it is certain that this House will not be short on action. Says Balkavi Bairagi, another outgoing member: "The benches will not be empty this time, because the pressure to make its presence felt will be heavy on all parties." If public interest in Parliament is already intense, it can only attain a new high in the coming years.

—DAVID DEVADAS with bureau reports

GLAMOROUS FACES

There are fewer women in the House, but they are a mix of outstanding orators and the glamorous.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

WON. TWO. THREE!

(ZUARI BAGS THE FAI AWARD FOR THE THIRD YEAR RUNNING)

The FAI Award for best production performance in nitrogenous fertilisers in 1988 is ours. As it was in 1986 & 1987.

For the third time running, we've scored on all counts. On capacity utilisation – over 100%. On operational efficiency. On safety. On performance.

And our commitment continues. And continues to be recognised. For example, several safety awards from the Government of India, Government of Goa, and the National Safety Council, USA.

And the excellence continues, now also in Rajasthan where we are putting up Chambal Fertilisers & Chemicals – a gas-based fertiliser plant at Gadepan, Kota.

JAI KISAAN

ZUARI AGRO CHEMICALS LIMITED, GOA.

LINTAS ZUA P 182 254

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SCINDIA

AFTER A LONG WAIT, A NEW WAKE.

Scindia's Liner Service is re-entering the mainstream of international shipping – to reaffirm its pre-eminence on the high seas.

Starting January 1990, our semi-container vessels will operate between India, the Black Sea, the UK, Europe, and the Mediterranean.

While we confidently set our sights on new horizons, we also remember to thank all those shippers, consignees, agents, stevedores, freight brokers, forwarders, government organisations, Port and Customs authorities, bankers, financial institutions, suppliers and contractors who have stood by us during difficult times.

While seeking their continued support in the decade ahead, we pledge to uphold that standard of business which has kept the Scindia Steam Navigation Company at the crest for seven decades.

Yes, the mood is buoyant... and it has every reason to be.

THE SCINDIA STEAM NAVIGATION CO. LTD.

Reviving a 70-year tradition in Liner Services.

Scindia House, N. Morarjee Marg, Ballard Estate, Bombay 400 038. Phone: 2618168 (Management), 2614213 (Traffic), 2618169 (Technical), Telex: 011-73305, 011-73519, 011-73461.

Dattaram-SSN 2/89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Acqua Minerale Bisleri uses the same silver system used by NASA to purify water aboard space shuttles.

NASA scientists selected a silver system to purify drinking water aboard space shuttles after testing 23 different methods. Acqua Minerale Bisleri (AMB) also found silver to be the most effective water-purifying agent. Silver sterilised water inhibits the growth of bacteria through the oligodynamic effect. It is further treated with special anti-microbial processes and packed in disposable bottles. AMB is 100% pure drinking water. It is safer than boiled and filtered water which can get contaminated. In fact AMB is so safe that you can confidently give it not only to everyone at home but also to the sick and the convalescent and even to infants. Carry it with you while travelling too. On earth. Or in space.

RADEUS/PE/AMB/3-89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

BENAZIR BHUTTO

The Fading Glitter

On the first anniversary of her coming to power, Benazir invites flak for errors of style and judgement

Photographs by ANIS HAMDANI

Benazir: facing the brickbats

Faced with a hung parliament and a federally split nation, the fledgling government has little to be pleased about.

SHE sat facing the cameras, the Pakistani flag by her side, the customary portrait of Jinnah behind her. Her low-key address to the nation was sometimes punctuated with emotion, but more often in the nature of a recital of statistical claims: of waging war against corruption and drug overlords, of enhancing Pakistan's image abroad, of improving rural electrification and winning Chinese approval for a nuclear power plant. The only time her voice perked up was when she talked of the strengthening of the pace of restoration of democracy.

On the first anniversary of her coming to power, defying the machinations of Zia's orphans—as his political legatees are often called—and the challenge of a hung parliament, Benazir, 36, who is expecting her second child soon, did not have much else to be pleased about. A year had been too short a time for her government to show tangible results in the economy. The lack of a majority in the Senate, the Pakistani upper house, ensured that she was not able to bring in any legislation of consequence through the year. The only changes for the better have been in areas where she did not require a majority.

Her travels through the world have brought Pakistan, once in a piquant situation, back into the sphere of respectability—commanding the West's attention as a strategic ally but also inviting contempt for its tradition of dictatorships. She has also helped break the ice with India. To some extent, she has been able to control the depredations of the once all-powerful Inter Services Intelligence in Afghanistan. Domestically, she has made a small beginning on the developmental front by upping the education budget by 68 per cent.

But her greatest achievement has been in the field of democratisation. "We may have differences. But such political battles are now mostly fought in a democratic manner. That is by no means a small achievement for a society so used to following diktats from the military," says Salman Taseer, her party leader in Punjab. There has also been a visible opening up of the media, though not without a taint of controversy—Benazir succumbed to pressure from party loyalists to remove the articulate minister of state for information, Javed Jabbar, who was accused of being too liberal.

Among other fronts that Benazir has had to backtrack on, one is the normalisation of relations with India. Under fundamentalist pressure, she had to issue a public statement on the Mandir-Masjid issue. Then, she had to recall the ambassador to India, Niaz Naik, after just a year in office. Reason: he had served liquor at the Pakistani mission in New Delhi. Naik has been asked to refund the money spent on liquor at official receptions hosted by him. And female newsreaders on television have been instructed to wear a chadar, as they used to under Zia.

So if Benazir cannot look back on the past year with a greater sense of satisfaction, it is partly because of the kind of system she inherited. And partly her errors of judgement and style. "We got a government, not the power," says Bashir Riaz, her official spokesman. The implication is that the bureaucracy was totally dominated by Zia supporters. And to compound that, Benazir is stuck with an army that still seems to be in two minds and a President who is a Zia appointee and more than reluctant to go along with her.

It is to correct these anomalies, her supporters say, that she has had to take

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Perhaps the unexpected will never happen...

... perhaps ...

UNITED INDIA'S Personal Accident Policy.

Just in case.

Sure, when you cross the road you expect to reach the other side safely. That is human. And sure, when you walk down the stairs you expect you won't slip or fall. That too, is human. But what if the unexpected accident happens? That, is fate.

Sure, you can't stop the unexpected from happening. But you definitely can prepare yourself for it. By covering yourself with UI's Personal Accident Policy. The policy assures you compensation for death or any physical disablement caused directly by an accident, the loss of sight and/or limbs.

And insuring with UI is so simple. UI has over 1000 offices all over the country. Contact the nearest office of UI and see how easy it is to insure with us. So, don't wait for the unexpected to happen. Insure today with United India. Just in case.

UNITED INDIA INSURANCE CO. LTD.
(A subsidiary of General Insurance Corporation of India)
24, Whites Road, Madras – 600 014.

UNITED INDIA ★ WE CARE ★

LINTAS MUI 1 2417

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

steps that many criticise now. The most controversial has been her effort to tame the bureaucracy by bringing in thousands of party sympathisers as lateral entrants. The old steel frame dominated by the Civil Service of Pakistan is up in arms. She has packed the higher echelons of her government with party faithfuls designated as advisers. And finally, many bureaucrats of suspect loyalty have been relegated as officers on special duty with no real responsibilities. More than 70 of them roam the secretariat corridors, many without an office. The latest among her victims was foreign secretary and former ambassador to India, Humayun Khan, who was banished from office last fortnight without any apparent reason other than his disinclination to carry out the Government's orders on appointments and transfers.

After barely managing to survive the combined opposition's no-confidence motion a month ago, Benazir did admit to having erred. But she has still made no visible correction in her style which, if anything, has become more unpredictable. In the wake of the no-confidence motion she sought the resignation of her entire cabinet and the five advisers of cabinet rank. For more than six weeks now, she has neither accepted the resignations nor sent them back, keeping everyone on tenterhooks. "You have seen parliaments in suspended animation. Here the Mohtarma gives you a cabinet in suspended animation," chuckles Shujaat Hussain, leader of the Islamic Jamhoori Ittehad (IJI) in the National Assembly. Meanwhile, his party and Benazir's Pakistan People's Party (PPP) are engaged in furious horse-trading to prepare for yet another showdown in the National Assembly. If current rumours on the Islamabad grape-vine are to be believed, the going rate for a National Assembly member is Rs 2 crore.

Even as Benazir has

In a hurry to set things right, Benazir has taken on the IJI Government in Punjab, President Ishaq Khan and the drug mafia.

BHAWAN SINGH

IJI leaders (top) and Ishaq Khan

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

THE BIGW

The mosrac

Quality + Reliability +Efficiency = The Kores-Sharp Winners

These photocopiers are winners. Right from the start. Acclimatized for local conditions. Crisp, clear copies. Every time.Just touch a key for the copy you need. And you get it. The Kores-Sharp Winner is it. And more.

Winning features that make the Kores-Sharp Winner your best buy. Yet. An advanced Micro-processor controlled system. That makes this winner breast the tape. First. 17 self-diagnostic functions. Should there ever be a problem, the source is pin-pointed. Simulation function. Increased up-time for continuous long time performance. Customer friendly, it sure is. Organic Photo Conductor Technology. Performs brilliantly on any track. Black. Blue. Even half-tones. Withstands high temperatures. Even in non-AC rooms. A Dehumidifier. Prevents paper jams. Protects electronic components. Coached in tropical conditions. To optimize performance.

Yes! This Winner is unmatched in its class. Unbeatable value for money. The Kores-Sharp Winner.

Contact the most practical people on earth at: EAST ZONE • Calcutta, tel: 208030, 208113 • Cuttack, tel: 23429 • Durgapur, tel: 375 • Guwahati, tel: 32025 • Patna, tel: 226902 • Ranchi, tel: 300 485. NORTH ZONE • Amritsar, tel: 64785 • Chandigarh, tel: 22391 • Dehradun, tel: 28391 • Delhi, tel: 618854, 622105 • Jaipur, tel: 67727 • Jammu • Kanpur, tel: 211422, 211453 • Lucknow. SOUTH ZONE • Bangalore, tel: 220096, 220097, 221361 • Coimbatore, tel: 48178 • Ernakulam, tel: 366912 • Hyderabad, tel: 233846, 234677 • Madras, tel: 867191, 869022, 869033 • Madurai, tel: 24544 • Vishakapatnam, tel: 55218. WEST ZONE • Ahmedabad, tel: 26283, 26284 • Baroda, tel: 329251 • Bhopal, tel: 552980 • Bombay, tel: 4921948, 4927078, 4922085 • Indore, tel: 64670 • Nagpur tel: 23840 • Poona, tel: 435261, 424846.

We also have service centres at: EAST ZONE: Port Blair, Rourkela, Shillong, Siliguri. NORTH ZONE: Allahabad, Srinagar. SOUTH ZONE: Mysore, Nizamabad, Vijayawada. WEST ZONE: Aurangabad, Goa, Jabalpur, Nasik, Rajkot, Raipur.

Also available on rate contract with several State Governments.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

WINNERS

nosractical copiers on earth.

Kores-SHARP

WINNER

Range of Photocopiers

Maximum up-time.

Registered office: Kores (India) Ltd., Kores House,
Post Box No. 6558, off Dr. E Moses Road, Worli, Bombay 400 018.
tel: 4920696 (4 lines)

Yes Kores,
I want to know how the most practical copier on earth can produce great results for my company.
Contact me right away via...

☐ Phone ☐ Mail ☐ Representative

Name _____
Designation _____ Tel _____
Company _____
Address _____

Mudra:B:KP:317:2740 IT-A

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

enjoyed adulation abroad, she has been on the defensive at home. In a hurry to set things right, she has opened too many fronts all at one time. She began by taking on the IJI Government in Punjab, giving her own partymen the gloves-off signal to bring it down. She followed that up by taking on the IJI Foreign Minister Yaqub Khan, President Ghulam Ishaq Khan and then the drug mafia. In fact, many of her followers say that fighting the drug mafia so early on was a mistake; it immediately brought in big money for the Opposition. "Like Colombia, the logic was that the drug barons should rule. Ms Bhutto and her weak coalition was the aberration that defied this logic," says Khaled Ahmed, joint editor of The Frontier Post. Her critics don't give her the benefit of doubt.

With her husband Zardari

Her government faces several allegations of corruption. Many are directed specifically against her husband and his family.

"Overall it's been a year of disaster," says Hussain Haqqani, key adviser to Punjab Chief Minister Nawaz Sharif. He compares Benazir's "failure" to that of Rajiv. "They are both non-native leaders. Under Benazir in Pakistan as well, the theme is the same: My heart beats for Italy," he says and cites the official enthusiasm for things like the Pierre Cardin show while ignoring bread-and-butter issues.

So while the prime minister has been earning praise abroad like Rajiv, her critics say, she has ignored domestic politics. Her initial coalition partners, the Mohajir Qaumi Mahaz of Karachi and Khan Wali Khan's Awami National Party now sit in the Opposition which is more united than before. Worse, her government is faced with allegations of corruption directed particularly against her husband Asif Zardari and his family. Last fortnight, the combined opposition leader, Ghulam Mustafa Jatoi, accused Zardari's family of having taken nearly Rs 70 crore in commission on the purchase of Airbus aircraft for Pakistan International Airlines. "Bofors, because of which Rajiv had to leave, is nothing in comparison," he says.

Faced with a hung parliament and a federally split nation, Benazir has made the grave error of rushing headlong into a confrontation with Nawaz Sharif. Aided by clever advisers, Sharif has been able to turn it into a Centre-state row. "This is a ridiculous war," says Abida Hussain, independent National Assembly member and leader of the combined opposition parliamentary group. "She still thinks of Nawaz Sharif as a legatee of Zia. Zia is dead and gone. Today, this confrontation has raised the hackles of a lot of Punjabis, including myself."

ALLOWING the IJI to turn a purely political row into a major Centre-state conflict has been a catastrophe for Benazir. This, indeed is her greatest failure, though it is by no means one-sided. Thanks to the political row between Benazir and Nawaz Sharif, a country already facing the challenge of Sindhi nationalism, Mohajir intransigence and having at the back of its mind the bloody memory of the Pakhtoon and the Baluch nationalist movements, now has to contend with what can at best be called a cold war between its Federal Government and the democratically elected government of its largest state. To understand how serious that is, one must remember that Punjab, besides constituting 60 per cent of Pakistan's population, also completely dominates its bureaucracy, army and other elite institutions.

"You may call it cold war if you want to be nice to us, but it has gone far beyond that stage," confessed a top bureaucrat in Islamabad. Consider the evidence: Nawaz Sharif's Punjab Government has already set up its own scheduled bank, the Bank of Punjab, alleging that Punjab entrepreneurs were not being treated fairly by the federally run banks. But the bank, floated in the joint sector by the provincial government and some pro-IJI businessmen, has not been recognised by Islamabad. As a consequence, its cheques and letters of credit are not honoured by scheduled Pakistani banks. The bank does business in Pakistan through the Bank of Emirates and some other gulf banks.

The Punjab Government has informed the Centre that it is planning to set up its own television station. While the PPP is protesting, calling the action akin to secession, Nawaz Sharif says there is nothing in the Constitution against it. PPP supporters say that even in India, where federalism is much better established, a similar act of defiance by the DMK, N.T. Rama Rao or the Akalis would cause tremendous consternation. But the Nawaz Sharif Government is pressing on nevertheless.

Criminal cases have been filed by the Punjab Government against several PPP members—including 19 of the National Assembly and 27 of the Punjab Provincial Assembly. The most striking is the case of Federal Minister of State for Labour, Mukhtar Awan, against whom a murder case has been filed. For several weeks now, he has not been able to gather the courage to visit Punjab which includes Islamabad where his office is. Last fortnight, he managed to come in by taking the flight from Karachi to Break the ice with the new, smooth choice!

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

McDowell's

DIPLOMAT

Ice Cube Bags

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Sunkal Kangri Collection, Jammu

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Here's leather cloth that looks less like leather cloth and more like fabric.

Don't look for the needlework. This design is not from your neighbourhood handicrafts emporium.

Go ahead, spill coffee on it. Polynova is coffee-proof and waterproof.

Not Dastakari, Gurjari,

Kalamkari, or Kairali.

Try using it as wall panelling. We have colour co-ordinates to match your sofa set.

A special lining makes it the longest lasting PVC leather cloth in the country.

For further details:
Dani House, 158
C.S.T. Road, Kalina
Santacruz (East)
Bombay 400 098.

POLYNOVA

LEATHERCLOTHUPHOLSTERY

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

DUBAI DUTY FREE.

We go to any length to be within your reach

The disadvantage of overflying Dubai is missing the finest collection at the world's most elegant duty free.

For The World's Finest.

Fly-Buy-Dubai

السوق الحرة - دبي

DUBAI DUTY FREE

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Peshawar and then taking a helicopter to Islamabad, bypassing Nawaz Sharif's territory and police.

The two governments are also involved in a vicious advertisement war on front-pages with Punjab accusing the Centre of choking fertiliser supplies to ruin the state and the Centre retaliating in kind. "What is the next logical step for Nawaz Sharif?" asks Benazir's key advisor Jam Sadiq Ali, and answers the question himself: "He should have his currency and his own flag."

Looking back, Benazir could perhaps have done things differently. She could have been patient with Nawaz Sharif. She could have made peace with the President until she could either dictate terms or change the eighth amendment to the Constitution through which Zia armed the President with wide-ranging powers. And certainly she could have avoided brutalising the bureaucracy. But moderation and patience are not a part of the Bhutto inheritance. Where she has gone beyond inherited style and values is in her commitment to democracy and free speech. Today, it is fashionable on the prospects of her government's survival. But speculation is confined to the next no-confidence motion and the talk of a military-Mullah coup is passe. For a one-year-old government cursed with a hung Parliament, that is something to write home about.

—SHEKHAR GUPTA

REACTIONS

Mixed Feelings

HARDLY any Pakistani missed the coincidence: the Janata Dal Government was being sworn-in in India exactly when the Benazir Government was observing its first anniversary. Comparisons between Rajiv's first innings in power and Benazir's first year were being made instantly. There was also much debate on what the change in New Delhi would mean for Pakistan.

The interest in the Indian election had been tremendous—major newspapers brought out special supplements and Doordarshan's election specials drew vast audiences. Many came flocking to the Indian High Commission in Islamabad, where the election specials were being shown on a 40-inch television screen. And the results brought surprise loaded with worries.

The most widespread anxiety is about the performance of the BJP. Fundamentalist groups are worried about what it could mean for Indian Muslims and Indian policy towards Pakistan. The liberals feel the victory could be exploited by the Jamaat-e-Islami, which has already gathered some support for its agitation on the Ayodhya issue. Apprehends a senior member of the Benazir Cabinet: "The Jamaatis are not missing the point that a more fundamentalist posture has taken the BJP's tally from two to 88. They will take the cue."

In the foreign office Rajiv's exit has brought mixed reactions. Those in Benazir's policy-making coterie are disappointed. More conventional diplomats feel the change will correct the 'imbalances' that have crept into Indo-Pak relations. "It will help us move away from the your-father-and-my-mother-from-generation-to-generation kind of syndrome," hoped a senior official.

We have good memories of the Janata phase. The new Government should follow the same approach.

AGHA SHAHI
Former Pakistan foreign minister

The dignity of change in India is an example for all democracies and specially for us in Pakistan.

JAM SADIQ ALI
Senior PPP leader

We think the new Government will be more realistic in its perceptions of its neighbours.

SHUJAAT HUSSAIN
IJI leader

The appointment of I.K. Gujral as foreign minister has been welcomed. Many Pakistani officials and politicians have known him, and Gujral is well respected in the academic circuit. Others recall that it was under Atal Behari Vajpayee, a Jana Sangh foreign minister, that the first post-Bhutto opening took place in Indo-Pak relations. "Mr Vajpayee was very professional, very positive. We have good memories of that phase," says Agha Shahi, former foreign minister who heads the Islamabad Council of World Affairs, a reputed think-tank.

Most Pakistanis believe that the arrival of the Janata Dal might mean an end to the activist foreign policy initiated by Rajiv Gandhi. Islami Jamhoori Ittehad leader Shujaat Hussain even gave a statement to local newspapers saying that since the new Indian Government was weak and needed the support of Indian Muslims, it was in its interest to have friendly relations with Pakistan. V.P. Singh's first statement on India's nuclear policy too has been appreciated. An editorial headlined "V.P. Singh's Good Beginning" in The Nation said: "An acid test of his vision and sagacity will be how he extricates New Delhi from the fall-out of his predecessor's misguided adventures."

In the diplomatic circuit, it is a common joke that the domestic politics of Pakistan is India's internal affair and vice versa. So now, as Pakistan recovers from the excitement of India's ninth general elections, the overriding emotion is one of appreciation for the grace with which Rajiv has made his bow. In the words of a member of the Benazir Cabinet, it has reassured the Pakistani citizen that democracy could work, even in functioning anarchies.

—SHEKHAR GUPTA in Islamabad

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

In a world of the fluctuating Dollar, rising Yen, unstoppable Pound and competing Deutsche Mark, communication is the key.

The key to State Bank of India's efficient network is Tata Telecom.

The State Bank of India. The country's largest bank with more than 7,000 offices all over the country.

Helping State Bank of India link their offices is a communication network from Tata Telecom.

This is not all.

Elsewhere, Tata Telecom is upgrading communication systems for core sectors like steel, hotels, railways, business and industry. Plus the all-important area of defence.

This is how Tata Telecom is revolutionising communication and making life convenient. Everywhere.

Indeed the commitment of Tata Telecom to the nation's communications needs is total. Reflected in the quality of products and the customer-support it offers:

Digital EPABXs manufactured with technical assistance from Oki of Japan, the world leaders in the fields of telecommunication and information processing.

Tata Telecom has its sights set on tomorrow. And is geared to harness the communication technologies of the future.

A future that's going to be exciting. Because Tata Telecom is committed to take you there.

Tata Telecom. A commitment to serve the India of tomorrow.

For more information on Tata Telecom Digital EPABX Systems, contact:

Tata Telecom Ltd.
A-78/4/6, Gandhinagar Electronics Estate,
Gandhinagar 382 015.
Tel: 21773, 21774. Tlx: 0120-3231 TTLG IN.

DIGITAL EPABX SYSTEMS
FROM

TATA
TELECOM

TECHNOLOGY FOR THE FUTURE WORLD

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Karishma/TT/86/2418

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

PHENOL BONDED
100% BOILING WATERPROOF

THE DRAWING ROOM DISASTER

Saturday, 8th July, 7 p.m.

The guests were about to arrive. Mr. Mehra was toying with the remote control, when suddenly his eyes seemed to detect something wrong. He felt some parts of his furniture was loosing shape. My god, he detected termites too! This was a disaster.

Mr. Mehra immediately rang up the furniture people, only to be reminded that, he had himself suggested the use of an ordinary blockboard or some cheaper substitute.

Buy DUROBORD. It has extraordinary features. Manufactured from specially selected and perfectly seasoned timber, it is free of corrugation or warping and has a smooth surface.

DUROBORD is now available in super strong Phenol Formaldehyde Resin bonded grade, which makes DUROBORD a lifelong partner.

Don't try cheaper substitutes. They will prove disasters in the bargain.

Buy DUROBORD— buy peace of mind.

DURO— THE HERO OF BLOCKBOARDS

Durobord™

The real No.1

Insist on DUROBORD-PF, the 100% Boiling Waterproof Blockboard.

DOUBLE PROTECTION FROM IMITATION

The label and full width strip ensure genuineness.
Make sure they are there on the DUROBORD you buy.

Sarda Plywood Industries Limited
Works: Jeypore (Assam)
General Sales Office :
1/7 D.B. Gupta Road, New Delhi 110 055

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

You don't have to set a world flying record in a microlight to be a Raymond's man.

Vijayp
photogra industrial Raymond
Chairman
His su

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Vijaypat Singhania, aviator, photographer, publisher, industrialist, can't help being a Raymond's man. He's the Chairman of the Company.
His suit: "Microlite", an exclusive blend of Extra Fine Merino Wool.
You don't have to break a world record to be a Raymond's man. For that matter, you don't even have to be a Raymond's man.
... but it helps.

Raymond's
Never say no to life.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

For most it is an extravagance
For some it is the finest taste in tea

Centuries ago, a Buddhist monk travelled far and wide, in search of the best tea.

In Darjeeling he was finally rewarded with a tea so satisfying that he proclaimed "Runglee Rungliot", which means "Thus far and no further". The ultimate in tea had been found.

For the connoisseur, Duncans present the finest flavour in tea — Runglee Rungliot. This extraordinary tea comes from the 135 year old, award winning Runglee Rungliot garden. And is made from the choicest silver tips of tender leaves.

Indulge in the sheer pleasure of Runglee Rungliot. Pure golden Darjeeling tea with an exquisite flavour, appreciated the world over. Savour it today for that ultimate tea experience.

DUNCANS®

Runglee Rungliot

The finest taste in tea

Runglee Rungliot is the ideal gift for your associates and friends.
For orders, write to us.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

The Marketing Department, Duncans Agro Industries Ltd., HS-9, Kailash Colony Market, New Delhi-110 048. Or call 6419407, 6465260.

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

DOORDARSHAN

Breaking the Shackles

Ground rules for news change drastically

GLASNOST is back as a suddenly uncaged Doordarshan tentatively stretches its wings. The road to professionalism is still long but the new Government gave a firm thrust in that direction last fortnight. Suresh Mathur and Bhaskar Ghose, former directors general of AIR and Doordarshan, were put in charge of the Ministry of Information and Broadcasting. Ghose was also tipped to get his former Doordarshan job in addition. The stage was being set for structural change—probably on the lines of the autonomous corporation the B.G. Verghese committee had recommended a decade ago.

Already, Doordarshan had shown a new face to its viewers. Among last fortnight's novelties: a report that the prime minister's unanimous election was "not without some hiccups", footage of Ram Jethmalani being roughed up and Chandra Shekhar haughtily proclaiming "I am not helpless", Rajmohan Gandhi denouncing rigging in Amethi, and a blow-by-blow account of booth capturing. Coming up: a programme on the criminalisation of politics.

The change began even in the run-up to the elections. But it didn't come easy. Having lashed this most powerful of news media into a propaganda dummy, the powers that were clung on like limpets. When Doordarshan taped Sanjay Singh talking to his wife at his hospital bed, a key Rajiv Gandhi aide asked a top AIR official if he didn't value his children's safety. Then, a couple of hours before the election results analysis by Prannoy Roy's team was to begin, a paranoid regime ordered that the programme be scrapped. New Delhi's phone lines crackled for an hour-and-a-half before former finance secretary Gopi Arora and Adviser (Information and Broadcasting) Suman Dubey—both close to Rajiv Gandhi—got the programme cleared in the nick of time.

The old guard didn't even give up after V.P. Singh had been sworn in as prime minister. When Doordarshan interviewed Rajmohan Gandhi, an apex bureaucrat—nicknamed 'Alsatian' in the newsroom—tried ferociously to stymie it. Senior Doordarshan officials refused to take his calls and he was reduced to threatening a relatively junior officer with "very serious trouble" if it was screened. It not only was, columnist Nalini Singh came on the next evening with devastating images of rigging. Incredulous viewers saw the stacatto stamping of whole sheaves of ballot papers and heard panchayat chiefs explain that it was the upper castes' right: "It has always been done."

Cartoon by AJIT NINAN

Singh had contacted Doordarshan Director-General Shiv Sharma in early November about her plans for the documentary. He made no commitments then, but when she returned with the rough cuts on November 28, she says: "I saw the professional in him before me."

Doordarshan's bosses had in fact changed their sycophantic tune as soon as elections were announced and their 'Rajivdarshan' bulletins turned into 'vishvadarshan'. Sharma says that when the then government tabooed the word Bofors, he referred the poll broadcast scripts, with his objections, to the Election Commission. Sharma earned kudos for demanding Rajiv Gandhi's script for the Nehru memorial lecture. Five pages of it were deleted for broadcast and there were no language translations of the lecture, as demanded. And on poll-eve, Doordarshan refused to carry an item about the Indira Mahila Yojana.

Obviously, its chiefs were betting on a change of government. When the change came, they first tried to curry favour with the new regime. Viewers found themselves watching long clips of N.T. Rama Rao getting into his car on the news. Minister for Information and Broadcasting P. Upendra, who belongs to Rama Rao's Telugu Desam, angrily denounced Doordarshan for trying to spoil the new Government's image.

The rules for prime ministerial coverage were soon changed drastically. While two camera teams were de rigueur for Rajiv Gandhi's morning darshans, V.P. Singh is seen only occasionally on the box. Though Doordarshan had an hour-and-a-half of video footage on his Amritsar visit, the news made a dramatic impact with just a two-minute clip. "Overkill is out," as Director of News Harish Awasthi says.

How long that will last as the going gets tougher is anyone's guess. Already, the newsroom was back to seeking ministers' permission before broadcasting items concerning them. Asked if his daughter's kidnapping should be announced, Home Minister Mufti Mohammed Sayeed firmly told a newsroom man: "Please ask your minister."

Not every new minister behaved so well, though. Deputy Prime Minister Devi Lal's men demanded why son Om Prakash Chautala's investiture as Haryana chief minister was not shown in the 7.30 p.m. bulletin. Obviously, then, this tenuous 'glasnost' is not enough. What is required is structural transformation with effective safeguards for professionals to be able to work without needing to look over their shoulders—or, for that matter, be patted on the back.

—DAVID DEVADAS

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

At South Indian Bank you are not just a face in a crowd.

The South Indian Bank believes in giving you personalised attention, personalised service. Its special schemes include the Vajra Nidhi Scheme, the Kalpaka Nidhi Scheme, the Jubilee Cash Certificates, and the new Home Loan Scheme. Today, if South Indian Bank is known as the people's bank, it is because of its concern for the individual. You.

The South Indian Bank Ltd

Regd. Office : Trichur

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Manjrekar, 24, emerged as the new batting superstar and should occupy the coveted one-drop slot for many years.

◆

Tendulkar, just 16, displayed a temperament to match his talent. A little experience and he could be world class.

Photographs by PRADEEP MANDHANI

INDIAN CRICKET

Back on the Front Foot

A spunky team proves the critics wrong

NOT since Ajit Wadekar's men left for the West Indies in 1970 had a touring Indian team been written off so unanimously even before it departed. With an average age of just over 24, it was one of the youngest and most inexperienced Indian sides. And the prospect it faced was a full series in Pakistan—something no Indian team, not even the one blessed with an in-form Sunil Gavaskar and the spin quartet could survive. The most critics were prepared to concede to the team was a draw or two.

Opinions are changing. Now it is being called one of the spunkiest, most talented Indian sides ever, one that could grow into a formidable combination. "This tour marks the rebuilding of the team. One more year, touchwood, and we will be a world-beating team again," says Captain Krishnamachari Srikkanth. Adds Manager Chandu Borde: "The series has helped Indian cricket to make a comeback. Our performance has been more than satisfactory particularly if you look at the way the youngsters have played."

What the Indian team lacked in experience and form, it made up by sheer fighting spirit. Aided, in no small measure, by neutral umpires. The team began predictably—with fragile and hesitant batting. Then began the recovery that has continued through the series with Sanjay Manjrekar, 24, being the symbol of the team's defiance.

And even as the batsmen came into their own, Manoj Prabhakar suddenly rediscovered the art of swinging the old ball, providing Kapil the foil he needed so badly. Mohammed Azharuddin, who might have lost his place in the first Test but for the injury that kept out Raman Lamba, hit out productively at number four. Navjot Sidhu defied the pace bravely even if he tended to lose his way while running between the wickets. Ravi Shastri defended dourly. And little Sachin Tendulkar, born two years after Imran Khan made his debut for Pakistan in 1971, showed his emerging class, undaunted by the bouncers flung at him in generous measure.

Manjrekar, with a Gavaskaresque aggregate and average (565 runs, average 113), not only emerged as the sheet anchor but also sheltered hesitant beginners by repeatedly keeping the strike against Wasim Akram, Pakistan's most lethal bowler. Not since Gavaskar has an Indian batsman shown the willingness—and ability—to draw the fire to shield team-mates.

Azharuddin ironed out his technical flaws with a little help from Pakistan's Zahir Abbas. "He came to me after the Karachi Test and said I was failing because my grip was faulty," he says. Abbas suggested a new grip. Almost overnight, Azharuddin was batting as of old: aggressively and adventurously. And piling up runs for his team.

What the tour did most of all was to give a new face to Indian cricket,

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

especially the batting. Possibly the absence of two old stars—Mohinder Amarnath and Dilip Vengsarkar—helped. More sure of their place, the youngsters bloomed. "This Indian side has grown tremendously on this tour. They can't be underestimated," conceded Imran Khan, who had not long ago talked in terms of a Pakistani clean sweep. "Manjrekar and Tendulkar will be in your team for long," predicted former Pakistan wicket-keeper Wasim Bari.

The youngsters had the advantage of starting afresh, without being weighed down by the baggage of old failures against Imran. "Look at the way Tendulkar is playing! Normally you wouldn't expect a boy his age to even hit the ball past the square in Test cricket. He has so much talent," said Vice-Captain Ravi Shastri.

But problems remain. And at the heart of some is Shastri himself, who at 27, is the most experienced player in the team after Kapil Dev. Throughout, his bowling has been suspect even as he has struggled with the bat to play some useful innings. Worse, he has kept rather aloof from the rest of the team, though he is not alone to blame.

It is well known that senior players are resentful because they feel the board is grooming him for captaincy. Many question the rationale in retaining him, and that too as vice-captain, when Mohinder Amarnath has been dropped despite better performances. Shastri himself makes no effort to hide his bitterness. Says he: "People in the media, who are more interested in my off-the-field activities than in my cricketing performances, have tried to write me off. But I'm no quitter. I am going to be around for eight or 10 years."

What Shastri needs to do is to open out again to the team. "He must understand that he will probably inherit this team from Srikkanth one day. He cannot afford to remain aloof, whatever the extent of his bitterness," says one team member. Shastri ascribes his poor form to an overdose of cricket. He is looking forward to the one-day games to regain form and then a few weeks of rest before flying to New Zealand.

On the evidence of the Pakistan series, it seems sensible to retain Srikkanth as captain despite his poor personal performance. He has perceptibly contributed to rebuilding the team with his positive and affable manner. "Perhaps the team spirit would have been a little more robust under Kapil," says a team member. "But Kapil would also have cracked under the pressure to perform personally."

Srikkanth has shown resilience. His team-mates point out that in any case he was never consistent. He is basically the kind whose average stays under 30, but

The belated but timely flowering of Manoj Prabhakar as an attacking, penetrative seamer gave a new edge to the Indian attack which had looked ragged for years.

Kapil Dev and Azharuddin were the two seasoned campaigners who came good after an indifferent season. They proved to be excellent team-men, nurturing youngsters and backing Srikkanth.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

The world's No. 1 Rent-A-Car Company now makes life a whole lot easier for you.

In India, Hertz comes to you as Wheels Rent-A-Car, a division of the largest, most trusted transport company, Transport Corporation of India Ltd.

When you have to travel frequently, Hertz smooths the way for you with facilities never before available in India.

Instant, confirmed bookings for Hertz cars in Bombay, Pune, New Delhi, Madras, Bangalore, Hyderabad. And shortly in a few more cities in India.

We're always on call in your city – 24 hours a day and 365 days a year (not forgetting the 366th day in leap years!)

- Brand new, well-maintained cars (with and without air-conditioning) to suit your convenience and budget.
- Uniformed, well-mannered, dependable, English-speaking Hertz chauffeurs.
- A personal accident insurance of Rs. 1 lakh per passenger: at our cost.
- Soon, we'll introduce a "Self-drive" scheme – so you'll have the pleasure of driving a Hertz car on your own.

Now, with Hertz, you'll realise it takes more than just renting cars to be No.1.

To get to know us better, mail the coupon to us today at:
Wheels Rent-A-Car, Nirmal,
16th Floor, Nariman Point,
Bombay 400 021.

Name: _____

Designation: _____

Company Name: _____

Address: _____

_____

Phone: _____ Telex: _____

IT

WHEELS RENT-A-CAR

You get more than just a car

Hertz

Hertz International Licensee
(A divn. of Transport Corpn. of India Ltd.)

H.O. Nirmal, 16th Floor, Nariman Point, Bombay 400 021. Ph: 202 37 34/64

Branches: Bombay: 494 8168/57; Pune: 56 033/54 291; New Delhi: 331 8695/0190; Madras: 86 5491/0626; Bangalore: 21 5874/1102; Hyderabad: 24 2457/23 1697.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

O&M/5570

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

India Today congratulates the winners of

YOUR VERDICT

ELECTION SPECIAL CONTEST

Vivekanand Kotla, Delhi
Air India Round Trip to New York for Two by Business Class

Sanjeev Markanday, Chandigarh
Bush Colour TV & VCR.

Ahmad Shakil, Sahaspur
ACN Ranutrol Electronic Typewriter

R C Iyer, Baroda
Kinetic Honda DX Scooter

Sanwar Mal Meel, Kolida
Racold Washing Machine

Poonam Kumari, Patna
Hero Puch Super Deluxe Moped

Govind Kumawat, Ajmer
Godrej 300 L. Refrigerator

Lakhi Ram, Delhi
TBZ Diamond Watch

KVS Yajnarayanna, Bombay
Binatone Hi-Fi Music System

V R Sudhakar, Thane
Microwin Microwave Oven Cooker

Mohanbhai D Makwana, Ahmedabad
Microwin Microwave Oven Cooker

Kanai Lal Chatterjee, Delhi
Hotline Cooking Range

Dilip Gokhle, Bhopal
Singer Merrit Sewing Machine

Hemant Chand Kapur, Delhi
Philips DR 878 Two-in-One

Ramesh Chandra Rathi, Ajmer
Photophone Hotshot Camera

Goshthabihari Kole, Howrah
Photophone Hotshot Camera

John Kumar Chettri, Kalimpong
Photophone Hotshot Camera

Dharamvir Singh, Moradabad
Photophone Hotshot Camera

Poonam Vinod Gupta, Kota
Photophone Hotshot Camera

We'd like to thank everyone who participated in the INDIA TODAY 'Your Verdict, Election Special Contest'. There were 61694 entries received. Of these 52716 came in before the closing date and were evaluated for participation in the contest. It was this enthusiastic response that made the contest so special and worthwhile.

All winners including 1010 consolation prize winners will be notified by post shortly.

INDIA TODAY
Keeps you ahead

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

whom the bowlers always fear for his ability to turn the game around once he gets going. It is unrealistic to expect him to suddenly become Mr Consistent just because he is the captain. If anything, captaincy is inhibiting him from playing his natural game.

Now, as the selectors and the board look ahead, some problems remain. The team that will play two series—against New Zealand and England—and a one-day tournament in Sharjah in the next six months still does not look complete. The batting has looked good. So good that it will be difficult to fit Dilip Vengsarkar, who should be selected if available, back into the order. However, the bowling, despite the arrival of Manoj Prabhakar, is still too thin. Srikkanth repeatedly stressed the need for more bowlers with wicket-taking ability. But where will the selectors get them from?

Their experiment with youth was much too adventurous as far as bowling was concerned. It was unfair to pitchfork Salil Ankola and Vivek Razdan, with almost no first-class experience, into a needle series of this variety. Razdan came good on a seamer's wicket in Sialkot. But to bowl effectively on run-of-the-mill wickets, he needs to mature a great deal. A more sensible approach would have been to bring in an experienced third seamer and just one youngster to pick up the ropes. Having made up their minds on the basis of—by their own admission—non-cricketing considerations, selectors persisted in the blunder. They ignored Srikkanth's requests for reinforcement with an experienced third seamer who could have made all the difference at Sialkot.

There is some cheer in the news that leg spinner Narendra Hirwani has recovered from his knee operation and

Under the ever watchful eye of Kapil Dev and Srikkanth, Vivek Razdan, 19, bowled a lethal line beating Pakistani batsmen with sheer pace.

"The tour marked the rebuilding of the Indian team. At this rate, within a year we should have a world-beating side again."

KRISHNAMACHARI SRIKKANTH

"We came to fight it out"

FOR any Indian captain, a tour of Pakistan is a nightmare. Not surprisingly, Krishnamachari Srikkanth, 30, was given no chance when his inexperienced side left for Pakistan last month.

But despite his own failure with the bat, he is one captain who might come back with his head held high. Ever the firm believer in fate, Srikkanth takes his own form philosophically, and reflects on his team's performance and Indian cricket in an interview with Features Editor SHEKHAR GUPTA. Excerpts:

Q. How do you assess your team's overall performance?

A. We came here with an open mind and to fight it out. People said our team would be thrashed, destroyed. Nobody expected us to do as well as we have done.

Q. Does this tour mark the rebuilding of the Indian cricket team?

A. Definitely. We started as one of most inexperienced Indian teams to go abroad. Today everybody is coming good except, of course, myself. Look at the way Manjrekar and Azhar are playing. Tendulkar is also growing with every match. At this rate, within a year we'll again have a world-beating side. Touchwood.

Q. Has the team performed better because new players don't have a complex about playing Pakistan?

A. It's not a question of complexes. Ultimately, cricket is a confidence game. Take Azhar. All he needed to be told was go out and play your shots and nobody will drop you. We have to persist with players. Give Tendulkar a full season and see. See how the Pakistani persistence with Salim Malik has paid off.

Q. What about your own failure against Akram?

A. Maybe I am curbing myself a bit. There is a feeling that let me see him off. But no excuses.

Q. What is lacking in your team?

A. The wicket-taking capacity. If we had one or two more wicket-taking bowlers, we could have put Pakistan on the defensive.

Q. Has the board been unfair in turning down your request for an extra seamer?

A. An additional seamer would have made the Pakistanis think twice before preparing a green top for Sialkot. Don't forget Imran Khan got spinner Iqbal Qasim and batsman Younis Ahmed midway through the 1987 series and they won it for Pakistan. The captain should have that kind of power.

Q. Are you complaining?

A. No. My philosophy is do your best and leave the rest to God.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Most of your baby's diet consists of water. Shouldn't you make sure it's really safe?

Your baby depends on you for care and nourishment. And despite a busy schedule, you make sure of utmost hygiene, knowing that safe drinking water is most important to the baby's health. You obviously take the trouble of filtering, boiling and cooling the water – everyday.

And yet you cannot totally eliminate the risk of water getting recontaminated while cooling, handling or when stored.

Aquaguard is uniquely designed to give you clear, safe, ready-to-drink water, at the flick of a switch!

No more tedious boiling and waiting for the water to cool. You can use it directly to prepare your baby's feed, anytime of the day or night!

Give your family the confidence of water from Aquaguard.

For a free demonstration at your home, write to:

EUREKA FORBES LIMITED
P.O. Box 936, G.P.O., Bombay 400 001.

Contact your nearest AQUAGUARD office today!

Ahmedabad: 446982; Bangalore: 224453; Baroda: 322681; Bombay: 2047870; Calcutta: 347799; Cochin: 352736; Coimbatore: 43180; Delhi: 6416143; Faridabad: 22645; Hubli: 73291; Hyderabad: 844128; Jaipur: 70205; Jammu: 42586; Jamshedpur: 24470; Ludhiana: 26877; Madras: 863309; Mangalore: 32445; Surat: 54224; Trichy: 41867; Trivandrum: 79570; Vijayawada: 65964; Vishakapatnam: 53009.

Interpub/EFL/AG/7/89

Aquaguard for clear, safe drinking water.

On-line water filter-cum-purifier

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

is likely to be available for selection. He may not be as lethal as he was on a minefield of a wicket in Madras against the West Indies in 1988. Yet India needs an attacking bowler like him. Besides, the bowlers' shelf in the selectors' cupboard is woefully empty and they have to make do with what they have. Borde points out that Venkatapathy Raju of South Zone is a promising left-arm spinner, but there aren't many more.

Why has Indian cricket stopped producing even good spinners? Mohinder Amarnath blames it on the state of Indian wickets. "The wickets are loaded with runs and you see how many teams score five to six hundred plus in the domestic season. The bowlers have no incentive," he says and points out that it is this problem that the board should be addressing itself to. Kapil is still around, but the way he is being bowled into the ground, he may not last more than three or four more years at best. And unless the board grooms new bowlers now, Indian cricket will be in trouble. It may be fashionable to call cricket a batsman's game, but batsmen are also only as good as the bowlers make them appear to be.

—SHEKHAR GUPTA in Pakistan

High Jinks

FOR touring cricket teams, the most debilitating psychological factor in Pakistan is neither the reputations of Imran Khan and Abdul Qadir, nor the notorious local umpiring. It is plain boredom.

The solutions have been varied and inventive. The English held wild underwear parties. The Australians put fire-crackers under toilet seats and fired rockets from beer bottles. The West Indians drank themselves silly.

Last fortnight the Indian team and the equally bored Indian press corps came up with another—Sunday Club, a conclave of players and scribes to be held every Sunday or on rest day. The rules: ties to be worn on the head, lipstick smeared liberally, false moustaches and beards. Those not dressed "properly" would be fined by the one-man board—Dicky Rutnagar.

Successive Indian teams have complained about boredom in Pakistan. This one tried to use some imagination to fight it.

Manjrekar, Tendulkar and Razdan

There were no defaults. Srikkanth came in a white beard, Kapil in a salt-and-pepper one and Kiran More in black wig and lipstick. He walked coquettishly across the room to the sound of catcalls. Others made a beeline to kiss the lipstick-smeared Sanjay Manjrekar. And fittingly, Sachin Tendulkar, too young to need a shave, wore an imposing moustache.

The spirit of the team was back. One participant recited a hilarious conversation between Javed Miandad and Madan Lal. Kiran More did a demonstration of Srikkanth walking into the wrong dressing-room. Another recounted an unprintable exchange between Imran and Akram Raza who let a flick go through his legs. Kapil talked of those whose "English is worse than even mine".

The finale was fitting: pure calypso. Everyone sang Calcutta-based cricket writer Mudar Patherya's lyrics to the tune of Lord Relator's famous Caribbean tribute to Sunil Gavaskar and his team-mates in the 1971 series:

Manindar Singh and Razdan
Sidhu in a turban
Kapil Dev and Ravi Shastri
They helped to fight the series
Against these Pakistanis
India was in all kinds of trouble
Until Waqar Yunus pulled a muscle
Tendulkar got eight run out
We was in trouble without a doubt

And then the inevitable chorus:

But it was Manjrekar
The real master
Just like a wall
They couldn't out Manjrekar at all
Not at all
You know the Pakistanis couldn't out Manjrekar at all.

—SHEKHAR GUPTA in Lahore

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SONDEEP SHANKAR/The Times of India

(Clockwise from left) YSL show; scene from Indiade; from Mahabharata; French mela; painting from art exhibition

FESTIVAL OF FRANCE

A Palatable Pastiche

One year of hi-tech and culture nears to a close

WILL we get to see the Can Can?" asked the journalist. There was an embarrassed silence. This was the kick-off press conference for the Festival of France in India, which began in February this year. The French had been trying hard to shed the clinging image of Bardot, cheese, wine, little men with berets and Maurice Chevalier voices and, of course, Can Can—courtesy Hollywood.

Diplomacy saved the hour. "Yes, why not. We'll try to get something. Perhaps a film," said a festival official, with little enthusiasm. Eventually, the high kicks did come to India: setting off whoopees of delight during the French melas in Delhi and Bombay last month.

But the Festival of France in India, which ends early February, did not make the impact it could have. To begin with, coming in the wake of the gargantuan Soviet festival which impressed with its sheer exuberance, the French festival was too amorphous, too dispersed.

In their effort to slough off the cheese-and-wine image, the French initially concentrated on technology, putting culture on the back burner. The inaugural splash on Marine Drive which siphoned off well over half their total budget, was a blitzkrieg of French achievements on giant video screens placed on either side of a strange spaceship from which robotic dancers emerged.

Then somewhere along the year, the accent of the French festival shifted to culture. The Janus-headed approach: half high tech, half culture, took some of the thrust out of the festival. The first half had seminars on subjects like leather, emergency medical care, railways, water and gas technology, mining, pharmaceuticals. Then came the switch to culture. The last big show of which is a concert next month by 160 singers and musicians of the Orchestra of Paris in the ruins of Sher Shah Darwaza—which came dazzlingly alive during the Yves Saint Laurent Fashion show in November. (Nothing went amiss down the catwalk, but a few egos were wounded when none of the entries sent by Indian fashion designers qualified for a prize.) And the festival will bow out with a series of seminars and events revolving round the writer-philosopher Romain Rolland, friend of Tolstoy and Mahatma Gandhi.

Controversy has been absent from the festival except for faint whiffs from Peter Brook's marathon Mahabharata—whittled down from a theatrical masterpiece of nine hours to a five-and-a-half hour film. Though the film is spellbinding, it is only a pale reflection of the original. It is scandalous that the play which was hailed worldwide as the theatrical event of the decade ultimately could not be staged in the country of its origin.

One of the reasons was money: the travel costs of 40 people and their fees proved too much. The other was timing: Brook could have brought it only before November last year before his team dispersed. But there are other reasons too. The festival was to begin only a few months later, and some in the French hierarchy were initially not keen on staging the play here. As for the Indians, not all agreed with Brook's rather eccentric casting of about 20 nationalities. Moreover, the aging, wily and thin Krishna didn't quite fit the prevailing cuddly Casanova image of this god which some of the officials have.

The film, however, went down well with the Delhi audience—barring a few titterings over the special effects used to illustrate the immaculate conceptions of the Pandavas: the gods coming down like burning saucers should have, instead, landed on the sets of Star Trek. Some things are better left to the imagination, as they were in the play where the genius lay the simplicity, not in its gimmickry. Screenplay writer Jean Claude Carriere has brilliantly pared the epic down to its essence. Shorn of its trimmings and more localised attributes, the film is universal and Shakespearean in its intensity. Indian actress Mallika Sarabhai looks stunning as Draupadi, and is better in the film than she was in the play. Kunti, played by a black American actress gives a powerful performance, as does Karan—his eyes seem lit by an incandescent 1,000 watt bulb.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Courtsey: DTDC

Another play—a powerful one about the partition of India—which was initially included in the festival, is Indiade. Directed by one of France's best-known directors, Ariane Mnouchkine, it will not be brought here. Apparently, Indian bureaucrats thought the Gandhi of the play was much of a comic goof, the long-lashed Nehru too neurotic and the subject itself a bit too close to the truths of the day.

A touch of genius in this play is a bear which often follows Gandhi and is as innocent as, well, Winnie the Pooh, until it tastes blood, after which it becomes uncontrollably violent—in other words the beast in man.

There has been enough to make it a festival to remember. Earlier, there was the important exhibition of modern art, the irreplaceable maestro of mime, Marcel Marceau (who says he has been influenced by Bharatnatyam and Kathakali: "I am familiar with your cosmic history"), the outstanding show by the Philippe Genty Company which used puppets, men and the most imaginative props and black humour. The French, if anything, are delightfully idiosyncratic.

STILL to come are the textile exhibition, which amongst a lot else includes painter Raoul Duffy's original textile designs; an exhibition of their eight Grand Urban projects (which includes the jazzed up Louvre with its new pyramid, the new Bastille Opera, the new Arc); and exhibitions on mud architecture and social habitats.

The grande geste, the one-off flamboyant gesture is a French speciality. But the French have also confected those small gestures which go on silently creating little ripples, even after the show is over. When the budget for the small things ran out, the French Embassy didn't throw in the towel, but the imagination. One such was the locally generated idea of putting astrophysicists, poets and film makers together to address the skies from Jantar Mantar. This was just the flag-off to a week-long sojourn in Pipari village in the Chambal valley, the site of tremendous degradation of the soil, an ideal place to discuss conservation. The result of this unusual trip which included Jean Audoze, President Mitterrand's scientific adviser, and Dr Jayant Narlikar will be several scientific films co-produced by the two countries.

Other little ripples include the theatre workshops to be conducted by Brook and Carriere, French director, Lavaudant's production of Phaedra with the Bharat Bhavan Repertory, and an exhibition of contemporary French art next year.

But, after the festival caravan has rolled on, what will be left behind? More enduring perhaps will be the proposed studies of Indo-French history, which after the Battle of Plassey were relegated to the background. In addition to the shared history, there is the entire area of the French Company school of painting which will now be studied.

And this festival, which began with a bang this year, will be ending with a whiff: literally. L'Oreal has been allowed to sell 15,000 bottles of perfume, without taxes, to coincide with the exhibition of perfume.

—MADHU JAIN

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Unitex
NONWOVEN CARPETS
PRESENT

NEVER BEFORE COLOURS

NEVER BEFORE PATTERNS

AT NEVER BEFORE PRICES

The pioneers of nonwoven carpets now bring you another first — Rangoli nonwoven carpets attractively patterned in a variety of designs. They are not just beautiful but durable and resilient too.

There's a wider range in plains as well! Tarang, Umang and Uttam are available in a variety of colours and textures. At prices that range from an incredible low of Rs. 87.70 per sq. mtr. (Rs. 8.15 per sq. ft.)* for Uttam to Rs. 231.35 per sq. mtr. (Rs. 21.50 per sq. ft.)* for Rangoli.

What's more, our unique fibre bonding process guarantees greater durability, giving you the best value for your money.

So look for the Unitex seal of quality on the reverse of the carpet. And spread that look of luxury and comfort.

*Prices as applicable in Delhi only. Local taxes and laying charges extra.

Unitex
NONWOVEN CARPETS
RANGOLI TARANG UMANG UTTAM

The never-before range.

CLARION D 341

Wall-to-wall luxury has never been so affordable.

A quality product from UNIPRODUCTS (INDIA) LTD., in technical collaboration with UNIPRODUCTS CANADA INC.

UNIPRODUCTS (INDIA) LTD., 21 Community Centre, Friends Colony, New Delhi-110 065, Phones: 6836278, 6832108, Cable: NONWOVENS, Telex: 031-65757 WEBS IN

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

NAMAS BHOJANI

DESIGN

Closet Fantasies

The bathroom attains showpiece stature

COGNAC-TINTED paintings line the wall. Jewels spilling out of antique wooden chests mirror their warm Rembrandt hues. More carved chests sit heavily on the thick, camel-coloured carpet. Artificial flowers sprout in abundance from exotic vases. A rich man's living-room? A backdrop for a cognac commercial or a brand of coffee targeted at the super rich? Neither.

It's a bathroom in Delhi. But just about, as a visitor, who had gone to "powder her nose", discovered to her embarrassment. She could not find the water closet: it was inside one of the elegant cupboards. Like the Louis XIV commode, it had to be brought out, used and then returned to its elegant home. The only difference that centuries have made: silent plumbing is now increasingly doing what perfume took care of earlier.

This gallery-bathroom might be an eccentric oddity. But fantasy, it seems, is going back to the closet—the water closet. A revolution—revo-loo-tion, if you will—is taking place. The lowly bathroom, like the kitchen before it, has been brought in from out of the cold and upgraded. The Indian bathroom was confined to dusty corners—and left behind in the roller-coaster race on which the consumer boom was taking the urban middle class.

While this rapidly growing middle class is in pursuit of more cheerful bathrooms, the affluent are looking for newer ways to be different. Which is why designers have begun to raid the bathroom.

And some of the inspiration seems to have come from the cinema—both Hollywood and Bombay. Consider the huge, circular bathroom of a Bombay industrialist. While half of it almost seems to hang out over the Arabian sea below—the sea view like an animated seascape—the other half has caves, fountains and waterfalls.

Bathrooms are actually the best place for closet delusions of grandeur. A Delhi businessman has a bathroom in which marble pillars form arches because it makes him feel he is "entering a Grecian meeting place and not just a bathroom". Yet another has a waterfall cascading down a wall. Plants have had a place in the bathroom for long, but today people seem to want a whole garden. Some bathrooms have wide glass doors which give the illusion of bringing all that green into the room.

The more avant-garde have gone further and brought the bathroom into their boudoir. An industrialist's wife has knocked down the walls of her bedroom in her Bombay flat, bringing the bathroom almost up to the edge of the bed. Explains she: "I wanted an air-conditioned bathroom. Also I can carry on a conversation with my husband while I bathe."

If those at the top end of the money ladder have put their money where their fantasy is, not everybody can or wants to be a Cecil B. De Mille of the bathroom. But they do want to be bathroom-proud. The change of attitude towards the bathroom has come during the last five or six years. Previously, nobody paid much attention to the bathroom: mentally, it was still an outhouse. "The concept of bathrooms has changed," explains Sondeep Somani of Hindustan Sanitaryware, one of the largest producers of bathroom fittings. He adds: "The customer has become more demanding. He wants more aesthetic, spacious and

New range of sanitaryware

CLARION D 341

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

coordinated bathrooms."

An indicator of the coming of age of the Indian bathroom is the birth of the bathroom boutique. Recently, Bed 'n Bath Shop, a boutique for designer baths, opened in Delhi's rural chic Hauz Khas village. The bathroom on display is coordinated—the crucial word in designer parlance today—from the shower curtain down to the soap dish and toothbrush glass.

And suddenly, showrooms displaying complete bathrooms have materialised in cities like Delhi, Bombay and Bangalore. In fact, on the outskirts of Delhi, a mammoth, three-storied building which advertises itself as a "one stop" shopping place for bathrooms was opened about eight months ago. From saunas (imported from Finland: Rs 1,80,000) to jacuzzis (Rs 1,60,000 to 1,80,000); matching cisterns, sinks and bidets; with ducks and swans swimming in pale green lakes to birds in flight; from imitation Lalique mirrors and objets d'art to the humble soap dishes and towels, this shop has it all.

The new showrooms have begun to sell bathrooms in their entirety—from sanitaryware, shower fittings and glass cupboards to tiles and accessories. A few, like the Design Shop outside Delhi, even help customers plan their bathrooms from as early as the blueprint stage. The price ranges from Rs 80,000 to over Rs 3 lakh if a jacuzzi is thrown in. The gold taps made popular by the sheikhs and Hollywood come for extra.

Why has the bathroom moved centrestage? "People have more disposable incomes and the spending concept has changed with the spiralling prices of property," explains Mr Hari Shankar Jalan, chairman of Indodan Group of Industries, who is in the food business but is poised to enter the upmarket sanitaryware business. He adds: "If someone were paying Rs 300 per sq ft for a flat a few years ago, he is now spending at least Rs 3,000 for the same square foot. Naturally, he will proportionately spend more on his bathrooms."

JALAN believes that the bathroom boom really began with the advent of Rajiv Gandhi, who tried to close the Grand Canyonesque technological gap between the East and the West by ushering in the import of technology in such fields. Jalan is now collaborating with an Italian firm to set up a Rs 50-crore project outside Delhi to produce synthetic granite tiles and custom-made three piece bathroom sets for the ultra-chic. These include ceramic water closets with sophisticated water systems, wash basins and bidets with designs from French palaces, and lyrical landscapes.

Designers have begun to raid the bathroom. And some of the inspiration seems to have to come from the cinema—both Hollywood and Bombay.

There has also been an explosion of colours, some decidedly edible. In fact, the colour list for water closets sounds like a cross between an advertisement for ice creams and travel agencies: champagne, burgundy, oasis green, mint green, Bahama brown and even Bali brown.

The ode to the new-look bathroom is also being underwritten by tiles because they allow people to unleash their imagination. They can transform their bathroom walls into a gentle-hued English countryside with ferns and pale blue clouds. Or even create the most baroque of patterns with their palette of beautifully finished tiles.

A designer bathroom: luxury trip

The much-maligned and still mysterious bidet, though not quite the rage yet, has begun to catch on. Many companies are pushing this new concept—the French answer to the indigenous lota. Hindustan Sanitaryware has even brought out a booklet illustrating the use of this curious invention which has been the butt of many a movie joke. The booklet was necessary, according to Somani, because after they advertised it in women's magazines, women inquiring about bidets from their retail outlets could only get an embarrassed look from the salesman. Explains he: "Now we ask our salesmen to just hand over the booklet when anybody asks them about bidets." The dilemma of to bidet or not to bidet may not be resolved for quite some time. But the Indian bathroom will never be the same again.

—MADHU JAIN

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

One of India's most progressive companies is also the most diversified

In 1951, Century was just a textile mill. Today, it ranks among the most diversified companies in India. Internationally, it has become synonymous with the very best in Indian cotton textiles, emerging as the largest and most dependable supplier of superior cotton textiles.

To meet the country's vital needs, over the years Century has diversified into rayon yarn, tyrecord, minerals & chemicals, cement, pulp & paper, and shipping... In all these, the Company has achieved commendable success.

Besides, it has designed and fabricated complete chemical and tyrecord plants.

In the highly competitive global market, the Company made a big breakthrough by achieving an export of almost Rs. 100 crores in 1988.

Confident of the unique combination of its vast experience, resources, and professional skills, Century is branching out into new areas to create more productive assets for the country and more opportunities for our people to better the quality of their lives.

CENTURY

— the dawn of a new era.

Century Textiles and Industries Ltd.

Century Bhavan, Dr. Annie Besant Road, Worli, Bombay 400 025.

Sobhagya/89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

If your credit card carries this symbol, walk into any of our 8000 outlets

If it doesn't, stay at home.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Before you leave home, check your credit card for the MasterCard symbol.

It doesn't matter which Member Bank it belongs to. Walk into any of over 8000 Merchant Establishments in India and Nepal, where a warm welcome awaits you. Because with MasterCard, you get credit at the collective Merchant Establishments of nine leading banks in India and Nepal.

No other credit card is more widely accepted than MasterCard. None.

MasterCard is the world's largest association of banks and financial institutions. With over 29,000 banks in 170 countries. Offering the best financial services and products to customers around the globe. Servicing more than 153 million MasterCard cardholders. At 7.2 million Merchant Establishments worldwide.

Now, nine of the finest banks in India and Nepal are members of the MasterCard worldwide family. Andhra Bank, Bank of America, Bank of India, Central Bank of India, Hongkong Bank, United Bank of India, Vijaya Bank, Vysya Bank and Nepal-Arab Bank.

Come, use your MasterCard to its fullest advantage. Of course, if you've been reading this without owning a MasterCard, contact any of the MasterCard Member Banks.

Today!

More power to your credit card

LINTAS (DELHI) MC/2/2842

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Photographs by FATEH SINGH RATHORE

A Trail of Discovery

Journey into the tiger's mysterious family life

TIGERS
THE SECRET LIFE
by VALMIK THAPAR
Photographs by FATEH SINGH RATHORE
Elm Tree Books, London
Price: Rs 334; Pages: 160

FOR 20 days, Valmik Thapar roamed the forests of Ranthambhore in Rajasthan hoping to catch a glimpse of the tiger. He did see its pug marks and fresh droppings. But it was only the night before he was leaving that he finally spotted the beast striding majestically down a forest track.

For Thapar, that sighting in 1976 was to begin what he describes as "an endless pursuit to observe and discover more about one of the world's most elusive, evasive and nocturnal predators". It is a quest that has produced two books in the past.

The title of his latest book, Tigers: The Secret Life, is appropriate. Though this great cat has fascinated humans for centuries, there is a surprising lack of accurate information about how it behaves in the wild. Myths and conjectures abound. One example: adult male tigers are said to be hostile to their own cubs and even kill them.

Along with Fateh Singh Rathore, his 'tiger guru' and a former field director of Ranthambhore National Park, Thapar succeeds in penetrating the aura of mystery that shrouds the tiger. Using their familiarity with the terrain, they home in on three tigresses, whom they name Noon, Nalghati and Laxmi.

The years of waiting pay off. In 1986, after four years of keeping track of Laxmi, they discover excitedly that she has littered three cubs. They follow her stealthily, Thapar with notebook and Rathore with camera, recording how she coddles her cubs, brings them food and finally teaches them how to kill and become independent.

Rare shots of a family of tigers in a pool; and a cub on a tree.

It is a documentation that is both moving and enlightening. And their experience is brought vividly to life by some outstanding photographs of tigresses and their cubs in the wild. If Thapar's narration is almost childlike in its wondrous tone, he is hardly to blame. For, they are privy to some of the rarest scenes in the wild. And words do fail him.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

INTERNATIONAL SEMINAR-CUM-EXHIBITION ON INDUSTRIAL AND EXPORT OPPORTUNITIES IN ELECTRONICS

January 10th, 11th and 12th, 1990.
Hotel Krishna Oberoi, Hyderabad.

This International Seminar-cum-Exhibition will explore the various industrial and export opportunities in the fast growing field of Electronics. Opportunities for foreign collaboration will also be discussed at length.

The Seminar-cum-Exhibition is intended for Chairmen, Managing Directors, Presidents, Chief Executives, Senior Executives, Government Officials, Consultants, Entrepreneurs, Industrialists, Exporters and NRIs.

SESSIONS

- Perspectives & Policies
- Consumer Electronics
- Communication & Broadcasting Equipment
- Computers, Software and Office Automation
- Foreign Collaborations
- Electronic Materials & Components
- Control Instrumentation and Industrial Electronics
- Export Policies and Opportunities

SPEAKERS

A number of eminent persons from well established Indian and multi-national enterprises, Indian and Foreign Governments, Financial Institutions and also several internationally renowned technical experts will make presentations during the Seminar.

INTERNATIONAL PARTICIPATION

Representatives from Foreign Companies, Organizations and Governments are expected to participate from the following countries:

U.S.A., Canada, U.K., West Germany, France, Italy, Switzerland, Spain, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Japan, Hong Kong, South Korea, China, Singapore, Australia, USSR and East European countries.

TRADE AND TECHNOLOGY EXHIBITION

A Trade & Technology Exhibition will be held from 10th to 14th January, 1990. In this hi-tech Exhibition, a large number of Indian and Foreign participants would be displaying their products/services meant for the domestic and international markets. It is expected that a number of trade enquiries would be generated and substantial business would be carried out at the Exhibition. The Exhibition would also be an invaluable venue for transfer of technology.

TARA•8951

For free Seminar Brochure, please contact:

Network Consultancy Services Pvt. Ltd.
P.O. Box No. 1065, Gaganmahal
Hyderabad-500 029.
Phone : 237315 (3 lines); 235312, 241642
Telex : 0425-6075 MCA IN; 0425-6681 ELVS IN.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

When he witnesses Laxmi coddling her cubs for the first time, all he can say is: "I have never seen such a display of love and warmth, such evidence of a strong bond between a tigress and her cubs."

Some of Rathore's pictures too lack in technical excellence. For instance, a rare shot of 20-day-old cubs in a thick grove, taken at great risk to his life, is barely discernible. However, these are compensated by some inspired photographs of Laxmi and her three cubs resting on a ledge, Noon strolling with her cubs through a forest glade, and a shot of tigers battling, to name just a few.

THE book transports one into a world where nature is at her pristine best. Where the jarring cacophony of modern living hasn't intruded and the tiger is still king of the jungle. Describing the atmosphere after a brief storm, Thapar writes: "The quality of light was special, the fragrance in the air magical. The leaves dripped with water and the forest glistened. Torrents of water cascaded down the hillside and waterfalls sprouted from steep cliff faces." In this ethereal world they spot Noon ambling off towards a ravine and then disappearing into the profusion of green.

Equally stirring is their encounter with Nalghati and her two cubs with Kublai, her mate. What begins as panic when they believe that Kublai had strayed into Nalghati's territory soon gives way to relief and wonder. For, Kublai shows no signs of the expected aggression towards his cubs. Instead, he deals with them paternally, partaking regally in their meals, nuzzling them occasionally and even frolicking with them in a tiny water hole. It is, as Thapar rightly puts it, discovering one of the most closely guarded secrets of a tiger's life.

There are vital observations too of how the young gain independence. Initially, Laxmi's three cubs begin to stray from their hide-out exploring new sights and even attacking the occasional bird. Soon, they assist their mother in hunting by surrounding a prey and pushing it towards her path. Already a hierarchy is established with the male cub asserting himself by feeding first on the kill. And as they grow older, the two female cubs begin to snarl at each other, at first playfully, and then keep apart. Meanwhile, the male cub makes his first kill.

Noon's cub; tiger and sambar locked together; Thapar and (bottom) Rathore

If Thapar's narration is almost childlike in its wondrous tone, he is hardly to blame. For he is privy to some of the rarest scenes in the wild.

The book is appropriately sprinkled with notes and pictures about the habitat of the tigers. And it does give an occasional glimpse of the threats they face: the pressure of population, the lack of buffer zones and the intrusion of tourists. But its prime value is its revealing journey into the so far mysterious family life of the tiger.

It would, however, be fruitful for both of them and ecologists to pursue these observations. For instance, details of the way tigresses bring up their young and of how male tigers interact with their cubs need to be substantiated by more recordings of such behaviour, preferably in another national park. These findings can then take their rightful place in the growing body of scientific knowledge about how Indian tigers breed and live in the wild.

The Secret Life leaves one with mixed feelings. There is a warm glow in one's heart for the tigers. There is admiration tinged with envy for Thapar and Rathore for their experiences. And there is also a sense of remorse that humankind devoted so many years exterminating such a magnificent animal without truly understanding how tender and gentle tigers can really be.

—RAJ CHENGAPPA

R K SWAMY/HPF/7376

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Nostalgia in Black & White, and Colour. That occasional flip through the family album. Candid pictures of the little ones. Captured in all their glory. Proud moments you'll cherish all your life. It brings back a chain of events that kindle good old memories that will stay with you. Forever.

Keeping those moments fresh is Hindustan Photo Films. First with INDU Black & White Roll Film and Bromide Paper. And then, with Colour Negatives and Colour Paper. All manufactured to satisfy the uncompromising needs of professional and amateur photographers in the country.

INDU films save the nation valuable foreign exchange, by cutting down imports. Because this industry demands more in quality and quantity every day. Photography today has become the cynosure of the publication and printing industry. A dedicated profession to thousands. And a satisfying hobby for millions of amateur photographers.

The next time you take a trip down memory lane, remember.

INDU

HINDUSTAN PHOTO FILMS

PHOTO
CINE
X-RAY GRAPHIC ARTS
INDUSTRIAL X-RAY
CHEMICALS
MAGNETIC TAPE
INSTANT PHOTOGRAPHY

मेरा भारत महान

F U T U R E I N F O C U S

Hindustan Photo Films Mfg. Co. Ltd. (A Govt. of India Enterprise)
Registered Office: Indunagar, Udhagamandalam 643 005.
Marketing Headquarters: Bali Towers, 1 Abdul Razak Street, Saidapet, Madras 600 015.

R K SWAMY/HPF/7376

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

A SMALL ARGUMENT IN FAVOUR OF CHOOSING THE SAFER SCOOTER

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Think of yourself on a scooter. With your wife and little one.

And you're out on the road. There's speeding traffic to be careful of. Potholes to be avoided. And you're trying your best to ride safely.

What you need then, is a scooter that thinks like you do. Responds as you would like it to.

A scooter that's built with your safety in mind.

LML Vespa.

BETTER BALANCED FOR GREATER STABILITY.

What's the greatest security you need while riding all kinds of roads or taking turns? Stability, we think.

That's why each of our scooters, built around a unique aerodynamic chassis, is designed to be better balanced than most other scooters.

DESIGNED TO STOP. NOT SKID.

It happens so often. A cyclist dashes across the road, or the traffic light changes to red...and you have to brake suddenly.

At this critical moment, it's the double-action suspension and unique movable front brake back plate of the LML Vespa that act together to ensure that you stop safely. Without skidding.

POWERED TO STEER YOU THROUGH RISKY SITUATIONS.

LML Vespa also recognises how important it is for you to have the pick-up that's sometimes necessary to get you out of dangerous traffic situations.

So, every LML Vespa offers greater power than any other scooter in its category.

BUILT-IN DIRECTION INDICATORS FOR SAFER TURNING.

At turns, we have always believed, it is safest for you to have both your hands on the handlebar. That's why, even before the Government made them compulsory, we provided built-in indicators on both, the front and rear of our scooters.

Each, having a specially toughened plastic cover for extra long life.

STEADIER HEADLIGHT KEEPS YOU SAFER AT NIGHT.

When you're riding an LML Vespa at night there's a 12V magneto making sure that neither your headlight nor tail-light dim when you're slowing down, or while idling.

COME HOME SAFE ON YOUR LML VESPA.

The unbeatable NV. And the classic T-5. LML Vespa gives you a choice of scooters engineered by Piaggio of Italy.

To match international safety standards. And keep you all safe, wherever you are.

Isn't it amazing that, small as they are, our children help us make some of our biggest decisions?

LML vespa

BUILT SAFER. BY DESIGN.

LML LIMITED

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

everest/d89/LML/213

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ELECTRICAL

From Power Control Devices to Transmission Equipment with in-built reliability contributing to energy saving and safety

This is Yule !

And So is this !

Our products range from Electrical Distribution and Energy Saving Equipment to Electronic Intrinsically Safe Communication Systems for underground mines. Our thrust is import substitution through in-house R&D. backed by the latest foreign technology. Equipment which contributes to better utilization of energy generated in the country and reduction in transmission losses backed by specialised customer service.

All this and more makes Yule a multidimensional 125 year old national enterprise. Geared to meet the changing scenario of the Indian Industry.

125 YEARS
Y
YULE

ANDREW YULE & CO., LTD.
(A GOVT. OF INDIA ENTERPRISE)
'Yule House'
8, Clive Row, Calcutta - 700 001

Many Technologies – One Name

Sobhagya/AYE/1/89

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Petty Prattle

Director cribs and quibbles

THE DISCOVERY OF NEHRU
An Experience of India
by KENNETH GRIFFITH
Michael Joseph
Distributed by Rupa & Co
Price: Rs 262; Pages: 216

REVENGE, however sweet, doesn't justify trite outpourings of poutish anger in print. Kenneth Griffith, the chameleon-like Welsh actor-director, spent two and a half years filming a biography of Jawaharlal Nehru for Doordarshan—Mrs Gandhi had asked him to do so.

The film cost the Indian exchequer Rs 1.40 crore—three times the initial budget. The Nehru centenary has come and gone. The film, in which Griffith plays 25 roles, was completed last February, but is still in the cans. Griffith has now come out with a fight-and-tell book in which, in often intemperate language, he describes his tryst with Doordarshan as a journey through Dante's inferno. "It was a long period as close to hell as anything I have ever experienced... Perhaps the difference between an Indian ministry today and a Moghul court is not very different."

Trysts with Doordarshan are known to be Kafkaesque; the monolith can be soul-destroying. But Griffith's book seldom rises above peevishness. Examples: having to film in 47 degrees heat in Allahabad, compressed air not arriving, payments not being made in time, his car and driver suddenly removed. And far from earth-shaking quibblings over the text: Motilal Nehru, changed from "hard-bitten" to "hard-headed" lawyer, his wife, Swaroop Rani from "traditional Hindu woman" to just "traditional Indian woman" and so on.

Behind the bitter sparring detailed in the book is a basic difference of attitude. The self-styled anti-imperialist Welshman, who had to come to India to have his heart go aflutter at the sight of a Union Jack, believes that India is wrong in its attitude towards South Africa. "India is ever lecturing the Afrikaners in the most strident language ...India does not like to be reminded that its own domestic cultural conflicts are... far more irrational than South Africa's."

Also likely to offend most Indians is the author's evident empathy for General Dyer, "a tragic figure" according to him, who was, like Rowlatt, "simply carrying out (his) duties".

But there are some nuggets amongst the author's idiosyncratic ramblings. Especially on Subhas Chandra Bose, "an Indian hero with rather stupid Fascist tendencies". Many of the objections to Griffith's script, through the intermediary of the historian, B.R. Nanda, took place over Bose. Among the cuts was the leader's assessment of Gandhi: "He is an old, useless piece of furniture."

This could have been an interesting journey through the big machine that is Doordarshan and a perceptive assessment of what happens to recent history as it passes through official machinery. Instead, this meandering book is a cross between a primer of Indian history and a wide-eyed, quickie guide through India: a man with caste marks on his forehead is described as a "deep Hindu", whatever that may mean. —MADHU JAIN

Sloppy Fare

'Best seller' is a damp squib

HELL-BENT
by DIPANKAR RAY
Goldnib Books
Distributed by Jaico
Price: not stated; Pages: 399

AT last, cheap Indian pulp fiction is here. Hell-Bent doesn't aspire to be taken seriously by anybody; it is meant to sizzle and titillate. An alluring blood-red jacket with the ensnaring photograph of a sensuous woman promises to provide "India's answer to all those international best-sellers from the West". The accompanying publicity blitz—including hiring Bombay's most expensive billboard at Marine Drive and press ads—and hype were meant to arouse expectations of a steamy, yummy sizzler. It had the elan of a great ad campaign, which is not surprising, since Dipankar Ray works at Advertising Avenues, the agency of "neighbour's envy, owner's pride" fame. But Hell-Bent is neither a publisher's envy, nor an author's pride.

The sizzler has turned out to be a damp, cliche-ridden, soggy ghoulash put together from the left-overs of several cuisines. So you have an evil-intentioned NRI doctor, Avinash Rudra, seeking a cure for immunitis, which is affecting millions before you can finish saying AIDS; you have a sultry "untouchable", Mohna, spurned by Rudra but raised by a benevolent Brahmin astrologer; a sexy CIA agent Lydia, who doubles as Rudra's "research assistant" when not encircling her thighs around his legs in a cool swimming pool; a widow with a cute son who chances upon Mohna at the Pushkar fair, only to alert Jay Tyler, a hot-shot journalist pursuing the machinations of Rudra; and just in case the conspiracy is not diabolical enough, you have the CIA wanting to make sure that "Soviet Russia" doesn't get hold of the findings of Rudra. Clearly, in the age of glasnost and perestroika, this novel is like a shell-shocked Rip Van Winkle who has emerged in the wrong decade.

The novel leaves the reader with the sort of indigestion that such a heavy dose of plots and subplots and counterplots inevitably brings about. The coincidences are as unexpected as in a Hindi film (like the Pushkar fair rendezvous) and the Americans speak as if they've graduated from an Indian campus ("A nation can't be run on that kind of gas").

Which is a pity, because India does provide an exciting backdrop for a thriller: but must there be mendicants and melas, tantric rituals and ayurved? As John Le Carre argued in a recent essay, the end of the cold war doesn't signify the end of the spy novel. There are enough landscapes waiting to be portrayed as the right backdrop. But it needs hard work. While the real Indian quickie best seller pulp fiction is not yet written, one must hand it to Dipankar Ray's chutzpah for getting the concept right. But the product is wrong. And great advertising never sold a bad product.

—SALIL TRIPATHI

EXCERPT

The climax came with a note of thunder. Her entire body arched along its axis making Jay ride on a rainbow. She released him of the embrace. All her strength seemed to converge on the upthrust that lifted both their pulsating bodies inches above the floor along their seat of contact. Fountains were released inside their brains as their bodies shivered together and their moans mingled in spontaneous music.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Thermax service
Babcock & Wilcox R & D

Breathing 20 to 30 years of new life into derated mega boilers

Thermax Babcock and Wilcox introduces a revolutionary life-extension programme for aging mega boilers. Highly specialised testing techniques, a result of massive R&D effort, will be available for the first time in India. This programme encompasses determination of present condition and prediction of remaining life of boiler components; recommendation of repairs, replacement or design changes; cost analysis; and implementation. Such predictive maintenance quickly regains boiler reliability and capacity, at merely 20% of the cost of new equipment.

Thermax, India A strong technological focus plus a value-oriented business approach. All 8000 existing Thermax installations are backed by an all-India service network, 150 professional service engineers, and a novel service franchise operation.

Babcock & Wilcox, USA Its Research Centre at Alliance, corporate R&D headquarters, draws on 122 years' manufacturing experience. Here specialised non destructive testing techniques have been developed, refined and patented. Tests extend to surface replication for microcrack detection, creep fatigue location, oxide thickness, furnace hydrogen damage, and modular automated non destructive thickness inspection. In the last four years, conducted over 500 life-extension programmes, worldwide.

THERMAX BABCOW

Thermal engineering the way

Mudra : P : TB&W : 2436 : 2

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Thermax Babcock & Wilcox
also offers

- Thermal systems, including fluidized bed combustion boilers, in the 15 to 300 tph range which operate up to design pressures of 130 kg/cm^2 and temperatures of 540°C.
- Range of unique package boilers with membrane panel construction which optimally combine heat transfer efficiency with maintenance accessibility.
- Fluidized bed combustion retrofits that can double a boiler's output at half the cost of a new one.
- Boilers for co-generation systems that generate steam for process heating and captive power requirements up to 65 MW.
- Efficient after-sales service and ready availability of spares for all Babcock as well as Thermax boilers in India.

THERMAX BABCOCK & WILCOX
B&W
INDIA

For further details contact :
Thermax Babcock & Wilcox Ltd., Chinchwad, Pune 411 019. Tlx. No.: 0146-234 TMAX IN.

CC WILCOX
g the way

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

BY K. NATWAR SINGH

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

A Many Splendoured Thing

DURING the December 1984 Lok Sabha elections, I read Tolstoy, even when I returned very late at night after campaigning. For this election I had Han Suyin as my literary companion.

I have known Han Suyin for over 33 years. We first met in Beijing in July 1956 under comic circumstances. I was staying at Hsin Chiao Hotel, that austere refuge of foreigners where one met the most extraordinary people from the most extraordinary places.

On the very first day I encountered the formidable language barrier when I sat down for breakfast. The menu was in Chinese and 'comrade waiter' spoke no English. My Chinese was more determined than fluent. Just as I was about to throw up my hands, in walked a lady of dazzling beauty. I could not take my eyes off her. She sat, three tables away from me. Every few seconds I kept looking at her, thinking where had I seen her. Could she be... no, of course not, what would she be doing in China. Yet she looked so familiar. Yes, she must be. I said to myself, "nothing ventured, nothing have", and scribbled her a note on the back of the menu. The note said: "I am starving and cannot get my breakfast. Are you Han Suyin? I have read your book, A Many Splendoured Thing. The cover had your photo. Can you help me order my breakfast?"

I waited for her answer. My pulse quickened. Her answer demolished all barriers. "Yes, I am Han Suyin and I shall order your breakfast for you. Come and join me." Thus began a many splendoured friendship that has survived all the ups and downs of Sino-Indian relations. In 1979, I dedicated the Indian edition of E.M. Forster—A Tribute to Suyin. She has returned the compliment by making warm and generous references to me in her autobiography, My House has Two Doors.

Now to her latest book, A Share of Loving. It is a profoundly moving work. It is about the near fatal illness of Peter Rathnaswamy, her stepson. Suyin married Peter's father, Col Vincent Rathnaswamy, nearly 20 years ago. Vincent is a silent, strong, serene, devoted husband. Without him the turbulence, turmoil and passions that have filled Suyin's life would perhaps have landed her on the rocks and not on the safe shores of the Marina in Madras. They met in Nepal in 1956. It was love at first sight.

I said earlier that the book is about Peter's illness. It is also about Vincent and Suyin and Vincent's remarkable father, R. Rathnaswamy, who was for many years a member of the Rajya Sabha. He was educated both at Cambridge and Oxford. Suyin had many conversations with the old man. He died in his 91st year. She has written: "In our first meeting, he asked me about Mao; about China, the Communes, the Chinese Revolution. He had read my book on Malaya, and nodded slowly. 'You gave me a new understanding of the region....' But the man who really mattered in the Rathnaswamy household was her husband, Vincent. The Rathnaswamys, a Roman Catholic family, have lived in Madras for many decades. Vincent is the eldest son. It took sometime for him to obtain a divorce and marry Han Suyin, but that is another story and need not detain us here.

Han Suyin with the Singhs: close ties

Han Suyin and Vincent live in Lausanne, but travel a great deal. On August 4, 1977, the bottom fell out of their lives. Peter, who was working in Teheran, suddenly fell ill. He collapsed at work and no one seemed to know what was wrong. Exhaustion? Malaria? Sinus? All wrongly diagnosed. Peter went into a coma. He was suffering from tuberculosis meningitis. He did recover, but only partially. He is retarded and obsessive. He is today 45 years old. Fate has been unkind. Against fate there is no armour.

Han Suyin is endowed with a rare capacity for understanding human nature, with a remarkable and original sense of language and the music of language. This searing domestic calamity is depicted in poetic language, with delicate candour. The pressures on Vincent and Suyin are stupendous. Neither gives up hope. Both are caring individuals and Vincent's commitment to Peter is total. This inevitably led to tension, if not conflict of loyalties.

Suyin writes about their predicament as only an artist could: "Sometimes I revolt against the whole set-up; I feel frustrated. For he (Peter) is robbing me of Vincent, robbing me of time with Vincent, taking him away so much from me, from us, from the couple we are." She continues: "But there is the family. And I too belong to the family. I have to accept this other dimension, this other world, revolving round Peter—I have to accept or, at least that part of myself which loves Vincent must accept Peter, as the family has accepted me." What a wonderful, beautiful, touching way to describe a family's near-impossible situation. She handles a melancholic theme with unfailing artistry and understated power. Compassion and humanism, love and caring and sharing, enrich and uplift the reader.

Let me end by quoting the last paragraph of A Share of Loving.

"And with this share of love I am blessed; for Vincent would not be the man he is, did he not leave me, at times, many times, for his son, who needs him. And I would not be the woman I am, did I not also, for all the love he gives me, accept to be, at times, very lonely."

This is how great books should end.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

NIIT IN STEEL?

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

NIIT leads by training leaders. Leaders in steel, oil, cement, construction. In fact all of India's top ten companies. And more.

NIIT LEADS IN CORPORATE TRAINING.

NIIT Corporate Training in SAIL, the largest steel company, spans top management, EDP staff and middle level executives. At TISCO, the other steel giant, 200 trade union leaders took active part in a specially designed programme on computerisation. Not to speak of their top management who participated in a two-day workshop to evaluate management imperatives for computerisation.

Besides steel, the list is vast and varied. Banks, cigarettes, biscuits, baby foods and a host of other industries have used NIIT Training to great advantage. Grindlays, ITC, Britannia, Glaxo and other leading organisations are among those who have gained.

The NIIT CAG workshop, specially designed for top mangement of large corporations, has matured through the participation of over 2100 chairmen, directors, general managers and senior executives in over 100 organisations including Indian Oil, VXL, Glaxo, UB Group, Godrej, Brooke Bond, HMM & Food Specialities.

NIIT Corporate Training is just one of NIIT's many facets.

NIIT is also Consultancy, Software and Computer Education.

NIIT

The power to look at Information Technology. From every perspective.

Contract NIIT 21341 B

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The shape of excellence.

Swiss Made / Mod. dép.

Individuality, clarity, style and perfection: all these attributes are perfectly blended in the new Rado Florence 'Anatom' models. The revolutionary design, using a scratchproof, diamond-polished sapphire crystal, enables an aesthetically perfect fit to the human wrist. And the mirror-like gold coatings on the crystal ensure that unmistakable radiance for which Rado watches are famous the world over. Despite its slim and elegant look it is still a very dependable and waterproof Swiss top-quality watch.
Rado Florence 'Anatom' – a piece of personality. And a joy forever.

RADO
Florence

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

SNAKE-CHARMERS

Losing their Charm

A traditional art form faces extinction

FOR centuries it has been the most enduring symbol of India: the lean, loin-clothed figure squatting before a venomous-looking cobra emerging from a basket. But now, it is an image that survives only in the minds of ill-informed tourists. Unobtrusively but surely, India's snake-charmers, a profession that once employed thousands, is swaying on the edge of extinction.

The signs are everywhere. Shyam Lal, the mukhiya of Tilpat village in Faridabad—which houses 40 families of snake-charmers—now finds it impossible to support his five-member family. Economic necessity has forced him to play the been—the traditional instrument used to woo snakes—for a wedding band; and sell milk to supplement his income.

Many like Lal are increasingly leaving the traditional profession for newer pastures, yielding to the logic of survival. The days when children scrambled to watch the show under the patronising adult eye, happily mystified by the somewhat frightening reptile's rythmic swaying to the mesmerising tune of the been are clearly in the past. The western tourist, long fed on films on India's snake-charmers, too has begun to tire even as India itself tries to fight its traditional image in the western media.

An anguished Lal explains: "Snake-charming is a difficult and rare art and ought to be preserved. But do we have any options? Besides financial problems, the profession has to brave a complete lack of respectability." Often, they are treated as beggars. After a tiring show, some in the crowd contemptuously fling a few coins—most just walk away.

Presenting snake-charming majmas (shows) at roadsides or tourist spots is becoming a humiliating business. Besides facing crowds reluctant to pay, snake-charmers have to deal with a hostile police which treats them as anti-social elements. Sometimes, the snake-charmers are chased away even when a show is in progress.

What is worse is the attitude of the people. A common experience for a snake-charmer nowadays is: he sits down to play his been, brings the snakes out of the baskets, an initially curious crowd gathers—but soon withers away. Phoolnath, 30, laments: "Often, I am left alone with my snakes. It's then that I am nearly tearful, not so much for the lack of income but the disrespect shown to my art and person."

In the community, the most dramatic sign is the generational change in attitudes. The new generation is turning its back on tradition and looking for more dignified—and certainly more remunerative—areas of employment. Mahendra Nath, 36, is today happily working for the Delhi Transport Corporation (DTC), earning Rs 1,400 per month. Ambition drove Khoob Ram, 40, out of the family profession to set up a wedding band—which he calls Nagin Disco Band.

Photographs by PRAMOD PUSHKARNA

Turning his back on tradition, Mahendra Nath, son of a snake-charmer, has chosen to work with the DTC.

Ambition drove Khoob Ram out of the family profession to set up a wedding band playing the been.

Both Nath and Ram are obviously happy with the shift. Says Nath: "My elders, who had admonished me earlier, are now happy." Ram's house, though kuccha is one of the best in the village, even boasting of a television set. Says he: "Today, I am in a position to provide employment for my community members. I have experienced the misery of being a snake-charmer and have dared to come out of the quagmire."

But the quagmire continues to be a living reality for many of his brethren. The very process of catching snakes is tough, time-consuming and highly risky. Many are questioning whether it's worth it. Points out Phoolnath: "In the last five years, three of our people have died of snake bites while trying to catch a snake. Is it worth risking our lives?"

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Apparently not. In fact, the current cost of maintaining snakes suggests that the trade is counter-productive. A single majma earns around Rs 10. Considering that it is only the very lucky who manage to have more than two or three majmas per week, the monthly income would rarely cross Rs 200. Snakes are costly: they feed on meat, eggs and milk. To provide variety at shows, snake-charmers have to sometimes maintain a stock of three to four snakes. This may mean an expenditure of up to Rs 600. The economics is clearly turning topsy-turvy today. Lal's comment is poignant: "Our children never get to drink milk, but our snakes are luckier."

Often, after a hard day's work, the snake-charmers themselves come home to a mere bowl of flour. That's because the tradition in many villages is still to pay snake-charmers in terms of flour. And in any case, even when money is paid, it's too little to buy anything more. Chander, 16—Phoolnath's younger brother—who turned away from the family profession to open a small cycle repair shop, says: "Tell me, do we just eat rotis? Don't we require vegetables or lentils?" The desire to desert the sinking ship is catching on. Take the case of Rohtas Kumar, 33, a constable with the Delhi Police and son of snake-charmer Khoob Nath, who says: "I didn't want to lead a nomad's life, full of penury and shame."

Like many, the snake-charmer is paying the price of development. His crisis is common to many other traditional Indian arts—like the rope trick, bear and monkey shows and folk handicrafts—and is mostly attributable to the changing attitude of Indians. The frenetic pace of the new urban life-style offers few pauses for people to stop and watch a snake show. Even children—one of the primary patron groups earlier—have shifted interest to the quick excitement of video games, cartoon films, comics and Rubik cubes. Most reject the snake-charmer and his art as 'old-fashioned and archaic'—not something that you can go back to school the next morning and boast about.

In the process of decline, films stand accused as a major culprit. Omi Narayan, 23, who joined the Border Security Force as a constable last year after working for three years as a snake-charmer, complains: "Television and films have robbed the art of its novelty. They show almost all that we have to offer in a much more glamorised form." In fact, some Hindi feature films have shown detailed fights between snakes and mongooses in close-up, complete with background music and trick photography. In a situation where they can't beat the film threat, it's only the rare snake-charmer like Bansi Lal who has successfully managed to join them. Says he: "For three months' work in Bombay's film world, I got nearly Rs 8,000."

While the exodus has begun and is likely to continue, at least some are displaying commendable staying power. One such person is the doddering Chhotu Nath, who says grittily: "I love my art, I love my snakes and I will never give them up. If everyone shuns it, will it not die completely?" But even the Chhotu Naths are fast disappearing. With no state support forthcoming, one of India's most colourful arts has clearly lost its fangs.

—SHARMILA CHANDRA

The logic of survival has forced Chander, the brother of a snake-charmer, to open a small cycle repair shop.

Rohtas Kumar, a constable with the Delhi Police, has sought a more dignified and remunerative area of employment.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

In Search of New Pastures

Leather or Chemicals, Agricultural products or consumer goods
Joint marketing or off shore trade
What's common is the name — STC
Trading in all that's worth trading

Facing the challenges of change, the thrust has switched over from imports to exports. Selling Indian products in foreign markets with the many strings to our bow. With luring export ventures, a hassle-free service, an exclusive group to promote new items and identify new markets. With a militancy unknown in trading. Through its foreign offices, through its Delhi trade centre. Through long-term collaboration with international companies. Creating a supply base for exports through a consortium approach for small units. None deals with foreign markets as we do. We strike ideal deals, make better buys and clinch the best barters all to advance the nation's interest. Round the globe, our trading activities make business sense just as our business activities make trading sense.

STC trades everyday, everywhere

The State Trading Corporation of India Ltd.

'Jawahar Vyapar Bhawan,' Tolstoy Marg, New Delhi-110 001

Trade is our business: Trading is by design

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

From Tokyo to New York, London to Paris...

more people around the world are choosing YAMAHA.

They've come to appreciate Yamaha's engineering excellence, exceptional reliability and superb performance.

With styling imitated but never equalled, Yamaha is the world standard by which others are judged.

For those who will not settle for second best there is only one choice : YAMAHA

HEADSTART/ESC.1080

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ESCORTS

YAMAHA

RX100

lence

world

y one

RIDE THE NTERNATIONAL FAVOURITE

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

NAMAS BHOJANI

Remo: popping mad

◆ No one was more surprised to see Remo Fernandes belting out the pop stuff on prime time one Sunday evening than Remo Fernandes himself. Doordarshan had apparently appropriated the young man for Pop Time without even a by-your-leave. And in true unimaginative tradition, it had slapped together old studio shots of his in the most prosaic way possible. Most upset, the country's top pop singer said: "The programme was terrible for my reputation. Doordarshan's been unethical." Now Remo, that's strumming a boring number.

◆ To Rajiv's George, V.P. Singh has his Sharma. And the prime minister's private secretary is cut from the same cloth as his boss. Har Prashad Sharma, 50, prefers to be neither seen nor heard, unlike Georgie who ran his writ over the mighty. An IAS officer from the Uttar Pradesh cadre, he has spent 15 of his 25 years of service with V.P. Singh. A topper in MA history, he taught in Allahabad University for four years. But more than his knowledge of who invaded India how many times, what's going to matter are the attributes he's known for: a soft-spoken articulateness, and a mild mien. Let's see how long it lasts. Power has a way of making maneaters of pussycats.

Sharma: VP's George

SHARAD SAXENA

◆ Raj would have found it a trifle low-key: it wasn't quite the usual opulent 'Kapoor happening'. But once Sanjana Kapoor, 22, and Aditya Bhattacharya, 26, had done with their dignified nuptials and gastronomic rites, they along with the other grandchildren of Prithviraj Kapoor rendered the wedding an affair to remember. The original jivers, papa Shashi and uncle Shammi, watched from the sidelines as the young Kapoors danced away the night. Said Aditya: "We met in Prithvi theatre six years ago and it's nice that we got married here." In any case, it must rate as Prithvi's biggest sell-out show ever.

NAMAS BHOJANI

Sanjana, Aditya: jiving rites

Gadora: winning run

◆ She's had a long run. And now it's paying off—in gold and silver. Last fortnight, Sunita Gadora, 30, pipped 5,000 athletes from 23 countries to win the silver medal in the Mobil International Marathon in Singapore. Coming on the heels of a silver medal in Thailand and a gold in Malaysia in international ma thons, that's a great end glorious run. Says Sun "It's been a very exciting s son. It is wonderful to win these medals in a row."

◆ He's been keeping hi busy forging alliances. T time on the domes not on the national fr M. Karunanidhi married his daughter Kanimozhi, to millionaire Adipan B 25, last fortnight. The gro fittingly, is heir-apparent match kingdom, while bride pens poetry, say "No, absolutely not", to tics. But her marriage incandescent with poli stars—Zail Singh, Devi N.T. Rama Rao. Who peri came to condole the failu the DMK chief's political ance, even as they celebr the success of the domest

Kanimozhi, Bose: Papa's ma

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

028592

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Compiled
1999-2000

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar